 In us, thy friend: Give me thy hand, stand up;
 Prythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy-dime,
 What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
 You would have given me your petition, that I should have taken some pains to bring together
 Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard
 Without endurance further. [you]

Cran. Most dread liege,
 The good I stand on is my truth and honesty;
 If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
 Will triumph o'er my person; when I weigh not,
 Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
 What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not how
 Your state stands i' the world, with his whole
 Your enemies [world]
 Are many, and not small: their practices
 Must bear the same proportion; and not ever
 The justice and the truth o' the question carries
 The due o' the verdict with it: At what ease
 Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt
 To swear against you? such things have been done.

You are potentially oppos'd; and with a malice
 Of as great size When you of better luck,
 I mean, in perjur'd witness, than your master,
 Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;
 You take a precept for no leap of danger,
 And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God, and your majesty,
 Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
 The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen. Be of good cheer;
 They shall no more prevail, than we give way to.
 Keep comfort to you; and thus morn'ing see
 You do appear before them; if they shall chance,
 In charging you with matters, to commit you,
 The best persuasions to the contrary
 Fail not to use, and with what vehemency

The occasion shall instruct you; if entreaties
 Will render you no remedy, this morn'
 Deliver them, and your appeal to us
 There make before them.—Look, the good man weeps!

He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest mother!
 I swear, he is true-hearted; and a soul
 None better in my kingdom.—Get you gone,
 And do as I have bid you.—[Exit Cranmer.] He has strangled
 His language in his tears.

Enter an old Lady.

Gent. [Within.] Come back; What means you?
Lady. I'll not come back: the tidings that I bring [angels]

Will make my boldness manners.—Now, good
 Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
 Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks,
 I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
 Say, ay; and of a boy.

Lady. Ay, ay, my liege;
 And of a lovely boy: The god of heaven
 Both now and ever bless her—'tis a girl,
 Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 'as as like you,
 As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Lovell,—

Enter Lovell.

Lov. Sir!
K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen [Exit King].
Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll have more

An ordinary groom is for such payment.
 I will have more, or scold it out of him.
 Said I for this, the girl is like to him!
 I will have more, or else unsay it; and now
 While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter Cranmer; Servants, Door-Keeper, &c. attending.

Cran. I hope I'm not too late; and yet the gentleman,
 That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me
 To make great haste. All fast! what means this?—Hail!

Who waits there?—Sure, you know me!
D. Kerp. Yes, my lord;

But yet I cannot help you. Why?
Cran.
D. Kerp. Your grace must wait, till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Butte.

Cran. So.
Butte. This is a piece of malice. I am glad,
 I came this way so happily: The king
 Shall understand it presently. [Exit Butte]

Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butte,
 The king's physician: as he past alone,
 How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
 Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace. For certain,
 'Tis is of purpose lay'd, by some that hate me, [God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice.]
 To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me
 Wait else at door; a fellow-counselor.

With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave: onhalm me.
Then by me forth; although unequell'd, yet like
A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more.—

[Exeunt, leading Katharine.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. — A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovell.

Ger. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. It hath struck.

Ger. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times.—Good hour of night, sir Thomas!

Whither so late?

Low. Came you from the king, my lord?
Ger. I did, sir Thomas; and left him at pri-with the duke of Suffolk. (sings)

Low. I must to him too.
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Ger. Not yet, sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

It seems, you are in haste; an if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business: Affairs, that walk

*(As, they say, spirits do) at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature, than the business
That seeks despatch by day.*

Low. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,

They say, in great extremity; and fear'd,
She'll with the labour end.

Ger. The fruit she goes with,
I pray for heartily; that it may find
Good time, and live; but for the stock, sir
Thomas,

I wish it grubb'd up now.

Low. Methinks, I could
Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Ger. But, sir, sir,—
Hear me, sir Thomas: You are a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you was, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,—
'Twill not, sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me, I'll Cranmer, Cromwell — her two hands — and sleep in their graves.
Low. Now, sir, you speak of two I'll must remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,

beside that of the jewel-house, he's made master (sings)
The rolls, and the king's secretary: further, tangle in the gap and trade of more preferments, (sings)
With which the time will load him; The archbishop the king's hand, and tongue; and who dare speak
no syllable against him?

Ger. Yes, yes, sir Thomas,

There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and, indeed, this day,
Sir, I may tell it you, I think, I have Incess'd the lords of the council, that he s
(For so I know he is—they know he is)
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land: with which they moved,

Have broken with the king; who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint, (of his great grace)
And princely care: foreseeing those fell mis-chiefs (ed)
Our reasons laid before him,) he hath command-
To-morrow morning to the council-board
He be converted. He's a rank weed, sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long: good night, sir Thomas.
Low. Many good nights, my lord; I rest your servant.

[Exeunt Gardiner and Page.]

As Lovell is going out, enter the King and the Duke of Suffolk.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night;
My mind's not on't, you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play —
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Low. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message: who return'd her thanks
In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your highness

Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What say'st thou? ha!
To pray for her? what, is she crying out?

Low. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made

Almost enclie past a death. Alas, good lady!

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gliding of
Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles,
Pr'ythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone:
For I must think of that, which company
Will not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness
A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.—
[Exit Suffolk.]

Enter Sir Anthony Denmy.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,

As you commanded me. Ha! Canterbury?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'Tis true: Where is he, Denmy?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Bring him to us.
[Exit Denmy.]

Low. This is about that which the bishop spoke;
I am happily come hither. [Ande.]

Re-enter Denmy, with Cranmer.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.
[Lovell seems to stow
Ha! — I have said. — Be gone
What! — [Exeunt Lovell and Denmy.]

I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn music.

Grif. She is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her:—Softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of boys, and golden visards on their faces; branches of boys, or palm, in their hands. They first come unto her, then dance; and at certain changes the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverent courtiers; then the two that hold the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same order to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, (as it were by inspiration,) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone?

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.
Kath. It is not you I call for:

Saw ye none enter, since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.
Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promis'd me eternal happiness:
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, Assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good Possess your fancy. (dramas)

Kath. Bid the music leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me.

Pat. (Music ceases.)
Do you note,
How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn! How pale she looks.

And of an earthly cold? Mark you her eye?

Grif. She is going, wench; pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,—
Kath. You are a saucy fellow:
Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness,
To use no rude behaviour: go in, kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon;

My haste made me unmannerly; There is stay-
A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith; But this follow

Let me see or not again.

(Exit Griffith and Messenger.)

Re-enter Griffith, with Capricus.

If my sight fail not,
You should be lord ambassador from the emperor,
My royal nephew, and your name Capricus.

Cap. Madam, the same, your servant.

Kath. O my lord,

The times, and titles, now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me. But, I pray
What is your pleasure with me? (you.)

Cap. Noble lady,

First, mine own service to your grace; the next,
The king's request that I would visit you;
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his princely commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good lord, that comfort comes too late.

'Tis like a pardon after execution;
That gentle physick, given in time, had cur'd me; (era.)

But now I am past all comforts here, but pray—
How does his highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flourish.
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor

name
Banish'd the kingdom!—Patience, is that letter,
I caus'd you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam.

(Giving it to Katharine.)

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing, madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness (ter:—)

The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter. The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!

Blessing him, to give her virtuous breeding;
(She is young, and of a noble modest nature;
I hope, she will deserve well; and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him, (tution)

Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor peis, that his noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
Of which there is not one, I dare avow.

(And now I should not lie, but will deserve,
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul.
For honesty, and decent carriage.
A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have
them.

The last is, for my men;—they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw them from me:—
That they may have their wages duly paid them,
And something over to remember me by:
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer
life,
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents:—And, good my
lord,

By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish christian peace to souls departed, Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king

To do me this last right.

Cap. By heaven, I will;

Or let me lose the fashion of a usual

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember
In all humility unto his highness: (me)

See, his long trouble now is passing

Out of this world: tell him, in death I bless'd
him.

For so I will—Mine eyes grow dim.—Farewell,
My lord.—Griffith, farewell.—Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet. I must to bed:
Call in some women.—When I am dead, good-
wench,

Let me be us'd with honour; strew me over

Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rans,
In the old time of war, would shake the press.
And make them reel before them. No man living
Could say, This is my wife, there; all were woven
So strangely in one piece.

2 Gent.

But, 'pray, what follow'd?

3 Gent. At length her grace rose, and with numbered paces

Came to the altar: where she kneel'd, and, saint-like, cast her far eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly.
Then rose again, and bow'd her to the people:
When by the archbishop of Canterbury

She had all the royal makings of a queen;
As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems
Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the choir
With all the choicest musick of the kingdom,
Together sang Te Deum. So she parted,
And with the same full state pac'd back again
To York-place, where the feast is held.

1 Gent.

Sir, you must no more call it York-place, that is past:
For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost;
'Tis now the king's, and call'd—Whitethall.

3 Gent.

I know it; but 'tis so lately alter'd, that the old name
Is fresh about me.

2 Gent.

What two reverend bishops

Were those that went on each side of the queen?

3 Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner; the one of Winchester.

(Newly prefer'd from the king's secretary.)
The other, London.

2 Gent.

He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
The virtuous Crammer.

3 Gent.

All the land knows that;
However, yet there's no great breach; when it comes, (hum.)

Crammer will find a friend will not shrink from 2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?

3 Gent.

Thomas Cromwell;
A man in much esteem with the king, and truly
A worthy friend.—The king

Has made him master o' the jewel-house,
And one, already, of the privy-council.

2 Gent.

He will deserve more.
3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt.

Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which
Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests;
Something I can command. As I walk thither.
I'll tell ye more.

Both.

You may command us, sir.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II. — Kimbolton.

Enter Katharine, D. sore, sick; led between Griffith and Patience.

Griff. How does your grace?

Kath. O, Griffith, sick to death:

My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,
Willing to leave their burden: Retch a chair;—
So,—now, methinks, I feel a little ease.

Dukes thou dost tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,
'Twas the great child of honour, cardinal Wolsey,
Was dead?

Griff.

Yes, madam; but, I think, your grace,
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't.

Kath. Prithee, good Griffith, tell me how he died:

If well, he stopp'd before me, happily,
For my example.

Griff.

Well, the voice goes, madam:

For after the stout earl Northumberland
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward
(As a man sorely tainted,) to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill,
He could not sit his mule.

Kath.

Abs, poor man!

Griff. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester.

Lodg'd in the abbey: where the reverend abbot,
With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave these words.—O father abbot,
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to try his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!

So went to bed: where eagerly his sickness
Pursu'd him still; and, three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, (which he himself Foretold, should be his last,) full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults he gently on
him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,
And yet with charity:—He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes: one, that by succession
Ty'd all the kingdom: amply was fair play;
His own opinion was his law: I'll be p'cussor
He would say untruths; and be ever double,
Both in his words and meaning: He was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:

His promises were, as he then was, mighty:
But his performances, as he is now, nothing.
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Griff.

Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now!

Kath.

Yes, good Griffith;

I were ungrateful else.

Griff.

This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, and, oddly,
Was fashion'd to much honour. From his cradle,
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persundering;
Lofly and dear to them that lov'd him not;
But to those men that sought him, sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in re'ting,
(Which was a sin,) yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely: Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning, that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich, and Oxford: one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it.

The other, though unfulfill'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.

His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him:
For then, and not till then, he left himself,
And found the blessedness of being little.

And, to add greater honours to his age,
Than man could give him, he died, fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.

Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty.

Now in his ashes honour: Peace be with him!—
Patience, be near me still; and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note

To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe,
And my integrity to heaven, is all. [well,
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell! I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Well. So I have. Farewell
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter Two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. You are well met once again.
2 Gent. And so are you.
1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold

The lady Anne pass from her coronation?

2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,

The duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

1 Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd
This general joy. [sorrow;

2 Gent. 'Tis well: The citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their rural minds;

As, let them have their rights, they are ever for in celebration of this day with shows, [ward pageants, and sights of honour.

1 Gent. Never greater,

Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contain paper in your hand?

1 Gent. Yes; 'tis the list

Of those that claim their offices this day,

By custom of the coronation.

The duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims

To be high steward; next, the duke of Norfolk.

He to be earl marshal: you may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known these customs,

I should have been beholden to your paper.

But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,

The princess dowager? how goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other

Learned and reverend fathers of his order,

Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off

From Ampthill, where the princess lay; to which

She oft was cited by them, but appear'd not:

And, to be short, for not appearance, and

The king's late scruple, by the main assent

Of all these learned men she was divorc'd.

And the late marriage made of none effect:

Since which, she was removed to Kimbolton,

Where she remains now, sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good lady!—

[Trumpets.

The trumpet sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

THE ORDER OF THE PROCESSION.

A lively flourish of trumpets: then enter

1. Two Judges.

2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before

him.

3. Choristers singing. [Music.

4. Mayor of London bearing the mace. Then Ger-ter, in his coat of arms, and on his head a gilt copper crown.

5. Marquis Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head, a demi-coronet of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of asher with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.

6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white sword, as high steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head.
Collars of SS.

7. A canopy borne by four of the Crague ports; under it, the Queen in her robe; her hair richly adorned with perri; crowned. On each side of her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.

8. The old Duchesses of Norfolk in a coronet of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.

9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me.—These I know:—

Who's that, that bears the sceptre?

1 Gent. Marquis Dorset:

And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman: And that

The duke of Suffolk [should be

1 Gent. 'Tis the same: high-steward.

2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk?

1 Gent. Yes.

2 Gent. Heaven bless thee!

[Looking on the Queen.

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on—

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel:

Our king has all the Indies in his arms.

And more, and richer, when he strains that lady;

I cannot blame his conscience

1 Gent. They, that bear

The cloth of honour o'er her, are four barons

Of the Cinque-ports.

2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all,

are near her.

I take it, she that carries up the train,

Is that old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.

1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

2 Gent. Their porrets say so. These are stars,

indeed:

And, sometimes, falling ones.

1 Gent. No more of that.

[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been bringing?

3 Gent. Among the crowd i' the abbey: where

Could not be wad'd in more; and I am stifled

With the mere rankness of their joy.

2 Gent. You saw

The ceremony?

3 Gent. That I did.

1 Gent. How was it?

3 Gent. Well worth the seeing.

2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream

Of lords and ladies having brought the queen

To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off

A distance from her: while her grace sat down

To rest a while, some half an hour or so,

In a rich chair of state, opposing freely

The beauty of her person to the people.

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman

That ever lay by man: which when the people

Had the full view of, such a noise arose

As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest.

As loud, and to as many tunes: lutes, crotchets,

[Doublets, I think, flew up; and had their three

Chen.
Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see
So little of his great self. (him)

Ser. I forgive him.

My. Lord cardinal, the king's further pleasure is—

Because all these things, you have done of late
By your power leant within this kingdom,
Fell into the compass of a premunire,—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection:—This is my charge.

Ner. And so we'll leave you to your meditations

How to live better. For your stubborn answer,
About the giving back the great seal to us,
The king shall know it, and no doubt, shall thank you.

So fare you well, my little good lord cardinal!
(Exeunt all but Wolsey.)

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear me.

Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man; To-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hope, to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him;
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a ripening,—hips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory;
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me; and now has left me
Weary, and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude strain, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp, and glory of this world, I hate ye;
I feel my heart new opened: O, how wretched
Is that poor man, that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to—
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have;
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again!—

Enter Cromwell, amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell!
Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What, amazed
At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, as you weep,
I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Wol. Why, well;
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell!
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has pardon'd me, (to me.)

I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A kneel would seek a wary, too much honour:
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad, your grace has made that right use of it.

Wol. I hope, I have: I am able now, methinks, (Out of a fortitude of soul I feel)
To endure more miseries, and greater far,
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest, and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless him!

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas More is Lord chancellor in your place. (chosen)

Wol. That's somewhat sudden;

But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake, and his conscience; that his bones

When he has run his course, and sleeps in bloom,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his queen.

Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell,

The king has gone beyond me, all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever:
No son shall ever usher forth mine hours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell!

I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: Seek the king;

That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told him (thee);

What, and how true thou art: he will advance
Some little memory of me will stir him,

I know his noble nature, not to let
Thy hopeful service pass too: Good Cromwell, Neglect him not: make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord,

Must I then leave you? must I needs forget
So much, so noble, and so true a master?

Bear witness, all that have our hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord!

The king shall have my service; but my prayers
For ever, and for ever, shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me

Out of thy honest truth to play the woman.
Let's dry our eyes; and thus far hear me, Crom-
well!

And,—when I am forgotten, as I shall be;
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention
Of me more must be heard of,—say, I taught
thee;

Say, Wolsey,—that once told the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of ha-
mour,—

Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master murr'd it.

Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me.
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition;

By that sin fell the angels; how can man then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by't?

Love thyself last; cherish those hearts that hate Corruption; win no more than honesty. (Thee);

Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, that
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O
Cromwell,

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. Serve the king;
And,—Prythee, lead me in:

There take an inventory of all I have,

I sent the king ! Is there no way to cure this !
No new device to heat this from his brains !
I know, 'twill stir him strongly ; Yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this — To the Pope !

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I write to his holiness. Nay then, farewell !
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness.

And, from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting. I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Re-enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal : who commands you

To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands ; and to confine yourself
To Asher-house, my lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol. Stay,
Where's your commission, lords ! words cannot Authority so weakly. [Carry]

Suf. Who dare cross them,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly ! [It.]

Wol. I'll do more than will, or words, to do
[I mean, your malice,] know, officious lords,
I dare, and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what course metal ye are moulded, — envy.
How eagerly ye follow my d'sgraces,
As if it fed yet and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin !
Follow your envious courses, men of malice ;
You have christian warrant for them, and, no doubt,

In time will find their set rewards. That seal,
You ask with such a violence, the king
[Mine, and your master] with his own hand gave me :

Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honour,
During my life, and, to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by let-en patent : Now, who'll take it !
Suf. The king, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself then.
Suf. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest ;
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue, than said so.

Suf. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law ;
The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
[With thee, and all thy best parts bound together,] [policy]

Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your
You sent me deputy for Ireland :
Far from his succour, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st
him ;

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer, is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts : how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
[If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have an little honesty as honour :
That I in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master

Dare make a sadder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Suf. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you ; then shouldn't feel [floods,
My sword ! the life-blood of these else. — My
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance !
And from this fellow ! if we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility ; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap, like larks.

Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Suf. Yes, that goodness
Of glossing all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion ;
The goodness of your intercepted packets,
You write to the pope, against the king : your goodness,

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious. —
My lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis'd nobility, our nation.

Who, if he live, will scarce be gentler, —
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life : — I'll startle you Worse than the saving bell, when the brown
wench

Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.
Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise

But that I am bound in charity against it !
Nor. These articles, my lord, are in the king's hand ;

But, thus much, they are foul ones.
Wol. So much fairer,
And spotless, shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

Suf. This cannot save you :
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles ; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty, cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir ;
I dare your worst objections : if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Suf. I'd rather want those, than my head.
Have at you,
First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge,

You wrought to be a legate : by which power
You main'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that, in all you writ to Rome, or
To foreign princes, See it Re-see [less
Was still merc'd ; in which you brought the
To be your servant.

Suf. Then, that, without the knowledge
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Suf. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Casalis, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.
Suf. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance, [science,]

[By what means got, I leave to your own con-
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities : to the mere undying
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are ;
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

A spiteous Lutheran; and not wholesome to Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of
Our hard-ruled king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Hath crawled into the favour of the king,
And is his oracle.

Nor. He is ver'd at something.
Suf. I would, 'twere something that would fort the string.

The master-ord of his heart!

Enter the King, reading a schedule; and Lovell.

Suf. The king, the king.
K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated

To his own portion! and what expense by the Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of truth.

Does he rake this together!—Now, my lords;
Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him: Some strange commo-le in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts; [Then Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then, lays his finger on his temple; straight,
Springs out into fast gut; then, stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon, he casts
His eyes against the moon: in most strange posture we have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be;
There is a mutiny in his mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd: And, wot you what I found
There! on my conscience, put unwittingly!
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing,—
'The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household; which
I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will;
Some spirit put this paper in the packet
To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings; but, I am afraid,
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

[He takes his hat, and whispers Lovell, who goes to Wolsey.]

Wol. Heaven forgive me!
Ever God bless your highness!

K. Hen. Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory

Of your best graces in your mind: the which
You were now running o'er; you have scarce
To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span [time
To keep your memory alert: Sure, in that
I deem you an ill husband: and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sit
For truly offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which
I bear i' the state; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which, perforce,
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.
Wol. And ever may your highness yoke toge-
As I will lend you cause, my doing well [then,
With my well-saying!

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed, to say well: [you:
And yet words are no deeds. My father lord

He said, he did; and with his deed did crown
His word upon you. Since I had my office,
I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
Employ'd you where high profits might come
But part'd my present havings, to bestow [home,
My bronzies upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?
Suf. The Lord increase this business! [Aside.

K. Hen. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me,
If what I now pronounce, you have found true:
And, if you may confess it, say what.

If you are bound to us, or no. What say you?
Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your royal graces.

Shower'd on me daily, have been more, than could
My studied purposes require; which went Beyond all men's endeavours:—my endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet filed with my abilities: Mine own ends
Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed
To the good of your most sacred person, and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I

Can nothing render but allegiant thanks;
My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty,
Which ever has, and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. Fairly answer'd;
A loyal and obedient subject is Therewith illustrated: The honour of it
Does pay the act of it: as, if the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume
That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour
more

On you, than any:—so your hand and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess,
That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own—that am, have, and will be.
Though all the world should crack their duty to
you,

And throw it from their soul; though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make them, and

Appear in forms more horrid; yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken:
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast.
For you have seen him open't:—Read o'er this:

[Giving him papers.
And, after, this: and then to breakfast, with What appetite you have.

[Exit King, frowning upon Cardinal Wolsey:
The Nobles throng after him, smiling, and whee-pering.

Wol. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this! how have I reap'd it!
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: So looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him;
Then makes him nothing. I must read this
I fear the story of his anger.—'Tis so; [paper:
This paper has undone me:—'Tis the account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together

[down,
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the pope
And see my friends in Rome. O negligence,
Fit for a fool to fall by! What cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet

To make a seemly answer to such persons.
 Pray, do my service to his majesty:
 He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers,
 While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers,
 Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs,
 That little thought, when she set footing here,
 She should have bought her dignities so dear.

(Exeunt.)

SCENE II. — Ante-chamber to the King's Apartment.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints And force them with a constancy, the cardinal Cannot stand under them: if you omit The offer of this time, I cannot promise, But that you shall sustain some new disgraces, With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful To meet the least occasion, that may give me Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke, To be revenged on him.

Suf. Which of the peers, Have I not found gone by him, or at least Strangely neglected? when did he regard The stamp of nobleness in any person, Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures: What he deserves of you and me, I know; What we can do to him, (though now the time Grows way to us,) I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king; never attempt Any thing on him; for he hath a witchcraft Over the king in his tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not; His spell in that is out: the king hath found Matter against him, that for ever mars The house of his language. No, he's settled: Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir, I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true: In the divorce, his contrary proceedings Are all unfolded; wherein he appears, As I could wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O, how, how? Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried.

And came to the eye of the king: wherein was How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness To stay the judgment of the divorce; For if it did take place, I do, quoth he, perceive My king is languid in affection to A creature of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen.

Sur. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work? Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he counts.

And hedges, his own way. But in this point All his tricks founder, and he brings his physick After his patient's death: the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. 'Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord! For, I protest, you have it.

Sur. Now all my joy Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't!

Nor. All men's.

Suf. There's order given for her coronation: Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left To some ears unrecounted — But, my lords, She is a gallant creature, and complete In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But, will the king Digest this letter of the cardinal's? The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no; There be more wasps that buzz about his nose, Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius

Is stolen away to Rome: hath ta'en no leave: Has left the cause of the king unhandled: and Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal, To second all his plot. I do assure you, The king cry'd, Ha! at that.

Cham. Now, God increase him, And let him cry, Ha, louder!

Nor. But, my lord, When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions; which Have satisfied the king for his divorce, Together with all famous outages Almost in Christendom: shortly, I believe, His second marriage shall be publish'd, and Her coronation. Katharine no more Shall be call'd queen; but princess dowager, And widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him For it, an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

The cardinal —

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

Nor. Observe, observe — he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.

Wol. Look'd he at the inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently.

He did unseal them: and the first he view'd,

He did it with a serious mind; a head

Was in his countenance: You, he bade

Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready

To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me a while. — (Exit Cromwell.)

It shall be to the duchess of Alençon,

The French king's sister: he shall marry her.

— Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him:

There is more in it than fair visage. — Bullen!

No, we'll no Bullens — Speedily I wish

To hear from Rome. — The marchioness of Pom-

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be, he hears the king

Does whet his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough.

Loh! for thy justice!

Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman; a knight's

To be her mistress' mistress: the queen's queen!

This candle burns not clear; 'tis I must snuff it!

I then out it goes — What though I know her vir-tuous,

And well deserving? yet I know her sin.

(And service to his majesty and you.)
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation.
To taint that honour every good tongue likes;
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow;
You have too much, good lady: but to know
How you stand minded in the worldly difference Between the king and you: and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions,
And comforts to your cause.

Com. Most honour'd madam,
My lord of York,—out of his noble nature,
Zest and obedience he still bore your grace;
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him: (which was too far,)—
Others, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside.
My lord, I thank you both for your good will.
Ye speak like honest men, (pray God, ye prove
But how to make ye suddenly an answer, (so)
Is such a point of weight, so near mine honour,
(More near my life, I fear,) with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth, I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids: full little, God knows, looking Either for such men, or such business
For her sake that I have been, (far I feel
The last fit of my greatness,) good your graces,
Let me have time, and counsel, for my cause:
Alas! I am a poor woman, friendless, hopeless!

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears;
Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England,
But little for my profit: Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure.

(Though he be grown so desperate to be honest.)
And live a subject! Nay, friends, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here:
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence,
In mine own country, lords.

Com. I would, your grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?
Com. Put your main cause into the king's protection;

He's loving, and most gracious: 'twill be much
Both for your honour better, and your cause;
For, if the trial of the law o'ertake you,
You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you rightly.
Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for, both, my rains:

Is this your christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge
That no king can corrupt.

Com. Your rage mistakes us.
Q. Kath. The more shame for ye; holy men I thought ye.

Upon my soul!—two reverend cardinal virtues;
But cardinal sins, and hollow hearts, I fear ye:
Mend them, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady!
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd!
I will not wish ye half my miseries:
I have more charity: But say, I warn'd ye:
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye. [Once

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction:
Yet turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: Woe upon ye
And all such false professors! Would ye have me
(If you have any justice, any pity;
If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits,
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me!
Alas! he has banish'd me his bed already:
His love, too long ago: I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I build now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? all your studies
Make me a curse like this.

Com. Your fears are worse.
Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—(let me speak myself, [Once]

Since virtue finds no friends.)—a wife, a true
A woman (I dare say, without vain-glory.)
Never yet branded with suspicion? [Him!]
Have I with all my full affections [Him!]
Still met the king? I lov'd him next heaven! Obed!
Been, out of kindness, superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that we'd dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure;
And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour,—a great patience.

Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at. [Guilty,

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so
To give up willingly that noble title
Your master woe me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Wol. 'Pray, hear me.
Q. Kath. 'Would I had never trod this English
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it! [earth, Ye have angel's faces, but heaven knows your hearts.

What will become of me now, wretched lady?
I am the most unhappy woman living.—
Alas! poor wench, where are now your fortunes? [To her Women.
Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom where no pity.
No friends, no hope: no kindred weep for me;
Almost, no grave allow'd me.—Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field, and flourish'd, I'll hang my head, and perish. [ish'd,

Wol. If your grace
Could but be brought to know, our souls are honest, [lady,

You'd feel more comfort: why should we, good
Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
'The way of our professions is against it;
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them:
For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this car-
'The hearts of princes kiss obedience, [riase.
So much they love it; but, to stubborn spirits,
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know, you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: Pray, think us,
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants. [virtues

Com. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong yo r
With these weak women's fears. A noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts
Such doubts, as false own, from it. The king loves you;
Beware you lose it not: For us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: And, pray forgive me.

If I have used myself unmanly;
You know, I am a woman, lacking wit

Queen Katharine.—Your graces find me here part of a housewife;
I would be all, against the worst may happen.

HENRY VIII.. ACT III.. SCENE I.

Kne a determinate resolution, he
(I mean the bishop) did require a respite;
Wherein he might the king his lord advise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
Sometime our brother's wife. This respite shook
The bosom of our conscience, enter'd me,
Yes, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my breast; which forc'd such way,
That many maz'd couplings did throng,
And press'd in with this caution First, me-
thought,

I stood not in the smile of heaven; who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't, than
The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them: Hence I took a
thought,

This was a judgement on me; that my kingdom,
Well worthy the best heir o'the world, should not Be gladden'd in't by me: Then follows, that I weigh'd the danger which my realm stood in
By this my issue's fall; and that gave to me
Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together: that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience,—which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,—
By all the reverend fathers of the land,
And doctors learn'd—First, I began in private
With you, my lord of Lincoln; you remember
How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first mov'd you.

Leo. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long; be pleas'd yourself to say

How far you satisfied me.

Leo. So please your highness,
This question did at first so stagger me,—
Bearing a state of mighty moment in't,
And consequence of dread,—that I committed
The daring of counsel which I had, to doubt;
And did entreat your highness to this course,
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you,
My lord of Canterbury; and got your leave
To make this present summons:—Unsollicit
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particu' consent proceeded,
Under your hands and seals. Therefore, go on;
For no dislike I'll give against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward:
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life,
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come, with her,
Katharine our queen, before the prince's creature
That's paragon o'the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 'tis a needless fitness
That we adjourn this court till furthest day;
Mean while must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends to o his house.

[They rise to depart.]

K. Hen. I may perceive, [Aside]
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dietary cloth, and tréas of Rome.
My learn'd and well-mov'd servant, Cranmer;
Pr'ythee, return I with thy approach, I know,
My counsel comes anon. Break up the court;
I say, so. [Exit in a noise as they entered.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Palace at Bridewell. A Room in the Queen's Apartment.

The Queen, and some of her Women, at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows and with troubles:
Sing, and disperse them, if thou canst: leave working.

SONG.

*Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops, that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing;
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung; as sun, and showers,
There had been a lasting spring.
Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by,
In sweet music is such art—
Killing care and grief of heart
Full asleep, or, hearing, die.*

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now! [dismal]
Genl. Ah! please your grace, the two great carwain in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me!
Genl. They will'd use my m. unalms.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces
To come near. [Exit Genl.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour!
I do not like their coming, now I think on't.
They should be good men; their affairs as right-
But all hoods make not monks. [Exit:]

Enter Wolsey and Campeius.

Wol. Peace to your highness!

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife;

I would be all against the worst may happen.

What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. My it please you, noble maidens to withdraw

Into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
Deserves a censure. 'Would, all other women
Could speak thus with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not, so much I am happy
Above a number, if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw them,
Envy and base opinion set against them,
I know my life so even: If your business
Seek me out, and that way I am wide in,
Out with it boldly: Truth loves open dealing.

Wol. [Aside] Let us be honest, let us be honest, servantism.

Q. Kath. O good, my lord, no! in;
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv'd in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange,
suspicious;

[You]
Pray, speak in English: here are some will thank
If you speak truth, for their poor in stress' sake;
Believe me, she has had much wrong: Lord ear-
The willing'st soul I ever yet committed, [dismal]
May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady,
I am sorry, my integrity should breed.

I will implore; if not—the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady.
(And of your choice,) these reverend fathers:
Of singular integrity and learning, [men
Yes, the elect of the land, who are assembled
To plead your cause: it shall be therefore hottles.

That longer you desire the court; as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace
Has spoken well, and justly: Therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed;
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd, and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal,—
To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam!

Q. Kath. Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that
We are a queen, (or long have dream'd so,)
certain,

The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.
Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay,
before.

Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induc'd by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy; and make my challenge.
You shall not be my judge: for it is you
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,—
Which God's dew quench!—Therefore, I say
I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul, [again,
Refuse you for my judge: whom, yet once more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess,
You speak not like yourself; who ever yet
Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom
Overtopping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong:

I have no spleen against you; nor injustice
For you, or any: how far I have proceeded,
Or how far further shall, is warranted
By a commission from the anastory. [me,
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge
That I have blown this coal: I do deny it;
The king is present: if it be known to him,
That I run away my deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood? yea, as much
As you have done any truth. But if he know
That I am free of your report, he knows,
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
I lie, to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you; the which before

His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking,
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. You are meek, and humble-mouth'd;

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming st humbleness and humility; but your heart is cramm'd with artfulness, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune, and his highness' favours, Gone slightly o'er low steps; and now are nointed [words,

Where powers are your retainers; and your Lovesickness to you, serve your will, not please Yourself produce their office. I must tell you,

You tender more your person's honour, than
Your high professed spiritual: That again
I do refuse you for my judge; and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope.
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness,
And to be judg'd by him.

[She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.
Cam. The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be try'd by it; 'tis not well.
She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.
Crier. Katharine queen of England, come into the court.

Grif. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you,
keep your way:

When you are call'd, return.—Now the Lord help. [on]

They vex me past my patience!—pray you, pass
I will not tarry: no, nor ever more,
Upon this business, my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[*Exeunt Queen, Griffith, and her other
Attendants.*

K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate;
That man is the world, who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that: Thou art, alone,
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife like government,—
Obeying in commanding,—and thy parts Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out.)
The queen of earthly queens:—She is noble
born;

And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing Of all these ears, (for where I am robb'd and bound,

There must I be unlock'd; although not there
At once and fully satisfied,) whether ever I Did breach this business to your highness; or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on't or ever
Have to you,—but with thanks to God for such A royal lady,—spoke one the least word, might
Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My lord cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village curs,
Bark when their fellows do: by some of these
The queen is put in anger. You are excus'd:
But will you be more justified if you ever
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never Heard it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd, oft,
The progress made toward it.—on my honour,
I speak my word to lord cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't—

I will be hold with time, and your attention:—
I then mark the inducement. Thus a cause;—
give heed to't:

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness,
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador.
Who had been hither sent on the debating [dra,
A marriage 'twixt the duke of Orleans and
Our daughter Mary: I the progress of this business

A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

Ann. I do not know.
What kind of my obedience I should tender;
More than my all is nothing; nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers, and wishes,

Are all I can return. 'Beseech your lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience.
As from a hushing handmaid to his highness;
Whose health, and royalty, I pray for.

Cham. Lady,
I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit
The king hath of you.—I have persw'd her well;
[Aside.]

Beauty and honour in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the king; and who knows
But from this lady may proceed a gem. [yet.]
To lighten all this tale?—I'll to the king,
And say, I spoke with you.

Ann. My honour'd lord.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

O'd L. Why, this it is: see, see!
I have been bearing sixteen years in court,
(Am yet a courtier beggarly,) nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late,
For any suit of pounds; and you, (O fate!)
A very fresh-fish here, (ye, ye upon
This compell'd fortune!) have your mouth fill'd
Before you open it. [up.]

Ann. This is strange to me.
O'd L. How tastes it! is it bitter! forty pence, no.

There was a silence, ('tis an old story.)
That would not be a queen—that would she not—

For all the mud in Egypt:—Have you heard it?
Ann. Come, you are pleasant.

O'd L. With your theme, I could O'er-mount the lark. The marchioness of Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year! for pure respect;
No other obligation: By my life,
That promises more thousands: Honour's train
Is longer than his forehead. By this time,
I know, your back will bear a duchess;—Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Ann. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy.
And leave me out on't. "Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot; it faints me,
To think what follows.

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence: Pray, do not deliver
What here you have heard, to her.

O'd L. What do you think me?
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Hall in Black-fryars.

Trumpets, drum, and cornets. Enter Two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, Two Scrivens, in the habit of doctors; after them, the Archbishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Winchester, and Saint Asaph; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal and a cardinal's hat; then Two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman in a bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms, bearing a silver mace, then Two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals Wolsey and Campden; Two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the King and Queen, and their Train. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the Two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place at some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; between them, the Scrivens. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is Let silence be commanded. [read.]

K. Hen. What's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd;
You may then spare that time.

Wol. Be't so:—Proceed.
Scrive. Say, Henry king of England, come into the court.

Crier. Henry king of England, &c.
K. Hen. Here [into court.]

Scrive. Say, Katharine queen of England, come
Crier. Katharine queen of England, &c.

[The Queen makes no answer; rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you, do me right and jus-
And to bestow your pity on me: for [lute:]

I am a most poor woman, and a stranger
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir,

In what have I offended you? I want cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off.
And take your good grace from me! Heaven
witness.

I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike.

Yea, subject to your countenance; glad, or sorry,
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour,
I ever contradicted your desire. [friends]

Or made it not mine too! Or which of you
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine enemy! what friend of mine

That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking! I say, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd! Sir, call to mind

That I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you: If, in the course
And process of this time, you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,

My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you, sw.

The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmatch'd wit and judgment: Ferdinand,
My father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many

A year before: It is not to be question'd
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business:
Who deem'd our marriage lawful? Wh'efore humbly

Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd whose counsel

Com. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves.

You are so noble: To your highness' hand I tender my commission: by whose virtue (The court of Rome commanding,)—you, my lord Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant, in the municipal justice of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted.
Forthwith, for what you come:—Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know, your majesty has always lov'd her so dear in heart, not to deny her that A woman of less place might ask by law, Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her.

K. Hen. Ay, and the best, she shall have; and my favour.
To him that does best: God forbid else. Cardinal, Prythee call Gardiner to me, my new secretary: I find him a fit fellow. [Exit Wolsey.]

Re-enter Wolsey, with Gardiner.

Wol. Give me your hand: much joy and favour You are the king's now. [To you;]

Gard. But to be commanded For ever by your grace, whose hand has rais'd me. [Aside.]

K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner.

[They converse apart.]

Com. My lord of York, was not one doctor Pace In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Wol. Yes, surely.

Com. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread Even of yourself, lord cardinal. [Then]

Wol. How! of me!

Com. They will not stick to say, you envied him; And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous; Kept him a foreign man still; which so griev'd him, That he ran mad, and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him! That's christian cure enough: for living murderers.

There's places of rebuke. He was a fool; For he would needs be virtuous: That good fellow, If I commend him, follows my appointment;

I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother, We live not to be envied by meaner persons.

K. Hen. Deliver this with modesty to the queen.

[Exit Gardiner.]

The most convenient place that I can think of, For such receipt of learning, is Black-Friars; There ye shall meet about this weighty business:—My Wolsey, see it furnish'd!—O my lord, Would it were griev'd an able man, to leave So sweet a bedfellow! But, conscience, conscience—

O, 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—An Anti-Chamber in the Queen's Apartments.

Enter Anne Boleyn and an old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither:—Here's the pang that pinches:

His highness having lov'd so long with her: and So good a lady, that no tongue could ever (she Providence dishonour'd her,—by my life, She never knew harm-doing;—O now, after So many courtes of the sun upbraid, Still growing in a majesty and pomp,—the which To leave is a thousand-fold more bitter, than To sweet at first to acquire,—after this process,

To give her the vantage! it is a pity Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most hard temper

Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O, God's will! much better, She ne'er had known pomp: though it be temporal.

Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce It from the bearer, 'tis a surerance, pausing As soul and body's covering.

Old L. Alas, poor lady! She's a stranger now again.

Anne. So much the more

Must pity drop upon her. Verily, I swear, 'tis better to be lowly-born, And range with humble lovers in one end, Than to be perched up in a gilded grief And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content

Is our best having. By my truth, and maidenhead, I would not be a queen.

Old L. Bewhew me I would, And venture maidenhead for't; and so would you, For all the spice of your hypocrisy:

You, that have so fair parts of woman on you, Have too a woman's heart: which ever yet Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty; Which, to my soul, are blessings; and which gifts (Saving your minding) the capacity Of your soft chequer'd consciences would receive, If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good truth,—
Old L. Yes, truth, and truth,—You would not be a queen!

Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.
Old L. 'Tis strange: a three-pence borrow'd would hire me, what think you of a duchess? I have you limits To bear that load of title!

Anne. No, in truth. [Little;]

Old L. Then you are weakly made: Pluck off a I would not be a young count in your way. For more than blushing comes to: if your back Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!

I swear again, I would not be a queen

For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little Enrichment You'd venture an embelling: I myself Would for Carnarvonshire, although there were no more to the crown but that. Lo, who comes here!

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What wer't worth to know

The secret of your conference?

Anne. My great lord, Not your demand: it values not your asking: Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming The action of good women; there is hope, All will be well.

Anne. Now I pray God, amen!

Cham. You hear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady, Forgive I speak sincerely, and high note's Taken of your many virtues, the king's majesty Commends his good opinion to you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing Than marchionness of Pembroke; to which title

For not bestowing on him, at his asking.

The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpose'd.
 2 Genl. I think, you have hit the mark: But is't not cruel,

That she should feel the smart of this! The carwill have his will, and she must fall.

1 Genl.
 We are too open here to argue this;
 Let's think in private no more. [Exit.

SCENE II. — An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter.

Cham. My lord, — The horses your lordship sent for, with all the carriages I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young, and handsome;
 and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission, and mean power, took 'em from me; with this reason, — His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir.

I fear he will, indeed: Well, let him have them:
 He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met, my good Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your graces.
 Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. Full of sad thoughts and troubles. I left him private.

Nor. What's the cause?
 Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No, his conscience has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so:
 This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal:
 That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune, Turns what he lists. The king will know him one day.

Suf. Pray God, he do! he'll never know himself
 Nor. How holily he works in all his business!

And with what zeal! For now he has crack'd the tongue

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great
 He dives into the king's soul; and there scatters

Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,
 Fears, and despair, and all these for his marriage:

And out of all these, to restore the king,
 He counsels a divorce: a loss of her,

That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
 About his neck, yet never lost her lustre:

Of her, that loves him with that excellence
 That uncreeds love good men with: even of her

That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
 Will bless the king: And is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel!
 'Tis most true,

These news are every where: every tongue speaks
 And every heart weeps for't: All, that dare
 Look into these affairs, see this main end, —

The French king's sister! Heaven will one day open

The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
 This bold head man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.
 Nor. We had need pray,

And heartily, for our deliverance;
 Or this imperious man will work us all
 From princes into pages; all men's honours

Lie in one lump before him, to be fashion'd
 Into what patch he pleases.

Suf. For me, my lords,
 I love him not nor fear him; there's my creed:

As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
 If the king please; his curses and his blessings

Touch me alike — they are breath I not believe in.
 I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him

To him that made him proud, the pope.
 Nor.

And with some other business, put the king
 From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon
 My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
 The king hath sent me other-where: besides,
 You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:

Health to your lordships.
 Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]
 Norfolk opens a folding-door. The King is discovered sitting, and reading seriously.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.
 K. Hen. Who is there? ah!

Nor. 'Pray God, he be not angry.
 K. Hen. Who's there, I say! How dare you thrust yourselves

 Into my private meditations?

Who am I? ha?

Nor. A gracious king, that pardons all offences, Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty, this way,

is business of estate: in which, we come
 To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. You are too bold:
 Go to; I'll make ye know your time of business:

Is this an hour for temporal affairs? ha?

Enter Wolsey and Campeius.
 Who's there? my good lord cardinal! — O my

Wolsey,
 The quiet of my wounded conscience,

Thou art a cure fit for a king. — You're welcome,
 [To Campeius.]

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom;
 Use us, and it: — My good lord, have great care

I be not found a talker. [To Wolsey.]
 Wol. Sir, you cannot.

I would, your grace would give us but an hour
 Of private conference.

K. Hen. We are busy; go.
 [To Norfolk and Suffolk.]

Nor. This priest has no pride in him!
 Suf. Not to speak of;

I would not be so sick though, for his place;
 But this cannot continue.

Nor. If it do,
 I'll venture one heaven at him.

Suf. I another.
 [Exit Norfolk and Suffolk.]

Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom Above all princes, in committing freely

Your scruple to the voice of Christendom:
 Who can be angry now? what e'er reach you!

The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,
 Must now confess, if they have any goodness,

The trial just and noble. All the clerics,
 I mean, the learned ones, in christian kingdoms,

Have their free voices; Rome, the nurse of judgment by your wisdom self, hath sent

One general tongue unto us, this good man,
 This just and learned priest, cardinal Campeius;

Whom, once more, I present unto your highness.
 K. Hen. And, once more, in mine arms I bid him welcome,

 And thank the holy conclave for their loves;

They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.

2 Genl. That trick of state
Was a deep envious one.

1 Genl. At his return,
No doubt, he will requite it. This is noted,
And generally; whenever the king favours,
The cardinal instantly will find employment,
And far enough from court too.

3 Genl. All the commoners
Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience,
Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much
They love and do's on: call him bounteous Buck-
The mirror of all courtesy;—
1 Genl. Stay there, sir,
And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

Enter Buckingham from his arraignment: Tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side; with him Sir Thomas Lovell, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir William Sands, and common people.

2 Genl. Let's stand close, and behold him.
Buck. All good people,

You that thus far have come to pity me,
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.
I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,
And by that name must die; yet, heaven bear
witness,

And, if I have a conscience, let it sink me,
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!
The law I hear no malice for my death,
It has done, upon the promises, but justice:
But these, that sought it, I could wish more christians.

Be what they will, I heartily forgive them:
Yet let them look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men:
For then my guilt less blood must cry against them.
For further life in this world I ne'er hope,
Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies
More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me

And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends, and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end:
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven.—Lead on, o' God's name.

Leo. I do beseech your grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I freely forgive you,
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all;
'There cannot be those numberless offences
'Gainst me, I can't make peace with: no black envy

Shall make my grave.—Commend me to his
And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him.
You met him half in heaven: my vows and prayers

Yet are the king's: and, till my soul forsake me,
Shall cry for blessings on him: May he live
Longer than I have time to tell his years!
Ever belov'd and loving, may his rule be!
And, when old time shall lead him to his end,
Guidance and he fill up one monument!

Leo. To the water side I must conduct your grace;

Then give my charge up to sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

1 Genl. Prepare there,
The duke is coming; see, the barge he ready;
And sit at with such furniture, as suits
The grave men of his person.

Buck. Nay, sir Nicholas,
Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was lord high constable,
And duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun:

Yet I am richer than my base accusers. (It)
That never knew what truth meant: I now seal
And with that blood will make them one day arrown for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister,
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fell; God's peace be with him!
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss like a most royal prince,
Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes
A little happier than my wretched father: (me)
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes.—Both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most;
A most unnatural and faithless service!

Heaven has an end in all: Yet, you tint hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are literal of your loves, and counsels,
Be sure, you be not loose; for those you name
friends.
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ice, never flood again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good people, (hour)
Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last
Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell!

And when you would say something that is end,
Speak how I fall,—I have done; and God forgive me! (Exeunt Buckingham and Tristram)

1 Genl. O, this is full of pity!—Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.

2 Genl. If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inkling
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.

1 Genl. Good angels keep it from us!
Where may it be? You do not doubt my faith, sir!

2 Genl. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require
A strong faith to conceal it.

1 Genl. Let me have it;
I do not talk much.

2 Genl. I am confident;
You shall, sir: Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing, of a separation
Between the king and Katharine?

1 Genl. Yes, but it held not:
For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the lord mayor, straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.

2 Genl. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now: for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain,
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,
Or some about him near, have, out of malice
To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple
That will undo her: To confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately;

As all think, for this business. 'Tis the cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the emperor,

1 Genl. 'Tis the cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the emperor,

Go give them welcome, you can speak the French tongue;

And, pray, receive them nobly, and conduct them into our presence, where this heaven of beauty shall shine at full upon them:—Some attend him.—

[Exit Chamberlain, attended. All arise, and tables removed.]
You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend A good digestion to you all: and, once more, [it.] I shower a welcome on you:—Welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the King, and twelve others, as masters, habited like shepherds, with sixteen torch-bearers; ushered by the lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?
Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd

To tell your grace:—That, having heard by fame Of this so noble and so fair assembly This night to meet here, they could do no less, Out of the great respect they bear to beauty, But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct, Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat An hour of revels with them.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain, They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay them [pleasures.]
A thousand thanks, and pray them take their [Ladies cheer for the dance. The King dances Anne Bullen.]

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O, beauty, Till now I never knew thee. [Music. Dance.]

Wol. My grace! Your grace!
Cham. Pray, tell them thus much from me: There should be one amongst them, by his person, More worthy this place than myself; to whom If I but knew him, with my love and duty I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord.
[Cham. goes to the company, and returns.]
Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess, There is, indeed; which they would have your Find out, and he will take it. [Grace.]
Wol. Let me see then.—

[Comes from his state.]
By all your good leaves, gentlemen;—Here I'll My royal choice. [make.]
K. Hen. You have found him, cardinal!

[Unmasking.]
You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord: You are a churchman, or I'll tell you, cardinal, I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad, Your grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My lord chamberlain, Pray, come hither: What fair lady's that?
Cham. An't please your grace, sir Thomas Bullen's daughter.

[men.]
The viscount Richford, one of her highness' wu-
K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one.—Sweet! I were unmannerly, to take you out, [heart,] And not to kiss you.—A health, gentlemen, Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready?
I'll the privy chamber!

Wol. Yes, my lord.
Wol. Your grace,
I fear, with dancing is a little heated.

K. Hen. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord, In the next chamber. [partner,]

K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one.—Sweet! I must not yet forsake you:—Let's be merry:—Good my lord cardinal, I have half a dozen healths

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure To lead them once again; and then let's dream Who's best in favour.—Let the music knock it. [Exeunt, with trumpets.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. — A Street.

Enter Two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?
2 Gent. O.—God save you! Even to the hall, to hear what shall become Of the great duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent. I'll save you That labour, sir. All's now done, but the care Of bringing back the prisoner. [money]

2 Gent. Were you there?
1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

2 Gent. Pray, speak, what has happen'd?
1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.

2 Gent. Is he found guilty?
1 Gent. Yes, truly, is he, and condemn'd upon

2 Gent. I am sorry for't. [it.]
1 Gent. So are a number more.

2 Gent. But, pray you, how pass'd it?
1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke

Came to the bar; where, to his accusations, He pleaded still, not guilty, and alleg'd Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.

The king's attorney, on the contrary, Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions Of divers witnesses; which the duke desir'd

To him brought, was so, to his face: At which appear'd against him, his surveyor;

Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Court, Confessor to him: with that devil-munk, Hopkins, that made this mischief. [2 Gent.] That was he.

That fed him with his prophecies! [The same.]

1 Gent. All these accused him strongly; which he fain Would have flung from him, but indeed he could

And so his peers, upon this evidence, [foot:] Have found him guilty of high treason. Much

He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all Was either pitied in him, or forgotten

2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself?
1 Gent. When he was brought again to the bar,—to hear

His knell rung out, his judgment,—he was stirr'd With such an agony, he sweat extremely.

And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty: But he fell to himself again, and, sweetly,

In all the rest show'd a most noble patience. [2 Gent.] I do not think he fears death.

1 Gent. Sure, he does not, He never was so womanish; the cause

He may a little grieve at. [2 Gent.] Certainly,

The cardinal is at the end of this. [1 Gent.] 'Tis likely,

By all conjectures: First, Kiliare's slander, Then deputy of Ireland; who remem'd,

Earl Surrey was soot thither, and in haste too, Least he should help his father.

Cham. What a loss our ladies.
Will have of these trim vankies!

Lee. Ay, marry.
There will be woe, indeed, lords: the sly whores-

sons.
Have got a speedier trick to lay down ladies;
A French song, and a fiddle, has no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle them! I am glad,
they're going;

(For, sure, there's no converting of them;) now,
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten

A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song,
And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r lady,
Hold current musick too.

Cham. Well said, lord Sands;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a going?

Lee. To the cardinal's;
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true;
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies: there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lee. That churchman bears a bounteous mind
indeed.

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;
His dew falls every where.

Cham. No doubt, he's noble;
He had a black mouth, that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord, he has wherewithal:
in him.

Sparing would show a worse man than ill doctrine:
Men of his way should be most liberal.

Cham. They are set here for examples
True, they are so;

But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;
Your lordship shall along:—Come, good sir
Thomas.

We shall be late else: which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with sir Henry Guildford.

Sands. I am your lordship's.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.—The Presence-Chamber in York-Place.

Handboys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests. Enter at one door Anne Bullen, and divers ladies, ladies, and gentlewomen, as guests; at another door, enter Sir Henry Guildford.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace.

Salute ye all; This night he dedicates
To fair content, and you: none here, he hopes,
In all this noble bery, has brought with her
One care abroad: he would have all as merry
As first-good company, good wine, good welcome
Can make good people.—O, my lord, you are tardy;

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sands, and Sir Thomas Lovell.

The very thought of this fair company
Clapped wings to me.

Cham. You are young, sir Harry Guildford.

Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested;—
I think, would better please them: By my life,
They are a sweet society of fair men.

Lee. O, that your lordship were but now con-
To one or two of these! (Exeunt.)

Sands. I would, I were;
They should find easy penance.

Lee. 'Faith, how easy!
Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir
Harry.

Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this:
His grace is ruling.—Nay, you must not freeze;

Two women plac'd together makes cold weather:
—(waking;)

My lord Sands, you are one will keep them
Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith,
And thank your lordship.—By your leave, sweet
ladies:

(Seats himself between Anne Bullen and another lady.)

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too;

But he would bite none; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

(Kisses her.)
Cham. Well said, my lord.—

So now you are fairly seated:—Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Handboys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, attended; and takes his state.

Wol. You are welcome, my fair guests; that noble lady.

Or gentleman, that is not freely merry.
Is not my friend; 'Tis, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all good health.

Sands. Your grace is noble:—
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My lord Sands,
I am beholden to you: cheer your neighbour.—
Ladies, you are not merry:—Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have
them

Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My lord Sands.

Sands. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship: and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing.—

Anne. You cannot show me.
Sands. I told your grace, they would talk anon.
(Drinks and trumps within. Chamber's discharged.)

Wol. What's that?
Cham. Look out there, some of you.

(Exit a Servant.)
Wol. What warlike noise?

And to what end is this?—Nay, ladies, fear not;
By all the laws of war you are priviled.

Re-enter Servant.
Cham. How now! what is't?

Serv. A noble troop of strangers;
For so they seem: they have left their large and lauded;

And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain,

Upon our fall? to this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

Serv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?

Serv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou that?

Serv. Not long before your highness sped to
France,

The duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poultny, did of me demand
What was the speech amongst the Londoners
Concerning the French journey: I replied,
Men fear'd, the French would prove perfidious,
'To the king's danger. Presently the duke Said, 'Twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted.

'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk: that oft, says he,
Hath er'd to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Cour, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after under the contrivance's seal
He solemnly had sworn, that, what he spoke,
My chaplain to no creature living, but
To me, should utter, with devout confidence Thus piously came!—Neither the king, nor his heirs,

(Tell you the duke) shall prosper: bid him strive
To gain the love of the community; the duke
Shall govern England.

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office

On the complaint of the tenants: Take good heed

You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul! I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on:—
Go forward.

Serv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas dangerous for him

To raminate on this so far until
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do: He answer'd, Tush!
It can do me no damage: adding further,
That, had the king in his last sickness fall'd,
The cardinal's and sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha!
There's mischief in this man:—Canst thou say further?

Serv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Serv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprov'd the duke
About Sir William Blomer.—

K. Hen. I remember
Of such a time—Being my servant sworn,
The duke retain'd him his—But on; What
hence?

Serv. U, quoth he, I for this had been committed,

As, to the Tower, I thought,—I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
The usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in his presence; which I granted,
As he made semblance of his duty, would have put his knife into him.

K. Hen. A giant traitor!

Wel. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom,

And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend all!

K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee; What say'st?

Serv. After—the duke his father,—with the
He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger;

Another spread on his breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour
Was,—Were he evil-will, he would out-go
His father, by as much as a performance
Does an irresolute purpose.

K. Hen. There's his period,
To sheath his knife in us. He is may;

Call him to present trial; if he may Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek't of us: by day and night,
He's traitor to the height.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and Lord Sands.

Cham. Is it possible, the realm of France should juggle

Men into such strange mysteries?

Sands. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous.

Nay, let them be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage, is but merely
A fit or two of the fave; but they are shrewd ones;

For when they hold them, you would swear
directly,

Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin, or Clothar; they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones;
one would take it,

That never saw them pace before, the spavin,
A springhalt reign'd among them.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too.

That, sure, they have worn out christendom.
How now!

What news, sir Thomas Lovell?

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

Lee. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none, but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is't for?

Lee. The reformation of our travel'd galleas,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and talons.

Cham. I am glad, 'tis there; now I would pray our monseurs

To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lee. They must either
(For so run the conditions) leave these remnants
Of fowl and feather, that they put in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance,
Pertaining thereunto, (as fights, and fireworks;
Abasing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom,) renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings,
Short blunder'd breeches, and those types of travel,
And understand again like honest men:
Or push to their old playfellows; there, I take it,
They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give them physick, least diseases

Are grown so catching

Most bitterly on you, as putter-on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master, (Whose honour heaven's shield from sull) even he escapes not

Language unmanly, yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears in loud rebellion

Not almost appears.
It doth appear: for, upon these taxations,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fillers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger,
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
During the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,
And Danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation!
Wherein I and what taxation!—My lord cardinal,
You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir,
I know but of a single part, in aught
Pertains to the state; and fruit but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,
You know no more than others: but you frame Things, that are known alike; which are not wholesome

To those which would not know them, and yet
Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear them,
The lack is sacrifice to the law. They say,
They are devis'd by you; or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction!
'The nature of it? In what kind, let's know, is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturesome
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd
Under your promise'd pardon. 'The subjects' grief Comes through commissions, which compel from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this is nam'd your wars in France: 'This makes bold mouths:

(freeze
Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts
Allegiance in them; their curses now,

Live where their prayers did; and it's come to
That fractable obedience is a slave (pass,
To each increased will. I would, your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no prinner business.

K. Hen. By my life,
'This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me,
I have no further gone in this, than by
A single voice; and that not pass'd me, but
By learned approbation of the judges.

If I am traduc'd by tongues, which neither know
My faculties, nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing,—let me say,
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
'That virtue must go through. We must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear

To cope unskilful censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new trimm'd; but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still, in fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,

We should take root here where we sit, or at
State statutes only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not read our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take,
From every tree, lop, bark, and part of the timber;
And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county,
Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission: Pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you
[To the Secretary.
Let there be letters writ to every shire.
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd common

Hardly conceive of me; let it be nois'd,
That, through our intercession, this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall soon advise you
Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry, that the duke of Buckingham
is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker
To nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself.

Yet see
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mud growing once corrupt,

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
'Than ever they were fair. 'This man so complete

(we,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black As if besinseur'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear

(This was his gentleman in trust) of him
Things to strike honour sad.—Did him recount
The fore-rented practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you.

Must like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely
Sure. First, it was usual with him—every day
It would infect his speech—'That if the king
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so

To make the scepter his: 'These very words
I have heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abernethy; to whom by oath his means'd
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.

Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown,

If with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Back. Sir,
I am thankful to you : and I'll go along
By your prescription :—but this top-proof fellow (Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but From sincere motions,) by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not, treasonous.
Back. To the king I'll say't; and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both, (for he is equal ravenous
As he is subtle; and as prone to mischief
As able to perform it: his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally)
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our master
To this last costly treaty, the interview.
That swadlow'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break 't the rinsing.

Nor. 'Faith, and so it did.
Back. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal

The articles of the combination drew
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified,
As he cried, 'Thus let be; to as much end.
As give a crutch to the dead: by our count-cardinal

Has done this, and 'tis well: for worthy Wolsey.
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,
(Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason.)—Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,
(For 'twas, indeed, his colour; but he came To whisper Wolsey,) here makes visitation:
His lands were, that the interview betwixt
England and France might, through their amity,
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league
Peop'd learns that means'd him. He privily
Deals with our cardinal; and, as I trow,—
Which I do well: for, I am sure, the emperor Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted

Ere it was ask'd;—but when the way was made,
And pay'd with gold, the emperor thus dear'd;—
'I hat he would please to alter the king's course,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king know,
(As soon he shall by me,) that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and could wish, he were Something mistaken in't.
Back. No, not a syllable;
I do pronounce him in that very shape,
He still appear in proof.

Enter Brandon; a Sergeant at Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bras. Your office, sergeant; execute it.
Ser. Sir
My lord the duke of Buckingham, and earl
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.

Back. Lo you, my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me; I shall perish
Under device and practice.

Bras. I am sorry
To see you taken from liberty, to look on
The business present: 'tis his highness' pleasure
You shall to the Tower.

Back. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence; for that die is on me, Which makes my whitest part black. The will of heaven
Be done in this and all things!—I obey.—
O my lord Abergany fare you well.

Bras. Nay, he must bear you company:—The king (To Abergavenny.
Is pleas'd, you shall to the Tower, till you know
How he determines further.

Aber. As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's plea-
By me obey'd. (sure

Bras. Here is a warrant from
The king, to attach lord Montacute; and the bodies
Of the duke's confessor, John de la Court,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Back. So, so;
These are the limbs of the plot: no more, I hope.
Bras. A monk of the Chartreux.

Back. O, Nicholas Hopkins!
Bras. Ha.

Back. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal (ready:
Hath show'd him gold: my life is spann'd al-
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham;
Whose figure even this instant clouds put on,
By dark'ning my clear sun.—My lord, farewell.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Council-Chamber.

Cornets. Enter King Henry. Cardinal Wolsey,
the Lords of the Council, Sir Thomas Lovell, Officers, and Attendants. The King enters, leaning on the Cardinal's shoulder.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care: I stood 't the level

Of a full charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
To you that chok'd it.—Let be call'd before us
That gentlemen of Buckingham's; in person
I'll hear him his confessions justify;
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.

The King tears his State. The Lords of the Council take their several places. The Cardinal places himself under the King's feet, on his right side.

A noise within, crys, Room for the Queen! Enter Queen, ushered by the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk; she kneels. The King riseth from his State, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel; I am a sutor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us:—His f your suit
Never name to us; you have half our power;
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repent your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.
'That you would love yourself: and, in that love,
Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.
Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few.
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance; there have been our missions (heart
Sent down among them, which have flaw'd the
Of all their loyalties:—wherein, although,
My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches

Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these sous
 (For so they phrase them) by their heralds challeug'd
 The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
 Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story

Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
 That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck. O, you go far.
Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
 In honour honestly, the tract of every thing
 Would by a good discourser lose some life.
 Whence action's self was tongue to. All was 'To the disposing of it nought rebell'd; [royal;
 Order gave each thing view; the office did
 Distinctly his full function.

Buck. Who did guide,
 I mean, who set the body and the limbs
 Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor. One, certes, that promises no element
 In such a business.

Buck. I pray you, who, my lord?
Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion
 Of the right reverend cardinal of York. [free'd Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is

From his ambitious finger. What had he
 To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder,
 That such a keech, can with his very bulk
 Take up the rays of the beneficial sun.
 And keep it from the earth.

Nor. Surely, sir,
 There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends:
 For, not being propp'd by ancestry, (whose grace Chalks successors their way,) nor call'd upon
 For high feuds done to the crown; neither allied
 To eminent assistants, but, spider-like,
 Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
 The force of his own merit makes his way;
 A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
 A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell
 What heaven hath given him, let some graver eye
 Pierce into that; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him: Whence has he
 If not from hell, the devil in a nigard; [that?
 Or has given all before, and he begins
 A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil,
 Upon this French goine-out, took he upon him,
 Without the privy of the king, to appoint
 Who should attend on him? He makes up the
 Of all the gentry; for the most part such [file
 Two, whom as great a charge as little honour
 He meant to lay upon; and his own letter,
 The honourable board of council out,
 Must fetch him in the papers.

Aber. I do know
 Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
 By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
 They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O, many Have broke their backs with laying manors on
 them

For this great journey. What did this vanity,
 But minister communication of
 A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievously I think,
 The peace between the French and us not values
 The cost that did conclude it.

Buck. Every man,
 After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
 A thing insid'd; and, not consulting, broke
 Into a general prophecy,—That this tempest,
 Teaching the parliament of this peace, aboded
 The sudden breach on't.

Nor. Which is budded out;
 For France hath flaw'd the league, and he's at tach'd
 Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore
 The ambassador is silent?

Nor. Marry, is't.
Aber. A proper title of a peace; and purchas'd
 At a superfluous rate!

Buck. Why, all this business
 Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor. 'Like it your grace,
 The state takes notice of the private difference
 Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,
 (And take it from a heart that wishes towards you Honour and plentiful safety,) that you read
 The cardinal's malice and his potency
 Together: to consider further, that
 What his high hatred would effect, wants not
 A minister in his power: You know his nature,
 That he's revengeful; and I know, his sword
 Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and, it may be said,
 It reaches far: and where 'twill not extend,
 Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel,
 You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that
 That I advise your shunning. [ruck,

Enter Cardinal Wolsey, (the purser borne before him,) certain of the Guard, and Two Secretaries, with papers. The Cardinal, in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The duke of Buckingham's surveyor? he!
 Where's his examination?

1 Secr. Here, so please you.
Wol. Is he in person ready?

1 Secr. Ay, please your grace.
Wol. Well, we shall then know more: and Buckingham

Shall lessen this big look. [Exeunt Wolsey, and Trans.
Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I

Have not the power to muzzle him: therefore,
 Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's hook
 Out-worths a noble's blood.

Nor. What, are you chaf'd?
 Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance
 Which your disease requires [only,

Buck. I read in his looks
 Matter against me; and his eye revild
 Me, as his subject object: at this instant
 He bores me with some trick: He's gone to the I'll follow, and outstare him. [knew;

Nor. Stay, my lord,
 And let your reason with your cooler questions
 What 'tis you go about: To climb steep hills,
 Requires slow pace at first: Anger is like
 A full-hot horse; who being allow'd his way,
 Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
 Can advise me like you: be to yourself
 As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king.
 And from a mouth of honour quite cry down
 This spawish fellow's insolence; or proclaim
 There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd:
 Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
 That it doth singe yourself: We may outrun,
 By violent swiftness, that which we run at,
 And lose by over-running. Know you not,
 The fire, that mounts the liquor till it run o'er,
 In seeming to augment it, wastes it? Be advis'd:
 I say again, there is no English soul
 More stranger to direct you than yourself;

KING HENRY VIII.

PERSONS REPRESENTED

King Henry the Eighth.

SCENE, — chiefly in London and Westminster; once at Kimbolton.

PROLOGUE.

I come no more to make you laugh; things now
 That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
 Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
 Such noble accents as draw the eye to flow,
 We now present. Those that can pity, here
 May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
 The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their munny out of hope they may believe,
 May here find truth too. Those that come to see
 Only a show or two, and so agree
 'The play may pass; — if they be still, and willing,
 I'll undertake, may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they
 That come to hear a merry bawdy play,
 A suite of songs; or to see a fellow
 In a long norby coat guarded with yellow,
 Will be deceiv'd. For, gentle hearers, know,

To rank our chosen truth with such a show
 As fool and night is, beside forfeiting
 Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
 (To make that only true we now intend.)
 Will leave us never an understanding friend.
 Therefore, for goodness' sake, and, as you are known

The first and happiest hearers of the town,
 Be sad, as we would make you: Think, ye see
 The very persons of our noble story,
 As they were living; think, you see them great.
 And follow'd with the funeral throng and sweat
 Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see
 How soon this night-moment meets misery!
 And, if you can be merry then, I'll say
 A man may weep upon his wedding day.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — London. An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, at one door; at the other, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Abergavenny.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,

Since last we saw in France? I thank your grace: Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely voice

Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
 Those suns of glory, those two lights of us,
 Met in the vale of Arde.

Nor. 'Twixt Guyenes and Arde:

I was then present, saw them salute on horseback;

Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung
 In their embracement, as they grew together;
 Which had they, what four thousand ounces could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one!

Buck. All the whole time

I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost

The view of earthly glory: Men might say,
 'Till this time, pomp was single; but now married
 To one slave itself. Each following day
 Became the next day's master, till the last
 Made former vanities its: To-day, the French,
 All eloquent, all in gold, like beauteous gulls,
 Shone down the Euxine; and, to-morrow, they Made Britain, India: every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
 As cherubins, all gilt: the madams too,
 Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear
 The pride upon them, that their very labour
 Was to them as a painting: Now this mask
 Was cry'd incomparable; and the ensuing night
 Made it a fool and tregar. The two kings,
 Equal in lustre, were now lost, now work,
 As presence did present them: him in eye
 Still him in praise: and, being present both,
 'Twas said, they saw but one; and no discernment

Consisting equally of horse and foot;
Our archers shall be placed in the midst;
John duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.
They thus directed, we ourself will follow
In the main battle: whose puissance on either side
Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to bout!—What think'st thou, Norfolk?
Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.
Thus found I on my text this morning.

[Giving a scroll.]

K. Rich. Jacky of Norfolk, be not too bold. [Reads.]

For Luckin thy master is bought and sold.

A thing devised by the enemy.—
Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge:
Let not our habbing dreams affright our souls;
Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Devil'd at first to keep the strong in awe:
Our strong arms be our conscience; swords our law.

March on, join bravely, let us to't pell-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand to hand to hell.—
What shall I say more than I have infer'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withal:—
A sort of vagabonds, rascals, run-aways,
A rout of Bretagne, and base lackey peasants,
Whom their o'er cloyed country vomits forth
To desperate ventures and assur'd destruction.
You sleeping safe, they bring you to thurst;
You having lands, and blessings with beauteous
wives,

They would restrain the one, detain the other.
And who dost least them, but a peltrey fellow,
Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost!
A milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow!
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;
Lash hence these over-weecing rags of France,
These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,
For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves:

If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,
And not these bastards Bretagne, whom our fathers
Have in their own land beaten, bob'd, and thump'd.

And, on record, left them the heirs of shame.
Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives!

Ravish our daughters!—Hark, I hear their drum.

[Drawn after off.]
Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeo-
men!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!
Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood;
Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!—

Enter a Messenger.

What says lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off instantly with his son George's head!

Nor. My lord, the country is past the marsh;
After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom:

Advance our standards, set upon our foe;
Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,
Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!
Upon them! Victory sits on our helms

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Norfolk, and Forces; to him Catesby.

Cate. Rescue, my lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger;
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum. Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord, I'll help you to a K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die:
I think there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain to-day, instead of him:—
A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter King Richard and Richmond; and account, fighting, Retreat, and flourish. Then enter Richmond, Stanley bearing the crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God, and your arms, be prais'd, victorious friends!

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.
Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee!

Lo, here, this long-usurped royalty,
From the dead temples of this bloody wretch
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal;
Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, my heart to all!

But, tell me first, is young George Stanley living?
Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town:

Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord
Sir Robert Brakenbury, and sir William Brandon.
Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers dead,
That in submissum will return to us;

And then, as we have ta'en on the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose with the red:—
Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction,
That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!

What traitor bears me, and says not,—amen?
England hath long been mad, and starr'd herself,
The brother bloody shed the brother's blood.
The father family slaughter'd his own son,
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire;
All this divided York and Lancaster,
Divided in their dire division.—
O, now let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true successors of each royal house,
By God's fair ordinance conjoin together!
And let their heirs (God, if they will be so,
Enrich the time to come with smooth-sock'd peace,
With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!
Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody days again,
And make poor England weep in streams of blood!
Let them not live to taste this land's increase,
That would with treason wound this fair land's
peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again:
That she may long live here, God say—Amen.

[Exeunt.]

K. Rich. Give me another horse,—bind up my wounds,—

Have mercy, Jeon!—Soft; I did but dream.—
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!—
The lights burn blue.—It is now dead midnight.
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What do I fear? myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.
Is there a murderer here? No.—Yes; I am:
Then fly!—What, from myself? Great reason:

Why?
Lest I revenge. What? I myself on myself?
I love myself. Wherefore I for any good,
That I myself have done unto myself:
O no: alas, I rather hate myself
For hateful deeds committed by myself.
I am a villain: Yet I lie, I am not.
Foul, of thyself speak well:—Foul, do not flatter.
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.
Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degrees,
Murder, stern murder, in the dirt'st degree,
All several sins, all us'd in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all,—Guilty! guilty!
I shall despair.—There is no creature loves me;
And, if I die, no soul will pity me:—
Nay, wherefore should they? since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself.
Methought, the souls of all that I had murder'd
Came to my tent; and every one did threat
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliff.

Rat. My lord,—

K. Rich. Who's there? [cock
Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village
Hath twice done salutation to the morn;
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.
K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream! [true]

What thinkest thou, will our friends prove all
Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,— Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.

K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers,
Armed in proof, and led by shadowy Richmond.
It is not yet near day: Come, go with me;
Under our tents I'll play the evens-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me.
[Exeunt King Richard and Ratcliff.]

Richmond wakes. Enter Oxford and others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond.

Rich. 'Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentlemen,

That you live to'en a tardy sluggard here.

Lords. How have you slept, my lord?

Rich. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dream.

That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,
Have I since your departure had, my lords.
Methought, their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd,

Came to my tent, and cried—On! victory!
I promise you, my heart is very jocund
in the remembrance of so fair a dream.
How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four.

Rich. Why, then 'tis time to arm, and give direction.—[He advances to the troops.]
More than I have said, loving countrymen,

The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on: Yet remember this,—
God, and our good cause, fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints, and wrunged souls,
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces;

Richard excepts those, whom we fight against,
Had rather have us win, than him they follow.
For what is he they follow? Truly, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant, and a homicide:
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made means to come to what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;

A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy:
Then if you fight against God's enemy,
God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers;
If you do sweet to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foe,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit it in your age.
Then, in the name of God, and all these rights,
Advance your standards, draw your willing

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt.
Shall he thus cold corpse on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully;

God, and Saint George! Richmond and victory!
[Exeunt.]

Re-enter King Richard, Ratcliff, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland, as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth: And what said
Surrey then?

Rat. He said and said, the better for our purpose.

K. Rich. He was f' the right; and so, indeed, it is. [Clock strikes.]

Tell the clock there.—Give me a calendar.—
Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he dares not shew; for, by the book,

He should have brav'd the east an hour ago:
A black day will it be to somebody.—

Ratcliff.—

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;
The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.

I would, these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shame to-day! Why, what is that to me?

More than to Richmond!—for the self-same heaven

That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him.

Enter Norfolk

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaults in the field. [horse;—]

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle!—Capernham my
Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his power:
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered.
My forward shall be out all in length,

Richmond's tent opens, and discovers him and his Officers, &c.

Enter Stanley.

Son. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!

Tell me how fares our loving mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother.

Who prays continually for Richmond's good:

So much for that — The silent hours steal on,

And flaky darkness breaks within the east.

In brief, for so the season bids us be,

Prepare thy battle early in the morning;

And put thy fortune to the arbitrement

Of bloody strokes, and mortal-staring war;

As I may, (that which I would, I cannot,) —

With best advantage will I do the time,

And at thee in this doubtful shock of arms;

But on thy side I may not be too forward,

Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George,

Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell! The leisure and the fearful time

Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,

And ample interchance of sweet discourses,

Which so long-sunder'd friends should dwell upon:

God give us leisure for these rites of love!

Once more, adieu! — Be valiant, and speed well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment.

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap:

Lest leaden slumber poise me down to-morrow,

When I should mount with wings of victory:

Once more, good night, kind lords and gentlemen

(Exeunt Lords, &c., with Stanley.)

O Thou! whose captain I account myself,

Look on my forces with a gracious eye;

Put in their hands thy bruising-iron of wrath,

That they may crush down with a heavy fall

The usurping helmets of our adversaries!

Make us thy ministers of chastisement,

That we may praise thee in thy victory!

To thee I do commend my watchful soul,

Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes;

Sleeping, and waking, O, defend me still!

(Sleeps.)

The Ghost of Prince Edward, son to Henry the Sixth, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!

Think how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth

At Tewkesbury; Despair therefore, and die! —

Be cheerful, Richmond: for the wronged soul

Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:

King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of King Henry the Sixth rises.

Ghost. When I was mortal, my appointed body

By thee was punched full of deadly holes;

Think on the Tower and me; Despair and die! —

Henry the Sixth bids thee despair, and die. —

Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

(To Richmond.)

Harry, that prophecy'd thou should'st be king,

Doth commend thee in thy sleep; Live and Rejoice!

The Ghost of Clarence rises.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!

I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,

Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!

To-morrow in the battle think on me,

And fall thy edgeless sword; Despair and die! —

Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster,

(To Richmond.)

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee;

Good angels guard thy battle! Live and flourish.

The Ghosts of Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan, rise.

Riv. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow,

(To King Richard.)

Rivers, that died at Pomfret! Despair and die!

Grey. Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair!

(To King Richard.)

Vough. Think upon Vaughan; and, with guilty

Let fall thy lance! Despair, and die! —

(To King Richard.)

All, awake! and think, our wrongs in Richard's bosom

(To Richmond.)

Will conquer him; — awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of Hastings rises.

Ghost. Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake,

(To King Richard.)

And in a bloody battle end thy days!

Think on lord Hastings; and despair and die! —

Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake!

(To Richmond.)

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young Princes rise.

Ghosts. Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower:

Let us be lead with thy bosom, Richard,

And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!

Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die. —

Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;

Good angels guard thee from the bear's annoy!

Live, and beget a happy race of kings!

Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of Queen Anne rises.

Ghost. Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne,

thy wife,

That never slept a quiet hour with thee,

Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:

To-morrow in the battle think on me,

And fall thy edgeless sword; Despair, and die! —

Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;

(To Richmond.)

Dream of success and happy victory;

Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of Buckingham rises.

Ghost. The first was I, that help'd thee to the crown;

The last was I that felt thy tyranny;

(To King Richard.)

O, in the battle think on Buckingham,

And die in terror of thy guiltiness!

Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death;

Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath! —

I died for hope, ere I could lead thee and;

(To Richmond.)

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd;

God, and good angels, fight on Richmond's side;

And Richard falls in height of all his pride

(The Ghosts vanish.)

King Richard starts out of his dream.

Come, sir, convey me to the block of shame;
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exeunt Buckingham, &c.]

SCENE II. — Plain near Tamworth.

Enter with drum and colours, Richmond, Oxford, Sir James Blunt, Sir Walter Herbert, and others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,

Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny,
Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we march'd on without impediment;
And here receive we from our father Stanley
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.
The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar,
That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful vines, Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough

In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine
Lies now even in the center of this isle.
Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn:
From Tamworth thither is but one day's march.
In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Orf. Every man's conscience is a thousand
To fight against that bloody homicide. [swords,
Herb. I doubt not, but his friends will turn to us Blunt. He hath no friends, but who are friends for fear;

Which, in his dearest need, will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name, march; [wings,
True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings.
Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. — Bosworth Field.

Enter King Richard and Forces; the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch your tents, even here in Bosworth Field.

My lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Surr. My heart is ten times lighter than my

R. Rich. My lord of Norfolk, — [looks,

Nor. Here most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; Ha!

must we not? [lord.]

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving

K. Rich. Up with my tent: Here will I be tonight;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent.

But where, to-morrow? — Well, ah! 'tis one for that. —

Who hath descried the number of the traitors?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power. [count:]

K. Rich. Why, our battalia troubles that accuses, the king's name is a tower of strength,

Which they upon the adverse faction want.

Up with the tent. — Come, noble gentlemen,

let us survey the vantage of the ground: —

Call for some men of sound direction: —

Let's want no discipline, make no delay;

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.]

*Enter, on the other side of the field, Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and other Lords.
Some of the Soldiers pitch Richmond's tent.*

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow. —

Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard. —

Give me some ink and paper in my tent: —

I'll draw the form and model of our battle,

Limit each leader to his separate charge,

And part in just proportion our small power.

My lord of Oxford, — you, sir William Brandon, —

And you, sir Walter Herbert, — stay with me:

The earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment; —

Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,

And by the second hour in the morning

Desire the earl to see me in my tent: —

Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me:

Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt. Unless I have mist'en his colours' march,

(Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done,) —

His regiment lies half a mile at least

South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,

Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak

with him,

And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm. Good night, good captain Blunt. Come,
gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business;

Into my tent, the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.]

Enter, to his tent, King Richard, Norfolk, Ratcliff, and Catesby.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?

Cate. It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night. —

Give me some ink and paper. —

What is my heavier easier than it was? —

And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, bid thee to thy charge;

Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord. [Norfolk.]

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Rich. Ratcliff, —

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. Send out a purveyor at arms

To Stanley's regiment: bid him bring his power

Before sun rising, lest his son George fall

Into the blind cave of eternal night.

Fill me a bowl of wine. — Give me a watch: —

[To Catesby.]

Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow. —

Look that my stave be sound, and not too heavy.

Ratcliff. —

Rat. My lord!

King Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord

Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself,

Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop,

Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:

I have not that alacrity of spirit,

Nor cheer of mind that I was wont to have.

So, set it down. — Ink and paper ready!

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch: leave me.

About the mid of night, come to my tent,

And help to arm me. — Leave me, I say.

[King Richard returns into his tent. Exeunt
Ratcliff and Catesby.]

K. Rich. Cold friends to me: What do they in the north. [West!]

When they should serve their sovereign in the Stem. They have not been commanded, mighty king:

Pleasest your majesty to give me leave. I'll muster up my friends; and meet your grace. Where, and what time, your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:
I will not trust you, sir.

Stem. Most mighty sovereign, You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful: never was, nor ever will be false. [ful:]

K. Rich. Well, go, muster men. But, hear you, leave behind [firm] your son, George Stanley; look your heart be Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stem. So deal with him, as I prove true to you. [Exit Stanley.]

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,

As I by friends are well advertised, Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate, Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother, With many more confederates, are in arms.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guilfords are in And every hour more competitors [arms:] Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter another Messenger.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death! [He strikes him.]

There, take thou that, till thou bring better news.

3 Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty, Is,—that, by sudden floods and fall of waters, Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd; And he himself wander'd away alone, No man knows whither.

K. Rich. O, I cry you mercy; There is my purpose, to cure that blow of thine. Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd Reward to him that brings the traitor in!

3 Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter another Messenger.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, and lord marquis Dorset,

'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms. But this good comfort bring I to your highness,—The Bretagne navy is dispers'd by tempest; Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks, If they were his assistants, yea, or no;

Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham Upon his party: he, mistrusting them, Had'st sent, and made his course again for Bretagne. [in arms:]

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up If not to fight with foreign enemies, Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. My liege, the duke of Buckingham is taken. [murd] That is the best news: That the earl of Rich-

Is with a mighty power landed at Milford, Is colder news, but yet they must be told.

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury; while we reason here.

A royal battle might be won and lost:— Some one take order, Buckingham be brought To Salisbury;—the rest march on with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in Lord Stanley's House.

Enter Stanley and Sir Christopher Urswick.

Stem. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me:—

That, in the sty of this most bloody boar, My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold; If I revolt, off goes young George's head; The fear of that will hold me present and But, tell me, where is princely Richmond now? Chris. At Pembroke, or at Ha'rford-west, in Wales.

Stem. What men of name resort to him?

Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier: Sir Gilbert Talbot, sir William Stanley; Oxford, redoubt'd Pembroke, sir James Blunt, And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew; And many other of great fame and worth; And towards London do they bend their course, If by the way they be not fought withal.

Stem. Well, his thee to lay lord; commend me to him:

Tell him the queen hath heartily consented He shall espouse Elizabeth her daughter. These letters will resolve him of my mind. Farewell. [Gives papers to Sir Christopher.]

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury. An open Place.

Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with Buckingham, led to execution.

Buck. Will not king Richard let me speak with him?

Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.

Buck. Hastings and Edward's children, Rivers, Grey,

Holy king Henry, and thy fair son Edward, Vaughan, and all that have miscarter'd By underhand corrupted foul injustice:

If that your moody discontented souls Do through the clouds behold this present hour, Even for revenge mock my destruction!—

'Tis this All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?

Sher. It is, my lord. [doomsday.]

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my lady's.

'Tis this the day, which, in king Edward's time,

I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found False to his children, or his wife's allies;

'Tis this the day, wherein I wish'd to fall By the false faith of him whom most I trusted;

'Tis this, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul, Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs.

That high All-seer which I dallied with, Hath turned my feigned prayer on my head,

And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.

Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men To turn their own points on their masters' bosoms:

Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck.—

When he, quoth she, shall split thy heart with sorrow,

Remember Marjoret was a prophetess.—

If something thou would'st swear to be believ'd, Swear then by something that thou hast not wroug'd.

K. Rich. Now by the world,—

Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.

K. Rich. My father's death,—

Q. Eliz. Thy life hath that dishonour'd.

K. Rich. Then, by myself,—

Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-mis-used.

K. Rich. Why then, by God,—

Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all.

If thou had'st fear'd to break an oath by him,
The unity, the king thy brother made,
Had not been broken, nor my brother slain.
If thou had'st fear'd to break an oath by him,
The imperial metal, curling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender temples of my child!
And both the princes had been breathing here,
Which now, two tender bed-fellows for dust,
Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms.
What canst thou swear by now?

K. Rich. By the time to come.

Q. Eliz. That thou hast wroug'd in the time

o'er-past;

For I myself have many tears to wash
Hereafter time, for time past, wroug'd by thee.
The children live, whose parents thou hast
slaughter'd,

Ungovern'd youth, to wait it in their age.
Th' parents live, whose children thou hast
butcher'd,

Old barren plants, to wait it with their age.
Swear not by time to come; for that thou hast mis-us'd ere used, by times ill-us'd o'er-past.

K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent!
So thrive I in my dangerous attempt
Of hostile arms! myself myself confound!
Heaven, and fortune, bar me happy hours!
Day, light me not thy light; nor, night, thy rest!
Be opposite all planets of good luck!

To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
Tender not thy hapless princely daughter!
In her consorts my haplessness, and thine;
Without her, follows to myself and thee,
Herself, the hand, and many a christian soul,
Death, desolation, ruin, and decay:
It cannot be avoided, but by this;
It will not be avoided, but by this.
'Therefore, dear mother, [I must call you so,]
Be the attorney of my love to her.

Hear what I will be, not what I have been;
Not my deserts, but what I will observe:
Urges the necessity and state of times,
And be not peevish foud in great designs.

Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus!

K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good.

Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself, to be myself!

K. Rich. Ay, if yourself's remembrance wrong yourself.

Q. Eliz. But thou didst kill my children.

K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury
them:

Where, in that nest of spicery, they shall breed
Selves of themselves to your recomforture.

Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.

Q. Eliz. I go.—Write to me very shortly,

And you shall understand from me her mind.
K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss, and so farewell!

[Exit her. Enter Q. Elizabeth.
Relenting fool, and shallow changing—woman!
How now! what news!

Enter Ratcliff; Catesby following.

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast

Rideth a puissant navy; to the shore
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to best them back:
'Tis thought, that Richmond is their admiral;
And there they hull, expecting but the aid
Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of Norfolk:

Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby; where is he?

Cate. Here, my good lord.

K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.

Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither: Post to Salisbury;

When thou com'st thither,—Dull unmail'd villains,

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke!

Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure;

What from your grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby;—But him levy straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

Cate. I go. [Exit]

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?

K. Rich. Why, what would'st thou do there, before?

Rat. Your highness told me, I should post
before.

Enter Stanley.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.—Stanley, what news with you?

Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.

K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad!

What need'st thou run so many miles about,
When thou may'st tell thy tale the nearest way?

Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!

White-liver'd runagate: what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, as you guess?

Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and
He makes for England, here to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? Is the sword unaway'd?

Is the king dead? Is the empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive, but we?

And who is England's king, but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your
liege,

You cannot guess wherefore the Welchman
Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.

Stan. No, mighty liege, therefore mistrust me
not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power that, to beat him
back?

Where be thy tenants, and thy followers?

Are they not now upon the western shore,
Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness

Let longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that, from my soul, I love thy daughter. [her soul.]

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with

K. Rich. What do you think?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter, from thy soul; [thine:]

So, from thy soul's love, didst thou love her brother, from my heart's love, I do thank thee for it

K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning;

I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter, And do intend to make her queen of England.

Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?

K. Rich. Even he, that makes her queen; Who else should be?

Q. Eliz. What thou?

K. Rich. Q. Eliz. Even so: What think you of it, madam?

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?

K. Rich. That I would learn of you,

As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers,

A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave, Edward and York; then, haply, will she weep:

Therefore present to her,—as sometime Margaret Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,— handkerchiefs; which, say to her; did drain The purple sap from her sweet brother's body,

And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.

If this inducement move her not to love,

Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;

Tell her, thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence,

Her uncle Rivers; ay, and for her sake,

Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne. [the way]

K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is not

To win your daughter.

Q. Eliz. There is no other way;

Unless thou could'st put on some other shape,

And not be Richard that hath done all this.

K. Rich. Say, that I did all this for love of her!

Q. Eliz. Nay, then, indeed, she cannot choose but have thee.

Having hought love with such a bloody spoil.

K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended;

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,

Which after-hours give leisure to repent.

If I did take the kingdom from your sons,

To make savours, I'll give it to your daughter.

If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,

To quicken your increase, I will begot mine issue of your blood upon your daughter.

A grandam's name is little less in love,

Than is the doting title of a mother;

They are as children, but one step below,

Even of your nuptial, of your very blood;

Of all one pair,—save for a night of grans

Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.

Your children were vexation to your youth,

But mine shall be a comfort to your age.

True love you have, is but—a son being king.

And, by that loss, your daughter is made queen.

I cannot make you what amends I would,

Therefore accept such kindness as I can.

Dorset, your son, that, with a fearful soul,

Leads discreet steps in foreign soil,

That fair amance quickly shall call home

To high promotions and great dignity:
The king, that calls your beauteous daughter—
wife.

Familiarly shall call thy Dorset—brother;
Again shall you be mother to a king,

And all the ruins of distressed times
Repair'd with double riches of content.

What! we have many glad days to see;
The liquid drops of tears that you have shed;

Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl;
Advancing their loan, with interest

Of six-times double gain of happiness.
Go, then, my mother, to thy daughter go;

Make told her bashful years with your experience;

Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale;
Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame

Of golden sovereignty; acquaint the princess
With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys;

And when this arm of mine hath chanted
The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,

Bound with triumphant garlands will come,
And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed;

To whom I will retain my conquest won,
And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's Caesar.

Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother

Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle?
Or, he that slew her brothers, and her uncles?

Under what title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the law, my honour, and her love,

Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance.

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that may command, entreats.

Q. Eliz. That at her hands, which the king's King forbids. [Queen.]

K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty

Q. Eliz. To wait the title, as her mother doth.

K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastingly.

Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title, ever,

last? [end.]

K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last? [sense it]

K. Rich. As long as heaven, and nature, length-

Q. Eliz. As long as hell, and Richard, likes of it. [flow.]

K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loaths such sovereignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told. [flowing tale.]

K. Rich. Then, in plain terms tell her my

Q. Eliz. Plain, and not honest, is too harsh a style. [too quick.]

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and

Q. Eliz. O, no, my reasons are too deep and dead;—

Two deep and dead poor infants, in their graves!

K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam; that is past.

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I, till heartstrings break.

K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown,—

Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third

K. Rich. I swear.

Q. Eliz. By nothing: for this is no oath.

Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his holy honour;

Thy garter, blench'd, pawn'd his knighthood's virtue;

Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory.

Enter King Richard, and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition?
Duch. O, she, that might have intercepted thee,
 By stranding thee in her accursed womb,
 From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast
 done.

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden Where should be branded, if that right were right.

The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown,
 And the dire death of my poor sons, and brothers!
 Tell me, thou villain-slave, where are my children?

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother
 Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son? [Grey]

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan,

Duch. Where is kind Hastings? [drums]

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets!—strike alarm.
 Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
 Rail on the Lord's anointed: Strike, I say.—

[Flourish. Alarums.]

Either be patient, and entreat me fair,
 Or with the clamorous report of war,
 Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son? [self.]

K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my father, and your.

Duch. Then patiently hear my impudence.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,

That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O, let me speak.

K. Rich. Do then, but I'll not hear.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have staid for thee,
 God knows, in torment and in agony. [you]

K. Rich. And cause I not at last to comfort

Duch. No, by the holy rool, thou know'st it
 well.

Thou can'st not on earth to make the earth my hell.

A grievous burden was thy birth to me;

Teichy and wayward was thy infancy;

Thy school-days, frightful, desperate, wild and furious; [furious]

Thy prime of manhood, daring, bold and ven-thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody;

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred;

What comfortable hour canst thou name,

'That ever grac'd me in thy company?

K. Rich. Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd thy grace

To breakfast once, forth of my company.

If I be so disgrac'd in your sight,

Let me march on, and not offend you, madam—

Strike up the drum.

Duch. I prythee, hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word,

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die, by God's just ordinance,

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;

Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish,

And never look upon thy face again.

'Therefore take with thee my most heavy curse;

Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more

Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight;

And there the lithe souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies.

And procure them success and victory.

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
 Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend [Exit.]

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse

Abides in me; I say amen to her. [Going.]

K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must speak a word with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood, [and,—]

For thee to murder: for my daughters, Rich—

They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;

And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd—Elizabeth,

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious. [live.]

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;

Slander myself, as false to Edward's bed;

Throw over her the veil of infamy:

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,

I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth; she is of royal blood.

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say—she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were opposite. [country.]

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends were

K. Rich. All unavoids is the doom of destiny. [tiny]

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes des-tiny's wheels were destin'd to a fairer death.

If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.

K. Rich. You speak, as if that I had slain my cousins. [cousin'd]

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.

Whose hands soever lanc'd their tender hearts,

'Thy hand, all indirectly, gave direction:

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt,

'Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,

To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,

My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys,

'Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;

And I, in such a desperate bay of death,

Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling rapt,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise,

And dangerous success of bloody wars,

As I intend more good to you and yours,

Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd!

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,

To be discover'd, that can do me good!

K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads!

K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of fortune,

The high imperial type of this earth's glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrows with report of it,

Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honour,

Canst thou devise to any child of mine?

K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and

Will I withal endow a child of thine; [and]

So in the lot of thy angry soul

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs,

Which, thou supposest, I have done to thee.

Enter Queen Elizabeth and the Duchess of York.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender babes!

My unbrown flowers, non-appearing sweets!

If yet your gentle souls fly in the air,

And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,

Hover about me with your airy wings,

And hear your mother's lamentation! [right

Q. Mar. Hover about her: say, that right for Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice,

That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute;—

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead!

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,

Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. [lambes,

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle

And throw them in the entrails of the wolf!

Why diest thou sleep, when such a deed was done! [son.

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal-living ghost, [usurp'd,

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life

Brief abstract and record of tedious days,

Rest thou unrest on England's lawful earth,

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood! [sitting down.

Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave,

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat:

Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here!

Ah, who hath any cause to mourn, but we?

[Sitting down by her.

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent,

Give mine the benefit of seniory,

And let my griefs frown on the upper hand.

If sorrow can admit society,

[Sitting down with them.

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:—

I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;

I had a husband, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill

him;

I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A hell-hound, that doth hunt us all to death:

That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,

To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood,

That foul defacer of God's handi-work,

That excellent grand tyrant of the earth,

That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,

Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves—

O upright, just, and true-disposing God,

How do I thank thee, that this carnal cur

Preys on the issue of his mother's body,

And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan!

Duch. O, Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes!

God witness with me, I have wept for thine.

Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for reward now I cloy me with beholding it.—[venge,

Thy Edward be a dead, that kill'd my Edward;

Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;

Young York he is but boot, because both they

Match not the high perfection of my loss.

Thy Clarence he is dead, that stabb'd my Edward;

And the beholders of this tragick play,

The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey,

Unimprov'd smother'd in their dusky graves.

Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer;

Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls,

And send them thither: But at hand, at hand,

Ensues his piteous and unpitied end:

Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray.

To have him suddenly convey'd from hence:—

Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,

That I may live to say, The doer is dead!

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophecy, the time would come,

That I should wish for thee to help me curse:

That bottle speler, that too lunch-back'd lord!

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then, vain flourish of my fortune;

I call'd thee then, poor shadow, painted queen;

The presentation of but what I was.

The flattering index of a direful pageant,

One heav'd a-high, to be hurl'd down below;

A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;

A dream of what thou wast: a garish flag,

To be the aim of every dangerous shot;

A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble;

A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.

Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers?

Where be thy two sons? wherein dost thou joy?

Who sues, and kneels, and says—God save the queen?

Where be the bending peers that flatter'd thee?

Where be the throuring troops that follow'd thee?

Decline all this, and see what now thou art.

For happy wife, a most distressed widow;

For joyful mother, one that wails the name;

For one being sued to, one that humbly sues;

For queen, a very cattif crown'd with care;

For one that scorn'd at the, now scorn'd of me;

For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one;

For one commanding all, obey'd of none.

Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about,

And left thee but a very prey to time;

Having no more but thought of what thou wert,

To torture thee the more, being what thou art.

Thou didst usurp my place; and dost thou not

Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow!

Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;

From which even here I slip my wearied head,

And leave the burden of it all on thee.

Farewell, York's wife—and queen of sad mis-

chance—

These English woes shall make me smile in

France.

Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay awhile,

And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast

the day;

Compare dead happiness with living woe:

Think that thy babes were fairer than they were,

And he that slew them, fouler than he is:

Bettering thy loss, makes the bad-causer worse;

Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull, O, quicken them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will come sharp, and perceivable mine. [Exit Q. Margaret.

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words!

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes,

Airy succeders of intestate joys,

Poor breathing orators of miseries! [part

Let them have scope: though what they do un-

Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-ty'd: go with me,

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother

My damned soul, that thy two sweet souls smother'd.

[Drums, bell, &c.]

I hear his drum,—be copious in exclams.

K. Rich. Thou sang'st sweet music. Hark,
come hither Tyrrel;
Go, by this token:—Rise, and lend thine ear:
[Whispers.
There is no more but so:—Say, it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.
Tyr. I will despatch it straight. [Exit.

Re-enter Buckingham.

Back. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did send me in.
K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Back. I hear the news, my lord. [look to it.
K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son:—Well,
Back. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise.

For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd;
The earldom of Hereford, and the moveables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife; if she convey
Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Back. What says your Highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me—Henry the Sixth
Did prophesy, that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy.

A king!—perhaps—
Back. My lord,— [that time

K. Rich. How chance, the prophet could not at
Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?

Back. My lord, your promise for the earldom.—
K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I was at Ex-

ter,
The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And call'd it—Rouge-mont: at which name I

start'd:
Because a bard of Ireland told me once,
I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Back. My lord,—
K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Back. I am thus hold
To put your grace in mind of what you promis'd.

K. Rich. Well, but what is't o'clock? [me!
Back. Upon the stroke

Of ten
K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Back. Why, let it strike!

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st
the stroke

Between thy beggar and my meditation.
I am not in the giving vein to-day. [no.

Back. Why then, resolve me whe'r you will, or K. Rich. Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein. [Exeunt King Richard and Tyrrel.

Back. And is it thus I rejoyce he my deep service

With such contempt! I made I him king for this!
O, let me think on Hastings: and be gone

To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on.
[Exit.

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter Tyrrel.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done;
The most arch deed of piteous massacre,
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless treachery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,—
Melted with condescence and mild compassion,
Went like two children, in their death's end story.

*O thus, quoth Dighton, lay the gentle babes,
Thus, thus, quoth Forrest, girdling one another
Within their alabaster innocent arms:
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
Which, in their summer beauty, kiss'd each other.
A book of prayers on their pillow lay:
[mind,
Which once, quoth Forrest, almost chang'd my
But, O, the devil!—there the villain stopp'd;
When Dighton thus told on,—we smother'd
The most replenished sweet work of nature.
That, from the prime creation, e'er she fram'd.—
Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse,
They could not speak, and so I left them both,
To hear this tidings to the bloody king.*

Enter King Richard.

And here he comes:—All health, my sovereign
lord!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel: am I happy in thy news?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave us
Beget your happiness, be happy then, [change
For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried
them:

But where, to say the truth, I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after supper.

When thou shalt tell the process of their death,
Mean time, but think how I may do these good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell, till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pawn'd up close:

His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage;
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
And Anne my wife hath bid the world good night.

Now, for I know the Bretagne Richmond aims
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,
And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter Catesby.

Cate. My lord,— [so bluntly!

K. Rich. Good news or bad, that thou com'st in Cate. Bad news, my lord: Mortons is fled to

Richmond;

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welsh-is in the field, and still his power sweeteneth

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength.
Come, I have learn'd, that fearful commeting
Is leaden servitor to dull delay;

Delay leads impotent and snail-paced beggary:
Then fiery expedition be my wing,
Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king!

Go, muster men: My counsel is my shield;
We must be brief, when traitors brave the field.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Queen Margaret.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death.
Here in these confines sily have I lurk'd,
To watch the waning of mine enemies.
A dire induction am I witness to,
And will to France; hoping, the consequence
Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical [here!
Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret! who crimes

When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands

Which melt'd from my other angel husband,
And that dead saint which then I weeping follow'd;

O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
This was my wraith,—*Be thou, goeth I, accus'd,
For making us, so young, so old a widow!*
*And, when thou wert dead, let sorrow haunt thy bed;
And be thy wife (if any be so mad)
More miserable by the life of thee.*

Then thou hast made me by my dear lord's death!
Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again,
Even in so short a space, my woman's heart
Grossly grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse.
Which ever since hath held mine eyes from rest;
For never yet one hour in his bed

Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep.
But with his trait'rous dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick;
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu; I pity thy complaining. [yours.]

Anno. No more than with my soul I mourn for Dor. Farewell, thou woful welcomer of glory!
Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it!

Duch. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee. [To Dorset.]

Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!—
[To Anne.]

Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee! [To Q. Elizabeth.]

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!
Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen.

And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of teen.
Q. Eliz. Stay yet; look back, with me, unto the Tower.—

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes
Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls!
Rough cradle for such little pretty ones!

Rude ragged nurse! old sullen play-fellow
For tender princes, use my babies well!
To foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room of State in the Palace.

Tourish of trumpets. Richard, as King, upon his throne; Buckingham, Catesby, a Page and others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart.—Cousin of Buckingham—

Back. My gracious sovereign [advice.]

K. Rich. Give me thy counsel. Thus high, by thy aid thy assistance, is King Richard seated:— it shall we wear these glories for a day!

shall they last, and we rejoice in them!
Back. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play the touch,

try if thou be current gold. Indeed:—
ung Edward lives.—Think now what I would back. Say on, my loving lord [speak.]

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be
king.

back. Why, so you are, my thrice-renewed

Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so: but Edward back. True, noble prince. [lives.]

Rich. O bitter consequence,
Edward still should live:—true, noble
prince!—

un, thou wast not wont to be so dull:—
I he pleas'd I wish the bastards dead;

And I would have it suddenly perform'd.
What say'st thou now? I speak suddenly, he brief.

Back. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. 'Tut, tut, thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes:

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Back. Give me some breath, some little pause,
dear lord,

Before I positively speak in this:
I will resolve your grace immediately.

[Exit Buckingham.]
Cate. The king is angry; see, he gnaws his lip.

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools.
[Aside.]

[Descends from his throne.]
And unresponsive boys; none are for me,
That look into me with considerate eyes;

High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.—
Boy—

Page. My lord. [ring gold]

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupt—
Would tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. I know a discontented gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his haughty

Gold were as good as twenty orators, [mural:]
And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is—Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man; go, call him hither boy. [Exit Page]

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels:

Hath he so long held out with me untried,
And stops he now for breath?—well, be it so.—

Enter Stanley.

How now, lord Stanley? what's the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled

To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour is abroad,

That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;
I will take order for her keeping close.

Inquire me out some mean-born gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter—
The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.— [ter.]

Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give out,
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:

About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage

me.— [Exit Catesby.]

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass:—
Murder her brothers, and then marry her!

Uncertain way of gain! But I am in
So far in blood, that an will pluck on sin.

Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.—

Re-enter Page, with Tyrrel.

Is thy name—Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed? [subject.]

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it; two deep enemies,

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deal upon.

Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I'll rid you from the fear of these.

Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing time,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. I do, and my lord; your citizens entreat

Back. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O make them joyful, grant their lawful
I am unfit for state and majesty.

I do beseech you—take it not amiss,—
I cannot, nor I will not, yield to you.

Back. If you refuse it,—as in love and zeal,
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son;
As well we know your tenderness of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,

Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally, indeed, to all estates,—
Yet know, wher' you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;

But we will plant some other in your throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house.
And, in this resolution, here we leave you;
Come, citizens, we will entreat no more.

[Exeunt Buckingham and Citizens.
Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit;

If you deny them, all the land will rue it.
Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?

Well, call them again; I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties.

[Exit Catesty.
Albeit against my conscience and my soul.—

Re-enter Buckingham, and the rest.
Cousin of Buckingham,—and sage grave men,—
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, wher' I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load:

But if black scandal, or foul-faced reprimand,
Attend the sequel of your importun',
Your mere enforcement shall acquaintance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof;

For God he knows, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will
Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Back. Then I salute you with this royal title,—
Long live king Richard, England's worthy king!

All. Amen.
Back. To-morrow may it please you to be Glo. Even when you please, since you will have it so.

Back. To-morrow then we will attend your
And so, most joyfully, we take our leave.

Glo. Come, let us to our holy work again.—
[To the Bishops
Farewell, good cousin;—farewell, gentle friends.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before the Tower.

Enter on one side, Queen Elizabeth, Duchess of York, and Marquis of Dorset; on the other, Anne, Duchess of Gloster, leading Lady Margaret Plantagenet, Clarence's young daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece Plantagenet

Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloster?
Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender prince.—
Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your grace both
A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister!—Whither
Anne. No farther than the Tower; and as I
Upon the like devotion as yourselves,

To gratulate the gentle prince there.
Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all to-

Enter Brakenbury.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes.—
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,

How doth the prince, and my young son of York?
Brak. Right well, dear madam: By your pe-

I may not suffer you to visit them; [silence,
The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?
Brak. I mean the lord protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title!

Hath he set bounds between their love and me?
I am their mother, who shall bar me from them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see
them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mo-
Then bring me to their sight; I'll bear thy blame,

And take thy office from thee, on my peril.
Brak. No, madam, no, I may not leave it so;

I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.
[Exit Brakenbury.

Enter Stanley.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour
hence,

And I'll salute your grace of York as mother.
And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.—
Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,

[To the Duchess of Gloster.
There to be crown'd Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah, out my lace asunder!
That my pent heart may have some scope to heat,

Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.
Anne. Desperate tidings! O unplesant news!

Dor. Be of good cheer:—Mother, how fares your grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee
Death and destruction dog thee at the heels;

Thy mother's name is ominous to children;
If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,

And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell.
Go, lie thee, lie thee, from this slaughter-house,

Lest thou increase the number of the dead;
And make me die the thrall of Marzaret's curse.—

Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.
Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel,

madam:

Take all the swift advantage of the hours;
You shall have letters from me to my son

In your behalf, to meet you on the way;
Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery!
O my accursed womb, the bed of death;

A cookatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world,
Whose unlook'd eye is murderous!

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go—
O, would to God, that the inclusive verge

Of golden metal, that must round my brow,
Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brain!

Anointed let me be with deadly venom;
And die, ere men can say—God save the queen!

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy woe.
To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm.

Anne. No! why?—When he that is my husband
now,

Came to me, as I followed Henry's corpse;

Divinely bent to meditation:

And in an worldly suit would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise. [duke]

Buck Return, good Catesby, to the gracious
Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen,
In deep designs, in matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his grace.
Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight.

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!

He is not holding on a lowly day-bed,
But on his knees at meditation;
Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul:
Happy were England, would this virtuous prince
Take on himself the sovereignty thereof:
But, sure, I fear, we shall ne'er win him to it.

May Merry, God defend, his grace should say us may!

Buck. I fear he will: Here Catesby comes

Re-enter Catesby.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?

Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled

Such troops of citizens to come to him,
His grace not being warn'd thereof before;
He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am, my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
And so once more return and tell his grace.

[Exit Catesby.]

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their bends, 'tis hard to draw them thence;
So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter Gloucester, in a gallery above, between Two Bishops. Catesby returns.

May. See, where his grace stands 'tween two clergymen!

Buck. Two prunes of virtue for a christian prince,
To stay him from the fall of vanity:
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand;
True ornaments to know a holy man—
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests:
And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion and right christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology;
I rather do beseech you pardon me,
Who, in the earnest service of my God,
Neglect the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?

Buck. Even that I hope, which pleaseth God above.

And all good men of this ungovern'd isle.

Glo. I do suspect, I have done some offence,
That seems suspicious in the city's eye;
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord; Would it might please your grace,

In our entreaties to amend your fault! [land]

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian

Buck. Know then, it is your fault, that you relieve the supreme seat, the throne majestical, [sign]

the scepter'd office of your ancestors, our state of fortune, and your due of birth,
be lineal glory of your royal house,
or the corruption of a blemish'd stock:

'hailst, in the midwint' of your sleep thoughts,

[Which here we waken to our country's good,]

The noble isle doth want her proper limbs;
Her face defac'd with scars of infamy;

Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost shoulder'd in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion.

Which to recture we heartily solicit

Your gracious self to take on you the charge

And kingly government of this your land:

Not as protector, steward, substitute,

Or lowly factor for another's gain:

But as successively, from blood to blood,

Your right of birth, your empery, your own.

For thus, consorted with the citizens,

Your very worshipful and loving friends,

And by their vehement instigation,

In this just suit come I to move your grace.

Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence,

Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,

Best fitteth my degree, or your condition:

If not to answer,—you might haply think,

Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded

To bear the golden yolk of sovereignty,

Which fondly you would here impose on me;

If to reprove you for this suit of yours,

So season'd with your faithful love to me,—

Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.

Therefore,—to speak, and to avoid the first;

And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,—

Definitively, thus I answer you.

Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert

Unmeritable, shuns your high request.

First, if all obstacles were cut away,

And that my path were even to the crown,

As the ripe revenue and due of birth;

Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,

So mighty, and so many, my defects,

That I would rather hide me from my greatness,—

Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,—

Than in my greatness covet to be hid,

And in the vapour of my glory smother'd

But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me;

(And much I need to help you, if need were;)

The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,

Which, uselov'd by the stealing hours of time,

Will well become the seat of majesty,

And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.

On him I lay what you would lay on me,

The right and fortune of his happy stars,—

Which, God defend, that I should wring from him!

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your

grace;

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,

All circumstances well considered.

You say that Edward is your brother's son;

So say we too, but not by Edward's wife:

For first he was contract to lady Lucy,

Your mother lives a witness to his vow;

And afterwards by substitute betroth'd

To Bona, sister to the king of France.

These both put by, a poor petitioner,

A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,

A beauty-waning and distressed widow,

Even in the afternoon of her best days,

Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,

Seduc'd the pitch and height of all his thoughts

To base declension, and loath'd bigamy;

By her, in his unlawful bed, he got

This Edward, whom our manners call—the prince

More bitterly could I expostulate,

Save that, for reverence to some alive,

I give a sparing limit to my tongue.

Then, good my lord, take to your royal self

This proffer'd benefit of dignity:

If not to bless us and the land withal,

Gloster.—Now will I go, to take some privy order,
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight,

RICHARD III., Act III., Scene v.

May. But, my good lord, your grace's word shall serve.

As well as I had seen, and heard him speak :
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our dutiful citizens
With all your just proceedings in this case.

Glo. And on that end we wish'd your lordship here,

To avoid the censure of the carping world.
Back. But since you came too late of our intent,
Yet witness what you hear we did intend :
And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Lord Mayor.]
Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall lures him in all post :—

There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children :
Tell them, how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying—he would make his son
Heir to the crown ; meaning, indeed, his house,
Which, by the sun thereof, was termed so.
Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
And insatiate appetite in change of lust ; [wives,
Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters,
Even where his raging eye, or savage heart,
Without control, list'd to make his prey.
Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person :—
Tell them, when that my mother went with child
Of that insatiate Edward, noble York,
My princely father, then had wars in France ;
And, by just computation of the time,
Found, that the issue was not his legit ;
Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble duke my father :
Yet touch this spurningly, as 'twere far off—
Because, my lord, you know, my mother lives.

Back. Doubt not, my lord : I'll pay the orator,
As if the golden fee, for which I plead,
Were for myself : and so, my lord, adieu.

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's castle ;

Where you shall find me well accompanied
With reverend fathers and well-learned bishops.

Back. I go ; and, towards three or four o'clock,
Look for the news that the Guild-hall affords.

[Exit Buckingham.]
Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw—

Go thou (to Cat.) to friar Penker :—bid them both Meet me, within this hour, at Baynard's castle.

[Exit Lovel and Catesby.]
Now will I go, to take some privy order
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight ;
And to give notice, that no manner of person
Have, any time, recourse unto the princes. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—A Street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good lord Hastings ;

Which in a set hand fairly is engraven'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's.
And mark how well the sequel hangs together :—
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over.

For yea-saith by Catesby was it sent me ;
The precedent was full as long a doing :
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untrasted, unexamind, free, at liberty.

Here's a good world the while !—Who is so gross,
That cannot see this palpable device ?

Yet who so bold, but says—he sees it not ?
Nad is the world ; and all will come to nought,
When such bad dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—The same. Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter Gloucester and Buckingham, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now ! what say the citizens ?

Back. Now by the holy mother of our Lord,
The citizens are mum—say not a word !

Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children ?

Back. I did ; with his contract with Lady Lucy
And his contract by deputy in France :

The insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his enforcement of the city wives ;

His tyranny for trifles : his own bastardy,—
As being got, your father then in France ;

And his resemblance, being not like the duke.
Withal, I did infer your lineaments,—

Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind :

Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,

Your bounty, virtue, fair humility ;
Indeed, left nothing, fitting for your purpose,
Untouch'd, or slightly handled, in discourse.

And, when my oratory grew to an end,
I made them, that did love their country's good,

Cry—God save Richard, England's royal king !

Glo. And did they so ? [word ;

Back. No, so God help me, they spake not a
But, like dumb statues, or breathless stones,

Star'd on each other, and look'd deadly pale.
Which, when I saw, I reprehended them ;

And ask'd the mayor, what meant this wilful silence :

His answer was—the people were not us'd
To be spoke to, but by the recorder.

Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again ;—
Thus with the duke, thus with the duke's inter'd ;

But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine own,

At lower end o' the hall, hur'd up their caps,
And some ten voices cried, God save King Richard !

And thus I took the van of those few,—
Thanks, gentle citizens, and friends, quoth I ;

This general applause, and cheerful shout,
Arouses your wisdom, and your love to Richard :

And even here brake off, and came away.

Glo. What outrageous blacks were they ; Would they not speak !

Will not the mayor then, and his brethren, come ?
Back. The mayor is here at hand : in end some fear ;

Be not you spoke with, but by my right suit ;
And look you, get a prayer book in your hand ;

And stand between two church-men, good my lord ;
For on that ground I'll make a holy de-cant :

And be not easily won to our requests ; [it
Play the maid's part—still answer nay, and take

Glo. I go ; And if you please as well for them,
As I can say nay to thee for myself.

No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue.

Back. Go, go, up to the leads ; the lord mayor knocks. [Exit Gloucester.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.
Welcome, my lord : I dance attendance here ;

I think, the duke will not be spoke withal.—
Enter from the castle, Catesby

Now, Catesby ! what says your lord to my request ? [lord

Cate. He doth entreat your grace, my noble
To visit him to-morrow, or next day ;
He is within, with two right reverend fathers,

For I myself am not so well provided,
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter Bishop of Ely.

Bis. Where is my lord protector? I have sent
For these strawberries.

Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth
This morn'g.

There's some conceit or other likes him well,
When he doth bid good-morrow with such spirit.
I think, there's ne'er a man in Christendom,
Can lesser hide his love, or hate, than he:
For by his face straight shall you know his heart.

Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his
By any likelihood he show'd to-day? [face,]

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter Gloucester and Buckingham.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve,
That do conspire my death with devilish plots
Of damned witchcraft; and that have prevail'd
Upon my body with their helms: charius?

Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my
lord,

Makes me most forward in this noble presence
To doom the offenders: Whoso'er they be,

I say, my lord, they have deserved death. [evil;]

Glo. Then be your eyes the witnesses of 'their Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm
Is, like a blasted sapling, wither'd up;

And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,
Consorted with that harlot, strumpet Shore,
That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord,— [pet,]

Glo. If thou protector of this damned stram-
Talk'st thou to me of it!—Thou art a traitor:—

Off with his head!—now, by Saint Paul, I swear
I will not dine until I see the same —

Lovel, and Catesby, look, that it be done;
The rest, that love us, see, and follow me.

[Exeunt Council, with Gloucester and Buckingham.]

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for
For I, too fond, might have prevented this: [me;]

Stanley did dream, the hour did raise his helm;
But I disdain'd it, and did scorn to fly. [ble,]

Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stum-
And startled, when he look'd upon the Tower,

As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.
O, now I wail the priest that spake to me;

I now repent I told the pursuivant,
As too triumphing, how mine enemies,

To-day at Pontefract bloodily were butcher'd,
And I myself secure in grace and favour.

O Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse
Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head.

Cate. Despatch, my lord, the duke would be at dinner;

Make a short shrift.—he longs to see your head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!

Who builds his hope in air of your fair looks,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mat;

Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep. [claim.]

Lov. Come, come, despatch; 'tis bootless to ex-Hast. O, bloody Richard!—miserable England!

prophesying the fearful'st time to thee,
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.—

—now, lend me to the block, hear him my head;
They smile at us, who shortly shall be dead.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same. The Tower Wells.

Enter Gloucester and Buckingham, in rusty armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour?

Murder thy breath in middle of a word,—

And then again begin, and stop again.

As if thou wert distraught, and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;

Speak, and look back, and pry on every side,

Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,

Intending deep suspicion; ghastly looks

Are at my service, like enforced smiles;

And both are ready in their offices,

At any time, to grace my stratagems.

But what, is Catesby gone?

Glo. He is; and see he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and Catesby.

Buck. Let me alone to entertain him.—Lord mayor,—

Glo. Look to the draw-bridge there.

Buck. Hark, hark! a drum.

Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.

Buck. Lord mayor, the reason we have sent for
you,—

Glo. Look back, defend thee, here are enemies

Buck. God and our innocence defend and guard us!

Enter Lovel and Ratcliff, with Hastings' head.

Glo. Be patient, they are friends; Ratcliff, and Lovel

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor,
The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glo. So dear I loved the man, that I must weep.

I took him for the plainest harmless creature,

That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;

Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded
The history of all her secret thoughts:

So smooth he dash'd his vice with show of virtue,
That, his apparent open guilt omitted,—

I mean, his conversation with Shore's wife,—

He liv'd from all attainder of suspect [trait'or]

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd

That ever liv'd.—Look you, my lord mayor,

Would you imagine, or almost believe,

(Were't not, that by great preservation

We live to tell it you,) the subtle traitor

This day had plotted in the council-house,

To murder me, and my good lord of Gloucester!

May. What! had he so? [del-!]

Glo. What! think you we are Turks, or infi-

Or that we would, against the form of law,

Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death;

But that the extreme peril of the case,

The peace of England, and our persons' safety,

Enforc'd us to this execution? [des h;]

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his

And your good graces both have well proceeded,

To warn false traitors from the like attempts.

I never looked for better at his hands.

After he once fell in with mistress Shore.

Buck. Yet had we not determin'd he should Until your lordship came to see his end; [des,]

Which now the loving haste of these our friends,

Somewhat against our meaning, hath prevented:

Because, my lord, we would have had you hear

The traitor speak, and timorously confess

The manner and the purpose of his treasons;

That you might well have signified the same

Unto the citizens, who, haply, may misconstrue us in him, and wait his death.

Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward!
 Whither shall we toward the Tower! the day is spent.
Rat. Come, come, have with you.—Wot you what, my lord?
 To-day, the lords you talk of are beheaded.
Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads.
 Than some that have accus'd them, wear their heads.
 But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before, I'll talk with this good fellow.
[Exeunt Stanley and Catesby.]
 How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee?
Purs. The better, that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now, Than when thou met'st me last where now we were. Thou was I going prisoner to the Tower, (meet: By the suggestion of the queen's allies; But now, I tell thee, (keep it to thyself,) This day those enemies are put to death, And I in better state than ere I was. [Rest!]
Purs. God hold it to your honour's good cause!
Hast. Gramercy, fellow: There, drink that for me. [Throwing him his purse.]
Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit Pursuivant.]

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.
[Heart.]
Hast. I thank thee, good sir John, with all my I am in your debt for your last exercise;
 Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?
 Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest; Your honour hath no shaming work on hand.
Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy The men you said of came into my mind. (man, What, go you toward the Tower?
Buck. I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay there:
 I shall return before your lordship thence.
Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.
Buck. And supper too, although thou know'st it not. [Aside.]
 Come, will you go?
Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.

Enter Ratcliff, with a guard, conducting Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan, to execution.
Rat. Come, bring forth the prisoners. (this,— Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee To-day, shalt thou behold a subject die, For truth, for duty, and for loyalty. (you!
Grey. God keep the prince from all the pack of A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.
Vaugh. You lie, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.
Rat. Despatch; the limit of your lives is out.
Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison, and ominous to noble peers! (son, Within the guilty closure of thy walls, Richard the Second here was hack'd to death: And, for more slander to thy dismal seat, We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.
Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I, For standing by when Richard stabb'd her man.
Riv. Then cur'd she Hastings, then cur'd she Buckingham,
 Then cur'd she Richard:—O, remember, God, To bear her prayers for them, as now for us!
 And for my sister, and her princely son, Be satisfied, dear God, with our true bloods, Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt!
Rat. Make haste, the hour of death is expiate.
Riv. Come, Grey,—come, Vaughan,—let us here embrace:
 Farewell, until we meet again in heaven. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Tower.

Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, the Bishop of Ely, Catesby, Lovel, and others, sitting at a table: officers of the council attending.
Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are is—to determine of the coronation: (met
 In God's name, speak, when is the royal day?
Buck. Are all things ready for that royal time?
Stan. They are; and wants but nomination.
Ely. To-morrow then I judge a happy day.
Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?
 Who is most inward with the noble duke?
Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind. (hearts—
Buck. We know each other's faces: for our He knows no more of mine, than I of yours;
 Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine:
 Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.
Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me
 But, for his purpose in the coronation, (well:
 I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd His gracious pleasure any way therein:
 But you, my noble lord, may name the time;
 And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
 Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter Gloucester.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself. (row:
Glo. My noble lords and cousins, all, good morn- I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust, My absence doth neglect no great design, Which by my presence might have been concluded. (lord, Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my William lord Hastings had pronounced your part—
 I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.
Glo. Than my lord Hastings, no man might be bolder;
 His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.— My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn, I saw good strawberries in your garden there; I do beseech you, send for some of them.
Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit Ely.]
Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. (Takes him aside, Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business; And finds the testy gentleman so hot, That he will lose his head, ere give consent, His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it, Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.
Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile, I'll go with you. [Exeunt Gloucester and Buckingham.]
Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph,
 To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.
Back. Well then, no more but this: Go, gentle

And, as it were, far off sound thou Lord Hastings,
 How he doth stand affected to our purpose;
 And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,
 To sit about the coronation.
 If thou dost find him tractable to us,
 Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
 If he be lenden, icy, cold, unwilling,
 Be thou as too; and so break off the talk,
 And give us notice of his inclination:
 For we to-morrow hold divided councils,
 Wherein thyself shalt highly be employed.

Glo. Commend me to Lord William: tell him, Catesby.

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
 To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret-castle;
 And bid my friend, for joy of this good news,
 Give mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.
Back. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both.

Back. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive

Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?
Glo. Chop off his head, man;—somewhat we will do:—

And look, when I am king, claim thou of me
 The earldom of Hereford, and all the moveables
 Whereof the king my brother was possess'd.

Back. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.

Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness,
 Come, let us sup betimes; that afterwards
 We may digest our complots in some form.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — Before Lord Hastings's House.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord,— [Knocking.]

Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?

Mess. One from Lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock?

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Cannot thy master sleep the tedious nights?

Mess. So it should seem by that I have to say.
 First, he commends him to your noble lordship.

Hast. And then,—

Mess. And then he sends you word, he dreamt
 To-night the bear had raised off his helm:
 Besides, he says, there are two councils held;
 And that may be determin'd at the use.
 Which may make you and him to rue at the other.
 Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure.—

If, presently, you will take horse with him,
 And with all speed post with him toward the north,

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, follow, go, return unto thy lord:

But him not fear the separated councils:

His humour, and myself, are at the case;

And, as the other, is my good friend Catesby;

Where nothing can proceed, that toucheth us,

Whereof I shall not have intelligence.

Tell him, his fears are shallow, wanting instance:

And for his dreams—I wonder, he's so fond
 To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers:
 To fly the bear, before the bear pursue,
 Were to increase the bear to follow us,
 And make pursuit, where he did mean no chase.
 Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;
 And we will both together to the Tower.
 Where, he shall see, the bear will use us kindly.
Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.]

Enter Catesby.

Cate. Many good mornings to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morn'ng, Catesby; you are early stirring:

What news, what news, in this our tottering

Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;

And, I believe, will never stand upright.

Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.

Hast. How! wear the garland! dost thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord. [Shoulders,]

Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd.

But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you

Upon his party, for the gain thereof: [Forward]

And, thereupon, he sends you this good news,—

That, this same very day, your enemies,

The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news,

Because they have been still my adversaries:

But, that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,

To bar my master's heirs in true descent,

God knows, I will not do it, to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind! [Heuses.—]

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve-month

That they, who brought me in my master's hate,

I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,

I'll send some packing, that yet think not on't.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord,

When men are unprepared, and look not for it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so 'twill do

With some men else, who think themselves as safe

As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear

To princely Richard, and to Buckingham.

Cate. The princes both make high account of

you,—

For they account his head upon the bridge.

[Aside.]

Hast. I know, they do; and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter Stanley.

Come on, come on, where is your bear-spear,

man?

Fear you the bear, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morn'ng; and good morn'ng,

Catesby:—

You may jest on, but, by the holy rod

I do not like these several councils.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as yours,

And never, in my life, I do protest,

Was it more precious to me than this now:

Think you, but that I know our state secure,

I would be so triumphant as I am!

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rule from London,

Were young, and I suppose'd their states were sure

And yet, indeed, had no cause to mistrust;

But yet, you see, how soon the day o'ercoat.

This sudden stab of ransom I misdoubt:

Anon expect him here ; But if she be obdurate
To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid
We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary ! not for all this land,
Would I be guilty of a deep a sin.

Back. You are too senseless obdurate, my lord,
Too ceremonious and traditional.

Weigh it but with the grossness of this age
You break not sanctuary in seizing him.
The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place,
And those who have the wit to claim the place :
This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserv'd it :
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it :
Then, taking him from thence, that is not there,
You break no privilege nor charter there.

Off have I heard of sanctuary men ;
But sanctuary children ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.

Come on, lord Hastings, will you go with me ?
Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may.

[Exeunt Cardinal and Hastings.
Say, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come,
Where shall we sojourn till our coronation ?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self.
If I may counsel you, some day or two.

Your highness shall repose you at the Tower :
Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit.

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place :—

Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord ?

Glo. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place ;

Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record ? or else reported

Successively from age to age, he built it ?

Back. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd ;

Metinks, the truth should live from age to age,

As 'twere retail'd to all posterity,

Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. So wise so young, they say, do ne'er live long. [Aside.]

Prince. What say you, uncle ?

Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives long.

Thus, like the formal vice, luxury, } Aside.

I moralize two meanings in one word. }

Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man :

With what his valour did enrich his wit,

His wit set down to make his valour live :

Death makes no conquest of his conqueror ;

For now he lives in fame, though not in life.—

I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham.

Back. What, my gracious lord ?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,

I'll win our ancient right in France again,

Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glo. Short summers lightly have a forward spring. [Aside.]

Enter York, Hastings, and the Cardinal.

Back. Now, in good time, here comes the duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York ! how fares our loving brother ?

York. Well, my dread lord ; so must I call you
now.

Prince. Ay, brother ; to our grief, as it is Too late he died, that might have kept that title,

Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble lord of York ?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,

You said, that kille weeds are fast in growth :

The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle ?

Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then is he more belov'd to you, than I.

Glo. He may command me, as my sovereign ;

But you have power in me, as in a kinsman

York. I pray you, uncle, then, give me this dagger. [Heart.]

Glo. My dagger, little cousin ! with all my Prince. A beggar, brother ?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give ;

And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift ! O, that's the sword to it !

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough

York. O then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts ;

In weightier things you'll say a beggar, nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord ? [Call me.]

York. I would, that I might thank you as you

Glo. How ?

York. Little. [Talk.—]

Prince. My lord of York will still be cross in Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me.—

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me ;

Because that I am little, like an ape. [Clers.]

He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulder.

Back. With what a sharp-provided wit he rea-to mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle, [sons.]

He prettily and aptly taunts himself.

So cunning, and so young, is wonderful. [along ?]

Glo. My gracious lord, will't please you pass myself, and my good cousin Buckingham

Will to your mother ; to entreat of her,

To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my
lord ?

Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why sir, what should you fear ?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence's angry ghost ;

My grandam told me, he was murder'd there.

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not fear.

But come, my lord, and with a heavy heart,

Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

[Exeunt Prince, York, Hastings, Cardinal,

and Attendants.]

Back. Think you, my lord, this little prating

Was not incensed by his subtle mother, [York]

To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously ?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt : O, 'tis a pious boy ;

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable ;

He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Back. Well, let them rest.—

Come hither, gentle Calensy ; thou art sworn

As deeply to effect what we intend,

As closely to conceal what we suspect :

Thou know'st our reasons are'd upon the way ;

What think'st thou ? is it not an easy matter

To make William lord Hastings of our mind,

For the instalment of this famous tale ?

Cale. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,

That he will not be won to fight against him.

Back. What think'st thou then of Stanley ? will not he ?

Duch I long with all my heart to see the prince;
I love, he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. Eliz. But I hear, no; they say, my son of York

Is almost over-taken him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother, but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin! it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at
My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow [ter,
More than my brother; Ay, quoth my uncle Glouc-
Small herbs have grace; great weeds do grow apace;
And musc, methinks, I would not grow so fast.
Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds make haste. (not hold

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did
In him that did object the same to thee:

He was the wretched'st thing, when he was young,
So long a growing, and so leasurely.

That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious na-dam.

Duch. I hope, he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my truth, if I had been remember'd.

I could have given my uncle's grace a scout,
To touch his growth, nearer than he touch'd mine.

Duch. How, my young York! I prythee, let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say, my uncle grew so fast,
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old;

'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I prythee, pretty York, who told thee York. Grandam, his nurse. [this I

Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told Q. Eliz. A pious boy: Go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. Eliz. Pity she has ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger:

What news!

Such news, my lord,
As grieves me to unfold.

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince!

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news!

Mess. Lord Rivers, and lord Grey, are sent to Pomfret.

With them sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes,
Gloucester and Buckingham.

Q. Eliz. For what offence!

Mess. The sum of all, I have declared;

Why, or for what, the nobles were committed,
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.

Q. Eliz. Ah me, I see the ruin of my house!

The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;

Insulting tyranny begins to jut
Upon the innocent and awless throne:—

Welcome destruction, blood, and massacre!

I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days!

How many of you have mine eyes beheld!

My husband lost his life to get the crown;

And often up and down my sons were tost,
For me to joy, and weep, their gain, and loss:

And being reared, and domestick bruises
Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves; brother to brother,

Blood to blood, self 'gainst self:—(I) prophecies
And frantick courage, and thy damned spleen:
Or let me die, to look on death no more!

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy, we will to some Maiden, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious lady, go [To the Queen.

And thither bear your treasure and your goods.

For my part, I'll resign unto your grace
The seal I keep; And so beleave to me.

As well I tender you, and all of yours!

Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. A Street.

The trumpets sound. Enter the Prince of Wales, Gloucester, Buckingham, Cardinal Bourcheier, and others.

Duch. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Q. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' save-[reign:
The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way
Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy:

I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Q. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years

Hath not yet divid'd into the world's deceit:

No more can you distinguish of a man
Than of his outward show; which, God he knows,

Seldom, or never, jumpeth with the heart.

Those uncles, which you want, were dangerous;

Your grace attended to their sugar'd words,

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:

God keep you from them, and from such false
friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but Glo. My lord, the mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord;—and thank you all.—

[Exeunt Mayor, &c.

I thought, my mother, and my brother York,
Would long ere this have met us on the way:

Ere, what a slug as Hastings! that he comes not
To tell us, whether they will come, or no.

Enter Hastings.

Duch. And in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord: What, will our mo[ther come! On what occasion, God he knows, not I.

The queen your mother, and your brother York,
Have taken sanctuary: The tender prince
Would fain have come with me to meet your grace.

But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Back. Fye! what an indirect and peevish course
Is this of hers!—Lord cardinal, will your grace
Persuade the queen to send the duke of York
Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny,—lord Hastings, go with him,
And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

Can from his mother win the duke of York,

Ric. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother,
Of the young prince your son : send straight for him,
Let him be crown'd : in him your comfort lives :
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter Gloucester, Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings,
Ratcliff, and others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort : all of us have cause
To wail the dimming of our shining star
But none can cure their harms by waiting them.—
Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy,
I did not see your grace :—Humbly on my knee
I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee ; and put meekness in thy breast,

Love, charity, obedience, and true duty !

Glo. Amen ; and make me die a good old
man !

This is the last-end of a mother's blessing :
I marvel that her grace did leave it out. [Aside.

Back. You cloudy princes, and heart-sorrowing peers.

That bear this mutual heavy load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love :
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.
The broken rancour of your half-swain hearts,
But lately splinted, knit, and join'd together,
Meet gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept :
No seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fetch'd.

Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Ric. Why with some little train, my lord of Buckingham ?

Back. Marry, my lord, lest by a multitude,
The new-head'd world of malice should break
out ;

Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green, and yet un-govern'd :

Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself :
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope, the king made peace with all of us :
And the compact is firm, and true, in me.

Ric. And so in me ; and so, I think, in all :
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which, haply, by much company might be urg'd :
Therefore I say, with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so ; and go we to determine Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam,—and you my mother,—will you go
To give your consents in this weighty business ?
[Exeunt all but Buckingham and Gloucester.

Back. My lord, whenever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home :
For, by the way, I'll sort occasion.
As index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistency,
My own life, my prophet !—My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.
Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour : Whither away so fast ?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself :
Hear you the news abroad ?

1 Cit. Yes : the king's dead.

2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady ; seldom comes the better :

I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed !

1 Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good king Edward's death ? [While !]

2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true ; God help, the

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublesome world. [All reign.]

1 Cit. No, no ; by God's good grace, his son

3 Cit. Woe to that land, that's govern'd by a child !

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of government ;
That, in his non age, council under him,
And, in his full and ripen'd years, himself.

No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern well.

1 Cit. So stood the state, when Henry the Sixth was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old

3 Cit. Stood the state so ? no, no, good friends,
God wot ;

For then this land was famously enrich'd
With politick grave counsel ; then the king
Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace

1 Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and nukler. [Then.]

3 Cit. Better it were, they all came by his father, by his father, there were none at all :

For emulation now, who shall be nearest,
Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.

O, full of danger is the duke of Gloucester ;
And the queen's sons and brothers, haught and proud :

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
This woe's land might woe as before.

1 Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst ; all will be well. [Then clonks ;]

3 Cit. When clouds are seen, we men put us
When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand ;

When the sun sets, who doth not look for a ghastly
Untimely storm, make men expect a death ?

All may be well ; but, if God sort it so,
'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear :
You cannot reach almost with a man
That looks not heavily, and full of dread.

3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so :
By a divine instinct, men's minds mistrust
Knowing danger : as, by proof, we see

'Tis the water swell before a boat's own storm.
But leave it all to God. Whither away !

2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

3 Cit. And so was I ; I'll bear you company.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the young Duke of York, Queen Elizabeth, and the Duchess of York.

Arch. Last night, I heard, they lay at Stony-Stratford :

And at Northampton they do rest to-night :
To-morrow, or next day, they will be here

When Oxford had me down, he rescu'd me,
And said, Dear brother live, and be a king!
Who told me, when we both lay in the field,
Fruen almost to death, how he did lap me
Even in his garments; and did give himself,
All this and waked, to the numb-cold night!
All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Snufffully pluck'd, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
But, when your carters, or your waiting-vassals,
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for pardon, par-
And I, unjustly too, must grant it you — [don;
But for my brother, not a man would speak,
Nor I (ungracious) speak unto myself
For him, poor soul! — The proudest of you all
Have been beholden to him in his life;
Yet none of you would once plead for his life. —
O God! I fear, thy justice will take hold
On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this. — Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. O,
Poor Clarence!

[Exeunt King, Queen, Hastings, Rivers,
Dorset, and Grey.

Glo. This is the fruit of rashness! — Mark'd you

How that the guilty kindred of the queen
Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence?
O! they did urge it still unto the king; [death!
God will revenge it. Come, lords; will you go,
To comfort Edward with our company!
Back. We wait upon your grace. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — The same.

Enter the Duchess of York, with a Son and Daughter of Clarence.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, he's — [breast.
Daugh. Why do you weep so oft, and beat your
And cry — O Clarence, my unhappy son! [head.

Son. Why do you look on us, and shake your
And call us — orphans, wretches, cast-aways,
If that our noble father be alive!

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me both;
I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loth to lose him, not your father's death;
It were but sorrow to wail one that's lost.

Now, Then, grandam, you conclude that he is
The king my uncle is to blame for this: [dead.
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With earnest prayers all to that effect.

Daugh. And so will I.
Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well:

Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caus'd your father's death.

Son. Grandam, we say: for my good uncle
Gloucester

Told me, the king, provok'd to't by the queen,
Devis'd impeachments to imprison him:

And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me and kindly kiss'd my cheek;

Bade me rely on him, as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes,

And with a virtuous visor hide deep vice!
He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,

Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you, my uncle did dissemble, gran-
Duch. Ay, boy. [dani

Son. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this!

Enter Queen Elizabeth, distractedly; Rivers and Dorset following her.

Q. Eliz. Ah! who shall hinder me to wail and weep!

To shade my fortune, and torment myself!
I'll join with black despair against my soul,

And to myself become an enemy. [tunes!
Duch. What means this scene of rude impe-

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragick violence! —
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead! —

Why grow the branches, when the root is gone?
Why wither not the leaves, that want their sap! —

If you will live, lament; if die, be brief:
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's:

Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow,
As I had title in thy noble husband!

I have bewep'd a worthy husband's death,
And liv'd by looking on his images:

But now, two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death;

And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in him

Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left thee:

But death hath snatch'd my husband from my arms,

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble hands,
Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I,
(Thine being but a moiety of my grief),

To over-go thy plaints, and drown thy cries!

Son. Ah, aunt! you wept not for our father's death;

How can we aid you with our kindred tears!
Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd,

Your widow doleful likewise be unwep't!

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation,
I am not barren to bring forth laments;

All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the wat'ry moon,

May send forth plentiful tears to drown the world!

Ah, for a husband, for my dear lord Edward!

Chil. Ah, for our father, for our dear lord Clarence.

Duch. Alas, for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I, but Edward! and he's gone. [he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we, but Clarence! and Duch. What stays had I, but they! and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow, had so dear a loss.
Chil. Were never orphans, had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother, had so dear a loss
Alas! I am the mother of these griefs;

Their woes are parcel'd, mine are general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;

I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These labors for Clarence weep, and so do I:

I for an Edward weep, so do not they —
Alas! you three, on me, threefold distress'd,

Pour all your tears, I am your sorrow's nurse,
And I will pamper it with lamentations.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother; God is much dis-

pleas'd,
That you take with unthankfulness his doing;

In common worldly things, 'tis call'd — ungrateful,
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt.

Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent,
Much more to be thus opposite with heaven,

For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

I Murd. So do not I; go, coward, as thou art.—
Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,
Till that the duke give order for his burial:
And when I have my need, I will away;
For thus will out, and then I must not stay.

[Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, [led in sick.] Queen Elizabeth, Dorset, Rivers, Hastings, Buckingham, Grey, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so:—now have I done a good day's work;—

You peers, continue this united league:
I every day expect an embassage
From my kinsmen to redeem me hence;
And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.
Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand;
Dumexbie not your hate! swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed, you daily not before your king;

Lest he, that is the supreme King of kings,
Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Kathar of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt in this;—

Nor your son Dorset,—Buckingham, nor you;—
Nor have factious one against the other.

Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;
And what you do, do it unfeignedly. [remember]

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings;—I will never more
Our former hatred—so thrive I, and mine I!

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him;—Hastings, love lord marquis.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [Embraces Dorset.]

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his back

Upon your grace, [to the Queen.] nor with all
Deth cherish you, and yours, God punish me!

With hate in those where I expect most love!
When I have most need to employ a friend,

And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
He be unto me! this do I beg of heaven,

When I am cold in love, to you, or yours.

[Embracing Rivers, &c.]
K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham, in this thy vow unto my sickly heart,

There waiteth now our brother Gloucester,

To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Good morrow to my sovereign king, and queen;

And, princely peers, a happy time of day!

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day:—

Brother, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign
Among this princely heap, if any here, [legs]

By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,
Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
Have aught committed that is hardly borne

By any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile me to his friendly peace:

'Tis death to me, to be at enmity;
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.—

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my dangerous service;—

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us:—

Of you, lord Rivers,—and lord Grey, of you,—
That all without desert have frown'd on me:—

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all,
I do not know that Englishman alive,

With whom my soul is in any jot at odds,
More than the infant that is born to-night;

I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy-day shall this be kept hereafter:—

I would to God, all strifes were well compounded. My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness

To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this,
To be so flouted in this royal presence!

Who knows not, that the gentle duke is dead!

[They all start.]
You do him injury, to scorn his corpse.

K. Edw. Who knows not, he is dead! who knows he is!

Q. Eliz. All seeing heaven, what a world is this!
Buck. Look! so pale, lord Dorset, as the rest!

Dor. Ay, my good lord: and so man in the presence.

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.

K. Edw. Is Clarence dead! the order was revers'd.

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order dead,
And that a winged Mercury did bear;

Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,
That came too late to see him buried:—

God grant, that some, less noble, and less loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,

Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter Stanley.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service
done!

K. Edw. I pry thee, peace; my soul is full of Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.

K. Edw. Then say at once, what is it thou request'st.

Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life;
Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman,

Lately attendant on the duke of Norfolk.

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's
death,

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought,

And yet his punishment was better death.
Who sued to me for him! who, in my wrath,

Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advis'd!
Who spoke of brotherhood! who spoke of love!

Who told me, how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me!

Who told me in the field at Tewkesbury,

2 Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow, that respects his reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

1 Murd. Take him over the costard with the hilt of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt, in the next room.

2 Murd. O excellent device! and make a sup of him.

1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.

2 Murd. Strike.

1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper! give me a cup of wine. [anon.]

1 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, in God's name, what art thou?

1 Murd. A man, as you are.

1 Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

1 Murd. Not you, as we are, loyal [humble].
Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are

1 Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own. [speak!]

Clar. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou
Your eyes do menace me: Why look you pale?
Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

Both Murd. To, to, to,— Clar. To murder me!

Both Murd. Ay, ay.

Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so,
And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.

Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?

1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.

Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again

2 Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die [men].

Clar. Are you call'd forth from out a world of
To slay the innocent? What is my offence?

Where is the evidence that does accuse me?
What lawful quest have given their verdict up
To the frowning judge? or who pronounced
The bitter sentence of poor Clarence's death?

Before I be convict by course of law,
To threaten me with death, is most unlawful.

I change you, as you hope for any goodness,
By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,
That you depart, and lay no hands on me;

The deed you undertake is damnable.

1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

2 Murd. And he, that hath commanded, is our king.

Clar. Erroneous vassal! the great King of Hath in the table of his law commanded,
That thou shalt do no murder: Wilt thou then
Spurn at his edict, and fulfil a traitor's?

Take heed; for he looks vengeance in his hand,
To hurt upon their heads that break his law.

2 Murd. And that same vengeance dash he hurl on thee,

For false forswearing, and for murder too.
Thou shalt receive the sacrament to fight in quarrel of the house of Lancaster.

1 Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God, Shalt break that vow; and, with thy treacherous blade,

Marshall'st the bowels of thy sovereign's son.

2 Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend. [law to us.]

1 Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful
When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?
or Edward, for my brother, for his sake seemeth you not to murder me for this;
or in that sin be as deep as I.

God will be avenger for the deed,
I know you, that he doth it publicly;
sake not the quarrel from his powerful arm;

He needs no indirect nor lawless course,
To cut off those that have offended him.

1 Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister,
When gallant-springs, brave Faunsaget,
That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage.

1 Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy Provoked us hither now to slaughter thee. [faul].

Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me:
I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for need, go back again,
And I will send you to my brother Gloucester;
Who shall reward you better for my life,
Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

2 Murd. You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloucester hates you. [dear;]

Clar. O, no; he loves me, and he holds me
As you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father
York

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,
And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,
He little thought of this divided friendship:
But Gloucester think on this, and he will weep.

1 Murd. Ay, mill-stones; as he lesson'd us to [weep.]

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

1 Murd. Right, as snow is harvest.—Come, you deceive yourself:

'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewep'd my fortune,
And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobbs,
That he would labour my delivery.

1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you
From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul,
To counsel me to make my peace with God,
And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind,
That thou wilt war with God, by murdering me—
Ah, sir, consider, he, that set you on
To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

1 Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly, and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is basely, savagely, devilish.

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,
Being pent from liberty, as I am now,— [you —
If two such murderers as yourselves came to
Would not entreat for life?—
My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;
O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,
Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,
As you would beg, were you in my distress.
A begging prince what beggar pities not?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. Take that, and that; if all this will not do, [Stabs him.]

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within.

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands
Of this most grievous guilty murder done!

Re-enter first Murderer.

1 Mur. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not?

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been. [brother!]

2 Murd. I would he knew, that I had sav'd his Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say:
For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit.]

Upon the hatches; thence we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster
That had befall'n us. As we paced along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,
Methought, that Gloucester stumbled; and, in falling,
Struck me, that thought to stay him, over-board,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.
O Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!
What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!
Methought, I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
A thousand men, that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unpriced jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea.
Some lay in dead men's sculls; and, in their holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting souls,
That wond'ring saw the bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death,
To gaze upon these secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought, I had; and often did I strive
To yield the ghost; but a ill the envious flood
Kept in my soul, and would not let it forth
To seek the empty, vast, and wand'ring air;

But another'd it within my panting bulk,
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. A wail'd you not with this sore agony?

Clar. O no; my dream was lengthen'd after life;

O, then began the tempest to my soul!

I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;

Who cry'd aloud,—What scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?

And so he vanish'd: Then came wand'ring by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair

Dabbled in blood; and he stirr'd me out aloud,— Clarence is come,—false, fleeing, perjur'd Clarence.

That stab'd me in the field by Tewkesbury:—

Seize on him, forces, take him to your torments!—

With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends

Environ'd me, and howl'd in mine ears

Such hideous cries, that, with the very noise,

I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after,

Could not believe but that I was in hell;

Such terrible impressions made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted you;

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. O, Brakenbury, I have done these things—
That now give evidence against my soul,—

For Edward's sake; and see how he requites me!—
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone:—
O, spare my guiltless wife, and my poor child!

I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me:
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord; God give your grace good rest.

[Clarence reposes himself on a chair.

Sorrow breaks seasons, and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide night.
Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, between their titles, and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward name.]

Enter the two Murderers.

1 Murd. Hol! who's here?

Brak. What would'st thou, fellow? and how cam'st thou hither?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief? [Aside.—

2 Murd. O, sir, 'tis better to be brief than to let him see our commision; talk no more.

[A paper is delivered to Brakenbury, who reads it.

Brak. I am in this commanded to deliver

The noble duke of Clarence to your hands:—
I will not reason what is meant hereby.

Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.

Here are the keys:—there sits the duke asleep:

I'll to the king; and signify to him.

That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

1 Murd. You may, sir: 'tis a point of wisdom:
Fare you well. [Exit Brakenbury.

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?

1 Murd. No; he'll say, 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

2 Murd. When he wakes! why fool, he shall never wake until the great judgment day.

1 Murd. Why, then he'll say, we stab'd him sleeping.

2 Murd. The urging of that word judgment, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1 Murd. What! art thou afraid?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

1 Murd. I thought, thou had'st been resolute.

2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1 Murd. I'll back to the duke of Gloucester, and tell him so.

2 Murd. Nay, I prythee, stay a little: I hope, this holy morn'g of mine will change; it was wont to hold me but while one would tell twenty.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

2 Murd. Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the dead's done.

2 Murd. Come, he dies; I had forgot the reward.

1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

2 Murd. In the duke of Gloucester's purse.

1 Murd. So, when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go; there's few,
or none, will entertain it.

1 Murd. What, if it come to thee again?

2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it; it is a dangerous thing, it makes a man a coward; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'Tis a bushy shame-faced spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles: it mingle us once restore a purse of gold, that by chance I found; it beggars any man that keeps it:
it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it.

1 Murd. Zounds, it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee, 'nt to make thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strang-fram'd, he cannot prevail
with me.

The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me
To help thee curse this poisonous hunch-back'd laid.

Hast. False boding woman, end thy frantic

Lead to thy harm, thou move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd mine.

Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught

Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty.

Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects:

O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.

Dor. Dispute not with her, she is lunatick.

Q. Mar. Peace, master marquis, you are malaperit:

Your fire-stamp of honour is scarce current:

O, that your young nobility could judge,

What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!

'They that stand high, have many blasts to shake

them;

And, if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.

Glo. Good counsel, marry; learn it, learn it, marquis.

Dor. It twices you, my lord, as much as me.

Glo. Ay, and much more: But I was born so

Our airy buildeth in the cedar's top.

high. And dallies with the wind, and scorns the sun.

Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade;—alas, alas!

Witness my son, now in the shade of death:

Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath

Hath in eternal darkness fold'd up.

Your airy buildeth in our airy's nest:—

O God, that see't it, do not suffer it;

As it was won with blood, lose it so!

Back. Peace, peace, for shame, if not for charity.

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to me:

Uncharitably will me have you deal,

And shamefully by you my hopes are butcher'd.

My charity is outrage, life my shame,—

And in my shame still live my sorrow's rage!

Back. Have done, have done.

Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I kiss thy hand,

In sign of league and amity with thee:

Now fair befall thee, and thy noble house!

Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,

Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Back. Nor so one here; for curses never pass

The lips of those that breathe them in the air.

Q. Mar. I'll not believe but they ascend the sky,

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.

O Buckingham, beware of younger dogs;

Look, when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites,

His venom tooth will rankly to the death:

Have not to do with him, beware of him;

Sin, death, and hell, have set their marks on him;

And all their ministers attend on him.

han! Glo. What doth she say my lord of Buck-

Back. Nothing that I respect, my gracious lord.

Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel!

And smooth the devil that I warn thee from!

O, but remember this wicked day;

When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow;

And say, poor Margaret was a prophetess—

Live each of you the subjects to his hate,

And tie to yours, and all of you to God's! (Exit.)

Hast. My heart doth stand on end to hear her curses.

liberty. Riv. And so doth mine; I muse, why she's at

Glo. I cannot blame her, by God's holy mother;

She hath had too much wrong, and I repeat

My part thereof, that I have done to her.

Q. Edz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.

Glo. ... you have all the vantage of her wrong.

I was too hot to do some body good.

That is too cold in thinking of it now.

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;

He is frank'd up to fasting for his pains:—

God pardon them that are the cause thereof!

Riv. A virtuous and a christian-like conclusion.

To pray for them that have done scath to us.

Glo. So do I ever, being well advis'd:—

For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself.

(Aside.)

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you.—

And for your grace,—and you, my noble lords.

Q. Edz. Catesby, I come:—Lords, will you go

with me!

Riv. Madam, we will attend upon your grace.

(Exeunt all but Gloucester.)

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl!

The secret mischiefs that I set abroad,

I lay unto the grievous charge of others.

Clarence,—whom I, indeed, have laid in dark-

I do beweepe to many simple gulls;—

Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;

And tell them,—his the queen and her allies,

That stir the king against the duke my brother.

Now they believe it; and withal what me!

To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey:

But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture,

Tell them,—that God bids us do good for evil:

And thus I clothe my naked villainy

With old odd ends, stol'n forth of holy writ;

And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But soft, here come my executioners—

How now, my hurdy, stout reserv'd mates!

Are you now going to despatch this thing!

1 Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant.

That we may be admitted where he is.

Glo. Well thought upon, I have it here about me: (Gives the warrant.)

When you have done, repair to Crosby-place.

But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,

Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;

For Clarence is well spoken, and, perhaps,

May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

1 Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to Talkers are no good doers; be assur'd, I prate,

We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.

Glo. Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools'

eyes drop tears:

I like you, sirs,—about your business straight;

Go, go, despatch.

1 Murd. We will, my noble lord.

(Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.—The same. A Room in the Tower.

Enter Clarence and Brakenbury.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,

So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,

That, as I am a christian, faithful man,

I would not spend another such a night,

Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days:

So full of dismal terror was the time.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.

Clar. Methought, that I had broken from the

Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy;

And, in my company, my brother Gloucester:

Who from my cabin tempted me to walk

Glo. What I threat you me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said I will avouch, in presence of the king: I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.

'Tis time to speak, my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too well: Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower, And Edward, my poor son, at Tewkesbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs; A weeder-out of his proud adversaries, A liberal rewarder of his friends;

To royalize his blood, I spilt mine own. [tains.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his, or Glo. In all which time, you, and your husband Grey,

Were factious for the house of Lancaster;— And, Rivers, so were you:—Was not your husband in Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain?

Let me put in your minds, if you forget, What you have been ere now, and what you are; Withal, what I have been, and what I am. [art.

Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father Warwick, ay, and forswore himself,—Which Jesu par-

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the crown; And, for his need, poor lord, he is now'd up: I would to God, my heart were flint like Edward's, Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine; I am too childlike-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. He thee to hell for a while, and leave this world,

Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is. Roe. My lord of Gloucester, in those busy days, Which here you urge, to prove us enemies, We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king; So should'st thou, if you should be our king.

Glo. If I should be!—I had rather be a pedlar: Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof!

Q. Elix. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose You should enjoy, were you this country's king: As little joy you may suppose in me, That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof! For I am she, and altogether joyless.

I can no longer hold me patient.—[Advances.

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out In sharing that which you have pill'd from me: Which of you trembles not, that looks on me?

If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects; Yet that, by you deem'd, you quake like rebels!—Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away!

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what look'st thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd; That will I make, before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou not banish'd on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment,

Than death can yield me here by my abode. A husband, and a son, thou owe'st to me,—

And thou, a kingdom—all of you, allegiance; This sorrow that I have, by right is yours; And all the pleasures you usurp, are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,—When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper,

And with thy scorn drew'st rivers from his eyes; And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a cloth,

Sleep'd in the faultless bed of pretty Rutland;—If his curses, then from bitterness of soul

Denounc'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee; And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Elix. So just is God, to right the innocent. Hast thou the foulest deed, to slay that babe,

And the next mercicide, that e'er was heard of?

Roe. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dora. No man but prophecy'd revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What? were you snarling all, before Ready to catch each other by the throat,

And turn you all your hatred now on me? Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven,

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death, Their kingdom's loss, my woful banishment,

Could all but answer for that peevish brat? Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter heaven!—Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses!

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king! As ours by murder, to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is prince of Wales, For Edward, my son, that was prince of Wales,

Die, in his youth, by like untimely violence! Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,

Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self! Long may'st thou live, to wait thy children's loss;

And see another, as I see thee now, Beck'd in thy rights, as thou art slaid in mine!

Long die thy happy days before thy death; And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,

The neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!—Rivers,—and Dorset,—you were standers by,—

And so wast thou, lord Hastings,—when my son Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray him,

That none of you may live your natural age But by some unlook'd accident cut off! [hag.

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful witch!

Q. Mar. Add leave out these! stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store, Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,

O, let them keep it, till thy sins be ripe, And then hurl down their indignation

On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace! The worm of conscience shall be-gnaw thy soul!

Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st, And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine, Unless it be while some tormenting dream Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thine elvish mark'd, abortive, rooting hog! Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity

The slave of nature, and the son of hell! Thou slander of thy mother's heavy womb!

Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins! Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glo. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glo. Ha!

Q. Mar. I cry thee mercy then: for I did think,

That thou had'st call'd me all these better names

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply.

O, let me make the period to my curse.

Glo. 'Tis done by me; and ends in—Margaret.

Q. Elix. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself.

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider Whose deadly web ensnageth thee about?

Fool, fool! thou wilt not knife to kill thyself.

Myself to be a marvellous proper man.
I'll be at charge for a looking-glass;
And entertain a score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body;
Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But, first, I'll turn you fellow in his grave;
And then return lamenting to my love—
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey.

Riv. Have patience, madam; there's no doubt,
his majesty

Will soon recover his accustomed health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse.

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide of me?

Grey. No other harm, but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harm. [loudly sob.]

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a
To be your comfortor, when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young; and his minority
Is put into the trust of Richard Gloster.

A man that loves not me, nor none of you.
Ere is it concluded, he shall be pretor?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not coucilded yet:
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Stanley.

Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace!
Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The countess Richmond, good my lord
o your good prayer will scarcely say—amen.

Stan. notwithstanding she's your wife,
and loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd,
into not you for her proud arrogance.

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe or envious slanders of her false accusers;

if she be accus'd on true report,
or with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds on wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my lord of Stanley?

Stan. But now the duke of Buckingham, and I, came from visiting his majesty. [loudly]

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, luck. Madam, good hope; his grace speaks cheerfully. [with him]

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! did you confer luck. Ay, madam: he desires to make atonement

with the duke of Gloster and your brothers, between them and my lord chamberlain;

sent to warm them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. 'Would all were well!—but that will never be!

our happiness is at the height.

Enter Gloster, Hastings, and Dorset.

Q. Eliz. They do me wrong, and I will not endure
it:—

are they, that complain unto the king,
I. Forasmuch as you stern, and have them not?

My Paul. they love his grace but lightly

That fill his ears with such dimentionous rumours.
Because I cannot flatter, and speak fair.

Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and hug,
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy

I must be held a rancorous enemy.
Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,

But thus his simple truth must be abus'd
By sly, insinuating Jacks! [your grace]

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks
Glo. To thee, that hast not honesty, nor grace.

When have I injur'd thee? when done thee
wrong?—

Or thee?—or thee?—or any of your faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal grace,—

Whom God preserve better than you would wish!—

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the
The king, of his own royal disposition, [matter:]

And not provok'd by any sutor see:
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,

That in your outward action shows itself,
Against my children, brothers, and myself,

Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather
The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot tell;—The world is grown so bad,
That wrens may prey where eagles dare not perch.

Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning,
brother Gloster:

You envy my advancement, and my friends';
God grant, we never may have need of you!

Glo. Meantime, God grants that we have need
of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility

Held in contempt; while great promotions
Are daily given, to ennoble those [noble:]

That scarce, some two days since, were worth a Q. Eliz. By him, that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd,
I never did increase his majesty

Against the duke of Clarence, but have been
An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My lord, you do me shameful injury,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the cause
Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for— [not so!]

Glo. She may, lord Rivers!—why, who knows
She may do more, sir, than denying that:

She may help you to many fair preferments;
And then deny her aiding hand therein.

And lay those honours on your high desert.
What may she not! She may,—my marry, may

Riv. What, marry, may she? [aside.]

Glo. What, marry, may she? marry with a king,
A bachelor, a handsome stripping too:

I was, your grandson had a wiser match. [burse]

Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, I have too long
Your blunt upbraidings, and your bitter scoffs:

By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty
Of these gross taunts I often have endur'd

I had rather be a country servant-maid,
Than a great queen, with this condition—

To be so baited, scorn'd, and storm'd at:
Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Q. Mer. And less'n'd be that small, God, I be-suech thee!

Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.

As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that: it is my day, my life.

Anne. Black night overshade thy day, and death thy life!

Glo. Curses not thyself, fair creature; thou art
Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.

Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.

Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.

Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the Glo. He lives, that loves you better than he

Anne. Name him (could.)

Glo. Plantagenet.

Anne. Why, that was he.

Glo. The self-same name, but one of better
Anne. Where is he?

Glo. Here: (She spits at him.) Why

doest thou spit at me?

Anne. 'Would it were mortal poison, for thy
Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.

Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler toad.

Out of my sight; thou dost infect mine eyes.

Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected
mine.

Anne. 'Would they were basilisks, to strike thee Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once;

For now they kill me with a living death.

Thine eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt
tears,

Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops:

These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear,—

Nor when my father York and Edward wept,
To hear the piteous moans that Rutland made;

When black-fac'd Clifford slunk his sword at him:
Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,

Told the sad story of my father's death,
And twenty times made pause, to sigh, and weep,

That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad time,

My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear;
And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,

Thy beauty bath, and made them blind with
I never said to friend, nor enemy;

My tongue could never learn sweet soothing word;
But now thy beauty is prais'd of my foe,

My proud heart ayes, and prompts my tongue to
[She looks scornfully at him.]

Teach not thy lip such scorn; for it was made
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.

If thy revengful heart cannot forgive,
Nail here I lead thee this sharp pointed sword;

Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
And let the soul forth that adorns thee,

I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.

[He lays his breast open; she offers at it with his sword.]

Nay, do not pause: for I did kill King Henry:—
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.

Nay, now despatch: 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward:— [She again offers at his breast.]

But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on
[She lets fall the sword.]

Take up the sword again, or take up me.

Anne. Arise, remember: though I wish thy
I will not be thy executioner.

Glo. Then had I kill myself, and I will do it.

Anne. I have already.

Glo. That was in thy rage:

Speak it again, and even with the word,
This hand, which for thy love, did kill thy love,

Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love:

To both thy deaths shall thou be necessary.

Anne. I would, I knew thy heart.

Glo. 'Tis fear'd in My tongue.

Anne. I fear me, both are false.

Glo. Was never true.

Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo. Say then, my peace is made.

Anne. That shall you know
Hereafter.

Glo. But shall I live in hope?

Anne. All men,
I hope, live so.

Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

Anne. To take, is not to give.

Glo. Look, how this ring encompasseth thy finger,

Even so thy breast enclaseth my poor heart:

Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.

And if thy poor devoted servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,

Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.

Anne. What is it?

Glo. That it may please you leave these sad de-
To him that hath more cause to be a mourner,

And presently repair to Crosby-place:

Where—after I have solemnly interr'd,
At Chertsey monastery, this noble king,

And wet his grave with my repentant tears,—
I will with all expedient duty see you:

For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.

Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me
To see you are become so penitent.

Tressel, and Berkley, go along with me.

Glo. Bid me farewell.

Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve:

But, since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.

[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressel, and Berkley.]

Glo. Take up the corpse, sirs.

Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord!

Glo. No, to White-Friars: there attend my coming.

[Exeunt the rest, with the corpse.]

Was ever woman in this humour won?

I'll have her,—but I will not keep her long.

What! I, that kill'd her husband, and his father,
To take her in her heart's extremest hate;

With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,
The bleeding witness of her hatred by;

With God, her conscience, and these bars against
And I no friends to luck my suit withal,

But the plain devil, and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her,—all the world to nothing
do!

Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I some three months since,

Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewkesbury?

A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,—
Francis, in the prodigality of nature,—

Young, valiant, wise, and no doubt right royal,—
The spacious world cannot again afford:

And will she yet abuse her eyes on me,
That clogg'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
And made her widow to a woful bed?

On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?

On me, that halt, and am mis-shapen thus?

My dukedom to a beggary dower,

I do mistake my person all this while:

Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,

Whilst I a while obsequiously lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.—
Poor key-old figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!
Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost,
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son,
Stab'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds!

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life,
I pour the helpless talm of my poor eyes:—
O, cursed be the hand that made these holes!
Cursed the heart, that bid the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood, that let this blood from hence!
More direful hap betide that lined wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to add to spiders' toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
If ever he have child, abortive be it,
P. odigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view—
And that be hers to his unhappiness!
If ever he have wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Than I am made by my young lord, and thee!—
Come, now toward Chertsey with your holy load,
Taken from Paul's to be interred there;
And, still as you are weary of the weight,
Rest you, whilst I lament King Henry's corse.
[The bearers take up the corpse, and advance.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Stay you, that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this
To stop devoted charitable deeds? [Paul,
Glo. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint
I'll make a curse of him that disobeys. [Paul,
I bend. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin
Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou when I command:

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurs upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The bearers set down the coffin.
Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Nay, I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil—
Awast, thou dreadful minister of hell!
Thou hadst but pow'r over his mortal body,
His soul thou cannot not have; therefore, be gone.
Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.
Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not;

or thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
And it with cursing cries, and deep exclaims,
thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
hold this pattern of thy butcheries:
gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds on their curst'd mouths, and bleed afresh!
ush, ugh, thou lump of foul deformity;
r his thy presence that exiles this blood an could not empty veins, where no blood y dead, inhuman and unnatural, dwells;
rokes this deluge most unnatural.—
God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death! [death!
earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his er heaven, with lightning strike the murderer dead,
earth, gaze open wide, and eat him quick;
how dost swallow up this good king's blood,
ch his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity.
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man;

No beast so fierce, but knows some touch of pity.
Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!

Glo. More wonderful, when angels are so un-
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman, [sly—
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.

Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me
Some patient leisure to excuse myself. [Anne

Anne. Foulter than heart can think thee, thou must make

No excuse current, but to hang thyself.

Glo. By such despair, I should accuse myself.

Anne. And, by despairing, shalt thou stand ex-
For doing worthy vengeance on thyself, [Anne
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Glo. Say, that I slew them not?

Anne. Why then, they are not dead:

But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.

Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne.

Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand. [Margaret weeps

Anne. In thy son's throat thou liest; quene
Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against his
breast,

But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
That laid thy guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
That never dreamt on ought but butcheries:
Didst thou not kill this king?

Glo.

Anne. Dost grant me, hedge-hog? then, God
grant me too,
Thou may'st be damned for that wicked deed!

O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous. [Anne

Glo. The fitter for the King of heaven that lieth Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come. [thither;

Glo. Let him thank me, that help to send him
For he was fitter for that place, than earth.

Anne. And thou unfit for any place, but hell.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me

Anne. Some dangerous. [Anne it

Glo. Your bed-chamber.

Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!

Glo. So will it madam, till I lie with you.

Anne. I hope so

Glo. I know so.—But, gentle lady Anne,—

To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method;—
Is not the cause of the timeless deaths

Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blameful as the executioner? [Effect,

Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accur'd

Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;

Your beauty, which did haunt me in my sleep,

To undertake the death of all the world,

So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,

These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks. [wreck,

Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's
You should not blush it, if I stood by:

Enter Clarence guarded, and Brakenbury.

Brother, good day: What means this armed guard,
That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is—George.
Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of yours;
He should, for that, commit your godfathers:—

O, belike, his majesty hath some intent,
That you shall be new christen'd in the Tower.

But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?
Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for, I protest,
As yet I do not: But, as I can learn,

He hearsken after prophecies and dreams,
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,

And says—a wizard told him, that by G
His issue disinherited should be;

And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought, that I am he:

'These, as I learn, and such-like toys as these,
Have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women!

'Tis not the king that sends you to the Tower;
My lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she,
That tempers him to this extremity.

Was it not she, and that good man of worship,
Antony Woodville, her brother there,

That made him send lord Hastings to the Tower:
From whence this present day he is deliver'd?

We are not safe, Clarence, we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think, there is no man so secure.

But the queen's kindred, and night-walking he-
That trudge between the king and mistress Shore.
Heard you not, what an humble suppliant
Lord Hastings was to her for his deliver'y?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity
Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.

I'll tell you what,—I think, it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the king,

To be her men, and wear her livery:
The jealous over-worn widow, and herself,

Since that our brother dubb'd them gentlewomen,
Are mighty conspis in this monarchy.

Brak. I beseech your graces both to pardon me;
His majesty hath straitly given in charge,

That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with his brother.

Glo. Even so I an please your worship, Brakenbury, you may partake of any thing we say:

We speak no treason, man;—We say, the king is wise, and virtuous; and his noble queen

Well struck in years—fair, and not jealous:—
We say, that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,

A cherry lip,
A bonny eye, a pleasing pleasing tongue,—

And the queen's kindred are made gentlefolks:
How say you, sir? I can you deny all this?

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have naught to do.

Glo. Naught to do with mistress Shore? I tell
He that doth naught with her, excepting one,

Were best to do it secretly, alone.

Brak. What one, my lord?

Glo. Her husband, knave.—Wouldst thou be-Brak. I beseech your grace to pardon me; and,

withal,
Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

Glo. We are the queen's subjects, and must obey.

Brother, farewell: I will unto the king.
And whoso'er you will employ me in,—

Were it to call king Edward's widow—sister,—
I will perform it, to enfranchise you.

Mean time, this deep disgrace in brotherhood,
Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clar. I know, it pleases neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not let
I will deliver you, or else lie for you: (long;

Mean time, have patience
Clar. I must perforce; farewell.

(Exeunt Clarence, Brakenbury, and Guard.)
Glo. Go, tread the path that thou shalt never return.

Simple, plain Clarence!—I do love thee so,
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven.

If heaven will take the present at our hands,
But who comes here? the new-deliver'd? Hastings!

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord!
Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberlain!

Well are you welcome to this open air.
How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must:

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks
That were the cause of my imprisonment: (too;

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence
For they, that were your enemies, are his.

And have prevail'd as much on him, as you.

Hast. More pity, that the eagle should be mew'd,
While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad, as this at
The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy.

And his physicians fear him mightily. (dead.
Glo. Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad in-
O; he hath kept an evil diet long.

And over-much consumed his royal person;
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.

What, is he in his bed?

Hast. He is.
Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

(Exit Hastings.)
He cannot live, I hope; and must not do, I fear.

Till George be pick'd up with posthorns up to his —I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,

With his well's soild with weighty arguments;
And, if I fail not in my deep intent,

Clarence hath not another day to live:
Which done, God take king Edward in his mercy,

And leave the world for me to hustle in!
For then I'll marry Warwick's eldest daughter:

What, though I kill'd her husband, and her father?
The readiest way to make the wench unweild,

Is—to become her husband and her father:
'The which will I; not all so much for love,

As for another secret close intent.
By marrying her which I must reach unto:

But yet I run before my horse to market:
Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives, and reigns;

When they are gone, then must I come my gain.

(Exit)

SCENE II.—The same. Another Street.

Enter the corpse of King Henry the Sixth, borne in an open coffin, Gentlemen bearing halberds, to guard it; and Lady Anne, as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,—

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse —

To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master;
And cried—all hail! when as he meant } Aside.
—all harm.
K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace, and brother's loves.
Clare. What will your grace have done with Margaret?
Requies, her father, to the king of France

Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom:
K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to
France.
And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comick shows,
Such as befit the pleasures of the court!—
Sound, drums and trumpets!—farewell, our annoy!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy. [Exeunt.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds, that low'd upon our house,
In the deep bosom of the ocean bury'd.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarms chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front:
And now—instead of mounting barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,—
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I,—that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's message,
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionably,
That the dogs bark at me, as I halt by them;
Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun,
And desert on mine own deformity;
And therefore,—since I cannot prove a lover
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,—
I am determined to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence, and the king,
In deadly hate the one against the other;
And, if King Edward be as true and just,
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,
About a prophecy, which says,—that G.
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul! here Clarence comes.

SCENE.—England.

SCENE VI.—London. A Room in the Tower.

King Henry is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Good day, my lord! What, at your book as hard as I?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord: My lord, I should 'tis sin to fatter, good was little better: Good Gloucester, and good devil, were alike, And both preposterous: therefore, not good lord. Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.]

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf;

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece, And next his throat, unto the butcher's knife— What scene of death hath R. edius now to act?

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind; The thief doth fear each bush an officer. [Bush.]

K. Hen. The bird, that hath been limed in a With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush: And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird, Have now the fatal object in my eye, [kill'd.]

Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,

That taught his son the office of a fowl! And yet, for all his wings, the fowl was drown'd.

K. Hen. I, Daulus; my poor boy, Icarus; Thy father, Minos, that denied our course:

The sun, that scard'd the wings of my sweet boy, Thy brother Edward: and thyself, the sea.

Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life. Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words!

My breast can better brook thy dagger's point, Than can my ears that tragick history.—

But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my life?

Glo. Think'st thou, I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art; If murdering innocents be executing,

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.

And thus I prophecy,—that many a thousand, Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear;

And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's, And many an orphan's water-standing eye,—

Men for their sons, wives for their husbands' fate, And orphans for their parents' timeless death,—

Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign;

The night-crow cried, boding luckless time;

Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempests shook down trees;

The raven rock'd her on the chimney's top, And chattering pies in dismal discords sung.

Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain, And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope:

'Tis wit,—an indigest deformed lump, Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.

'Tis thine that thou in thy head, when thou wast born, To signify thou cam'st to bite the world:

And, if the rest be true which I have heard, Thou cam'st—

Glo. I'll hear no more;—Die, prophet, in thy speech! [Stabs him.]

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O God! forgive my sins, and pardon thee! [Dies.]

Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted. [death!]

See, how my sword weeps for the poor king's

O, may such purple tears be always shed From those that wish the downfall of our house!— If any spark of life be yet remaining, Down, down to hell; and say— I sent thee thither.

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear— [Stabs him again.]

Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of: For I have often heard my mother say:

I came into the world with my legs forward: Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,

And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right? The midwife wonder'd: and the women cried,

O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!

And so I was; which plainly signified— That I should snar, and bite, and play the dog.

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so, Let hell make croak'd my mind to answer it.

I have no brother. I am like no brother: [vine, And this word—love, which greyhounds call de-

Be resident in men like one another, And not in me; I am myself alone.

Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light! But I will sort a pitchy day for thee:

For I will huzz abroad such prophecies, That Edward shall be fearful of his life;

And, then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.

King Henry, and the prince his son, are gone:

Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest:

Counting myself but bad, till I be best.—

I'll throw thy body in another room,

And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

King Edward is discovered sitting on his throne, Queen Elizabeth with the infant Prince, Clarence, Gloucester, Hastings, and others, near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,

Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.

What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn, Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride!

Three dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd For hardy and undoubted champions:

Two Cliffords, as the father and the son, And two Northumberland: two braver men

Ne'er spur'd their couriers at the trumpet's sound. [Montague, Warwick, and]

With them, the two brave heirs, Warwick and That in their chains fetter'd the kindly lion,

And made the forest tremble when they roar'd. Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,

And made our footstool of security— Come hither, Beauchamp, and let me kiss my boy:—

Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles, and myself, Have in our armour watch'd the winter's night;

Went all a-foot in summer's scalding heat, That thou might'st represent the crown in peace;

And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.

Glo. I'll bless his harvest, if your head were For yet I am not look'd on in the world. [loud;]

'Tis thine that thou in thy head, when thou wast born, To signify thou cam'st to bite the world:

And, if the rest be true which I have heard, Thou cam'st—

K. Edw. Clarence, and Gloucester, love my lovely queen,

And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.

Clar. The duty that I owe unto your majesty, I seal upon the life of the sweet babe.

Glo. Thanks, noble Clarence, worthy brother, thanks.

Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,

Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit:—

Sam. But he's deceiv'd; we are in readiness
Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness. [budge]

Oxf. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not

March. Enter, at a distance, King Edward, Clarence, Gloucester, and Forces.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood, [strength]

Which, by the heavens' assistance, and your

Must by the rods be hewn up yet ere night.

I need not add more fuel to your fire.

For, well I wot, ye blaze to burn them out:

Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen! what I should say,

My tears gummy; for every word I speak,

Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes. [reign]

Therefore, no more but this:—Henry, your sovereign

Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,

His realm a slaughterhouse, his subjects slain,

His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;

And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.

You fight in justice; then, in God's name, lords,

Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both armies.]

SCENE V. — Another Part of the same.

Alarums: Excursions: and afterwards a retreat. Then, enter King Edward, Clarence, Gloucester, and Forces: with Queen Margaret, Oxford, and Somerset, prisoners.

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hammes' castle straight:

For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Gl. Hear them hence; I will not hear them speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words. [tune]

Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my foe.

[Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded.]

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem. [world]

K. Edw. Is proclamation made,—that, who

Slays Edward,

Shall have a high reward, and he his life!

Gl. It is: and lo, where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with Prince Edward.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,

For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,

And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Supposes, that I am now my father's mouth;

Assign thy chair, and, where I stand, kneel thou,

Whilst I pronounce the self-same words to thee,

Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd!

[Cries.]

G. Gl. I had you might still have worn the petticoat

And ne'er have stain'd the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Asop fable in a winter's night;

The cursh riddles sort not with this place.

Gl. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word. [mean]

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to

Gl. For God's sake, take away this captive scold. [back rather]

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-

K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will chain your tongue.

Clar. Unto what end, thou art too malapert

Prince. I know my duty, you are all undervalued:

Lancastrian Edward,—and thou perjur'd George,—

And thou misshapen Dick,—I tell ye all,

I am your better, traitors as ye are:—

And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, thou likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him.]

Gl. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony. [Gl. stabs him.]

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury. [Cla. stabs him.]

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!

Gl. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.]

K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, for we have done too much. [words]

Gl. Why should she live, to fill the world with

K. Edw. What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery. [ther]

Gl. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother

I'll hence to London on a serious matter:

Ere ye come thence, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What! what?

Gl. The Tower! the Tower! [Exit.]

Q. Mar. O, Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak I—O traitors! murderers!

They that stabb'd Caesar shed no blood at all,

Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,

If this foul deed were by, to equal it

He was a man: this, in respect, a child;

And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.

What's worse than murder, that I may name it?

No, no; my heart will burst, an if I speak:—

And I will speak, that so my heart may burst.—

Butchers and villains, bloody cannibals!

How sweet a plant have you untimely clogg'd!

You have no children, butchers! if you had,

The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse:

But, if you ever chance to have a child,

Look in his youth to have him so cut off,

As deathmen! you have rid this sweet young prince! [performance]

K. Edw. Away with her; go, bear her hence

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, despatch

me here;

Here sheath thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death:

What! wilt thou not?—then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease. [thou do it]

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear, I would not do it? [self:]

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou wast to forswear thy-

Wast an before, but now 'tis charity. [other]

What! wilt thou not? where is that devil's but?

Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not here: Murder is thy shame-deed;

Petitioners for blood thou'st put'st to bed.

K. Edw. Away, I say; I charge ye, bear her

hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you, and yours, as to this prince! [Exit, led out forcibly.]

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post: and, as I guess,

To make a bloody supper in the Tower. [Heard.]

K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his

Now march we hence; discharge the common sort

With pay and thanks, and let's away to London,

And see our gentle queen how well she fares:

By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exeunt.]

These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's
black veil,

Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun,
To search the secret treasons of the world:
The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,
Were likeli'd oft to kindly repulchres;
For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave?
And who durst smile, when Warwick bent his brow?

Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood!
My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,
Even now forsake me; and of all my lands,
Is nothing left me, but my body's length! [dost]
Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and
And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerset.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick! wert thou as
We might recover all our loss again! [we are,
The queen from France hath brought a puissant power; [by]

Even now we heard the news: Ah, could'st thou
Woe. Why, then I would not fly. — Ah, Monttaque,

If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul a while!
Thou lovest me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood,
That glews my lips, and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead. [last]

Som. Ah, Warwick, Montague hath breath'd his
And to the latest gasp, cried out for Warwick.
And said—Commend me to my valiant brother.
And more he would have said; and more he spoke,
Which sounded like a cannon in a vault,
That might not be distinguish'd; but, at last,
I well might hear deliver'd with a groan,—
O, farewell, Warwick!

War. Sweet rest to his soul! —
Fly, lords, and save yourselves: for Warwick bids
You all farewell, to meet again in heaven. [Dies.
Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power!

[Exeunt, bearing off Warwick's body.

SCENE III. — Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, in triumph; with Clarence, Glouster, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward
course,

And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,
I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his careless western bed:
I mean, my lords,—these powers, that the queen
Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our coast,
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,
And blow it to the sources from whence it came:
Thy very beams will dry those vapours up;
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Ole. The queen is valued thirty thousand strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:
If she have time to breathe, he well assur'd
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends,
That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury;
We having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingness ride way:
And, as we march, our strength will be augmented
In every county as we go along.—
Strike up the drum; cry—Courage! and away.

[Exeunt

SCENE IV. — Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, Somerset, Oxford, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wait their loss,

But cheerily seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown over-board,
The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood,
Yet lives our pilot still: let's meet, that he Should leave the helm, and like a fearful lad

With fearful eyes add water to the sea, [much;
And give more strength to that which hath too
Whiles, in his maw, the ship spits on the rock
Which industry and courage might have sav'd!
Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were this!
Say, Warwick was our anchor: What of that!
And Montague our top-mast: What of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles: What of these!

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset another goodly mast?
The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?
And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge!

We will not from the helm, to sit and weep;
But keep our course, though the rough wind say

—No, [wreck]
From shelves and rocks that threaten us with
As good to chide the waves, as speak them fair.
And what is Edward, but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence, but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard, but a ragged fatal rock?

All these the enemies to our poor bark.
Say, you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while:
Tread on the sand—why there you quickly sink!

Bestride the rock—the tide will wash you off,
Or else you famish, that's a threefold death.

Thus speak I, lords, to let you understand,
In case some one of you would fly from us,
That there's no hopeful mercy with the brothers. [rocks]

More than with ruthless waves, with sands and
Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
I were childish weakness to lament, or fear.

Prince. Methinks, a woman of this valiant spirit
Should, if a coward heard her speak these words,
Infuse his breast with magnanimity.

And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.
I speak not thus, as doubting any here:

For, did I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away betimes;

Least, in our need, he might infect another,
And make him of like spirit to himself.

If any such be here, as God forbid!

Let him depart, before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage,
And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame.—

O, brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
Died live again in thee: Long may'st thou live,
To bear his name, and renew his glories!

Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope,
Go home to bed, and like the owl by day.

If he arise, he mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset;—sweet Oxford, thanks. [thing else]

Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath no

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand,
Ready to fight; therefore he resolves.

Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy,
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Glo. See, how the surly Warwick mans the wall. [come!]

War. O, unbid spite! is sportful Edward
Where slept our souls, or how are they seduc'd,
That we could hear no news of his repair!

K. Edu. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates?

Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee?—
[all Edward—king, and at his hands beg mercy.]
And he shall pardon these these outrages. [hence.]

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces Consume who set thee up and pluck'd thee down!—
Call Warwick—patron, and be penitent,
And thou shalt still remain the duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said—
the king:

Or did he make the jest against his will?

War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?

Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give;

'Til do thee service for so good a gift. [brother.]

War. 'Twas I, that gave the kingdom to thy

K. Edu. Why, then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:

And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again;

And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edu. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner:

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this.—

What is the body when the head is off?

Glo. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast,

But, whilst he thought to steal the single ten,

The king was sily finger'd from the deck!

You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace,

And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edu. 'Tis even so; yet you are Warwick still.

[kneel down:]

Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time, kneel down,

Nay, when I strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,

And with the other fling it at thy face,

Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.

K. Edu. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend;

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,

Shall, whilst the head is warm and new cut off,

Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood.—

Wind changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with drum and colours.

War. O cheerful colours! see, where Oxford

Glo. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster! [comes!]

[Oxford and his Forces enter the City.]

K. Edu. The gates are open, let us enter too.

Glo. So other foes may set upon our backs.

Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt,

Will issue out again, and bid us battle:

If not, the city, being but of small defence,

We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.

War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help!

Enter Montague, with drum and colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the City.]

Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason.

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edu. The harder match'd, the greater victory:

My mind premegeth happy gain, and conquest.

Enter Somerset, with drum and colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the City.]

Glo. Two of thy nam's, both dukes of Somerset,
Have sold their lives unto the house of York;
And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with drum and colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along.

Of force enough to bid his brother battle:
With whom an upright zeal to right prevails,
More than the nature of a brother's love:—

Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick calls. [means?]

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this

[Taking the red rose out of his cap.]

Look here, I throw my infancy at thee:

I will not ruinate my father's house.—

Who gave his blood to hute the stones together.—

And set up Lancaster. Why, traw'st thou, Warwick?

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,

To bend the fatal instruments of war

Against his brother and his lawful king?

Perhaps, thou wilt object my holy oath:

To keep that oath, were more impiety

Than Jephthah's, when he sacrific'd his daughter.

I am so sorry for my trespass made,

'Tint, to deserve well at my brother's hands,

I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe,

With resolution, whereso'er I meet thee,

[As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad,]

To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.

And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee.

And to my brother turn my hiu-hine cheeks.—

Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends:

And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,

For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edu. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust!

K. Edu. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War. Alas, I am not coupd' here for defence:

I will away towards Barnes presently.

And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edu. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way:—

Lords, to the field; Saint George, and victory.

[March. Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — A Field of Battle near Barnes.

Alarums, and Excessions. Enter King Edward, bringing in Warwick wounded.

K. Edu. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear;

For Warwick was a bug, that fear'd us all.—

Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee.

That Warwick's bones may keep thine company.

[Exit.]

War. Ah, who is nigh! come to me friend or foe,

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick?

Why ask I that? my mangled body shows,

My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart

That I must yield my body to the earth. [shows,]

And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.

Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,

Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,

Under whose shade the ramping lion slept,

Whose top-branch overpeerd Jove's spreading tree,

And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.

Mont. Ay, now, my sovereign speaketh like himself;

And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hast. Sound, trumpet; Edward shall be here proclaim'd:—

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation.

[Gives him a paper. Flourish.]
Sold. [Reads.] Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, king of England and France, and lord of Ireland, &c.

And whoso'er gainsays king Edward's By this I challenge him to single fight. [right.]

[Thrusts down his pennant.]

All. Long live Edward the Fourth!

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery;—and thanks unto you all.

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York:

And, when the morning sun shall raise his ear

Above the border of this horizon,

We'll forward towards Warwick, and his mates;

For, well I wot, that Henry is no soldier.—

Ah, forward Clarence!—how evil it beseems thee,

To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother!

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers: doubt not of the day;

And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Warwick, Clarence, Montague, Exeter, and Oxford.

War. What counsel, lords! Edward from Belgium, With hasty Germans, and blunt Hollanders, Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas, And with his troops doth inwardly aim to London; And many gaily people flock to him.

Oxf. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out;

Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted

friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war;

Those will I muster up:—and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir, in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent.

The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:—

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,

Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find

Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st:—

And thou, brother Oxford, wondrous well belov'd,

In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.—

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,—

Lake to his island girt in with the ocean,

Or modest Diun carried with her nymphs,—

Shall rest in London, till we come to him.

Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply.—

Farewell, my sovereign. [True hope.]

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's

Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness' hand. [kiss.]

K. Hen. Well-mind'd Clarence, be thou fortunate.

Mont. Comfort, my lord:—and so I take my leave.

Oxf. And thus [kissing Henry's hand] I seal my truth, and bid adieu. [tague.]

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Mont—

And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords; let's meet at Coventry.

[Exeunt War. Clar. Oxf. and Mont.]

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest awhile.

Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?

methinks, the power that Edward hath in field, Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt is, that he will reduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear, my mood hath got me false.

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,

Nor posted off their suits with slow delays;

My pity hath been blind to heal their wounds,

My mildness hath ally'd their swelling grudge,

My merry dry'd their water-flowing tears:

I have not been desirous of their wealth,

Nor much oppress'd them with great sub'dies,

Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd;

Then why should they love Edward more than

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace: [sneal]

And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,

The lamb will never cease to follow him.

[Shouldst thou him: A Lancaster! A Lancaster!]

Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these!

Enter King Edward, Gloster, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry, bear

him hence,

And once again proclaim us king of England.—

You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow! [dry.]

Now stopps thy spring; my sea shall suck them

And swell so much the higher by their ebb.—

Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak.

[Exeunt some with King Henry.]

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains:

The sun shines hot, and, if we use delay,

Cold biting winter mars our hope'd-for hay.

Glo. A way betimes, before his forces join.

And take the great-grown traitor unawares:

Brave warriors, march again towards Coventry. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Coventry.

Enter, upon the walls, Warwick, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and others.

War. Where is the post, that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?

Where is the post that came from Montague?

2 Mess. By this at Duntrey, with a puissant troup.

Enter Sir John Somerville.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving aunt

And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now?

Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,

And do expect him here some two hours hence.

[Drum beats.]

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.

Som. It is not he, my lord; here Southam lies;

The drum your honour hears cometh from Warwick.

[friends.]

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd for

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

Drums. Enter King Edward, Gloster, and

Forces, marching.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound

a parle.

That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward,
Be sent far, to return from France with speed:
For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

K. Hen. My lord of Somerset, what youth is
Of whom you seem to have a tender care?
Som. My liege, it is young Henry, earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope: If secret powers
Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss.
His looks are full of peaceful majesty;
His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown,
His hand to wield a sceptre; and himself
Likely, in time, to bless a regal throne.
Make much of him, my lords; for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Messenger.

War. What news, my friend? [Enter]

Mess. That Edward is escaped from your brother
And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

War. Unsavoury news: But how made he escape?

Mess. He was convey'd by Richard duke of Gloucester
And the lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush on the forest side,
And from the bishop's huntsman rescued him;
For hunting was his daily exercise.

War. My brother was too careless of his charge.
But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
A salve for any sore that may betide.

[Exit King Henry, War. Clar. Lieut.
and Attendants.]

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's:

For, doubtless, Burgundy will yield him help;
And we shall have more wars, before't be long.
As Henry's late presaging prophecy [murmur]
Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richard;
So doth my heart grieve me, in these conflicts
What may befall him, to his harm and ours:
Therefore, lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,
Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxf. Ay; for if Edward repulses the crown,
'Tis like, that Richmond with the rest shall down.

Som. It shall be so: he shall to Brittany.
Come, therefore, let's about it speedily. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Before York.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Hastings, and Forces.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, lord Hastings, and the rest:

Yet thus far fortune maketh us amends,
And says—that once more I shall interchange
My wasted state for Henry's regal crown.
We'll have we pass'd, and now repuls'd the seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy:
What then remains, we hang thus arriv'd
From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of York,
But that we enter, as into our dukedom?

Glo. I've gates made fast!—Brother, I like not this:

For many men, that stumble at the threshold,
Are well suretold—that danger lurks within.

K. Edw. 'Tush, man! abolements must not now
affright us:

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more, to summon them.

Enter, on the walls, the Mayor of York, and his brethren

May. My lords, we were forewarn'd of your coming.

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

[King, K. Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be your Yet Edward, at the least, is duke of York.]

May. True, my good lord; I know you for no
K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom;

As being well content with that alone. [Noise,
Glo. But, when the fox hath once got in his
He'll soon find means to make the body follow.]

[Andr. Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?]

Open the gates; we are king Henry's friends.

May. Ay, say you so! the gates shall then be open'd. [Exeunt from above.]

Glo. A wise stout captain, and persuaded soon!

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well,
So 'twere not 'lug of him; but, being enter'd,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade
Both him, and all his brothers, unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor, and two Aldermen, below.

K. Edw. So, master mayor: these gates must not be shut,
But in the night, or in the time of war.

What I fear not, man, but yield me up the keys;
[Takes his keys.]

For Edward will defend the town, and thee,
And all these friends that design to follow me.

Drum. Enter Montgomery, and forces, marching.

Glo. Brother, this is sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd.

K. Edw. Welcome, sir John! But why come you in arms?

[Storm, Mont. To help king Edward in his time of
As every loyal subject ought to do.]

[Now forget K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery: But we
Our title to the crown; and only claim
Our dukedom—till God please to send the rest.]

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again;
I came to serve a king, and not a duke.—
Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.

[A march begins. K. Edw. Nay, stay, sir John, awhile; and we'll debate.]

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.
Mont. What talk you of debating? in few words,
If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,
I'll leave you to your fortune; and be gone.

To keep them back that come to succour you:
Why should we fight, if you pretend no title?

Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim:

Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning.

Hast. Away with scrupulous wit! now arms must rule.

Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand;
The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

K. Edw. Then be it as you will: for 'tis my right,
And Henry but usurps the dukedom.

Ro. Then is my sovereign slain? [sinner;
Q. Edw. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken pri-
 Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard,
 Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares;
 And, as I further have to understand,
 Is now committed to the custody of York,
 Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Ro. These news, I must confess, are full of grief:
 Yet, gracious madam, hear it as you may;
 Warwick may live, that now hath won the day.

Q. Edw. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's
 And I the rather wean me from despair, [decay.
 For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:
 This is it that makes me bridle passion
 And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;
 Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
 And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
 Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
 King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown. [come]

Ro. But, madam, where is Warwick then?
Q. Edw. I am inform'd, that he comes towards London.

To set the crown once more on Henry's head:
 Guess thou the rest; king Edward's friends must Bet, to prevent the tyrant's violence, [down.
 (For trust not him that hath once broken faith.)
 'I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
 'To save at least the heir of Edward's right;
 There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.
 Come therefore, let us fly while we may fly;
 If Warwick take us, we are sure to die. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. — A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter Gloucester, Hastings, Sir William Stanley, and others.

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and sir William Stanley,

Leave off to wonder, why I drew you hither,
 Into this chiefest thicket of the park. [brother,
 Thus stands the case: You know, our king, my
 Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
 He hath good usage and great liberty;
 And often, but attended with weak guard,
 Comes hunting thus way to divert himself.
 I have advertised him by secret means, [talk
 That if, about this hour, he make this way,
 Under the colour of his usual game, [men,
 He shall here find his friends, with horse and
 To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, men; see, where the [huntsman stand.

Now, brother of Gloucester, lord Hastings, and the rest,

Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?
Glo. Brother, the time and cause requireth haste;
 Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hunt. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders. [my meaning.

Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was
K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forward-

Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?

Hunt. Better do so, than tarry and be hang'd.

Glo. Come then, away; let's have no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick's frown:
 And pray that I may recompense the crown. [Exeunt

SCENE VI. — A Room in the Tower.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Warwick, Somers-set, young Richmond, Oxford, Montague, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and
 friends

Have shaken Edward from the royal seat;
 And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
 My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys;
 At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But, if an humble prayer may prevail,
 I then crave pardon of your majesty. [me]

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,
 For that it made imprisonment a pleasure:

Ay, such a pleasure as inward larks
 Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts,

At last, by notes of household harmony,
 They quite forget their loss of liberty —

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
 And chiefly therefore, I thank God, and thee;

He was the author, thou the instrument
 Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite,

By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me;
 And that the people of this blessed land

May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars;
 Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,

I here resign my government to thee.
 For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds. [thee]

War. Your grace hath still been fam'd for vir-
 And now may seem as wise as virtuous,

By spying, and avoiding, fortune's malice;
 For few men rightly temper with the stars:

Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace,
 For choosing me, when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the
 To whom the heavens, in thy nativity, [away,

Adjac'd an olive branch, and laurel crown,
 As likely to be best in peace and war;

And therefore I yield thee my free consent.
War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick, and Clarence, give me both your hands; [hearts

Now join your hands, and, with your hands, your
 That no dissension hinder government:

I make you both protectors of this land;
 While I myself will lead a private life,

And in devotion spend my latter days,
 To an's rebuke, and my Creator's praise. [will]

War. What answers Clarence to his brother's?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield con-
 For on thy fortune I repose myself. [sent;

War. Why then, though loath, yet must I be content:

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
 To Henry's body, and supply his place;

I mean, in bearing weight of government,
 While he enjoys the honour, and his ease.

And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful,
 Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,

And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that succession be determin'd. [part.

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat, (for I command no more,

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.
K. Edw. Why no; then am I sure of victory.
 Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
 Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter Warwick and Oxford, with French and other Forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well;
 The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter Clarence and Somerset.

But, see, where Somerset and Clarence come;—
 Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends?
Clar. Fear not that, my lord. [Warwick:]
War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto
 And welcome, Somerset:—I hold it cowardice
 To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
 Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;
 Else might I think, that Clarence, Edward's brother,

Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:
 But welcome, Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.

And now what resta, but in night's coverture,
 Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
 His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
 And but attended by a simple guard,
 We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?
 Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:
 That as Ulysses, and stout Diomedes,
 With slight and unthought stole to Ithaca's tents,
 And brought from thence the Thracian fatal
 steeds;

So we, well cover'd by the night's black mantle,
 At unawares may beat down Edward's guard,
 And seize himself: I say not—slay him,
 For I intend but only to surprise him.—
 You that will follow me to this attempt,
 Applaud the name of Henry, with your leader.

[They all cry Henry!]

Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort:
 For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. — Edward's Camp near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen, to guard the King's tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand;

The king, by this, is set him down to sleep.

2 Watch. What, will he not be bed?

[vow]

1 Watch. Why, no; for he hath made a solemn fever to lie and take his natural rest, till Warwick, or himself, be quite suppress'd.

2 Watch. 'Tis now then, belike, shall be the Warwick be so near as men report. [day.]

 3 Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that, hat with the king here resteth in his tent?

1 Watch. 'Tis the lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend. [king.]

3 Watch. O, is it so? But why commands the nat his chiefest followers lodge in towns about him, while he himself keepeth in the cold field?

2 Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous. [noise:]

3 Watch. Ay; but give me worship, and quiet-like it better than a dangerous honour.
 Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
 was to be doubted, he would waken him.

Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

2 Watch. Ay; wherefore else guard we his royal
 But to defend his person from night-foes? [leat]

Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and Forces.

War. This is his tent; and see, where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters: honour now, or never!
 But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1 Watch. Who goes there?

2 Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[Warwick and the rest cry all—Warwick! Warwick! and set upon the Guard: who cry, cry—Arm! Arm! Warwick, and the rest, following them.]

The drum beating, and trumpets sounding, re-enter Warwick, and the rest, bringing the King out in a poem, sitting in a chair: Gloucester and Hastings fly.

Som. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard and Hastings: let them so, here's the duke. [parted last]

K. Edw. The duke! why, Warwick, when we Thous call'dst me king!

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd:
 When you disgrac'd me in my embassage,

Then I degraded you from being king,
 And come now to create you duke of York.

Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,
 That know not how to use unthankfuls;

Nor how to be contented with one wife;
 Nor how to use your brothers brotherly;

Nor how to study for the people's welfare;
 Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies!

K. Edw. You, brother of Clarence, art thou here too?

Nay, then I see, that Edward needs must down—
 Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

Of thee thyself, and all thy complices,
 Edward will always bear himself as king:

'Tis fortune's malice overthrow my state,
 My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king: [Takes off his crown.]

But Henry now shall wear the English crown,
 And be true king indeed; thou but the shadow.—

My lord of Somerset, at my request,
 See that forthwith duke Edward be convey'd

Unto my brother, archbishop of York. [thens]
 When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellow, I'll follow you, and tell what answer

Lewis, and the lady Bonn, send to him:—
 Now, for a while, farewell, good duke of York.

K. Edw. What fate impose, that men must needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.
[Exit King Edward, led out; Somerset and his men.]

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to do,
 But march to London with our soldiers? [do:]

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to
 To free king Henry from imprisonment,
 And see him seated in the regal throne. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. — London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth and Rivers.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this stables change?

Q. Elizabeth. Why, brother Rivers, are you not to What late misfortune is befall'n king Edward?

Riv. What, loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick? [noise.]

Q. Elizabeth. No, but the loss of his own royal per-

K. Edw. Setting your scorn, and your dislike,
aside.

Tell me some reason, why the lady Grey
Should not become my wife, and England's queen!—

And you too, Somerset, and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is my opinion,—that king Lewis Becomes your enemy, for mocking him
About the marriage of the lady Bona. [charge.]

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in
Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be
By such invention as I can devise? [appeals.]

Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance, [wealth]

Would more have strengthen'd this our common-
'Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred warnings.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of itself,
England is safe, if true within itself?

Mont. Yes; but the safer, when 'tis back'd with France. [France:]

Hast. 'Tis better using France, than trusting
Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas,

Which he hath given for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves,
In them, and in ourselves, our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech, lord Hastings well deserves.

To have the heir of the lord Hungerford.
K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will,
and grant;

And, for this once, my will shall stand for law.
Glo. And yet, methinks, your grace hath not done well,

To give the heir and daughter of lord Scales
Unto the brother of your loving bride;

She better would have fitted me, or Clarence;
But in your bride you bury brotherhood. [their]

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the
Of the lord Bonville on your new wife's son,

And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife
That thou art discontent? I will provide thee.

Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgment;

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;

And, in that end, I shortly mind to leave you.
K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be
And not be tied unto his brother's will. [king.]

G. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty
To raise my state to title of a queen,

Do me not regret, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent,

And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine,

So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:

What danger, or what sorrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,

And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,

Unless they seek for hatred at my hands:
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,

And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.
Glo. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more. [Aside.]

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters, or what
From France? [news]

Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few words.

But such as I, without your special pardon,
Dare not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee: therefore, in brief, [them.]

Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess
What answer makes king Lewis unto our letters?

Mess. At my depart, these were his very words;
Go tell false Edward, thy supposed kin,—

That Lewis of France is sending over masters,
To reveal it with him and his new bride.

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike, he thinks me Henry.

But what said lady Bona to my marriage?
Mess. 'Thine were her words, uttered with mild dedain;

Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the widow's garland for his sake. [news:]

K. Edw. I blame her not, she could say little
She had the wrong. But what said Henry's queen?

For I have heard that she was there in place Mess. Tell him, quoth she, my mourning words are done,

And I am ready to put armour on.

K. Edw. Belike, she minds to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Mess. He, more incens'd against your majesty
Than all the rest, charg'd me with these words;

Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'll unswear him, ere 't be long.

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?

Well, I will arm me, being thus forwarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.

But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?
Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship. [daughter:]

That young prince Edward marries Warwick's Clar. Belike, the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast.
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;

That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself.—

You, that love me and Warwick, follow me.
[Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.]

Glo. Not I.

My thoughts aim at a further matter; I
Stay not for love of Edward, but the crown.

[Aside.]

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
And haste is needful in this desperate case.—

Pembroke, and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go lery men, and make prepare for war.

They are already, or quickly will be landed;
Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Enter Pembroke and Stafford.]

But, ere I go, Hastings,—and Montague,—
Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,

Are near to Warwick, by blood, and by alliance:
Tell me, if you love Warwick more than me I

If it be so, then both depart to him;
I rather wish you foes, than hollow friends;

But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly vow,

That I may never have you in suspect.
Mont. So God help Montague, as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings, as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

K. Lew. What! has your king married the lady Grey?

And now, to smother your forerary and his.
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?
Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?
Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before:
This proveth Edward's love, and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest.—in sight of
And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,—

That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;
No more my king, for he dishonours me;

But most himself, if he could see his shame.—
Did I forget, that by the house of York

My father came untimely to his death?
Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?

Did I impale him with the regal crown?
Did I put Henry from his native right;

And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?
Shame on himself, for my desert is honour.

And to repair my honour lost for him,
I here renounce him, and return to Henry;

My noble queen, let former grudges pass,
And henceforth I am thy true servant:

I will revenge his wrong to lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'st king Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend.

That, if king Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few hands of chosen soldiers,

I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
And force the tyrant from his seat by war.

'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him;
And as for Clarence,—as my letters tell me,

He's very likely now to fall from him;
For matching more for wanton lust than honour,

Or than for strength and safety of our country.
Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd?

But by thy help to this distressed queen!
Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor

Henry live,
Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with K. Lew. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd,

You shall have aid. [once.]
Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at K. Lew. Then English messenger, return in post;

And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,—

That Lewis of France is sending over muskers,
To revel it with him and his new bride:

Thou see'st what's past, go fear thy king withal.
Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower, shortly.

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

Q. Mar. Tell him, My mourning weeds are laid
And I am ready to put armour on.

War. Tell him from me, That he hath done
me wrong;

And therefore I'll uncrown him, ere't be long.
There's thy reward; be gone. [Exit Mess.]

K. Lew. But, Warwick, thou,
And Oxford, with five thousand men,

Shall cross the seas and bid false Edward battle:
And, as occasion serves, this noble queen

And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt;—
What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty:—
That if our queen and this young prince agree,
I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy,
To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your kindness:—

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous.
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;

And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves
And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand [it];

[He gives his hand to Warwick.]
K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied,

And thou, lord Bourbois, our high admiral,

Shall wait them over with our royal fleet.
I long, till Edward fall by war's mischance,

For mocking marriage with a dame of France.
[Exeunt all but Warwick.]

War. I came from Edward as embassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe:

Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.

Had he woe else to make a stale, but me?
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.

I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again:

Not that I pity Henry's misery,
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Gloster, Clarence, Somerset, Montague,
and others.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think
Of this new marriage with the lady Grey? [You

Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?]
Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to

France;
How could he stay till Warwick made return?

Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes
the king.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, attended; Lady Grey, as Queen; Pembroke, Stafford, Hastings

and others.
Glo. And his well-chosen bride.

Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,

That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?

Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the earl of Warwick;

Which are so weak of courage, and in judgment,
That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a
cause,

They are but Lewis and Warwick; I am Edward,
Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will. [King.]

Glo. And you shall have your will, because our

Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well. [Two.]
K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you contented

Glo. Not I;
No: God forbid that I should wish them sever'd

Whom God hath join'd together: ay, and 'twere pity

To sunder them that yoke so well together.

War. From worthy Edward, king of Albion,
My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,
I come,—in kindness and unfeigned love,—
First, to do greetings to thy royal person;
And, then, to crave a league of amity:
And, lastly, to confirm that amity
With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
That virtuous lady Bona, thy fair sister,
To England's king in lawful marriage. [done.]

Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is War. And, gracious madam, [to Bona.] in our king's behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue
To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart;
Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,
Hath plac'd thy beauty's image, and thy virtue.

Q. Mar. King Lewis,—and lady Bona, hear me
speak,

Before you answer Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edward's well-meant honesty
But from deceit, bred by necessity: [love.]

For how can tyrants safely govern home,
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?
To prove him tyrant, this reason may suffice,—
That Henry liveth still: but were he dead,
Yet here prince Edward stands, king Henry's son.
Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour:
For though usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!
Prince. And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp:
And thou no more art prince, than she is queen.

Q. Mar. When Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France:
From these our Henry basely descends.

War. Oxford, how says it, in this smooth discourse,

You told not, how Henry the Sixth had lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten?
Methinks, these peers of France should smile at
But for the rest,—You tell a pedigree [that]
Of three-score and two years: a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Q. Mar. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy issue,

Whom thou obey'dst thirty and six years,
And not betray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,
Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
For shame, leave Henry, and call Edward king.

Q. Mar. Call him my king, by whose injuries
My elder brother, the lord Aubrey Vere, [doom]
Was done to death? and more than so, my father,
Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of death?
No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York. [Oxford,
K. Leo. Queen Margaret, prince Edward, and Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside,

While I use further conference with Warwick.

Q. Mar. Heaven grant, that Warwick's words bewitch him not!

[Retiring with the Prince and Oxford.]

K. Leo. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath,
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.
War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour.

K. Leo. But is he gracious in the people's eye?
War. The more, that Henry was unfortunate.

K. Leo. Then farther,—all dissembling set
Tell me for truth the measure of his love [aside],
Under our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems,
As may beseech a monarch like himself.

Myself have often heard him say, and swear,—
That this his love was an eternal plant,
Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's
Exempt from envy, but not from disdain [see];
Unless the lady Bona quit his pain.

K. Leo. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve. [noise:]

Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall he
Yet I confess, [to War.] that often ere this day,
When I have heard your king's desert rewarded
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desert.

K. Leo. Then, Warwick, thus,—Our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn
Touching the jointure that your king must make,
Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd:—
Draw near, queen Margaret, and be a witness,

That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king.

Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device
By this alliance to make void my suit.

Before thy coming, Lewis was Henry's friend.

K. Leo. And still is friend to him and Margaret:
But if your title to the crown be weak,—
As may appear by Edward's good success,—
Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd
From giving aid, which late I promised.

Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand.
That your estate requires, and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his ease;
Where hiving nothing, nothing he can lose:
And as for you yourself, our goodman queen,—
You have a father able to maintain you;
And better 'twere, you troubled him than France.

Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless Warwick, peace;

Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings!
I will not hence, till with my talk and tears,
Both full of truth, I make king Lewis behold
Thy sly conveyance, and thy lord's false love;
For both of you are birds of self-made feather.

[A horn sounded within.]

K. Leo. Warwick, this is some post to us, or there.

Enter a Messenger.

Mass. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you;

Hot from your brother, marquiss Montague.
These from our king unto your majesty.— [not]
And, madam, these for you; from whom, I know
[To Margaret. They all read their letters.]

Q. Mar. I like it well, that our fair queen and masters

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark, how Lewis stamps as he were nettled:

I hope, all's for the best.

K. Leo. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill the heart with unhop'd joys.

War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discon-

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him.
 In question of his apprehension.— [ably.
 Widow, go you thus:— Lords, use her honour—
 [Exeunt King Edward, Lady Grey,
 Clarence, and Lord.]

Ole Ay. Edward will use women honourably.
 'Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
 That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring.
 To cross me from the golden time I look for!
 And yet, between my soul's desire and me,
 [The lustful Edward's title buried.]
 Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
 And all the unlook'd-for issue of their bodies,
 To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
 A cold premeditation for my purpose!
 Why, then I do but dream on sovereignty;
 Like one that stands upon a promontory,
 And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
 Wishing his foot were equal with his eyes;
 And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,
 Saying—he'll lade it dry to have his way:
 So do I wish the crown, being so far off;
 And so I chide the means that keep me from it;
 And so I say—I'll cut the causes off,
 Flattering me with impossibilities.
 My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweenes too much,
 Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
 Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
 What other pleasure can the world afford?
 I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
 And deck my bed in gay ornaments,
 And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
 O miserable thought! and more unlikely,
 Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!
 Why, here I swear me in my mother's womb:
 And for I should not deal in her soft laws,
 He did corrupt frail nature with some bribe
 To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;
 To make an obsequious mountain on my back;
 To here misdeformity to mock my body;
 To shape my legs of an unequal size;
 To disproportion me in every part,
 Like to a chameleon, or an unlick'd bear-whelp,
 That carries no impression like the dam.
 And am I then a man to be belov'd!
 monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!
 Here, since this earth affords no joy to me,
 It to command, to check, to o'erbear such are of better person than myself,
 I make my heaven—to dream upon the crown;
 And, while I live, to account this world but hell,
 Till my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this head,
 Round impaled with a glorious crown,
 I yet I know not how to get the crown,
 Many lives stand between me and home;
 I—like one lost in a thorny wood,
 At vents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns;
 King a way, and straying from the way:
 Knowing how to find the open air,
 Tolling desperately to find it out,
 I ment myself to catch the English crown:
 I from that torment I will free myself,
 I now my way out with a bloody axe.
 I, can smile, and murder while I smile:
 Cry, cue! out, to that which grieves my heart;
 Wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
 Frame my face to all occasions.
 Irown more sultry than the mermaid shall;
 Lay more gazers than the basilisk;
 Lay the orator as well as Nestor,
 Use more policy than Ulysses could,
 Like a Simois, take another Troy:
 Add colours to the carnation,
 Be shapes with Proteus, for advantages,
 Set the marvellous Machiavel to school.

Can I do this, and cannot get a crown!
 'Tut! were it further off, I'll pluck it down. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Lewis the French King, and Lady Bonna, attended; the King takes the state. Then enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, her son, and the Earl of Oxford.

K. Lew. Fair queen of England, worthy Margaret,
 Sit down with us; it ill befits thy state.
 And birth, that thou should'st stand, while Lewis doth sit. [seats.]

Q. Mar. No, mighty king of France; now Margaret must strike her sail, and learn awhile to serve, Where kings command. I was, I must confess, Great Albion's queen in former golden days; But now mischance hath trod my title down, And with dishonour laid me on the ground; Where I must take like sent unto my fortune. And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair!

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears,

And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares. [self.]

K. Lew. What'er it be, be thou still like thyself. And sit thee by our side: yeld not thy neck [Seats her by him.]

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind Still ride in triumph over all mischance.

Be plain, queen Margaret, and tell thy grief; It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak. Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,—

That Henry, sole possessor of my love, Is, of a king, become a banish'd man,

And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn; While proud ambitious Edward, duke of York,

Usurps the regal title, and the seat Of England's true-anointed lawful king.

This is the cause, that I, poor Margaret,— With this my son, prince Edward, Henry's heir,—

Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid; And, if thou fail us, all our hope is dote:

Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help; Our people and our peers are both misled;

Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight, And, as thou see'st, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break it off.

Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stranger grows our foe.

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succumb.

Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow:

And see, where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter Warwick, attended.

K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly in our presence?

Q. Mar. Our earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[Descending from his seat. Queen Margaret rises.]

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise; For this is he, that moves both wind and tide.

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit; And come some other time, to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:

May it please your highness to resolve me now; And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.

Glo. [Aside.] Ay, widow! thou wilt warrant you'll your lands.

As if what pleases him, shall pleasure you.

Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clar. I fear her not, unless she chance to fall. [Aside.]

Glo. God forbid that I for he'll take vengeance. [Aside.]

K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? Tell me.

Clar. I think, he means to beg a child of her. [Aside.]

Olo. Nay, whip me then; he'll rather give her two. [Aside.]

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him. [Aside.]

K. Edw. 'Twere pity, they should lose their father's land. [Then.]

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave; I'll try this widow's wit. [Leave.]

Olo. Ay, good leave have you; for you will have full youth take leave, and leave you to the crutch. [Gloucester and Clarence retire to the other side.]

K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much, to do them good? [Then.]

L. Grey. To do them good, I would sustain some.

K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good.

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.

K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got. [Then.]

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness.

K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them? [Then.]

L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me.

K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon. [Then.]

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do.

K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask. [Then.]

L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your grace.

Glo. He pleases her hard; and much rain wears the marble. [Aside.]

Clar. As red as fire! nay, then her wax must melt. [Aside.]

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?

K. Edw. An easy task; 'tis but to love a king.

L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject. [Then.]

K. Edw. Why, then, thy husband's lands I freely.

L. Grey. I take my leave, with many thousand thanks. [Then.]

Glo. The match is made; she sends it with a.

K. Edw. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love I mean. [Then.]

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving.

K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense.

What love, think'st thou, I see so much to get?

L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers:

That love, which virtue begs, and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.

L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did. [Then.]

K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my.

L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive your highness aims at, if I aim aright. [Then.]

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee. [Then.]

L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in.

K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands. [Then.]

L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my.

For by that loss I will not purchase them.

K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily. [Then.]

L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both.

But, mighty lord, this merry inclination.

Accords not with the sadness of my suit;

Please you dismiss me, either with ay or no.

K. Edw. Ay; if thou wilt say ay, to my request;

No; if thou dost say no, to my demand.

L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glo. The widow likes him not, she kisses her brow. [Then.]

Clar. He is the blindest wooer in Christendom. [Then.]

K. Edw. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;

Her words do show her wit incomparable.

All her perfections challenge sovereignty:

One way, or other, she is for a king;

And she shall be my love, or else my queen.—

Say, that king Edward take thee for his queen?

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my grace.

I am a subject fit to jest withal, [Then.]

But far unfit to be a sovereign. [Then.]

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to

I speak no more than what my soul intends:

And that is, to enjoy thee for my love. [Then.]

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield

I know, I am too mean to be your queen:

And yet too good to be your concubine. [Then.]

K. Edw. You cavi, widow; I did mean, my

L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace, my son should call you—father.

K. Edw. No more, than when my daughters call thee mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children:

And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,

Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing

To be the father unto many sons.

Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shriff. [Then.]

Clar. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shriff. [Then.]

K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks sad.

K. Edw. You'd think it strange, if I should Clar. To whom, my lord? [Then.]

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glo. That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on brothers: I can tell you

both.

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken

And brought your prisoner to your palace gates.

K. Edw. See, that he be convey'd unto the Tower:—

ACT III.

SCENE I. — *A Chase in the North of England.Enter Two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.*1 Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves:For through this laun soon the deer will come;
And in this covert will we make our stand,
Calling the principal of all the deer.2 Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot. (bow)1 Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:
And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'll tell thee what befell me on a day,
In this self-place where now we mean to stand.2 Keep. Here comes a man, let's stay till he be past.Enter King Henry, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love.

To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.
No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;
'Thy place is fill'd, 'thine sceptre wrung from thee,
Thy talms wash'd off, wherewith thou wast anointed:

No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now,

No humble suitors press to speak for right,

No, not a man comes for redress of thee;

For how can I help them, and not myself?

1 Keep. Ay! here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee:This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace these sour adversities:

For woe men say, it is the wisest course.

2 Keep. Why linger we! let us lay hands upon him. (more)1 Keep. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little.

K. Hen. My queen, and son, are gone to France for aid.

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick

Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister

To wife for Edward: if this news be true,

Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost;

For Warwick is a subtle orator,

And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words:

By this account, then, Margaret may win him;

For she's a woman to be pity'd much:

Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;

Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;

The tiger will be mild, while she doth mourn;

And Nero will be tainted with remorse,

To hear, and see, her plants, her brinish tears.

Ay, but she's come to see; Warwick, to give:

She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry;

He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward;

She weeps, and says—her Henry is depos'd;

He smiles, and says—his Edward is install'd;

That she poor wretch, for grief can speak no more: (wrong)

Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the

And with arguments of mighty strength;

And, in conclusion, wins the king from her,

With promise of his sister, and what else,

To strengthen and support king Edward's place.

Margaret, thou wilt be, and thou, poor soul,

Art then forsaken, as thou wert'st forlorn.

2 Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:

A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king. (each)

K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's

2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown? (head)

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my

Not deck'd with diamonds, and Indian stones,

Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd, content;

A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy. (content)

2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with

Your crown content, and you, must be contented

To go along with us: for, as we think,

You are the king, king Edward hath depos'd;

And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,

Will apprehend you as his enemy. (an oath)

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break

2 Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now. (of England)

K. Hen. Where did you dwell, when I was king

2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months

My father, and my grandfather were kings;

And you were sworn true subjects unto me:

And, tell me then, have you not broke your oath?

1 Keep. No;

For we were subjects but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? I do not breathe a man!

Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,

And as the air blows it to me again;

Obeying with my wind when I do blow,

And yielding to another when it blows,

Commanded always by the greater gust;

Such is the lightness of you common men.

But do not break your oaths; for, of that sin

My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.

Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;

And be you kings; command, and I'll obey.

1 Keep. We are true subjects to the king, king

Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,

If he were sent as king Edward is.

1 Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and in the king's

To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd:

And what God will, then let your king perform;

And what he will, I humbly yield unto. (Exeunt)

SCENE II. — London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, Gloucester, Clarence, and Lady Grey.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Albans'

field

This lady's husband, sir John Grey, was slain,

His hands then seiz'd on by the conqueror:

Her suit is now, to recompense those lands;

Which we in justice cannot well deny.

Because in quarrel of the house of York

The worthy gentleman did lose his life. (suit)

Glo. Your highness shall do well, to grant her

It were dishonour, to deny it her. (pious)

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a

Glo. Yes! it is so!

I see, the lady hath a thing to grant,

Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clar. He knows the game; how true he keeps the wind! (Aside, Aside, Silence!)

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post anon:

Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds
Having the fearful flying hare in sight,
With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody steel crampt in their cruel hands,
Are at our backs; and therefore hence anon.

Exe. Away! for vengeance comes along with
them;

Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed;
Or else come after, I'll away before. [Exeter;

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good, sweet
Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
Whither the queen intends. Forward; away!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. — The same.

A loud Alarm. Enter Clifford, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out, my here it dies,
Which, while it lasted, gave king Henry light.

O Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,
More than my body's parting with my soul.

My love, and fear, glaw'd many friends to thee;
And now I fall, thy tough commixtures melt.

Impairing Henry, strength'nine mis-proud York,
The common people swarm like summer flies:

And whither fly the gnats, but to the sun?
And who shines now but Henry's enemies?

O Phoebus! hadst thou never given consent
That Phaeton should check thy fiery steeds.

Thy burning car never had scorch'd the earth:
And Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should

Or as thy father, and his father, did. [do,
Giving no ground unto the house of York,

They never then had sprung like summer flies;
I, and ten thousand in this luckless realm,

Had left no mourning widows for our death,
And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.

For what doltish chensh weeds, but gentle air?
And what knave rubbers bold, but too much lenity!

Booleless are plaints, and careless are my wounds:

No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight;
The foe is merciless, and will not pity;

For, at their hands, I have deserv'd no pity.
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,

And much effuse of blood doth make me faint:—
Come York, and Richard, Warwick, and the rest;

I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.
[He faints.]

Alarm and retreat. Enter Edward, George, Richard, Montague, Warwick, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords; good fortune bids us pause. [looks—

And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful
Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,—

That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
As doth a snail, fill'd with a fretting rust,

Command an argosy to stem the waves
But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape:
For, though before his face I speak the words,

Your brother Richard murk'd him for the grave;
And, wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.

Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave? [parting.

Rich. A deadly groan, like life and death's de-
Edw. See who it is: and now the battle's ended,

If friend, or foe, let him be gently us'd. [ford;

Rich. Revolve that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford, not contented that he lopp'd the branch

In having Rutland when his leaves put forth,
Did set his murdering knife upon the root

From whence that tender spray did sweetly
spring—

I mean, our princely father, duke of York.

War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head.

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there:
Instead whereof, let this supply the room;

Measure for measure must be answered.
Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,

That nothing sung but death to us and ours:

Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,
And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

[Attendants bring the body forward.
War. I think his understanding is bereft:—

Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?—

Dark cloudy death o'er-shades his beams of life,
And he nor sees nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O, would he did! and so, perhaps, he
'tis but his policy to counterfeit. [doth,

Because he would avoid such bitter taunts,
Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager
words.

Rich. Clifford, ask merry, and obtain no grance.
Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.
Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitiest'st Rutland, I will pity thee.
Geo. Where's captain Margaret, to fence you

now?
War. They mock thee, Clifford! swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard.

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath:—

I know by that, he's dead; And, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life,

That I in all despite might rail at him. [blood
This hand should chop it off; and with the searing

Stife the villain, whose unstaunched thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead: Off with the traitor's
head.

And rear it in the place your father stands.—
And now to London with triumphant march,

There to be crowned England's royal king.
From whence shall Warwick cut th' sea to France

And ask the Italy Bona for thy queen:
So shalt thou sinew both these lands together;

And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread

The scatter'd foe, that hopes to rise again;
For though they cannot greatly sing to hurt,

Yet look to have them hit, to offend thee e'en.
First, will I see thy coronation;

And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, but it be:

For on thy shoulder do I build my seat;
And never will I undertake the throne.

Wherewith thy counsel and consent is wanting—
Richard, I will create thee duke of Glouster;

And George, of Clarence;—Warwick, as himself,
Shall do, and undo, as him pleasest best.

Rich. Let me be duke of Clarence; George, of Glouster;

For Glouster's dukedom is too odorous.
War. 'Tis that's a foolish observation;

Richard, be duke of Glouster; now to London,
To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. — Another Part of the Field.Alarm. Enter King Henry.K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war.

When drying clouds contend with growing light;
 What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
 Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.
 Now ways it this way, like a mighty sea.
 For'd by the tide to combat with the wind;
 Now ways it that way, like the self-same sea,
 For'd to retire by fury of the wind;

Sometime, the flood prevails; and then, the wind:
 Now, one the better; then, another best;
 Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
 Yet neither conquer, nor conquered;
 So is the equal poise of this fell war.

Here on the molehill will I sit me down.
 To whom God will, there be the victory!
 For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
 Have chid me from the battle; swearing both,
 They prosper best of all when I am thence.
 'Would I were dead! if God's good will were so:

For what is in this world, but grief and woe?
 O God! methinks it were a happy life,
 To be no better than a homely swain;

To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
 To carve out daisies quaintly, point by point,
 To thereby to see the minutes how they run:
 How many make the hour full complete,
 How many hours bring about the day,
 How many days will finish up the year,
 How many years a mortal man may live.

When this is known, then to divide the times:
 So many hours must I lend my flock;
 So many hours must I take my rest;
 So many hours must I contemplate;
 So many hours must I sport myself;

So many days my eyes have been with young;
 So many weeks are the poor souls will yearn:
 So many years are I shall shear the fleece:
 So minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, and years,
 Pass'd over to the end they were created,
 Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.

Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
 Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
 To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
 Than doth a rich embroidered canopy

To kings, that fear their subjects' treachery?
 O, yes it doth: a thousand fold it doth.

And to conclude,—the shepherd's homely curds,
 His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
 His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,

All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
 Is far beyond a prince's delicacies,
 His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
 His body couched in a curious bed.

When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarm. Enter a Son that has killed his Father, dropping in the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind, that profits nobody—
 This rain, whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
 For he possessed with some store of crows;
 And I, that haply take them from him now,
 Lay yet ere night yield unto my life and them

As some man else, as this dead man doth me.—
 'Tis this!—O God! it is my father's face,
 Dead in this conflict! I unwares have kill'd
 In many times, begetting such events!

And London by the king was I press'd forth;
 My father, being the earl of Warwick's man,
 Was on the part of York, press'd by his master;
 And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,

Have by my hands of life bereaved him.—
 Pardon me, God! I knew not what I did!—
 And pardon, father, for I knew not thee!—
 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks:

And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.
K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
 Whilst lions war, and tattle for their dens,
 Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.—
 Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee, tear for tear;
 And let our hearts, and eyes, like civil war,
 Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter a Father, who has killed his Son, with the body in his arms.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
 Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold:
 For I have bought it with an hundred blows—
 But let me see:—is this our fieman's face?

Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son!—
 Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,
 Throw up thine eye; see, see, what showers arise,
 Blown with the windy tempest of my heart

Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart!—
 O, pity, God, this miserable age!—
 What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
 Erroneous, malicious, and unnatural,

This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!—
 O boy, thy father save thee life too soon,
 And hath bereft thee of thy life too late!

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!

O, that my death would stay these ruthless deeds!—
 O pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity!

The red rose and the white are on his face,
 The fatal colours of our striving houses:
 The one, his purple blood right well resembles;
 The other, his pale cheeks, methinks, presents:

Whether one rose, and let the other flourish!
 If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother, for a father's death,
 Take on with me, and ne'er be satisfied!

Fath. How will my wife, for slaughter of my son,
 Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied?

K. Hen. How will the country, for these woful chances,
 Methinks the king, and not be satisfied?

Son. Was ever son, so rued a father's death?
Fath. Was ever father, so bemoan'd a son?

K. Hen. Was ever king, so griev'd for subjects' woe?

Much in your sorrow; mine, ten times as much.

Son. I'll bear these wounds, where I may weep my fill.
(Exit, with the body.)

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre;
 For from my heart thou image ne'er shall go.

My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
 And so obsequious will thy father be.

Sad for the loss of thee, having no more,
 As France was for all his valiant sons,
 I'll bear these wounds; and let them fight that will,
 For I have murder'd where I should not kill.

(Exit, with the body.)
K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overcome with care,
 Here sits a king more woful than you are.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Queen Margaret, Prince of Wales, and Exeter.

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
 And Warwick rages like a chafed bull:
 Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Queen Margaret.—Mount you, my lord ; towards Berwick post again :
Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds
Having the fearful flying hare in sight,
With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands,
Are at our backs ; and therefore hence again

For, well I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue.

Fit like a foul misshapen stigmatack; (dam)

Whose father bears the title of a king,

Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art ex-traught.

To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Edm. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand

crowns,

To make this shameless callet know herself.—

Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,

Although thy husband may be Menelaus;

And we'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd

By that false woman, as this king by thee.

His father reve'll'd in the heart of France,

And lam'd the king, and made the dauphin stoop;

And had he match'd according to his wife,

He might have kept that glory to this day:

But when he took a beggar to his bed,

And grac'd thy poor are with his bridal day;

Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him;

That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France,

And heap'd sad ion on his crown at home.

For what hath broach'd this tumult, but thy pride?

Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept:

And we, in pity of the gentle king,

Had slipp'd our claim until another age.

Geo. But, when we saw our sunshine made thy spring.

And that thy summer bred us no increase,

We set the axe to thy usurping root:

And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,

Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike,

We'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,

Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods.

Edm. And, in this resolution, I defy thee;

Nor willing any longer conference,

Since thou deyst the gentle king to speak.—

Noisy trumpets!—let our bloody colours wave!

And either victory, or else a grave.

Q. Mar. Stay, Edward. (stay)

I lay me down a little while to breathe:

For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,

Have rob'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength,

And, spite of spite, needs must I rest awhile.

Enter Edward, running.

Edm. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle

War. How now, my lord! what hap! what hope of good!

Enter George.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but and despair;

Our ranks are broke, and run follows us:

What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?

Edm. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings:

And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn

thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,

Brach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance:

And, in the very pangs of death, he cry'd,—

Like to a dismal clangour heard from far,—

Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!

So underneath the belly of their steeds,

That staid their fellows in his smoking blood,

The noble gentleman gave up the ghost. (blood)

Waiting our losses, whiles the foe doth rage;

And look upon, as if the tragedy

Were play'd in just by countervailing actors!

Here on my knee I vow to God above,

I'll never pause again, never stand still,

Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,

Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edm. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with

thee;

And, in this vow, do chain my soul to thine.—

And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face,

I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,

Thou setter up and plucker down of kings!

Beseeching thee,—if with thy will it stands,

That to my foes this body must be prey,—

Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may open,

And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!

Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,

Where'er it be, in heaven, or on earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand;—and, gentle

Warwick,

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms:

I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,

That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords,

farewell.

Geo. Let us go all together to our troops,

And give them leave to fly that will not stay;

And call them pillars, that will stand to us:

And, if we thrive, promise them such rewards

As victory were to the Olympian games:

This may plant courage in their quaking breasts;

For yet is hope of life, and victory,—

Fore-slow no longer, make we hence again.

To see this sight, it irks my very soul.—
Withhold revenge, dear God! His not my fault,
Not willingly have I infring'd my vow.

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity must be laid aside.
To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Whose hand is that, the forest bear doth lick?
Not he, that spoils her young before her face.
Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.

The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on;
And doves will peck, in safeguard of their brood.
Ambitious York did level at thy crown,

Thou smiling, while he knit his angry brows:

He, but a duke, would have his son a king,

And raise his issue, like a loving sire:

Thou, being a king, blest'st with a goodly son,

Didst yield consent to disinherit him,

Which argued thee a most unloving father.

Unreasonable creatures feed their young;

And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,

Yet, in protection of their tender ones,

Who hath not seen them (even with those wings)

Which sometime they have used with fearful flight.)

Were it not pity, that this roodly boy should lose his birthright by his father's fault;

and long hereafter say unto his child,—

What my great-grandfather and grandfathers got,

Is careless father fondly gave away!

The queen hath best success when you are absent.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore

Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?)

Q. Mar. O, rate thy minions, proud insulting

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms, [boy]

Edw. I am his king, and he should bow his knee;

I was adopted heir by his consent:

Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,

You—that are king, though he do wear the crown,—

Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,

To blot out me, and put his own son in.

Clif. And reason too;

Who should succeed the father but the son?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick, dare you speak!

When you and I met at Saint Alban's last,

Your legs did better service than your hands.

ing here,

Rich. Then, executioner, unsheath thy sword:

By him that made us all, I am resolv'd,

That Clifford's manhood live upon his tongue.

Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right or no?

A thousand men have brake their fasts to-day,

That ne'er shall dine, unless thou yield the crown.

War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head;

For York in justice puts his armour on.

To weep, is to make less the depth of grief:
Tears, then, for babes; blows, and revenge for me!

Richard, I bear thy name, I'll 'venge thy death,
Or die renowned by attempting it. [thoe:]

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with His dukedom! and his chair with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,
Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun:
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say;
Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwick and Montague, with Forces.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare? what news abroad? [count]

Rich. Great lord of Warwick, if we should re-
Our taleful news, and, at each word's deliverance,
Stab poniards in our flesh, till all were told,
The worlds would add more anguish than the wounds.

O valiant lord, the duke of York is slain.

Edw. O Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet
Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption,
Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears:

And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things since then befall'n.
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss, and his depart.
I then in London, keeper of the king,

Muster'd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
And very well appointed, as I thought, [queen,
March'd towards Saint Alban's to intercept the Bearing the king in my behalf along:

For by my scouts I was advertised
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late decree in parliament,

Touching king Henry's oath, and your succession.
Short tale to make,—we at Saint Alban's met,
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought:

But, whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
That rob'd my soldiers of their hated spleen;

Or whether 'twas report of her success;
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Who thunders to his captives—blood and death,
I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,

Their weapons like to lightning came and went;
Our soldiers—like the night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like a lazy thrasher with a flail,—

Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay and great rewards:

But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we, in them, no hope to win the day,
So that we fled: the king, unto the queen,

Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
For, in the marches here, we heard you were Making another head to fight again. [Warwick?] Edw.

Where is the duke of Norfolk, gentle
And when came George from Burgundy to England? [soldiers:]

War. Some six miles off the duke is with the
And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your king's aunt, duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to the needful war.

Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled:

Off have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er, till now, his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear?

For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine
Can pluck the diadem from saint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist;

Were he as famous and as bold in war,
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, lord Warwick: blame me
not;

'Tis love, I bear thy glories, makes me speak.
But, in this troublous time, what's to be done?
I Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowws,
Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads?

Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with reverend arms?

If for the last, say Ay, and to it, lords. [out;]

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you
And therefore comes my brother Montague.

Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland,
And of their feather many more proud birds,
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.

He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;

And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath, and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster.

Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave earl of March,
Amongst the loving Welchmen canst procure,

Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Via! to London will we march again;
And once again beside our foaming steeds,
And once again cry—Charge upon our foes!

But never once again turn back, and fly. [speak:]

Rich. Ay, now, methinks, I hear great Warwick
Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries—Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
And when thou fall'st (as God forbid the hour!)
Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forefend!

War. No longer earl of March, but duke of
York;

The next degree is, England's royal throne:
For king of England shalt thou be proclaimed
In every borough as we pass along;

And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.

King Edward,—valiant Richard,—Montague,—
Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,

(As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,) I come to pierce it,—or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums;—God, and Saint
George, for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now! what news? [me.]

Mess. The duke of Norfolk sends you word by
The queen is coming with a puissant host;
And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why, then it sorts, brave warriors: Let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before York.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, the Prince of Wales, Clifford, and Northumberland, with Forces.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town
of York.

Those stars, oblate, flinty, rough, remorseless, Bel'st thou me rage! why, now thou hast thy wish: [will:]

Would'st thou me weep? why, now thou hast thy
For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And, when the rage allays, the rain begins:
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies;
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,— Gaul's tree, fell Clifford,—and thee, false French-woman.

[No.]
North. Beshrew me, but his passions move me
That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd
With blood.

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,—
O, ten times more,—than tigers of Hyrcania.—
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:
This cloth thou dip'dst in blood of my sweet boy,
And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:

[He gives back the handkerchief.]
And, if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;

Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say,—Alas, it was a piteous deed!—
There, take the crown, and, with the crown, my curse;

And, in thy need, such comfort come to thee,
As now I reap at thy too cruel hands!—
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world;
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,
I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how my sorrow ripens his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my lord Northumberland!

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clf. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him.]

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king. [Stabbing him.]

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee. [Dies.]

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gate;
So York may overlook the town of York.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter Edward, and Richard, with their Forces, marching.

Edw. I wonder, how our princely father 'scaped;
Or whether he be now'd away, or no,
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit:
Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news: [news:]

Had he been slain, we should have heard the
Or, had he 'scap'd, methinks, we should have heard
The happy tidings of his good escape.—
How fares my brother? why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle range about;

And watch'd him, how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought, he bore him in the thickest troop,
As doth a lion in a herd of sheep;

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs;

Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.

So far'd our father with his enemies;
So did his enemies my warlike fetus;
Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son.

See how the morning opens her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!
How well re-embles it the prime of youth,
Trim'd like a youngker, prancing to his love!

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?
Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect
Not separated with the racking clouds, [sun:]
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.

See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.

In this the heaven figures some event.
Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think, it cites us, brother, to the field;
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,
Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together,
And over-shine the earth, as this the world.

Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fair shining suns.

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters,—by your leave
I speak it.

You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mes. Ah, one that was a woful looker on,
When as the noble duke of York was slain,
Your princely father, and my loving lord. [moan:]

Edw. O, speak no more! for I have heard too
Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mes. Environ'd he was with many foes;
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks, that would have enter'd Troy.

But Hercules himself must yield to odds;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.

By many hands your father was slain'd;
But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm
Of unrelenting Clifford, and the queen:

Who crown'd the gracious duke, in high despite;
Laugh'd in his face; and, when with grief he wept,
The ruthless queen gave him, to dry his cheeks,
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood

Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain:
And, after many scorn, many foul taunts,
They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same; and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd [upon:]

Edw. Sweet duke of York, our prop to lean
Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay!—
O Clifford, boast thou Clifford, thou hast slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry!

And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,
For, hand to hand, he would have vanquish'd thee!
Now my soul's palace is become a prison:

Ah, would she break from hence! that this my body
Might in the ground be closed up in rest:
For never henceforth shall I joy again,
Never, O never, shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep; for all my lady's moisture Scarcely serves to quench my furnace-burning heart: [moan:]

Nor can my tongue unloose my heart's great hurt:
For self-same wail, that I should speak what
Is kindling coals, that fire all my breast,
And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench.

And thrice cried.—Courage, father! fight it out!
 And fall as oft cause Edward to my side,
 With purple faultless, painted to the hilt
 In blood of those that had encounter'd him:
 And when the hardest warriors did retire,
 Richard cried.—Charge! and give no foot of ground!
 And cried.—A crown, or rise a glorious tomb!
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!
 With this, we charge'd again: but out, alas!
 We bodg'd again; as I have seen a swan
 With bootless labour swim against the tide,
 And spend her strength with over-matching waves

[A short alarm within.]
 Ah, bark! the fatal followers do pursue;
 And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury:
 And, were I strong, I would not shun their fury:
 The sands are number'd, that make up my life;
 Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter Queen Margaret, Clifford, Northumberland, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford,—rough Northumberland,—
 I dare your queenless fury to more rage:
 I am your bait, and I abide your shock.

North. Yield to our merry, proud Plantagenet.

Clif. Ay, to such merry, as his ruthless arm,
 With downright payment, show'd unto my father.
 Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his car,
 And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth
 A bird that will revenge upon you all:
 And, in that hope, I throw mine eyes to heaven,
 Scorning wha'er you can afflict me with.
 Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?
Clif. So cowards fight, when they can fly no farther.

 So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
 So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
 Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford! but bethink thee once again,
 And in thy thought o'er-run my former time:
 And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face:
 And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice,

 Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere this.
Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word:
 But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one.

[Drum.]
Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes,

 I would prolong awhile the traitor's life:—
 Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northun-berland. [much.]

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so:
 To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart:
 What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
 For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
 When he might spurn him with his foot away?
 It is war's prize to take all advantages:
 And ten to one is no impeachment of valour.

[They lay hands on York, who struggles.]
Clif. Ay, no, so strives the woodcock with the gun.
North. So doth the covey struggle in the net.

[York is taken prisoner.]
York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;

So true men yield, with robbers so o'er-match'd.
North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

[berland.]
Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northun-berland, make him stand upon this molehill here;
 That raught at mountaintops with outstretched arms,
 Yet parted but the shadow with his hand:—
 What! was it you that would be England's king?
 Was't you, that revell'd in our parliament,

And made a preachment of your high descent?
 Where are your messes of snow, to back you now?
 The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
 And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
 Dicky your boy, that, with his grunlike voice,
 Was wont to cheer his dad in matins?
 Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
 Look, York: I stain'd this napkin with the blood
 That valiant Clifford, with his rapier's point,
 Made issue from the bosom of the boy:
 And, if thine eyes can water for his death,
 I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.

Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,
 I should lament thy miserable state.
 I prythee, grieve, to make me merry. York:
 Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
 What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails,

That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death?
 Why art thou patient, man! thou should'st be mad;
 And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
 Thou would'st be feed'd, I see, to make me sport;
 York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown:—
 A crown for York:—and, lords, bow low to him.—
 Hold you his hands, whilst I do set it on.—

[Putting a paper crown on his head.]
 Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!
 Ay, this is he that took king Henry's chair;
 And this is he was his adopted heir.—

But how is it, that great Plantagenet
 Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
 As I bethink me, you should not be king.
 'Till our king Henry had shook hands with death
 And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,
 And rob his temples of the disdam,

Now in his life, against your holy oath?
 O, 'tis a fault too, too unadmissible!
 Off with the crown! and, with the crown, his head:
 And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him dead.

Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake.
Q. Mar. Nay, stay: let's hear the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France, [tooth!]
 Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's
 How ill-beseeching is in thy sex.

To triumph like an Amazonian trull,
 Upon their woes, whom fortune captivates!
 But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging,
 Made impudent with use of evil deeds.

I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush:
 To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,
 Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type of king of Naples,
 Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem;
 Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
 Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
 It needs not, nor it begets thee not, proud queen;
 Unless the nudge must be verified.

That beggars, mounted, run their horse to death.
 'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud:
 But God, he knows, thy share thereof is small;
 'Tis virtue that doth make them most admur'd:
 The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at:
 'Tis government that makes them seem divine;
 The want thereof makes thee abominable:
 Thou art as opposite to every good,
 As the Antipodes are unto us.

Or as the south to the a'plentree.
 O, tiger's heart, wrapp'd in a woman's hide!
 How could'st thou drain the life-blood of the child,
 To bud the father wipe his eyes withal,
 And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?
 Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;

Rich. No; God forbid, your grace should be forsworn

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took before a true and lawful magistrate,

'hat hath authority o'er him that swears:

'very had none, but did usurp the place;

hen, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,

our oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.

Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think,

ow sweet a thing it is to wear a crown;

'thin whose circuit is Elysium,

nd all that poets feign of bliss and joy.

hy do we linger thus? I cannot rest,

til the white rose, that I wear, be dyed

in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

York. Richard, enough; I will be king, or die.—

ther, thou shalt to London presently,

nd whet on Warwick to this enterprise.—

SCENE III. — Plains near Sandal Castle.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Rutland, and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands?
Ah, tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter Clifford and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy
As for the brat of this accursed duke, [i.e. Rutland.]

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clif. Soldiers, away with him.

Tut. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innocent child,

Lest thou be hated both of God and man.

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.]

Clif. How now! is he dead already? Or, is it fear

That makes him close his eyes?—[i.e. Rutland.] I'll open them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch

That trembles under his devouring paws:

And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey;

And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder.—

Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword.

And not with such a cruel threatening look.

Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die;—

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath,

Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my father's Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again;

He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives, and

Were not revenge sufficient for me; [i.e. Rutland.]

No, if I digg'd up thy forefather's graves,

And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,

I could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York

Is as a fury to torment my soul;

And till I root out their accursed line,

And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore— [i.e. Rutland.]

Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death;—

To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

Rut. I never did thee harm; Why wilt thou slay

Clif. Thy father hath. [i.e. Rutland.]

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.

Thou hast one son, for his sake pity me;

Lest in revenge thereof,—sith God is just,—

He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah, let me live in prison all my days;

And when I give occasion of offence,

Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clif. No cause!

Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.

[i.e. Clifford stabs him.]

Rut. Dii faciant, laudis summa sit ista tunc. [i.e. Dies.]

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!

And this thy son's blood, cleaving to my blade,

Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,

Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both.

[i.e. Exit.]

SCENE IV. — The same.

Alarum. Enter York.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field.

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;

And all my followers to the eager foe

Turn back, and fly, like ships before the wind.

Our lams pursu'd by hungry starved wolves.

My sons—God knows, what hath befallen them.

But this I know,—they have demurr'd themselves

Like men born to renew, by life, or death,

Three times did Richard make a lane to me;

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

North. Nor I.

Chf. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news. [kins.]

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate
In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in battle for this unmanly deed!

Chf. In dreadful war may'st thou be overcome!
Or live in peace, abandon'd and despair'd!

[Exeunt Northumberland, Clifford, and Westmoreland.]

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not. [yield.]

Exc. They seek revenge, and therefore will not
K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, lord Warwick, but my Whom I unaturally shall disinherit. [son.]

But, be it as it may:—I here entail
The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for ever;

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath
To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,

To honour me as thy king and sovereign;
And neither by treason, nor hostility,

To seek to put me down, and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform. [Coming from the throne.]

War. Long live king Henry!—Plantagenet, embrace him. [ward sons.]

K. Hen. And long live thou, and those thy fur-York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exc. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes!
[Sneet The Lords come forward.]

York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle

War. And I'll keep London, with my soldiers.

North. And I to Norfolk, with my followers

Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence I came.

[Exeunt York, and his sons, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter Queen Margaret, and the Prince of Wales.

Exc. Here comes the queen, whose looks be-way her anger:

I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I. [Going.]

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me, I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?

Ah, wretched man! 'would I had died a maid,
And never seen thee, never borne thee son.

Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!
Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?

Had'st thou but lov'd him half so well as I;
Or felt that pain which I did for him once;

Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood;
Thou wouldest have left thy dearest heart-blood

rather than made that savage duke thine heir,
And disinherited thine only son.

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me:
If you be king, why should not I succeed?

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret;—pardon me, sweet son;—

The earl of Warwick, and the duke, enforc'd me.

Q. Mar. Enforc'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd!

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!
Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;

And even unto the house of York such head,
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.

To entail him and his heirs unto the crows,

What is it, but to make thy sepulchre,
And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is chancellor, and the lord of Calais;
Stern Paulconbridge commands the narrow seas;

The duke is made protector of the realm;
And yet shalt thou be safe! such safety finds

The trembling lamb, environ'd with wolves.
Had I been there, which am a silly woman,

The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes,
Before I would have granted to that act.

But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour:
And, seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,

Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,
Until that act of parliament be repeal'd,

Whereby my son is disinherited. [louds.]

The northern lords, that have forsworn thy name,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread:

And spread they shall be; to thy foul disgrace,
And utter ruin of the House of York.

Thus do I leave thee:—Come, son, let's away;
Our army's ready; come, we'll after them.

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; get these gone. [me!]

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with
Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies

Prince. When I return with victory from the field.

I'll see your grace; till then I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger
thus.

[Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.]

K. Hen. Poor queen, how love to me and to her son,

Hath made her break out into terms of rage!
Revenge'd may she be on that hateful duke;

Whose haughty spirit, winned with desire,
Will cost my crown, and, like an empty eagle,

Tire on the flesh of me, and of my son!
The loss of those three lords torments my heart:

I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair:—
Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

Exc. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield, in Yorkshire.

Enter Edward, Richard, and Montague.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me
Edw. No, I can better play the unrulor. [leave.]

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter York.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother, at a strife?

What is your quarrel? how began it first?
Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

Rich. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your grace,
and us;

The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy? not till king Henry be dead.

Rich. Your right depends not on his life, or death. [now:]

Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it
By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,

It would outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath, that he should quietly reign.

Edw. But, for a kingdom, any oath may be broken.

I'd break a thousand oaths, to reign one year.

To aspire unto the crown, and reign as king.—
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father;—
And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge.

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.
North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me!
Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

[down:]
West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him
My heart for ager burns: I cannot brook it.
K. Hen. Be patient, gentle earl of Westmoreland.
Clif. Patience is for pultrons, and such as be;
He durst not sit there, had your father liv'd.
My gracious lord, here in the parliament,
Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be it so.
K. Hen. Ah, know you not, the city favours
them.

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck!
Est. But when the duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's
To make a shambles of the parliament-house!
CHURCH of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,
Shall be the war that Henry means to use.—

[They advance to the Duke.]
Thou fawning duke of York, descend my throne,
And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;
I am thy sovereign.

York. Thou art deceiv'd, I am thine.
Est. For shame, come down; he made thee duke of York.

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom
York. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown,
n following this usurping Henry.

Clif. Whom should he follow, but his natural York. True, Clifford; and that's Richard, duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my York. It must and shall be so. Content thyself.

War. Be duke of Lancaster, let him be king.
West. He is both king and duke of Lancaster;
nd that the lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall improve it. You forget, hat we are those, which clus'd you from the field,
ad slew your fathers, and with colours spread arch'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;
d, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,
y kinsmen and thy friends, I'll have more lives,
an drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more: lest that, instead of words,

and thee, Warwick, such a messenger,
shall revenge his death, before I stir.

War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you, we show our title to the crown?
nt, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

York. My father was, as thou art, duke of York;
y grandfather, Roger Mortimer, earl of March;

n the son of Henry the Fifth,
o made the Dauphin and the French to stoop, seiz'd upon their towns and provinces. [all.

Ver. Talk not of France, sir, thou hast lost it.
K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I;

as I was crown'd, I was but nine months old.
ck. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks you are:—

ear the crown from the usurper's head.
as sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Mont. Good brother, [to York.] as thou lov'st and honour'st arms,

Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king
York. Stand, peace!

K. Hen. Hence thou! and give king Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first:—hear him,
And be you silent and attentive too,

For he, that interrupts him, shall not live.
K. Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my kinly throne,

Wherein my grandaier, and my father, sat?

No: first shall war unpeople this my realm;
Ay, and their colours—often borne in France;

And now in England, to our heart's great sorrow.—
Shall be my winding-sheet.—Why faint you, lords?

My title's good, and better far than his.
War. But prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king. [crown.]

K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.

K. Hen. I know not what to say, my title's weak.
Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?

York. What then?
K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king

For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth;

Whose heir my father was, and I am his.
York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce.
War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,

Think you, 'twere prejudicial to his crown?
Est. No; for he could not so resign his crown,

But that the next heir should succeed and reign.
K. Hen. Art thou against us, duke of Exeter?

Est. His is the right, and therefore perdue me.
York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer

not?
Est. My conscience tells me, he is lawful king.

K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.
North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,

Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.
War. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power,

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,—
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,—

Can set the duke up, in despite of me.

Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:

May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown...
What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?

War. Do right unto this princely duke of York;
Or I will fill the house with armed men,

And o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.]
K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, hear me but one word:—

Let me, for this my life-time, reign as king.
York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine

heirs,
And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son!

War. What good is this to England, and himself? Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injur'd him thyself and us!

THIRD PART OF
KING HENRY VI

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

King Henry the Sixth.
Edward, Prince of Wales, his son.
Lewis XI. King of France.

SCENE.—during part of the third Act, in France;
during all the rest of the Play, in England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. The Parliament-House.

Drums. Some Soldiers of York's Party break in.

Then enter the Duke of York, Edward, Richard,

Norfolk, Montague, Warwick, and others, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder, how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He slyly stole away, and left his men:

Whereat the great lord of Northumberland,

Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,

Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,

Lord Clifford, and lord Stafford, all a-breast,
Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in,
Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, duke of Buckingham,

Is either slain, or wounded dangerous:

I cleft his heaver with a downright blow;

That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody sword.]

Mont. And, brother, here's the earl of Wilt-shire's blood, [To York, showing his]

Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd. [Id.]

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I

[Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's head.]

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.—

What, is your grace dead, my lord of Somerset?

Nor. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt! [head.]

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake king Henry's

War. And so do I.—Victorious pieces of York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne

Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,

I vow by heaven, these eyes shall never close.

This is the palace of the fearful king,

And this the regal seat: possess it, York;

For this is thine, and not king Henry's heirs'.

York. Amist me thou, sweet Warwick, and I

will;

For hither we have broken in by force

Nor. We'll all assist you: lie, that flies, shall die. [louis;—]

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk.—Stay by me, my

And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night.

War. And, when the king comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out by force.

[They retire.]

York. The queen, this day, here holds her parliament,

But little thinks, we shall be of her council

By words, or blows, here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd,

Unless Plantagenet, duke of York, be king;

And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice

Hath made us by words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords: be resolute,

I mean to take possession of my right. [beat.]

War. Neither the king, nor him that now has

The prouddest he that holds up Lancaster,

Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells.

I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares:—

Resolve thee, Richard: claim the English crown.

[Warwick leads York to the throne, who sits himself.]

Floresb. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Exeter, and others, with white roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,

Even in the char. of state! belike, he means

[Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer.]

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.
York Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase.

For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st—

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

[Exit Warwick.]

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? I why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in
But that thou art so fast mine enemy. Esteem.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and
But that 'tis shown inobly, and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword,
As I in justice and true right express it!

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!—

York. A dreadful lay!—address thee instantly.
[They fight, and Clifford falls.]

Clif. Le fin couraige les occures. [Dies.]

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will.
[Exit.]

Enter young Clifford.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the rout;
Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds

Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,

Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance!—Let no soldier fly:

He that is truly dedicate to war,
Hath no self-love; nor he, that loves himself,

Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour.—O, let the vile world end,

And the premised flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together!

Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds

To cease! Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve

The silver livery of advanced age;
And, in thy reverence, and thy chair-days, thus

To die in ruffian battle?—Even at this sight,
My heart is turn'd to stone; and, while 'tis mine,

I shall be stony. York not our old men spare;
To more will I their babes: tears virginal hall be to me even as the dew to fire;

And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,

hall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Therefore, I will not have to do with pity:

Let I an infant of the house of York,
As many gubbets will I cut it,

As wild Medea young Aethyus did:
Cruelty will I seek out my fame.

me, that saw ruin of old Clifford's house
[Taking up the body.]

And Aeneas old Anchises bear,
I bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;

it then Aeneas here a living load,
nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. [Exit.]

Enter Richard Plantagenet and Somerset, fighting, and Somerset is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there—
'neath an alehouse's paltry sign,

as thou in Saint Alban's, Somerset, thou made the wizard famous in his death—

ord, hold thy temper: heart, be wrathful still;
sets pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit.]

Alarums: Excursions. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, and others, retreating.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow; for shame, away!

K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good
Margaret, stay.

Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll not fight, nor fly:

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way; and to secure us

By what we can, which can no more but fly.
[Alarums afar off.]

If you be taken, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply scape,

(As well we may, if not through your neglect,)
We shall to London get; where you are lov'd;

And where this breach, now in our fortunes
made,

May readily be stopp'd.

Enter young Clifford.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must: incurable discount

Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live

To see their day, and them our fortune give:
Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Fields near Saint Alban's.

Alarums: Retreat. Flourish; then enter York, Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, and Soldiers, with drums and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him?—
That winter lion, who, in rage, forgets

Aged contusions and all brush of time;
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,

Repairs him with occasion! this happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,

If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I help him to his horse.

Three times bestir'd him, three I led him off,
Persuading him from any further act:

But still, where danger was, still there I met him,
And like rich hangings in a homely house,

So was his will in his old feeble body.
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day;

By the mass, so did we all.—I thank you, Richard:

God knows, how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleas'd him, that three times to-day

You have defended me from imminent death.—
Well, lords, we have not got that which we have:

'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know, our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London.

To call a present court of parliament.
Let us pursue him, ere the writs go forth:—

What says lord Warwick? I shall we after them?
War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.

Now by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Alban's battle, won by famous York,

Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.—
Sound, drums and trumpets!—and to London all!

And more such days as these to us befall!
[Exeunt.]

York. Would'st have me kneel? first let me ask of these,
If they can brook I bow a knee to man.—
Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail;

[Exit an Attendant.
I know, ere they will have me go to ward, [ment.
They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.
Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford: bid him come again.] [Exit Buckingham.

To say, if that the hasty boys of York
Shall be the surety for their traitor father.
York. O blood-bequilted Neapolitan,
Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!
The sons of York, thy letters in their birth,
Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those
That for my surely will refuse the boys.

Enter Edward and Richard Plantagenet, with Forces, at one side; at the other, with Forces also,
Old Clifford and his Son.

See, where they come; I'll warrant they'll make it good. [bail.

Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford, to deny their Chf. Health and all happiness to my lord the king. [Kneels.

York. I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news
with thee!

Nay, do not fret us with an angry look:
We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again;
For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Chf. This is my king, York: I do not mistake;
But thou mistak'st me much, to think I do:—
To bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?

K. Hen. Ay, Clifford: a bedlam and ambitious humour

Makes him oppose himself against his king.
Chf. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,
And chop away that fawning pate of his.

Q. Mar. He is a traitor, but will not obey:
His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.
York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.
Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall. [here!]

Chf. Why, what a brood of traitors have we York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so;
I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.—
Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,
That, with the very shaking of their chains,
They may astonish these fell larking curs;
Bid Salisbury, and Warwick, come to me.

Drums. Enter Warwick and Salisbury, with Forces.

Chf. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death,
And manacle the bear-ward in their chains,
I'll thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place.

Rich. O! have I seen a hot o'erweening cur
Run back and bite, because he wail withheld;
Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw,
Latin clapp'd his tail between his legs and cry'd:
And such a piece of service will you do.
If you oppose yourselves to match lord Warwick.

Chf. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,

As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!
York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.
Chf. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves. [to bow!]

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot
Old Salisbury,—shame to thy silver hair,
Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son!—
What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian,
And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?

O, where is faith! O, where is loyalty!
If it be banish'd from the frust head,
Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?—
Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,
And abuse those honourable ages with blood?
Why art thou old, and want'st experience?
Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me.

That bows unto the grave with nuckle age
Sol. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
The title of this most renowned duke;
And in my conscience do repute his grace

The rightful heir to England's royal seat. [me?
K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto
Sol. I have. [such an oath?

K. Hen. Hast thou sworn unto a man;
Sol. It is great sin, to swear unto a man;
But greater sin, to keep a sinful oath.

Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,
To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To leave the orphan of his patrimony,
To wring the widow from her custom'd right;
And have no other reason for this wrong?
But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.
K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself. [hast.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou
I am resolv'd for death, or dignity.

Chf. The first, I warrant thee, if dreams prove true. [again,

War. You were best to go to bed, and dream
To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Chf. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm,
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;
And that I'll wait upon thy burgonet,
Might I but know thee by thy household lodge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,

The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,
(As on the mountain-top the cedar shows,
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm.)

Even to affright thee with the view thereof.
Chf. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear,
And tread it under foot with all contempt.

Despite the bourward that protects the bear.
Y. Chf. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels, and their 'complices. [spite,

Rich. Fye! charity, for shame! speak not in
For you shall sup with Jesus Christ to-night.
Y. Chf. Foul stigmata, that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Saint Alban's.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls!

And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now,—when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,—
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me!
Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter York.

How now, my noble lord! what, all a-foot?
York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed!

But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well

Men. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven, be my judge. [Three!]
Dir. damned wretch, the curse of her that bare
 And as I thrust thy body with my sword,
 So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell.
 Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels
 Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave.
 And there cut off thy most ungracious head;
 Which I will bear in triumph to the king,
 Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.
[Exit, dragging out the body.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. — The same. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The King's Camp on one side. On the other. enter York attended, with drum and colours: his Forces at some distance.

York. From Ireland thus comes York, to claim his right.
 And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:
 Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright;
 To entertain great England's lawful king.
Ah, sancta sanctas! who would not buy thee dear!
 Let them obey, that know not how to rule;
 'Tis hand was made to handle nought but gold:
 I cannot give due action to my words,
 Except a sword, or sceptre, balance it.
 A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul;
 On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?
 The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.
Back. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well. [greeting.]

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?
Back. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
 To know the reason of these arms in peace;
 Or why, thou—being a subject as I am,—
 Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
 Should'st raise so great a power without his leave,
 Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great. [Sings.]

O, I could hew up rocks, and fight with
 I am so angry at these abject terms:
 And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
 Or sheep or oxen could I spend my fury!
 I am far better born than is the king;
 More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts:

But I must make fair weather yet a while,
 'Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.—

O Buckingham, I pray thee, pardon me.
 'That I have given no answer all this while,
 My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
 'The cause why I have brought this army hither,
 Is to remove proud Somerset from the king,
 Seditions to his grace, and to the state. [part.]

Back. That is too much presumption on thy
 But if thy arms be to no other end,
 'The king hath yielded unto thy demand;
 'The duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner!

Back. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. 'Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my soldiers. I thank you all; disperse yourselves;

 Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,

You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.
 And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
 Command my eldest son,—my, all my sons,—
 As pledges of my fealty and love.
 'I'll send them all as willing as I live;
 Lands, goods, horse, armour, any thing I have
 Is his to use, so Somerset may die.
Back. York, I commend this kind submission:
 We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter King Henry, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,

'That thus he marcheth with these arms in arm?

York. In all submission and humility,

York doth present himself unto your highness

K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?

York. To heaven the traitor Somerset from hence;
 And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
 Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter Iden, with Cade's head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean condition,
 May pass into the presence of a king,

Lo, I present your grace a traitor's head.

The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. The head of Cade?—Great God, how just art thou!

O, let me view his visage being dead,

That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
 Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?

Iden. I was, as't like your majesty. [degree!]

K. Hen. How art thou call'd? and what is thy Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
 A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Back. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss
 He were created knight for his good service.

K. Hen. Iden, kneel down; [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks;

And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
 And never live but true unto his liege!

K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen;

Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Enter Queen Margaret and Somerset.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,
 But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty?

Then, York, unlance thy long-imprison'd thoughts,
 And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.

Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?

False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,

Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?

King did I call thee! no, thou art not king;

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes.

Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a crown;

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,

And not to grasp an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must needs enrage these braves of mine;

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,

Is able with the change to kill and cure.

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up.

And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place; by heaven, thou shalt rule no more

O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler.

Som. O monstrous traitor! I arrest thee, York,

Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown.

Iden, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.

Was never subject long'd to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject!

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your majesty.

K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surpris'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a great number of Cade's Followers, with halbers about their necks.

Clif. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield;

And humbly thus, with halbers on their necks,
Expect your highness' doom, of life, or death.

K. Hen. These, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates.

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise!—
Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives.

And shew'd how well you love your prince and country:

Continue still in this so good a mind,
And henceforth, though he be unfortunate,

Aware yourselves, will never be unkind;
And so, with thanks, and pardon to you all,

I do dismiss you to your several countries.
Al. God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please if your grace to be advertised,
The duke of York is newly come from Ireland:

And with a puissant and a mighty power,
Of Galliwaggers, and stout Kernes,

Is marching hitherward in proud array;
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,

His arms are only to remove from thee
The duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd:

Like to a ship, that having 'scape'd a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd and boarded with a pirate:

But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd;
And now is York in arms to sound him.

I pray thee, Buckingham, go forth and meet him;
And ask him, what's the reason of these arms?

Tell him, I'll send duke Edmund to the Tower;—
And, Somerset, we will commit these thither,

Until his army be dismiss'd from him.
Som. My lord,

I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

K. Hen. In any case, be not too rough in terms;
For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal,
As all things shall redound unto your good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;

For yet may England curse my wretched reign.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE X.—Kent. Iden's Garden.

Enter Cade.

Cade. I've on ambition! I've on myself; that bore a sword, and yet am ready to furnish! These five days have I hid me in these woods; and durst not peep out, for all the country is lay'd for me;

but now I am so hungry, that if I might have a heme of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick-wall have I climbed into this garden—to see if I can eat grass, or jerk a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And,

I think, this word sallet was born to do me good:

for, many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and, many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in; And now the word sallet must serve me to feed on.

Enter Iden, with Servants.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court,

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these! This small inheritance, my father left me,

Contenteth me, and is worth a monarchy. I seek not to wax great by others' waning;

Or rather wealth, I care not with what envy;
Sufficeth that I have maintain my state,

And send the poor well pleased from my gate.
Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king for carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, what's e'er thou be,
I know thee not; Why then should I betray thee?

Let not enough, to break into my garden,
And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,

Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms!

Cade. Brave thee I av, by the best blood that ever was broached, and heard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days:

yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door nail, I pray God,
I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an squire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor fisher's man

Opposite thy steadfast-razing eyes to mine.
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks:

Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;

Thy leg a stick, compared with this truncheon;
My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;

And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.

As for more words, whose greatness answers
words,

Let this my sword report what speech forbears.
Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard—See! if thou turn the edge, or cut out the barley-hoed clown in climes of leaf ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech God on my knees, thou mayest be turned to hibernia. [They fight. Cade falls.] O, I am slain! sinners, and no other, hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten men I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Withier, garden; and be henceforth a burying place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Let Cade that I have slain, that traitor traitor!

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o'er my tomb, when I am dead:

Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point;
But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,

To emblazon the honour that thy master got.
Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory:

Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by mine, not by valour.

[Exit.]

See. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes
th made me full of sickness and disease.

Cade. Ye shall have a bempen caudle then.
I the pap of a hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

See. The palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, be even with you. I'll see if his head will nd stand on a pole, or no: Take him away.
I behead him.

See. Tell me wherein I have offended most?
ye I affected wealth, or honour! speak!
: my chests fill'd up with extorted gold?
my apparel sumptuous to behold?
you have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?
ee hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding, [thoughts.]

is breast from harbouring foul deceitful
let me live!

Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words:
I'll bridle it; he shall die, as it be but for widing as well for his life. Away with him!
has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks o'God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and ke of his head presently; and then break into men-in-law's house, sir James Cromer, and ke of his head, and bring them both upon poles hither.

II. It shall be done. [prayers,
See. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your
I should be so odidurate as yourselves.

re would it fare with your departed souls?

I therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye.

[Exeunt some, with Lord Say.
e proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a rd on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute:
re shall not a maid be married, but she shall to me her maidenhead ere they have it:
n shall hold of me as capite; and we charge
I command, that their wives be as free as art can wish, or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside,
I take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Herry, presently.

II. O brave!

Enter Rebels, with the heads of Lord Say and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver?—Let them kiss another, for they loved well, when they were
e. Now part them again, lest they consult at the giving up of some more towns in nce. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until it: fir with these horns before us, instead of eas, will we ride through the streets; and, at ry corner, have them kiss.—Away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—Southwark.

Enter Cade, and all his Robbers.

Enter Up Fish-street! down Saint Magnus' ner! kill and knock down! throw them into rines!—[A party sounded, and then a retreat.] at noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold ould retreat or parley, when I command a kill!

Enter Buckingham, and old Clifford, with Forces.

uck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee:

er, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king
e the commons, whom thou hast misled;

And here pronounce free pardon to them all
That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

Cbf. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent
And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you?
Or let a rabble lead you to your death?

Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap, and say—God save his majesty!
Who hateth him, and honours not his father,
Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What, Buckingham, and Clifford, are ye so brave?—And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought, ye would never have given out these arms, till you had recovered your ancient freedom: but you are all recreants, and dastards; and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with birchens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces: For me,—I will make shift for one; and no—God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade.

Cbf. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth,
That thus you do exclaim—'you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of your earls and dukes?

Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
Nor knows he how to live, but by the spoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends and us.

We're not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,
The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,
Should make a start o'er seas, and vanquish you!

Methinks, already, in this civil broil,
I see them lordling it in London streets,
Crying—Villagers! unto all they meet.

Better, ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's merry.

To France, to France, and get what you have lost;
Spare England, for it is your native coast:

Henry hath money, you are strong and manly;
God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king, and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro, as this multitude! the name of Henry the fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together, to surprise me: my sword make way for me, for here is no staying.—In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you! and heavens and honour be witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treason, makes me betake me to my heels. [Exit.]

Back. What, is he fled? go, some, and follow
him;

And he that brings his head unto the king
Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward—

[Exeunt some of them.
Follow me, soldiers: we'll devise a death.
To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.—Kenelworth Castle.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, and Some-set, on the terrace of the Castle.

K. Hen. Was ever king, that 'joy'd an earthly throne,

And could command no more content than I?
No sinner was I crept out of my cradle,
But I was made a king, at nine months old.

Back. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.
Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. — The same. The Tower.

Enter Lord Scalen and others, on the walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scalen. How now! Is Jack Cade slain?
1 Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them: The lord mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scalen. Such aid as I can spare, you shall command;
But I am troubled here with them myself.
The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.
But get you to Smithfield, and gather head.
And thither I will send you Matthew Gough:
Fight for your king, your country, and your lives:
And so farewell, for I must hence again. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. — The same. Cannon-street.

Enter Jack Cade, and his Followers. He strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command, that, of the city's cost, the poisoning could run nothing but claret wine in this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me other than — lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Hold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there. [They kill him.]
Sold. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more; I think, he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then, let's go fight with them:
But, first, go and set London-bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. — The same. Smithfield.

Alarm. Enter, on one side, Cade and his Company; on the other, Citizens, and the King's Forces, headed by Matthew Gough. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and Matthew Gough is slain.

Cade. So, sirs: — Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inn of court; down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only, that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Mass, 'twill be sore law then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet. [Aside.]

Smith. Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating roasted cheese. [Aside.]

Cade. I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm; my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out. [Aside.]

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the lord Say, which add the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty shillens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter George Bevis, with the Lord Say.

Code. Well, he shall be beheaded for it a time. — Ah, thou say, thou say, my, thou becom lord I now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto monsieur Basinecu, the dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee, by these presence, even the presence of lord Mortimer, that I am the basem that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm, in erecting a grammar-school: and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face, that thou hast men about thee, that usually talk of a noun, and a verb; and such abominable words, as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of the peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a foot-clutch, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a clank, when humbler men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent. —

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis down terra, male gens.

Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.

Kent, in the commentaries Caesar writ,
Is term'd the civil'st place of all this ile:
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.
I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy:

Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.
Justice with favour have I always done; (never Prayers and tears have mov'd my rage, gifts could
When have I aught exacted at your hands.
Keut to maintain, the king, the realm, and you
I large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,
Because my book prefer'd me to the king:
And — seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven —
Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murder kings.
This language hath parley'd unto foreign kings
For your behalf.

Cade. 'Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have

Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to rove behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale with watching for Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again.

se, and the bricks are alive at this day to test it; therefore, deny it not.

af. And will you credit this base drudge's words,

t speaks he knows not what?

U. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.

f. Stef. Jack Cade, the duke of York hath taught you this.

ade. He lies—for I invented it myself. [Aside. O, sirrah, Tell the king from me, that—for father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time I went to span-counter for French crowns,—I repent he shall reign; but I'll be protector to him.

ek. And, furthermore, we'll have the lord's head, for selling the dukedom of Maine.

ade. And good reason, for thereby is England need, and fain to go with a staff, but that my sauce holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you, that Lord Say hath gelded the common-tilt, and made it an ensuch: and more than he can speak French, and therefore he is a or.

af. O gross and miserable ignorance!

ade. Nay, answer, if you can: The French are our enemies: go to then, I ask but this; he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy good counsellor, or no?

f. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

f. Stef. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, al them with the army of the king.

af. Herald, away; and, throughout every town, harm them traitors that are up with Cade;

t those, which fly before the battle ends, even in their wives' and children's sight, and up for example at their doors:—you, that be the king's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two Staffords, and Perc.]

ade. And you, that love the commons, follow me.—

t show yourselves men, 'tis for liberty, will not leave one lord, one gentleman; a peasant, but such as go in clouted shoon;

they are thrifty honest men, and such could (but that they dare not) take our parts.

ek. They are all in order, and march to us.

ade. But, then, are we in order, when we are out of order. Come, march forward.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of Blackheath.

am. The two parties enter and fight, and both the Staffords are slain.

ade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

ek. Here, sir.

ade. They fell before thee like sheep and I, and thou behavest thyself as if thou hadst in thine own slaughter house: therefore will I reward thee.—The Lent shall be as again as it is; and thou shalt have a license ill for a hundred lacking one.

ek. I desire no more.

ade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no.

This monument of the victory will I bear: the bodies shall be dragged at my horse's heels, do come to London, where we will have the or's sword borne before us.

ek. If we mean to thrive and do good, break the gaols, and let out the prisoners.

ade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, march towards London.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, reading a supplication; the Duke of Buckingham, and Lord Say, with him: at a distance, Queen Margaret, mourning over Suffolk's head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard—that grief softens the And makes it fearful and degenerate; [mind, Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep. But who can cease to weep, and look on this? Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast? But where's the body that I should embrace? Back. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication?

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat: For God forbid, so many simple souls Should perish by the sword! And I myself, Rather than bloody war shall cut them short, Will parley with Jack Cade their general.— But stay, I'll read it over once again. [face

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely Ru'd like a wandering planet, over me: And could it not enforce them to relent, That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope, your highness shall have

K. Hen. How now, madam? Still Lamenting, and mourning for Suffolk's death? I fear, my love, if that I had been dead, Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for me.

Q. Mar. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; Fly, my Jack Cade proclaims himself lord Mortimer, Descended from the duke of Clarence's house; And calls your grace usurper, openly,

And vows to crown himself in Westminster. His army is a ragged mul-tude

Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless: Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death

Hath given them heart and courage to proceed; All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,

They call—false caterpillars, and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what Back. My gracious lord, retire to Kenilworth.

Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Q. Mar. Ah! were the duke of Suffolk now alive, These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee, Therefore away with us to Kenilworth.

Say. So might your grace's person be in danger; The sight of me is odious in their eyes;

And therefore in this city will I stay, And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge; the citizens

Fly and forsake their houses; The rascal people, thirsting after prey,

Join with the traitor; and they join'd swear, To spoil the city, and your royal court. [noise.

Back. Then linger not, my lord; away, take

K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is de

K. Hen. Farewell, my lord; [to Lord Say.] Trust not the Kentish rebels.

Geo. Thou hast hit it: for there's no better sign of a brave mind, than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's seal, the tanner of Wingham;—

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies, to make dog's leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher,—

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith the weaver.

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

John. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter Cade, Dick the butcher, Smith the weaver, and others in great number.

Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father,—

Dick. Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings.

Cade.—for our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes.—Command silence.

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer,—

Dick. He was an honest man, and a good brick-layer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet,—

Dick. I knew her well, she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies,—

Dick. She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces.

Smith. But, now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house, but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. 'A must needs; for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. No question of that; for I have seen him whipped three market days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof.

Dick. But, methinks, he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' the hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be, in England, seven half-penny loaves sold for a penny; the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer: all the realm shall be in oxenbow, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And, when I am king, (as king I will be)—

All. God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you good people:—there shall be no money, all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say, the bee stings; but I say, 'tis the bee's wax: for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! who's there!

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast account.

Cade. O, monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. It's a book in his pocket, with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjuror.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, on mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die.—Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Clerk. Enmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters, —[I will go hard with you.]

Cade. Let me alone:—Dost thou use to write thy name? or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him; he's a villain, and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him, I say: hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck.

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.]

Enter Michael.

Mick. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mick. Fly, fly, fly! sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down: He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: He is but a knight, is 'a?

Mick. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently: Rise up sir John Mortimer. Now have at him.

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford, and William his brother, with drum and Forces.

Staff. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,

Mark'd for the gallows,—lay your weapons down, home to your cottages, forsake this ground!

The king is merciful, if you revolt. [Blood.]

W. Staff. But angry, wrathful, and insolent to if you go forward: Therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken coated slaves, I pass not;

It is to you, good people, that I speak, O'er whom, in time to come, I hope to reign;

For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staff. Villain, thy father was a plasterer; And thou thyself, a sheerman, Art thou not!

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

W. Staff. And what of that?

Cade. Marry this:—Edmund Mortimer, earl of Marion,

Married the duke of Clarence's daughter;—Did he

Staff. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her, he had two children at one birth.

W. Staff. That's false.

Cade. Ay, there's the question; but, I say, 'tis the elder of them, being put to nurse,

Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away;

And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a bricklayer, when he came to age:

His son am I; deny it, if you can. [Sings.]

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true: therefore he shall be

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's

I proclaim'd a coward through the world !
[Lays hold on Suffolk.

f. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince, duke of Suffolk, William de la Poole.

Ed. The duke of Suffolk, muffled up in rage!

f. Ay, but these rage are no part of the duke; sometime went disguised, and why not I?

f. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

f. Obscure and lowly swain, king Henry's blood, honourable blood of Lancaster,

not be shed by such a jaded groom. [rump!]

thou not kneel'd thy hand, and held my stir-headed ploughed by my foot-clutch mule, thought thee happy when I shook my head?

often hast thou waited at my cup,

from my treacher, kneel'd down at the board, and have feasted with queen Margaret?

embrace it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n;

and allay this thy abortive pride:

in our roosting lobby hast thou stood,

duly waited for my coming forth!

hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,

therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Ed. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain? [me.]

f. First let my words stab him, as he hath

f. Base slave! thy words are blunt, and so art thou. [side]

f. Convey him hence, and on our long-boat's

e off his head.

f. Thou dar'st not for thy own.

f. Yes, Poole.

f. Poole?

f. Poole I—Sir Poole? lord!

canal, puddle, sink; whose fifth and dirt

bles the silver spring where England drinks, will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,

wallowing the treasure of the realm:

lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the ground. [death.]

thou, that smil'd'st at good duke Humphrey's set the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,

in contempt, shall him at thee again:

wedded be thou to the hags of hell,

luring to ady a mighty lord

the daughter of a worthless king,

as neither subject, wealth, nor diadem, villish policy art thou grown great,

like ambitious Sylla, overgorg'd goblets of thy mother's bleeding heart.

ee, Anjou and Maine were sold to France:

also revolting Normans, thorough thee,

in to call us lord; and Prandy slain their governors, surpris'd our forts, sent the ragged soldiers wounded home, minely Warwick, and the Nevills all,— a dreadful swords were never drawn in vain.

ting thee, are rising up in arms:

now the house of York—thrust from the

crowns

ameful murder of a guiltless king,

thy proud encroaching tyranny,— with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours

see our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,

*the which is writ—*Invictus subit.

ommes here in Kent are up in arms:

o exclude, reproach, and beggary,

of into the palace of our king.

It fly these,—Away! convey him hence.

O, that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder

these paltry, servile, abject drudges! [here, things make base men proud: this villain

Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more

Thou Burgulus the strong, Illyrian pirate.

Drones suck not vassal's blood, but rob bee-hives.

It is impossible, that I should die

By such a lowly vassal as thyself.

Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in me:

I go of message from the queen to France;

I charge thee, waft me safely cross the channel.

Cap. Walter,—

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death. [fear.]

Suf. Geldas timor occupat artus.—'tis thee!

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear, before I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop!

I Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair.

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,

Ud'to command, untaught to plead for favour.

Far be it, we should honour such as these

With humble suit; no, rather let my head

Stoop to the block, than these knees bow to any.

Save to the God of heaven, and to my king;

And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,

Thou stand unmov'd to the vulgar groom.

True nobility is exempt from fear:—

More can I bear, than you dare execute.

Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,

That this my death may never be forgot!—

Great men oft die by vile bezonians:

A Roman sworder and landitto slave,

Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand

Stab'd Julius Cæsar; savage sinners,

Pompey the great; and Suffolk dies by pirates.

[Exit Suf. with Whit. and others.]

Cap. And as for those whose ransoms we have set,

It is our pleasure, one of them depart:—

Therefore come you with us, and let him go.

[Exeunt all but the first Gentleman.]

Re-enter Whitmore, with Suffolk's body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,

Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.]

I Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!

His body will I bear unto the king;

If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;

So will the queen, that living held him dear.

[Exit, with the body.]

SCENE II.—Blackheath.

Enter George Bevis and John Holland.

Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath; they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now

then.

Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare.

Well, I say, it was never merry world in England,

since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handycrafts-men.

John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Geo. Nay more, the king's council are no good workmen.

John. True: And yet it is said,—Labour in thy vocation: which is as much to say, as,—let the magistrates be labouring men: and therefore should we be magistrates.

Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
 Sometimes, he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost
 Were by his side ; sometime, he calls the king,
 And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
 The secrets of his overcharged soul ;
 And I am sent to tell his majesty,
 That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to the king.

Exit Vaux.
 Ah me! what is this world? what news are these?
 But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
 Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
 Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
 And with the southern clouds contend in tears;
 Thine for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows?

*Now, get thee hence: The king, thou know'st, is
 If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.*

Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live:
 And in thy sight to die, what were it else,
 But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
 Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
 As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe,
 Dying with mother's dog between its lips:
 Where, from thy sight, I should be raving mad,
 And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes.
 To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth.—
 So should'st thou either turn my flying soul,
 Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
 And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.

To die by thee, were but to die in jest;
 From thee to die, were torture more than death:
 O, let me stay, befall what may befall.

Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a cruel sorrow,
 It is applied to a deathful wound. [Rums.]
 To France, sweet Suffolk: Let me hear from thee;
 For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,
 I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.

Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woeful'st cask
 That ever did contain a thing of worth.
 Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we;
 This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me. [Exeunt, severally.]

SCENE III.—London. Cardinal Beaufort's Bed-Chamber.

*Enter King Henry, Salisbury, Warwick, and others.
 The Cardinal is dead; Attendants with him.*

K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort,
 To thy sovereign.

Car. If thou best death, I'll give thee England's treasure.

Enough to purchase such another island.
 So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
 When death's approach is seen so terrible!

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial, when you will.
 Died he not in his bed? where should he die?
 Can I make men live, who'll they will or no?—
 O! torture me no more, I will confess.—

Alive again! then show me where he is:
 I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.—
 He hath no eyes, the dead hath blinded them—
 Comb down his hair; look! look! it stands upright.

Like time-twines set to catch my winged soul!—
 Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary
 Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens,
 Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!

O, beat away the busy meddling fiend,
 That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul.
 And from his bosom purge this black despair!
War. See, how the pangs of death do make him err.

Sol. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably.
K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!

Lord cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,
 Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope—
 He dies, and sinks no sign; O God, forgive him!

War. So had a death argues a man's ruin life.
K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all
 Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain clove;
 And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Kent. The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at sea. Then enter from a boat, a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, Walter Whitmore, and others; with them Suffolk, and other Gentlemen, prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseless day
 Is crept into the bosom of the sea;

And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
 That drag the tragick melancholy night;
 Who, with their drumway, slow, and flagging wings
 Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws
 Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.

Therefore, bring forth the soldiers of our crime;
 For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs,
 Here shall they make their ransom on the land,
 Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore.—

Master, this prisoner freely give I thee:—
 And thou that art his mate, make boot of this:—
 The other [pointing to Suffolk], Walter Whitmore, is thy share. [Know.]

1 Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head. [Know.]

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,

And bear the name and part of gentlemen?—
 Cut both the villains' throats;—for die you shall;
 The lives of those which we have laid in fight,
 Cannot be counterpois'd with such a petty sum.

1 Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life. [Straight.]

2 Gent. And so will I, and write home for it
 Was. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,
 And therefore, to revenge it, shall thou die.

[To Nat.]
 And so should these, if I might have my will.

Cap. Be not so rash, take ransom. Let him live.

Suf. Look on my George, I am a gentleman;
 Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I; my name is—Walter Whitmore. [Affright.]

How now! why start'st thou? what, dost thou Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.

A cunning man did calculate my birth,
 And told me—that by Water I should die:
 Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded;
 Thy name is—Gaultier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gaultier, or Walter, which it is, I care not.
 Ne'er yet did base dishonour blur our name.
 But with our sword we wip'd away the blot.
 Therefore, when merchant-like I sell my voice,
 Bruke he my sword, my arms torn and defec'd.

one of a crowd within. Re-enter Salisbury.
st. Sure, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.— [Speaking to those within.]

And lord, the commons send you word by me, as false Suffolk straight he dose to death,
banished fair England's territories,
ay will by violence tear him from your palace,
I torture him with grievous lingering death;
ay say, by him the good duke Humphrey died;
ay say, in him they fear your highness' death;
d more instant of love, and loyalty,— se from a stubborn opposite intent, being thought to contradict your liking,— does them thus forward in his banishment.
ay say, in care of your most royal person,
ut, if your highness should intend to sleep,
nd charge that no man should disturb your rest pain of your dislike, or pain of death;
st, notwithstanding such a strait edict,
ere there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
at sily gilded towards your majesty,
were but necessary you were wak'd;
est, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,
he mortal worm might make the sleep eternal;
nd therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
hat they will guard you, wh'er you will or no,
rom such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;
ith whose envenomed and fatal sting
our loving uncle, twenty times his worth, hey may, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
my lord of Salisbury.

Suf. 'Tis like, the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds.

ould send such message to their sovereign:
et you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
I show how quant an orator you are:
But all the honour Salisbury hath won,
is—that he was the lord ambassador,
Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
or we'll all break in.

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from
I thank them for their tender loving care; [me,
And had I not been 'cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat;
For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means.
And therefore—by the majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,—
He shall not breathe infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

Q. Mar. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk!

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk.

No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath;
Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
But, when I swear, it is irrevocable:—
If after three days' space, thou here be'st found
On any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom'd for thy life.—
Come, Warwick, come—good Warwick, go with
I have great matters to impart to thee [me:]

[Exeunt K. Henry, Warwick, Lords, &c.]
Q. Mar. Mischance, and sorrow, go along with Heart's discontent, and sour affliction, [you!]
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There's two of you; the devil make a third!
And threaten'd vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf. Come, gentle queen, these execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Q. Mar. Fye, onward woman, and soft-hearted wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies?
Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's grin,
I would invent as bitter-venom'd terms,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As leas'd Envy in her loathsome cave:
My tongue should stambe in mine earnest words;
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should swim to curse and ban:
And even now my burden'd heart would drunk,
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!
Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!
Their sweetest sinde, a grove of cypress trees!
Their chiefest prospect, wondering basilisks!
Their softest touch, as smart as lizard's stings!
Their musick, frightful as the serpent's hiss:
And haling screech-owls make the concert full!
All the foul terrors in dark sealed hell!

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st
thyself.

And these dread curses—like the sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an overcharged gun.—ruul.
And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You hude me ban, and will you bid me leave!

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a winter's night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,—
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,

That I may wed it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the ruin of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woful monuments.
O, could this kiss be print'd in thy hand;

[Kisses his hand.]
That thou might'st think upon these by the seal,
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for
thee!

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief,
'Tis but surmisd whilst thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits thinking on a waut.
I will repeat thee, or, be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished myself:
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Go, speak not to me; even now he gone —
O, go not yet!—Even thus two friends condemn'd
Eunbruce, and kist, and take ten thousand leaves,
Loather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now farewell; and farewell live with thee!

Suf. 'Tis but poor Suffolk ten times banished,
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee
'Tis not the hand I care for, wert thou hence;
A wilderness is populous enough.
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company,
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world;
And where thou art not, desolation.
I can no more:—Live thou to joy thy life;
Myself no joy in aught, but that thou liv'st.

Enter Vaux.
Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I pry thee?

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty,
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death:
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air

As I not witch'd like her! or thou not false like Ah me, I can no more! Die, Margaret! [him]
For Henry weeps, that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter Warwick and Salisbury. The (Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign, [der'd
That good duke Humphrey traitorously is mur-
By Suffolk and the cardinal Beaufort's means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees
That want their leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death. [true;

K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too
But how he died, God knows, not Henry:
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That I shall do, my liege:—Stay, Salisbury, With the rude multitude, till I return.
[Warwick goes into an inner room, and Salisbury retires.

K. Hen. O thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts;

My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life!
If my suspect be false, forgive me, God;
For judgment only doth belong to thee!
Fain would I go to chide his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears;
To tell my love unto his dumb, deaf trunk,
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:
But all in vain are these mean obsequies;
And, to survey his dead and earthly image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

*The folding doors of an inner chamber are thrown open, and Gloucester is discovered dead in his bed;
Warwick and others standing by it.*

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view
this body. [noise;

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is
For, with his soul, fled all my worldly solace:
For, seeing him, I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King, that took our state upon
To free us from his father's wrathful curse, [him
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!

War. See, how the blood is settled in his face!
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost,

Of sallow semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;
Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er returneth

To blush and beautify the cheek again.
But, see, his face is black, and full of blood;
His eye-balls further out than when he liv'd,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man:
His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdu'd.
Look! on the sheets, his hair, you see, is sticking;
His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,

Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be, but he was murder'd here!
The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke
to death?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection;
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.

War. But both of you were vow'd duke Humphrey's foes.

And you, farworth, had the good duke to keep:
'Tis like, you would not feast him like a friend;
And, 'tis well seen, he found an enemy. [noise

Q. Mar. Then you, helike, suspect these nobles
As guilty of duke Humphrey's timeless death?

War. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding
And sees fast by a butcher with an axe, [fresh
But will suspect, 'twas he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,

Although the kite saw with unbloody beak!
Even so suspicious is this tragedy. [your knife!

Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk; where's the Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons!

Suf. I wear no knife, to slaughter sleeping men;
But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease.

That shall be scour'd in his rancorous heart,
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge:—
Say, if thou dar'st, proud lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt Cardinal, Sum, and others.

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dares him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious
Nor cease to be an arrogant controller.

Though Suffolk dares him twenty thousand times.
War. Madam, be still; with reverence may I say;

For every word you speak in his behalf
Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,

'Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock

Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou
And never of the Nevils' noble race. [art,

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee,
And I should rob the deathman of his fee,

Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my sovereign's presence makes me mild,

I would, false murderous coward, on thy knees
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech,

And say—it was thy mother that thou mean'st;
That thou thyself wast born in basely;

And, after all this fearful homage done,
Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell,

Pernicious bloodsucker of sleeping men! [blush,
Suf. Thou shalt be waking, while I shed thy

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.
War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence:

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
And do some service to duke Humphrey's ghost.

[Exeunt Suffolk and Warwick.

K. Hen. What stranger breast-plate than a heart untainted!

'Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his quarrel just;
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel.

Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.
[A noise within.

Q. Mar. What noise is this?

Re-enter Suffolk and Warwick, with their weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence? dare you be so bold!—
Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the icon of Bury,

Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

now, no pain, they can inflict upon him,
 It make him say—I mov'd him to those arms.
 y. that he thrive, (as 'tis great like he will.)
 by, then from Ireland come I with my strength,
 d reap the harvest which that racial sowl'd;
 r Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
 id Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit.]

SCENE III. — Bury. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

1 Mur. Run to my lord of Suffolk; let him know,
 'e have despatch'd the duke, as he commanded!
 2 Mur. O, that it were to do!—What have we did ever hear a man so penitent? [Close]

Enter Suffolk.

1 Mur. Here comes my lord.
 Suff. Now, sirs, have you despatch'd this thing?

1 Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.
 Suff. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house;

will reward you for this venturous deed.
 The king and all his peers are here at hand:—
 have you laid fair the bed? Is all things well, according as I have directions?

1 Mur. 'Tis my good lord.
 Suff. Away, be gone! [Exit Murderers.]

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal
 Beaufort, Somerset, Lords, and others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence
 straight:

Say, we intend to try his grace to-day,
 if he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suff. I'll call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit.]
 K. Hen. Lords, take your places:—Aud, I pray

Proceed no stricter 'gainst our uncle Gloucester
 Than, from true evidence, of good esteem,
 He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Q. Mar. God forbid any malice may prevail,
 That faultless should condemn a nobleman!
 Pray God, he may acquit him of suspicion!

K. Hen. I thank thee, Margaret; these words content me much.—

Re-enter Suffolk.

How now! why look'st thou pale? why tremblest thou?

Where is our uncle? what is the matter, Suffolk?

Suff. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloucester is dead.
 Q. Mar. Marry, God forefend! [Night,
 Cor. God's secret judgment:—I did dream to-

The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word.
 [The King swoons.]

Q. Mar. How fares my lord?—Help, lords, the king is dead.

Suff. Reap up his body; wring him by the nose.
 Q. Mar. Run, you, help, help!—O, Henry, open thy shining eyes!

Suff. He doth revive again:—Madam, be patient.
 K. Hen. O heavenly God!

Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?
 Suff. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry, comfort! [me]

K. Hen. What, doth my lord of Suffolk comfort
 Come he right now to sing a raven's note,
 Whose dismal tone bereft my vital powers;

And thinks he, that the chirping of a wren,
 By crying comfort from a hollow breast,

Can chase away the first-conceiv'd sound?
 Hark not thy woeen with such sugar'd words.

Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say;

Their touch affrights me, as a serpent's sting.
 Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!

Upon thy eye-balls murderous tyranny
 Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world

Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding—
 Yet do not go away:—Come, haughty,

And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight:
 For in the shade of death I shall find joy;

In life, but double death, now Gloucester's death.
 Q. Mar. Why do you rate my lord of Suffolk

Although the duke was enemy to him, [thus]
 Yet he, most christian-like, laments his death:

And for myself,—flee as he was to me,
 Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groans,

Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,
 I would be blind with weeping, sick with errands.

Look pale as primrose, with blood-drinking sighs,
 And all to have the noble duke alive.

What know I how the world may deem of me?
 For it is known, we were but hollow friend:

It may be judg'd, I made the duke away:
 So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,

 And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.

This get I by his death: Ah me, unhappy!
 To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloucester, wretched
 man!

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he
 What, dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?

I am no loathsome leper, look on me.
 What, art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf?

Be poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn queen.
 Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb?

Why, then, dame Margaret, was ne'er thy joy:
 Erect his statue then, and worship it,

And make my image but an alms-house sign.
 Was I, for this, him wrack'd upon the sea?

And twice by awkward wind from England's bank
 Drove back again un'o my native clime?

What boled this, but well-forwarding wind
 Did seem to say,—Seek not a scorpion's nest,

Nor set no footing on this unkind shore!
 What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts,

And he that lov'd them from their brazen caves;
 And had them blow towards England's blessed

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock? [Alas,
 Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,

But left that hateful office unto thee:
 The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me;

Knowing, that thou wouldest have me down'd on shore,

With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness:
 The splitting rocks cou'd in the sinking sands,

And would not dash me with their razed sides;
 Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,

Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
 As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,

When from the shore the tempest beat us back,
 I stood upon the hatches in the storm:

And when the dusky sky began to rob
 My earnest-gazing sight of thy land's view,

I look'd a costly jewel from my neck,—
 A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,—

And threw it towards thy land:—the sea receiv'd
 And so, I wish'd, thy body might my heart; [fit]

And even with this, I lost fair England's view,
 And bid mine eyes be parking with my heart;

And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,
 For loosing ken of Albius's wished coast.

How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue
 (The agent of thy foul inconstancy.)

To sit and watch me, as Acciusus did,
 When he to maddening Dido would unfold

His father's acts, commensur'd in burning Troy!

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.—
But, my lord cardinal, and you, my lord of Suff.
Say so you think, and speak it from your souls.—
Wer't not all one, an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place duke Humphrey for the king's protector?
Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Maliam, 'tis true: And wer't not madness then,

To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guile should be but illly pasted over,
Because his purpose is not execut'd.
No; let him die, in that he is a fox.
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood;
As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege:
And do not stand on quilllets, how to slay him:
Be it by guile, by suares, by subtilty,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit.
Which makes him first, that first intends deceit.
Q. Mar. Thrice noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done;
For things are often spoke, and seldom meant;
But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,—
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my lord of Suffolk,

Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say, you consent, and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner,
I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Q. Mar. And so say I.

York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,
It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come again.

To signify—that rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword:
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable:
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach, that craves a quick expedient stop!

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?

York. That Somerset be sent as reagent thither:
'Tis meet, that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Whence the fortune be hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,

Had been the reagent there instead of me,

He never would have staid in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done:

I rather would have lost my life betimes,

Than bring a burden of dishonour home,

By staying there so long, till all were lost.

Show me one star character'd on thy skin:

Men's flesh preserv'd so whole, do seldom win.

Q. Mar. Nay, then, this spark will prove a raging fire.

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with:—

No more, good York;—sweet Somerset, be still:—

Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been reagent there,

Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What worse than taught? nay, then a shame take all!

Som. And in the number, thee, that wishest shame!

Car. My lord of York, try what your fortune is
The uncivil Kernes of Ireland are in arms,
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:

To Ireland will you lend a band of men,

Collected choicely, from each county some,

And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, as please his majesty.

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent;

And, what we do establish, he confirms;

Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand

York. I am content: Provide me soldiers, lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

Suf. A charge, lord York, that I will see perform'd.

But now return we to the false duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him,

That, henceforth, he shall trouble us no more.

And so break off; the day is almost spent:

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My lord of Suffolk, within four teen days,

At Bristol I expect my soldiers;

For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord of York.

[Exeunt all but York.]

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful

thoughts.

And change misgiving to resolution:

Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou art

Resign to death, it is not worth the enjoying:

Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-burn man,

And find no harbour in a royal heart.

Faster than spring-time showers, comes thought on thought;

And not a thought, but thinks on dignity.

My brain, more busy than the labouring spiler,

Weaves tedious snarles to trap mine enemies.

Well, nobles, well, 'tis politically done,

To send me packing with an host of men:

I fear me, you but warm the starved snake.

Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me:

I take it kindly; yet, be well assur'd

You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.

Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,

I will stir up in England some black storm,

Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven, or hell

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage

Until the golden circuit on my head.

Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,

Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.

And, for a minister of my intent,

I have seduc'd a head-strung Kentishman,

John Cade of Ashford.

To make commotion, as full well he can,

Under the title of John Mortimer.

In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade

Oppose himself against a troop of Kernes;

And fight so long, till that his thighs with darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porcupine;

And, in the end being rescu'd, I have seen him

Caper upright like a wild Monock,

Shaking the bloody darts, as he his bells.

Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty Kerne,

Hath he conversed with the enemy;

And undiscover'd come to me again.

And given me notice of their villanies.

This devil here shall be my substitute;

For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,

In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble:

By this I shall perceive the common's mind,

How they affect the house and claim of York.

Say, he be taken, rack'd, and tortured,

is brought against me at my trial day!

O! many a pound of mine own proper store,
because I would not tax the needy commoners, have I dispersed to the garrisons,
and never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glo. I say no more than truth, as help me God!
York. In your protectorship, you did devise strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,
that England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glo. Whv, 'tis well known, that whiles I was protector,

thy was all the fault that was in me;

or I should melt at an offender's tears,

and lowly words were ransom for their fault.

Julius it were a bloody murderer,

for foul felonious thief, that should pour passengers never gave them condign punishment:

Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd above the felon, or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly

answer'd;

But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,

whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.

I do arrest you in his highness' name:

And here commit you to my lord cardinal

To keep, until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hopes

That you will clear yourself from all suspects;

My conscience tells me, you are innocent.

Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous! virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,

And charity chok'd hence by rancour's hand;

Foul subornation is predominant,

And equity exil'd your highness' land.

I know, their example is to have my life;

And, if my death might make this island happy,

And purge the period of thy tyranny,

I would expend it with all willingness;

But mine is made the priotus to their play:

For thousands mourn, that yet suspect no peril.

Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.

Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's

malice,

And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;

Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue

The envious load that lies upon his heart;

And dugged York, that reaches at the moon,

Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,

By false accuse doth level at my life:—

And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,

Causeless have laid disgraces on my head;

And, with your best endeavour, have stirr'd up

My lefeet liege to be mine enemy:—

Ay, all of you have laid your hands together,

Myself had notice of your conventicles,

And all to make away my guiltless life:

I shall not want false witnesses to condemn me,

Nor store of treasures to augment my guilt;

The ancient proverb will be well affected,—

A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable:

If these, that care to keep your royal person

From treason's secret knife, and traitors' rage,

Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,

And the offender granted scope of speech,

'I will make them cool in zeal unto your grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here,

With ignominious words, though clerkly couch'd,

As if she had suborned men to swear

False allegations to overthrow his state?

Q. Mar. But I can give the kinder leave to chide.

Glo. Far truer spoke, than moost: I lose, indeed;—

Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false!

And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Back. He'll wrest the sense, and hold as here

all day:

Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him

sure.

Glo. Ah, thus king Henry throws away his

Before his legs he firm to bear his body:

'Tis thus the shepherd benten from thy side,

And wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee

first.

Ah, that my fear were false! ah, that it were!

For, good king Henry, thy decay I fear.

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best?

Do. or undo, as if myself were here.

Q. Mar. What, will your highness leave the parliament?

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd!

Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes:

My body round engirt with misery;

For what's more miserable than discontent!—

Ah, uncle Humphrey; in thy face I see

The map of honour, truth, and loyalty;

And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come,

That e'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy fall!

What low'ring star now envies thy estate,

That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,

Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?

'Tis thus never dulst them wrong, nor no man

wrong;

And as the butcher takes away the calf,

And binds the wretch, and beats it when it

strays,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house;

Even so, remorseless, have they burn'd him

hence.

And as the dam runs howling up and down,

Looking the way her harmless young one went,

And can do nought but wail her darling's loss;

Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case,

With sad unhelpful tears; and with dimm'd eyes

Look after him, and cannot do him good;

So nightly are his vowed enemies.

His fortunes I will weep; and, 'twixt each groan,

Say,—Who's a traitor, Gloucester he is now. [Exit.

Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry, my lord, is cold in great affairs.

Too full of foolish pity: and Gloucester's show

Beguiles him, as the mournful crucible

With sorrow snares relenting passengers;

Or as the snake, roll'd in a flowering bank,

With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child,

'Tis thus, for the beauty, thinks it excellent.

Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,

(And yet, herein, I judge mine own wit good)

'Tis Gloucester should be quickly rid the world.

To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. 'That he should die, is worthy policy;

But yet we want a colour for his death:

'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy;

The king will labour still to save his life;

The common haply rise to save his life;

And yet we have but trivial argument.

More than mistrust, that shows him worthy

death.

York. So that by this, you would not have him

die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fair as I.

Dark. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I, fare!
Although thou hast been conduct of my shame!

Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me.
Dark. Ay, my farewell; thy office is discharged —
Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this
And go we to attire you for our journey.

Dark. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:

No, it will hang upon my richest robes,
And show itself, attire me how I can.
Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. — The Abbey at Bury.

Enter to the Parliament, King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, and others.

K. Hen. I muse, my lord of Gloucester is not come:
'Tis not his wont to be the humblest man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Q. Mar. Can you not see I or will you not observe

The strangeness of his altered countenance?
With what a majesty he bears himself;
How insolent of late he is become,

How proud, peremptory, and unlike himself!
We know the time, since he was mild and affable:
And, if we did but glance a far-off look,

Immediately he was upon his knees,

'That all the court admir'd him for submission;

But meet him now, and, be it in the morn,

When every one will give the time of day,

He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,

And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,

Disdaining duty that to us belongs.

Small curs are not regarded, when they grin;
But great men tremble, when the lion roars;

And Humphrey is no little man in England.

First, note, that he is near you in descent;

And should you fall, he is the next will mount.

Me seemeth then, it is no policy, —

Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,

And his advantage following your decease, —

'That he should come about your royal person,

Or be admitted to your highness' council.

By flattery hath he won the common hearts;

And, when he please to make commotion,

'Tis to be fear'd, they all will follow him.

Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

Suffer them now, and they'll engrow the garden.

And cloke the herbs for want of husbandry.

'The reverent care I bear unto my lord

Made me collect these dangers in the duke.

If it be fond, call it a woman's fear;

Which fear if better reasons can upplant,

I will subscribe and say — I wrong'd the duke.

My lord of Suffolk — Buckingham — and York, —

Reprove my allegation, if you can;

Or else conclude my words effectual. [duke;]

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this

And, had I first been put to speak my mind,

I think, I should have told your grace's tale.

The duchess, by his subornation,

Upon my life, began her devilish practices:

Or, if he were not privy to these faults,

Yet, by repute of his high descent,

(As next the king, he was successive heir,) —

And such high vaunts of his nobility

Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,

By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.

Smooth runs the water, where the brook is deep;
And in his simple show he harbours treason:
The fox larks not, when he would steal the lamb.
No, no, my sovereign: Gloucester is a man
Unmoulded yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange crimes for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his protectionship,
Levy great sums of money through the realm,
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?

By means whereof, the towns each day revolted.
Beck. 'Tut! These are petty faults to faults unknown,

Which time will bring to light in smooth days
Humphrey.

K. Hen. My lord, at once: The more you have
To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise: But shall I speak my conscience?

Our kinsman Gloucester is an innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person,
As is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove:

'The duke is virtuous, mild; and too well given,
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

Q. Mar. Ah, what's more dangerous than thus Seems he a fond assuage!

Seems he a dove! his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's disposed as the hateful raven.

Is he a lamb! his skin is surely lent him,
For he's inclin'd as are the ravenous wolves.

Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereigns!

K. Hen. Welcome, lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories
Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.

K. Hen. Cold news, lord Somerset: but God's will be done!

York. Cold news for me; for I had hope of
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.

Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
And caterpillars eat my leaves away:

But I will remedy this gear ere long.
Or sell my title for a glorious grave. [Ande.]

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!

Pardon, my lords, that I have staid so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know, that thou art come too soon,

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
I do arrest thee of high treason here. [blush.]

Glo. Well, Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me
Nor change my countenance for this arrest;

A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.
The purest spring is not so free from mud,

As I am clear from treason to my sovereign:
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France,

And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;
By means whereof, his highness hath lost France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they, that think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.

So help me God, as I have watch'd the night —
Ay, night by night, — in studying good for England!

That dost thou e'er I wrested from the king,
Or any great I borrowed to my use

Her. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: and touching the duke of York,—will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen: And therefore, Peter, hure at thee with a downright blow, as Boris of Southampton fell upon Ascapart.
York. Despatch!—this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound trumpets, alarm to the combatants.
[Alarm. They fight, and Peter strikes down his master.]

Her. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason.
[Dies.]

York. Take away his weapon:—Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God! I have overcome mine enemies in this presence! O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right!

A. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight;

For, by his death, we do perceive his guilt; And God, in justice, hath reveal'd to us The truth and innocence of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully.—

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same. A Street.

Enter Gloucester and Servants, in mourning clothes.

Glo. Thus, sometimes, hath the brightest day a cloud;

And, after summer, evermore succeeds Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold: So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet, Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me, To watch the coming of my punish'd upstart; Ouseath may she endure the busy streets, To tread them with her tender-feeling foot. Sweet Nell, all can thy noble mind abroad The slyest people, gazing on thy face, With envious looks still laughing at thy shame: That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels, When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.

But soft! I think, she comes: and I'll prepare My tear-strain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the Duchess of Gloucester, in a white sheet, with papers pin'd upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; Sir John Stanley, a Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by. Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame! [Gaze.]

Now thou dost penance too. Look, bow they See, how the ruddy multitude do point, [thee] And sad their heads, and throw their eyes on Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful looks; And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame. And ban these enemies, both mine and thine.

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloucester, teach me to forget myself; For, whilst I think I am thy married wife, And thou a prince, protector of this land, Me thinks, I should not thus be led along, Maid'd up in shame, with papers on my back; And follow'd with a rabble, that rejoice To see my tears, and hear my deep-fet groans. The ruthless first doth out my tender feet;

And, when I start, the envious people laugh, And bid me be advised how I tread. Ah, Humphrey, can I hear this shameful yoke? 'Trow'st thou, that e'er I'll look upon the world; Or count them happy, that enjoy the sun? No; dark shall be my light, and night my day: To think upon my pomp, shall be my hell. Sometime I'll say, I am duke Humphrey's wife; And he a prince, and ruler of the land: Yet so he rul'd, and such a prince he was, As he stood by, whilst I, his forlorn duchess, Was made a woe, and a pointing stock To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame; Nor stir at nothing, till the axe of death Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will. For Suffolk,—he that can do all in all With her, that hateth thee, and by us as all,— And York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest, Have all him'd bushes to betray thy wings, And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee: But fear not thou, until thy foot be snarl'd, Nor never seek prevention of thy fate.

Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear; thou almost all awry; I must offend, before I be atton'd: And had I twenty times so many foes, And each of them had twenty times their power, All these could not procure me any scutcheon. So long as I am loyal, true, and conscience Would not have me rescue thee from this reproachful Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away, But I in danger for the breach of law. Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell: I pray thee, wert thy heart to patience; These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before! This is close dealing.—Well, I will be true.

[Exit Herald.]

My Nell, I take my leave:—and, master sheriff, Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.

Serv. An't please your grace, here my commission says:

And sir John Stanley is appointed now To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, sir John, protect my lady here? Duch. So am I given in charge, may't please your grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray You use her well: the world may laugh again: And I may live to do you kindness, if You do it her. And so, sir John, farewell.

Duch. What, gone, my lord; and bid me not farewell?

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak. [Exeunt Gloucester and Servants.]

Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee!

For none shares with me: my joy is—death; Death, at whose name I of late have been afraid, Because I wish'd this world's eternal rest— Stanley, I pry thee, go, and take me hence; I care not whither, for I beg no favour. Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the use of Man; There to be used according to your state.

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach; And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and duke Humphrey's lady,

According to that state you shall be used.

By her I claim the kingdom: she was heir
To Ruer, earl of March; who was the son
Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Philippe,
Sole daughter unto Lionel, duke of Clarence:
So, if the issue of the elder son
Succeeded before the younger, I am king.
War. What plain proceedings are more plain than this!

Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,
The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign;
It fails not yet; but flourishes in thee,
And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.—
Then, father Salisbury, kneel we both together;
And, in this private plot, be we the first,
That shall salute our rightful sovereign
With honour of his bright light to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, Earl of Lancaster's king.

York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your Till I be crown'd; and that my sword be stain'd
With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster;
And that's not suddenly to be performed;
But with advice, and silent secrecy.
Do you, as I do, in these dangerous days,
Wink at the duke of Suffolk's insolence,
At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the crew of them,
Till they have murder'd the shepherd of the flock,
That virtuous prince, the good duke Humphrey;
Till that they seek; and they, in seeking that,
Shall find their deaths, if York can prophecy.
Sol. My lord, break us off; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me, that the earl of Shall one day make the duke of York a king.

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself,— Richard shall live to make the earl of Warwick
The greatest man in England, but the king.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Hall of Justice.

Trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Gloucester, York, Suffolk, and Salisbury: the Dukes of Gloucester, Margery Jourdain, Southwell, Hume, and Bolingbroke, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife:

In sight of God, and as your guilt is great;
Receive the sentence of the law, for sins
Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death.—
You four, from hence to prison back again:

[To Jour. &c.]
From thence, onto the place of execution:
The witch in Southfield shall be burn'd to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.—
You, madam, for you are more nobly born,
Deputed of your honour in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done
Live in your country here in banishment,
With sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome in banishment, welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judg'd
I cannot justify whom the law condemns.—

[Exeunt the Dukes, and the other prisoners, guarded.]

My eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground!—
I beseech your majesty give me leave to go.
Sorrow would pursue, and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey duke of Gloucester: ere Give up thy staff: Henry will to himself [thou go,
Protector he: and God shall be my hope,
My stay, my kins, and lantern to my feet;
And go in peace, Humphrey; no less belov'd,
Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason, why a king of years
Should be to be protected like a child.—
God and king Henry govern England's helm:
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff!—here, noble Henry, is my staff:
As willingly do I the same resign,
As ere thy father Henry made it mine:
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,
As others would ambitiously receive it.

Farewell, good king: when I am dead and gone,
May honourable peace attend thy throne! [Exit.]

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret
queen:

And Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, scarce himself,
That bears so shrewd a name: two pulls at once,—
His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off!
This staff of honour nought:—There let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Sol. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays:

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.

York. Lords, let him go:—Pleaze it your majesty,
This is the day appointed for the combat;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists.
So please your highness to behold the fight. [Aw.]

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord: for purposely there-
Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit:

Here let them end it, and God defend the right!

York. I never saw a fellow worse hested,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter, on one side, Horner, and his neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him at the other side, Peter, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack; And fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charmoon.

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, faith, and I'll pledge you all;
And a fig for Peter!

1 Pres. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

2 Pres. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master:
fight for the credit of the prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me,
I pray you; for, I think, I have taken my last draught in this world.—Here, Robin, an if I die,
I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer:—and here, I'om, take all the money that I have.—O Lord, bless me, I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sol. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows.—Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sol. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sol. Thump! then see thou thump thy master
well.

Thou might'st as well have known our names, as
To name the several colours we do wear. [Thus Sight may distinguish of colours; but suddenly
To nominate them all, 's impossible.—

My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle;
And would you not think that coming to be great,
That could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Sirrah, O, master, that you could!

Glo. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not bendles in your town, and things called whips?

My. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

My Sirrah, go fetch 'he bendle hither straight.

[Exit an Attendant.]

Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by.
[A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool, and run away.

Sirrah, Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone;
You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, with the Bendle.

Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs.
Sirrah bendle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.

Bend. I will, my lord — Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.

Sirrah, Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

[After the Bendle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away; and the people follow, and cry, A Miracle!

K. Hen. O God, see'st thou this, and bear'st so long?

Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain run.

Glo. Follow the knave; and take this drub away.

Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need.

Glo. Let them be whipped through every market town, till they come to Berwick, whence they came.

[Exeunt Mayor, Bendle, Wife, &c.]

Cer. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.

Sirrah: 'Tis true; made the lame to leap, and fly away.

Glo. But you have done more miracles than I;
You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter Buckingham.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.

A sort of naughty persons, lowly bent,—
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of lady Eleanor, the protector's wife,

The ruler and head of all this rout,—

Have practis'd dangerously against your state,
Dealing with witches, and with conjurers;

Whom we have apprehended in the fact;

Raising up wicked spirits from under ground,
Demanding of king Henry's life and death,

And other of your highness' privy council.

As more at large your grace shall understand.

Cer. And so, my lord protector, by this means

Your lady is forthcoming yet at London.

This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;

'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.

[Aside to Gloucester.]

Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart!

Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers:
And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the nearest groom. [ones]

K. Hen. O God, what mischief's work the wicked

Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby!

Q. Mar. Gloucester, see here the tainture of thy nest.

And, look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Glo. Mean, for myself, to heaven I do appeal,

How I have lov'd my king, and commonweal:

And, for my wife, I know not how it stands;

Sorry I am to hear what I have heard;

Noble she is; but if she have forgot

Honor, and virtue, and conjurers' with such

As, like to pitch, defile nobility,

I banish her my bed, and company:

And give her, as a prey, to law and shame,

That hath dishonor'd Gloucester's honest name.

K. Hen. Well, for this night, we will repose us

To-morrow, toward London, back again, [here:]

To look into this business thoroughly.

And call these foul offenders to their answers;

And praise the cause in justice' equal scales,

Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. The Duke of York's garden.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now, my good lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave,
In this close walk, to satisfy myself,

In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible, to England's crown.

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin: and if thy claim be
The Nevils are thy subjects to command. [good,

York. Then thus—

Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons:
The first, Edward the Black Prince, prince of Wales;

The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,
Lionel, duke of Clarence; next to whom,

Was John of Gaunt, the duke of Lancaster:

The fifth, was Edmund Langley, duke of York;

The sixth, was Thomas of Woodstock, duke of

Gloucester;

William of Windsor was the seventh, and last.

Edward, the Black Prince, died before his father;

And left behind him Richard, his only son,

Who, after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as

king;

Till Henry Bolingbroke, duke of Lancaster,

The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,

Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth.

Ser'd on the realm; depos'd the rightful king;

Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came,

And him to Pomfret; where, as you all know,

Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.

War. Father, the duke hath told the truth;

Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.

York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir being dead,

The issue of the next son should have reign'd.

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an

heir

York. The third son, duke of Clarence, (from whose line [ter:]

I claim the crown,) had issue—Philippe, a daughter: Who married Edmund Mortimer, earl of March:

Edmund had issue—Roger, earl of March.

Roger had issue—Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke,

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown;

And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king,

Who kept him in captivity, till he died.

But, to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,

My mother, being her unto the crown,

Married Richard, earl of Cambridge; who was son

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth son,

Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind
That mounts no higher than a bird can war.

Car. I thought as much; he'd be above the clouds. [that]

Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal; How think you by
Were it not good, your grace could fly to heaven?
K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy!

Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts

Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart;
Pernicious protector, dangerous peer.

'Tis thus smooth 'till it so with king and commonweal!

Glo. What, cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory?

Tantalus animus caelestibus iras?

Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such malice;
With such holiness can you do it?

Suf. No malice, sir; no more than well becomes
So good a quarrel, and so bad a peer.

Glo. As who, my lord?

Suf. Why, as you, my lord;

As 't like your lordly lord-protectorship. [Ience.]

Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insu-
Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloucester.

K. Hen. I prythee, peace,
Good queen; and what not on these furious peers,
For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make,
Against this proud protector, with my sword.

Glo. Faith, holy uncle, 'twould 'twere come to that! [Aside to the Cardinal.]

Car. Marry, when thou dar'st. [Aside.]

Glo. Make up no fictitious numbers for the matter,

In thine own person answer thy abuse. [Aside.]

Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st,

This evening, on the east side of the grove. [Aside.]

K. Hen. How now, my lords?

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester,
Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly,
We had had more sport.—Come with thy two-hand sword. [Aside to Glo.]

Glo. True, uncle. [grove]

Car. Are you advis'd?—the east side of the Grove. Cardinal, I am with you. [Aside.]

K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester!

Glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord.— [crown for this]

Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your
Or all my fence shall fail. [Aside.]

Car. Medice teipsum;
Protector, see to't well, protect yourself. [Aside.]

K. Hen. The winds grow high; an do your stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this music to my heart!
When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?
I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

*Enter an inhabitant of Saint Alban's, crying,
A Miracle!*

Glo. What means this noise?
Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?

Isabel. A miracle! a miracle!

Suf. Come to the king, and tell him what miracle. [shrine]

Isabel. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's
Within this half hour, hath receiv'd his sight;

A man, that ne'er saw in his life before. [sings]

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd! that to believing Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

*Enter the Mayor of Saint Alban's, and his brethren;
and Sampson, borne between two persons in a chair;
his wife and a great multitude following.*

Car. Here come the townsmen in procession,
To present your highness with the man.

K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,
Although by sight his sin be multiplied. [king]

Glo. Stand by, my masters, bring him near the
His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstances for thee may glorify the Lord, I pray.

Wilt, hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.

Glo. Had'st thou been his mother, thou could'st have better told.

K. Hen. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee.

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion: being call'd
A hundred times, and oft'ner, in my sleep,
By good Saint Alban; who said,—Simpson, come:

Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee.

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many times
Myself have heard a voice to call him so. [soft]

Car. What, art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a tree.

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O, born so, master.

Glo. What, and would'st climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth. [clear]

Wife. 'Tis true; and bought his climbing very Glo. 'Alas, thou lov'd'st plums well, that would'st venture so.

Simp. Alas, good master, my wife dar'd some damns.

And made me climb, with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve.— [them:]

Let me see thine eyes:—wink now; sow open in my opinion, yet thou see'st not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day; I thank God, and Saint Alban. [clink of]

Glo. Say'st thou so? What colour is this?

Simp. Red, m-s er; red as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said! What colour is in your gown of it?

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal black, as jet.

K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st what colour jet is of?

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks, and gowns, before this day a many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, arrant, what's my name?

Simp. Alas, master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name?

Simp. I know not.

Glo. Nor his?

Simp. No, indee I, master.

Glo. What's thine own name?

Simp. Saunders Simpson, an if it please you, master. [kneave]

Glo. Then, Saunders, sit thou there—the thine'st in Christendom. If thou hast been twice blind, shall never be able to fight a blow: O Lord, my heart!

*Gl. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else he hang'd.
K. Hen.* A way with them to prison: and the day
Of combat shall be the last of the next month.—
Come, Somerset, we'll see these sent away.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same. The Duke of Gloucester's Garden.

Enter Margery Jourdain, Hume, Southwell, and Bolingbroke.

Hume. Come, my masters: the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Bolne, Master Hume, we are therefore provided: Will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay; What else? fear you not her courage?

Bolne. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: But it shall be convenient, master Hume, that you be by her shift, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us. [Exit Hume.] Mother Jourdain, by her prostrate, and grovel on the earth:—John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess, above.

Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome all. To this gear; the sooner the better.

Bolne. Patience, good lady: wizards know their times:

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
The time of night when Troy was set on fire:
The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,

And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,
That time best fits the work we have in hand.
Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise,
We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they perform the ceremonies appertaining, and make the circle; Bolingbroke, or Southwell, reads, Conjunctio, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit speak.]

Spir. Adsum.

St. Jour. Amen.

By the eternal God, whose name and power
Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt: That I had said and Bolne. First of the king: What shall of him become? [Reading out of a paper.]

Spir. The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.]

Bolne. What fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?

Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.

Bolne. What shall befall the duke of Somerset?

Spir. Let him shun castles;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,
Than where castles mounted stand
Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Bolne. Descend to darkness, and the burning False send, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.]

Enter York and Buckingham, hastily, with their Guards, and others.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors, and their train.

Beldame, I think, we watch'd you at an inch.—
What, madam, are you there? the king and commonwealth

Are deeply delighted for this piece of pains;
My lord protector will, I doubt it not,
See you well guard'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king.

Injurious duke; that threat'nt where is no cause.

Back. True, madam, none at all. What call you this?

[Showing her the papers.]
Away with them: let them be clapp'd up close.
And kept asunder.—You, madam, shall with us:—
Stafford, take her to thee.—

[Exit Duchess from above.]

We'll see your trinkets here all forth-coming;
All—Away!

[Exeunt Guards, with South. Boling. &c.]
York. Lord Buckingham, methinks, you watch'd her well;

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon:

Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.

What have we here?

[Reads.]
The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

Why, this is just.

Asio te, Cecidia, Romanos vincere posse.

Well, to the rest:

Tell me, what fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?

By water shall he die, and take his end.—

What shall befall the duke of Somerset?

Let him shun castles;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,

Than where castles mounted stand.

Come, come, my lords:

These oracles were hardly attain'd,

And hardly understood.

The king is now in progress toward Saint Alban's,

With him the husband of this lovely lady:

Thither go these news, as fast as horses can carry them:

A surly breakfast for my lord protector.

Back. Your grace shall give me leave, my lord

of York,

To be the post, in hope of his reward.

York. At your pleasure, my good lord.—Who's within there, ho?

[Enter a Servant.]

Invite my lords of Salisbury and Warwick.

To sup with me to-morrow night.—Away!

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Saint Alban's.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Gloucester, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Falconers holding.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the hawk,
Believe,

I saw not better sport these seven years' day:

Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high;

And ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon

made,

And what a pitch she flew above the rest:—

To see how God in all his creatures works!

Yea, men and birds are full of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, as it like your majesty.

My lord protector's hawks do tower so well:

They know, their master loves to be aloft,

And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him, and with the lords,
Till we have brought duke Humphrey in disgrace.
As for the duke of York,—his late complaint
Will make but little for his benefit:
So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King Henry, York and Somerset conversing with him, Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, Cardinal Beaufort, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;

Or Somerset, or York, all's one to me (France, York, if York have ill demerit'd himself in

Then let him be deny'd the regentship.
Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,

Let York be regent, I will yield to him.
War. Whether your grace be worthy, yea or no,

Dispute not that: York is the worthier.
Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

War. The cardinal's not my better in the field.
Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.
Net. Peace, son!—and show some reason,

Why Somerset should be preferred in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself
To give his coarsure; these are no women's matters. (grace)

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your
To be protector of his excoherence?

Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm;
And, at his pleasure, will rescue my place.

Suf. Rescue it then, and leave this tumult. Since thou wert king (as who is king, but thou!)
The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck:
The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas,
And all the peers and nobles of the realm
Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags

Are lunk and lean, with thy extortions. (attire,
Som. Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's
Have cost a mass of publick treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution
Upon offenders, hath exceeded law.

And left thee to the mercy of the law.

Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices, and towns in
France,—

If they were known, as the suspect is great,—

Would make thee quickly hot without thy head.

(Exit Gloucester. The Queen drops her fan.)

Give me my fan: What, minion, can you not?

(Gives the Duchess a box on the ear.)

I cry you mercy, madam: Was it you? (min)

Duch. Was't I? yea, I it was, proud Frenchwoould I come near your beauty with my nails,

I'd set my ten commandments in your face.

A. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 'twas against her will. (in time)

Duch. Against her will! Good king, look to't

She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby:

Though in this place must master wear no

breaches,

She shall not strike dame Eleanor unreveng'd.

(Exit Duchess.)

Buck. Lord cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,

And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:

She's tickled now; her fume can need no spurs,

She'll gallop fast enough to her destruction.

(Exit Buckingham.)

Re-enter Gloucester.

Glo. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown,
With walking once about the quadrangle,
I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

As for your spiteful false objections,
Prove them, and I lie open to the law;
But God in mercy so deal with my soul,

As I in duty love my king and country!

But, to the matter that we have in hand:—

I say, my sovereign, York is meetest man

To be your regent in the realm of France.

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave

To show some reason, of no little force,

That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmet

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride:

Next, if I be appointed for the place,

My lord of Somerset will keep me here,

Without discharge, money, or furniture.

Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands.

Last time, I don'd attendance on his will.

Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.

War. That I can witness: and a fearful fact

Did never traitor in the land commit.

Suf. Peace, head-strong Warwick! (peace!)

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my

Enter Servants of Suffolk, bringing in Horner and Peter.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason:

Pray God, the duke of York excuse himself!

York. Dost any one accuse York for a traitor!

K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me:

What are these?

Suf. Please it your majesty, this is the man

That doth accuse his master of high treason:

His words were these:—that Richard, duke of

York

Was rightful heir unto the English crown;

And that your majesty was an usurper.

K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words?

Hor. Aun't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain.

Pea. By these ten bones, my lords, (holding up his hands.) he did speak them to me in the garret

one night, as we were scouring my lord of York's armour.

York. Base dunghill villain, and mechanical,

I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech:—

I do beseech your royal majesty.

Let him have all the rigour of the law.

Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me, if ever I spake the words: My accuser is my pretence; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me: I have good witness of this: Therefore I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge.

Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,

Because in York this breeds suspicion:

And let these have a day appointed them

For single combat, in convenient place;

For he hath witness of his servant's malice:

This is the law, and this duke Humphrey's doom.

K. Hen. Then be it so. My lord of Somerset,

We make your grace lord regent o'er the French.

Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty.

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pea. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's sake, pity my cause! the spite of men prevails against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me! I

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice.

Your grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duck. What say'st thou, man? I hast thou as yet conferr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch;

And Renger Bollingbroke, the conjurer?

And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. They have promised,—to show your highness

A spirit rais'd from depth of under ground,

That shall make answer to such questions

As by your grace shall be propounded him.

Duck. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:

When from Saint Alban's we do make return,

We'll see these things effected to the full.

Hume. Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,

With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit Duck.]

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess's gold;

Marry, and shall. But how now, sir John Hume?

Send up your life, and give no words but—mum!

The business asketh silent secrecy.

Hume Eleanor gives gold, to bring the witch;

Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.

Yet have I gold flies from another coast;

I dare not say, from the rich cardinal, [folk;

And from the great and new-made duke of Suffolk;

Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain,

They, knowing dame Eleanor's surprising humour,

Have hired me to undermine the duchess,

And buzz these conjurations in her brain.

They say, A crafty knave does need no broker;

Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.

Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near

To call them both—a pair of crafty knaves.

Well, so it stands; And thus, I fear, at last,

Hume's knavery will be the duchess's wreck;

And her attire will be Humphrey's fall:

So, how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Peter, and others, with petitions.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close; my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protects him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter Suffolk and Queen Margaret.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him; I'll be the first, sure.

2 Pet. Come back, fool: this is the duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! would'st any thing with me?

1 Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me! I took ye for my lord protector.

Q. Mar. [Reading the superscription.] To my lord protector! Are your supplications to his lordship? I let me see them: What is this?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Gaudman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from use.

Suf. Thy wife too? that is some wrong, indeed.—What's yours?—What's here? [Reads.] Against the duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.—How now, sir knave?

2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

1 Pet. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying, That the duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the duke of York say, he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was! No, forsooth: my master said, That he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.]—Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently.—We'll hear more of your matter before the king.

[Exit Servants, with Peter.]

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected

Under the wings of our protector's grace,

Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Threats the petitioners.]

Away, base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exit Petitioners.]

Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,

Is this the fashion in the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king?

What, shall king Henry be a pupil still,

Under the surly Gloucester's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke?

I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours,

Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,

And so!—away the ladies' hearts of France;

I thought king Henry had resembled thee,

In courage, courtship and proportion;

But all his mind is bent to holiness:

To number Ave-Maries on his beads;

His champions are—the prophets and apostles;

His weapons, holy says of sacred writ;

His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves

Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.

I would, the college of cardinals

Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome,

And set the triple crown upon his head;

That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was the cause

Your highness came to England, so will I

In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haught protector, have we

Beaufort, [Ham,

The imperious churchman; Somerset, Bucking-

And grumbling York; and not the least of these,

But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these, that can do most of all,

Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:

Salisbury, and Warwick, are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much.

As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife:

She sweeps it through the court with troops of

ladies,

More like an empress than duke Humphrey's wife:

Strangers in court do take her for the queen:

She hears a duke's revenues on her back,

And in her heart she scours our poverty:

Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?

Contumacious base-born calist as she is!

She vaunted 'mongst her minions 't'other day,

'The very train of her worst wearing-gown

Was better worth than all my father's lands,

Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have him'd a hush for her,

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds,

That she will light, to listen to the lute,

And never mount to trouble you again.

So, let her rest: And, madam, list to me,

For I am bold to counsel you in this War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost:

That Maine, which by main force Warwick did win.

And would have kept, so long as breath did last:
Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine;

Which I will win from France, or else be slain.
[Exeunt Warwick and Salisbury.]

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French;
Paris is lost; the state of Normandy stands on a tickle point, now they are gone:
Suffolk concluded on the articles;

The peers agreed; and Henry was well pleas'd
To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.

I cannot blame them all; What is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.
Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,

And purchase friends, and give to courtizans,
Still reveling, like lords, till all be gone:
While as the silly owner of the goods

Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof.

While all is shar'd, and all is borne away:
Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own.

So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
While his own lands are bargain'd for, and sold.

Methinks, the realms of England, France, and Ireland,

Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood,
As did the fatal brand Althaea burn'd
Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.

Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French!
Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,

Even as I have of fertile England's soil.
A day will come, when York shall claim his own;

And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts,
And make a show of love to proud duke Humphrey;

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit:
Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,

Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,
Nor wear the diadem upon his head,

Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.
Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:

Watch thou, and wake, when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state;

Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love, [queen,
With his new bride, and England's dear-bought

Aud Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars:—
Then will I rise aloft the milk-white rose,

With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfume'd;
And in my standard bear the arms of York,

To trample with the house of Lancaster;
And, forsooth, I'll make him yield the crown,

Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England [down.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke of Gloster's House.

Enter Gloster and the Doctress.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd curr,

Hanging thy head at Ceres' plentiful load?
Why doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows,

As frowning at the favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,

Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem,

Enrich'd with all the honours of the world?

If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face.
Until thy head be circled with the same.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold:—

What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine:
And, having both together heav'd it up,

We'll both together lift our heads to heaven;
And never more abuse our sight on low.

As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.
Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy
lord,

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts:
And may that thought, when I imagine ill

Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world!

My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.
Duch. What dream'd my lord? I tell me, and I'll require it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.
Glo. Methought, this staff, mine office-budge in court,

Was broke in twain; by whom, I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was the cardinal;

And, on the pieces of the broken wand [set,
We plac'd the heads of Edmund duke of Somerset

And William de la Poole first duke of Suffolk.
This was my dream; what it doth bode, God knows.

Duch. 'Tis, this was nothing but an argument,
That he that breaks a stick of Gloster's grove,

Shall lose his head for his presumption
But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:

Methought, I sat in seat of majesty,
In the cathedral church of Westminster.

And in that chair where kings and queens are
crown'd;

Where Henry, and dame Margaret, kneel'd to me,
And on my head did wet the diadem.

Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outright:
Presumptuous dame, ill-natur'd Eleanor!

Art thou not second woman in the realm?
And the protector's wife, beloved of him?

Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?

And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband, and thyself,

From top of honour to disgrace's feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you so choleric
With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?

Next time, I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry, I am pleas'd again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure,

You do perceive to ride unto Saint Alban's,
Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go.—Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us!
Duch. Yes, good my lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exeunt Gloster and Messenger.]

Follow I must, I cannot go before,
While Gloster bears this base and humble mind.

Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling blocks,

And smooth my way upon their headless necks:
And, being a woman, I will not be slack

To play my part in fortune's pageant. [mean,
Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not

We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter Hume.

Hume. Jesu preserve your royal majesty!
Duch. What say'st thou, majesty? I am but grave.

Domin of York, we here discharge your grace
From being reput in the parts of France;
Till term of eighteen months be full expir'd.—
Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloster, York, and Buckingham,
Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick;
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in; and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.]

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,
To you do I, Humphrey must unload his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.
What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars!
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toil his wits,
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy!
Or hath mine uncle Beaufort, and myself,
With all the learned council of the realm,
Studied so long, sat in the council-house
Early and late, debating to and fro [awol]
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in
And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labours, and these honours, die!
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war, and all our counsel, die!
O peers of England, shameful is this league!
Fals! this marriage! cancelling your fame:
Blotting your names from books of memory:
Mazing the characters of your renown;
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France;
Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse!

This peroration with such circumstance!

For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;

But now it is impossible we should:

Suffolk. The new-made duke that rules the roast,

Hath given the dutches of Anjou and Maine

Unto the poor king Reimier, whose large style

Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of him that died for all,

Those counties were the keys of Normandy:—

But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valliant son!

War. For grief, that they are past recovery:

For were there hope to conquer them again,

My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no

tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;

Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:

And are the cities, that I got with wounds,

Deliver'd up again with peaceful words!

Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke—may he be suffocate,

That dims the honour of this warlike isle!

France should have torn and rent my very heart

Before I would have yielded to this league.

I never read but England's kings have had

Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives:

And our king Henry gave away his own,

To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before.

That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth,

For costs and charges in transporting her!

She should have staid in France, and starv'd in

Her care.— [France.]

Car. My lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot;
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind

'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,

But 'tis my presence that doth trouble you

Rancour will out: Proud prelate, in thy face

I see thy fury: If I longer stay,

We shall begin our ancient bickerings—

Lordlings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,

I prophesied—France will be lost ere long. [Exit.]

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.

'Tis known to you, he is mine enemy:

Nay, more, an enemy unto you all;

And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.

Consider, lords,—he is the next of blood,

And heir apparent to the English crown;

Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,

And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,

There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.

Look to it, lords; let not his smooching words

Bewitch your hearts; be wise, and circumspect.

What though the common people favour him,

Calling him—Humphrey, the good duke of Gloster;

Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice—

Jesu maintain your royal excellence!

With—God preserve the good duke Humphrey!

I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,

He will be found a dangerous protector. [Reign.]

Buck. Why should he then protect our sove-

He being of age to govern of himself!—

Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,

And all together—with the duke of Suffolk,—

We'll quickly loose duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook delay;

I'll to the duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.]

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride,

And greatness of his place be grief to us,

Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal;

His insolence is more intolerable

Than all the princes in the land beside;

If Gloster be dislodg'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector,

Despight duke Humphrey, or the cardinal.

[Exeunt Buckingham and Somerset.]

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.

While these do labour for their own preferment,

Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey duke of Gloster

Did bear him like a noble gentleman.

Of late I have seen the haughty cardinal—

More like a soldier, than a man o' the church,

As stout, and proud as he were lord of all,—

Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself

Unlike the ruler of a common weal.—

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age!

Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,

Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,

Excepting none but good duke Humphrey.—

And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,

In bringing them to civil discipline;

Thy late exploits, done in the heart of France,

When thou wert recent for our sovereign,

Have made thee fear'd, and honour'd, of the peo-

Join we together, for the pub'ick good; [ple.—]

In what we can, to bridle, and suppress

The pride of Suffolk, and the cardinal.

With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;

And, as we may, cherish duke Humphrey's deeds,

While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the

And common profit of his country! [land.]

York. And so says York, for he hath greatest cause. [the main.]

Sal. Then let's make haste away and look unto SCENE, — dispersedly in various parts of England.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — London. A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of trumpets: then hautboys. Enter, on one side, King Henry, Duke of Gloucester, Salisbury, Warwick, and Cardinal Beaufort; on the other, Queen Margaret, led in by Suffolk; York, Somerset, Buckingham, and others following.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty I had in charge at my depart for France, As procurator to your excellence, To marry princess Margaret for your grace;

So, in the famous ancient city, Tours.—
In presence of the kings of France and Sicil,
The dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alencon. (bishops)

Seven eais, twelve barons, twenty reverend
I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers, Deliver up my title in the queen (since
To your most gracious hands, that are the sub-
Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marriage gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.

K. Hen. Suffolk, arise.—Welcome, queen Mar-
I can express no kinder sign of love. (suff.)
Than this kind kiss.—O Lord, that lends me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!
For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face,
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great king of England, and my gracious lord:

The mutual conference that my mind hath had
By day, by night; waking, and in my dreams;
In courtly company, or at my heels—
With you mine alder-liest sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms; such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister. (speech,

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish; but her grace in
Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me, from wondering, fall to weeping joys;
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.—
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. Long live queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all. (Flourish.
Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,
Here are the articles of contracted peace,
Between our sovereign, and the French king Charles.

For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glo. (Reads.) Imprimis, It is agreed between the French king, Charles, and William de la Poole, marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry king of En-land,—that the said Henry shall espouse the lady
Margaret, daughter unto Reymond king of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem; and crown her queen of En-land, ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. — Item,
—That the dutchy of Arpoyn and the county of Maine,
shall be released and delivered to the king her father.

K. Hen. Uncle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord;
Some sudden quail hath struck me at the heart,
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.
Win. Item,—It is further agreed between them,— that the dutches of Arpoyn and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; — and the seat over of the king of England's own proxy cost and charges, without having money.

K. Hen. They please us well.—Lord marquess
kneel down;

We here create thee the first duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword.—

And ruthless slaughters, as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility;
And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

[Aside to Charles.]

W^{or}. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

Ch^{ar}. It shall:

Only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garnison.

Y^{ork}. Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
As thou art knight, never to disobey,
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England.
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.—

[Charles, and the rest, give tokens of fealty.]

So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hear up your banners, let your drums be still.
For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, in conference with Suffolk; Gloucester and Exeter following.

K. Hen. Your word'rous rare description, noble earl,

Of beautiful Margaret, hath astonish'd me:
Her virtue, graced with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart;
And like as vapour in tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide;
So am I driven, by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. 'Tis but a superficial tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise:
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them.)

Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit.

And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But, with as humble lowliness of mind,
She is content to be at your command:
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry use'r presume.

Therefore, my lord protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Gl^o. So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know, my lord, your luciness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem:

How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach?

Suf. As with a ruler with unlawful oaths;
Or one, that, at a triumph heaving word,
To try his strength, firmeth yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds:

A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Gl^o. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?

Her father is no better than an earl,

Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suf. Yea, my good lord, her father is a king.

The king of Naples, and Jerusalem;

And of such great authority in France,

As his alliance will confirm our peace.

And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Gl^o. And so the earl of Armagnac may do,

Because he is near kinsman unto Charles

Esc. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower:

While Reignier sooner will receive, than give.

Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your
king,

That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love.

Henry is able to enrich his queen,

And not to seek a queen to make him rich:

So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,

As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.

Marriage is a matter of woe worth,

Than to be dealt in by attorneyship;

Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects,

Must be companion of his nuptial bed:

And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,

It most of all these reasons bindeth us,

In our opinions she should be prefer'd.

For what is wedlock forced, but a hell,

An age of discord and continual strife?

Whereas the contrary bringeth forth bliss,

And is a pattern of celestial peace.

Whom should we match with Henry, being a
king,

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?

Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,

Approves her fit for none, but for a king:

Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,

(More than in women commonly is seen.)

Will answer our hope in issue of a king;

For Henry, son unto a conqueror,

Is likely to bear more conquerors,

If with a lady of so high resolve.

As is fair Margaret, he be link'd in love. [Imo.]

Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with

That Margaret shall be queen, and mine but she.

K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,

My noble lord of Suffolk; or for that

My tender youth was never yet attaint

With any passion of inflaming love,

I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd,

I feel such sharp dismission in my breast,

Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,

As I am sick with working of my thoughts.

Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to

France:

Agree to any covenants; and procure

That lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come

To cross the seas to England, and be crown'd

King Henry's faithful and affianced queen:

For your expenses and sufficient charges,

Among the people gather up a tenth.

Be gone, I say; for, till you do return,

I feel perplexed with a thousand cares—

And you, good uncle, banish all offence:

If you do censure me by what you were,

Not what you are, I know it will excuse

This sudden execution of my will.

And so conduct me, where from company

I may revolve and ruminate my grief. [Exit.]

Gl^o. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Exeter.]

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd: and thus we go on,

As did the youthful Paris come to Greece;

With hope to find the like event in love,

But prosper better than the Trojan did.

Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king

But I will rule both her, the king, and realm. [Exit.]

Or else, when thou dost keep my lambs a-field,
I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!
Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab!
O, burn her, burn her; hanging is too good.

(Exit.)

York. Take her away; for she hath liv'd too long.

To fill the world with vicious qualities.

Puc. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:

Not me, herotten of a shepherd swain,
But issu'd from the progeny of kings;
Virtuous, and holy; chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace.

To work exceeding miracles on earth.

I never had to do with wicked spirits;
But you,—that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the sullied blood of innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,—
Because you want the grace that others have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible

To compass wonders, but by help of devils.

No, misconceiv'd! Joan of Arc hath been

A virgin from her tender infancy,

Chaste and immaculate in very thought;

Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,

Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.

York. Ay, ay;—away with her to execution.

War. And mark ye, sire; because she is a maid,
Spare for no favours, let there be enough;
Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting harts?—

Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity;

That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.—

I am with child, ye bloody homicides:

Murder not then the fruit within my womb,

Although ye hurl me to a violent death.

York. Now heaven forefend! the holy maid with child!

War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought:

Is all your strict preciseness come to this!

York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling:

I did imagine what would be her refuge. (Live;)

War. Well, go to: we will have no bastards
Especially, since Charles must father it.

Puc. You are deceiv'd; my child is none of his;
It was Alencon that enjoyed my love.

York. Alencon! that notorious Machiavel!

It dies, as if it had a thousand lives.

Puc. O, give me leave, I have deluded you:
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the duke I nam'd.

But Reigner, king of Naples, that prevail'd.

War. A married man! that's most intolerable.

York. Why, here's a girl! I think, she knows not well.

There were no many, whom she may accuse.

War. It's such, she hath been liberal and free.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.—

Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat, and thee:
Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.

Puc. Then lead me hence;—with whom I leave my curse:

May never glorious sun reflect his beams

Upon the country where you make abode!

But darkness and the gloomy shade of death

Environ you; till quicklie, and despair,

Drive you to break your necks, or hang yourselves! (Exit, guarded.)

York. Break thou in pieces, and consume to ashes.

Thou foul accursed minister of hell.

Enter Cardinal Beaufort, attended.

Cor. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
With letters of commission from the king.

For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous bruis,

Have earnestly import'd a general peace
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French.

And here at head the Dauphin, and his train,
Approacheth to confer some matter

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect!

After the slaughter of so many peers,

So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,

That in this quarrel have been overthrow'n,

And sold their bodies for their country's benefit

Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace!

Have we not lost most part of all the towns,

By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,

Our great prepossession has conquered with grief

O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief

The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a

peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants

As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter Charles, attended; Alencon, Bastard, Reigner, and others.

Chor. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,

We come to be inform'd by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our baleful enemies.

Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:

That—in regard king Henry gives consent,

Of mere compassion, and of lenity,

To ease your country of distressful war,

And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,—

You shall become true liegemen to his crown;

And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear

To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,

Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,

And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself!

Adorn his temples with a coronet;

And yet, in substance and authority,

Retain but privilege of a private man?

This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Chor. 'Tis known, already, that I am pressur'd

With more than half the Gallien terrours.

And therein reverence for their lawful king,

Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,

Detract so much from that prerogative,

As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?

No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep

That which I have, than, coveting for more,

Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means

Used intercession to obtain a league;

And, now the matter grows to compromise,

Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?

Either accept the title thou usurp'st,

Or benefit proceeding from our king.

And not of any challenge of desert.

Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy

To cavil in the course of this contract:

If once it be neglected, ten to one,

We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy

To save your subjects from such massacre,

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose
Your bondage happy, to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage, is more vile,
Than is a slave in true servility;
For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,
If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen;
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand,
And set a precious crown upon thy head,
If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What?

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am

To woo so fair a dame to be his wife,

And have no portion in the choice myself.

How say you, madam; are you so content?

Mar. As if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains, and our colours,
And, madam, at your father's castle walls [forth:
We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

[Troops come forward.

A parley sounded. Enter Reiguiet, on the walls.

Suf. Sen, Reiguiet, we, thy daughter prisoner.

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?

I am a soldier: and unapt to weep,

Or to explain on fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:

Consent, (and for thy honour, give consent.)

Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king:

Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;

And this her easy-held imprisonment

Shall gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows

That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend

To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit, from the walls.

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming.

Trumpets sounded. Enter Reiguiet, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories;

Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reiguiet, happy for so sweet a child,

Fit to be made companion with a king:

What answer makes your grace unto my suit?

Reig. Since thou dost design to woo her little while,

To be the princely bride of such a lord;

Upon condition I may quietly

Enjoy mine own, the county Maine, and Anjou,

Free from oppression, or the stroke of war,

My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom, I deliver her;

And those two counties, I will undertake,

Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again,—in Henry's royal name,

As deputy unto that gracious king,

Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reiguiet of France, I give thee kingly

thanks,

Because this is in traffick of a king:

And yet, methinks, I could be well content

To be mine own attorney in this case. [Aside.

I'll over then to England with this news,

And make this marriage to be solemniz'd;

So, farewell, Reiguiet! Set this diamond safe

In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian prince, King Henry, were he here.

Mar. Farewell, my lord! Good wishes, praise, and prayers.

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going.

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam! But hark you,
Margaret;

No princely commendations to my king?

Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,
A virgin, and his servant, suit to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestly directed.

But, madam, I must trouble you again,—

No loving token to his majesty?

Mar. Yes, my good lord; a pure unpoth'd
heart,

Never yet tint with love, I send the king.

Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.

Mar. That for thyself; I will not so presume,
To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Kisses Reiguiet and Margaret.

Suf. O, wert thou for myself!—But, Suffolk, stay;

Thou may'st not wander in that labyrinth;

There Minotaurs, and ugly treasons, lurk.

Solicit Henry with her word/rous praise:

Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount;

Nad, natural graces that extinguish art;

Repeat their semblance often on the seas,

That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,

Thou may'st beseach him of his wife with wonder. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Camp of the Duke of York, in Anjou.

Enter York, Warwick, and others.

York. Bring forth that scorchers, condemn'd to burn.

Enter La Pucelle, guarded, and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan! this kills thy father's heart outright!

Have I sought every country far and near,

And, now it is my chance to find thee out,

Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?

Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with
thee!

Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!

I am descended of a gentler blood!

Thou art no father, nor no friend, of mine.

Shep. Out, out!—My lords, an please you, 'tis not so;

I did hearst her, all the parish knows:

Her mother liveth yet, can testify

She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parent-age? [Heu;

York. This argues what her kind of life hath Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fye, Joan! that thou wilt be so obstacle!

God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh;

And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:

Deny me not, I prythee, gentle Joan.

Puc. Peasant, avant!—You have suborn'd
this man,

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest,

The morn that I was wedded to her mother.—

Kneel down and take my blessing, and my girl

Wilt thou not stoop? Now, cursed be the time

Of thy nativity! I would, the milk

Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her

breast,

Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake!

into two parts, is now conjoin'd in one;

And means to give you battle presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden, sir, the warning is;
But we will presently provide for them.

Mar. I trust, the ghost of Talbot is not there;
Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Fuc. Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd:—
Command the cynocent, Charles, it shall be thine;

Let Henry first, and all the world reprove.

Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. Before Angiers.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter La Pucelle.

Fuc. The regent conquerors, and the Frenchmen
By—

Now help, ye charming spells, and periapts;
And ye choice spirits that admonish me
And give me signs of future accidents! [Thunder.]

You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Fiends.

This speedy quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustomed diligence to me.

Now, ye familiar spirits, that are call'd
Out of the powerful regions under earth,
Help me this once, that France may yet the field.

[They walk about and speak not.]

O, hold me not with silence over-long!
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
I'll lop a member off, and give it you,
In earnest of a further benefit;

So you do condescend to help me now.
[They hang their heads.]

No hope to have redress!—My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.]
Cannot my body, nor blood sacrifice,
Entreat you to your wonted furtherance?

Then take my soul; my body, soul, and all,
Before that England give the French the foil.

[They depart.]
See! they forsake me. Now the time is come,
That France must veil her lofty-plumed crest,
And let her head fall into England's lap.
My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to baskle with;
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.
[Exit.]

Alarums. Enter French and English. Fighting. La Pucelle is taken. The French fly.

York Damsel of France, I think, I have you fast:
Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
And try if they can gain your liberty.—
A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!

See, how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,
As if, with Circe, she would change my shape.

Fuc. Change'd to a worse shape thou canst not be.

York. O, Charles the Dauphin is a proper man;
No shape but his can misce thy dainty eye.

Fuc. A plucking mischief light on Charles, and these!

And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell, hanning hag! enchantress, hold thy tongue.

Fuc. I prythee, give me leave to curse a while.
York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake.
[Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter Suffolk, leading in Lady Margaret.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.
[Gazzes on her.]

O fairest beauty, do not fear, nor fly;
For I will touch thee but with reverent hands,
And lay them gently on thy tender side.

I kiss these fingers [Kisses her hand.] for eternal
peace:

Who art thou I say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name; and daughter to a
The king of Naples,—whose'er thou art, [king.]

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.
Be not offended, nature's miracle.

Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me:
So doth the swan her downy cygnet save.

Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings.
Yet if this servile usage once offend,
Go, and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going.]
O, stay!—I have no power to let her pass;
My hand would free her, but my heart says—no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,
Twinkling another counterfeited beam,
So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.

Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak:
I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind:

Ere, De la Foole! I dabble not myself!
Hast not a tongue? Is she but here thy prisoner?

Wilt thou be doted at a woman's will?
Ay; beauty's princely majesty is such, [rough.]

Confounds the tongue, and makes the senses
Mar. Say, earl of Suffolk,—if thy name be so,—
What ransom must I pay before I pass?

For, I perceive, I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell, she will deny thy suit,
Before thou make a trial of her love? [Aside.]

Mar. Why speak'st thou not I what ransom must I pay?

Suf. She's beautiful; and therefore to be woo'd;
She is a woman; therefore to be won. [Aside.]

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom, yea, or no?

Suf. Fool man! remember, that thou hast a wife;

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour? [Aside.]

Mar. I were best leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.
Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had. [me.]

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer
Suf. I'll win this lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king! 'Tush! that's a wooden thing.

Mar. He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.
Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace established between these realms.

But there remains a scruple in that too:
For though her father be the king of Naples,
Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor.

And our nobility will scorn the match. [Aside.]

Mar. Hear ye, captain? Are you not at leisure?

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they not so much:
Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield.—

Madam, I have a secret to reveal. [knights.]

Mar. What, though I be enthrall'd? Is he come?
And will not any way dishonour me. [Anne.]

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.
Mar. Perhaps, I shall be requit'd by the French;
And then I need not crave his courtesy. [Anne.]

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause.—
Mar. 'Tush! women have been captiv'd ere
now.
Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?
Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quest for quest.

Couldst see in the Dauphin's tent; to know
Who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.

Char. On what submissive message art thou sent?

Lacy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French
We English warriors wot not what it means.
I come to know what prisoners thou hast taken,
And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou I tell our prison
But tell me whom thou seek'st?

Lacy. Where is the great Aiguillon of the field,
Villain lord Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury?
Created, for his rare success in arms,
Great earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence;
Lord Talbot of Gooding and Urringfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmere, lord Verdon of Alton, Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, lord Furnival of Sheffield.

The thrice victorious lord of Falconbridge;
Knight of the noble order of Saint George,
Worthy Saint Michael and the golden fleece;
Great marshal to Henry the sixth.
Of all his wars within the realm of France!

Puc. Here is a nifty state style indeed!
The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms hath,
Writes not so tedious a style as this.
Him, that so magnificent with all these titles,
Stinking, and fly-blown, lies here at our feet.

Lacy is Talbot slain—the Frenchmen's only scourge,

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis!
O, were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,
That I, in rage, might shoot them at your faces!
O, that I could but call these dead to life!
It were enough to fright the realm of France;
Were but his picture left among you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.

Give me their bodies: that I may bear them hence,
And give them burial as becometh their worth.

Puc. I think, this upstart is old Talbot's ghost.
He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.
For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them
They would but stink, and putrefy the air. [here,
Char. Go, take their bodies hence.

Lacy. I'll bear them hence;
But from their ashes shall be rear'd

A phoenix that shall make all France afraid.

Char. So we be rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt.

And now to Paris, in this conquering vein;
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, and Exeter.

K. Hen. Have you perus'd the letters from the
The emperor, and the earl of Armagnac?

Glo. I have, my lord; and their intent is this,—
They humbly sue unto your excellence,

To have a goodly peace concluded of.
Between the realms of England and of France.

K. Hen. How dith your grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only means
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And 'establish quietness on every side.

K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought,
It was both impious and unnatural.

That such immunity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glo. Beside, my lord,—the sooner to effect,

And surer bind, this knot of amity,—

The earl of Armagnac—near knit to Charles,

A man of great authority in France,—

Proffers his only daughter to your grace

In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.

K. Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas! my years are

And titer is my study and my books, [young];

Than wanton dalliance with a paramour.

Yet, call the ambassadors; and, as you please,

So let them have their answers every one;

I shall be well content with any choice,

Tends to God's glory, and my country's weal.

Enter a Legate, and two Ambassadors, with Winchester, in a Cardinal's habit.

Exe. What! as my lord of Winchester install'd,
And call'd unto a cardinal's degree!

Then, I perceive, that will be verified.

Henry the fifth did sometime prophesy,—

If once he come to be a cardinal,

He'll make his cap co-rent with the crown.

K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits

Have been consider'd and debated on.

Your purposes is both good and reasonable;

And, therefore, are we certainly resolv'd

To draw conditions of a friendly peace;

Which, by my lord of Winchester, we mean

Shall be transported presently to France.

Glo. And for the proffer of my lord your master,—

I have inform'd his highness so at large,

As—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,

Her beauty, and the voice of her dowry,—

He doth intend she shall be England's queen

K. Hen. In argument and proof of which contract,

Bear her this jewel, [to the Amb.] pledge of my affection.

And so, my lord protector, see them guarded.

And safely brought to Dover; where, unhapp'd,

Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

[Exeunt King Henry, and Gloucester; Gloucester,

Exeter, and Ambassadors

Win. Stay, my lord legate; you shall first receive the sum of money, which I promised [leave

Should be deliver'd to his business

For clothing us in these grave ornaments.

Ley. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.

Win. Now, Winchester will not submit, I trow,

Or be inferior to the proudest peer.

Humphrey of Gloucester, thou shalt well perceive,

That, neither in birth, or for authority,

The bishop shall be overborne by thee:

I'll either make thee stoop, and bend thy knee.

Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter Charles, Barzundy, Alencon, La Pucelle, and Forces, marching.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:

'Tis said, the stout Normans do revolt,
And turn again unto the warlike French.

Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of
France,

And keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn to us:
Else, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Messenger.

Mass. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplices!

Char. What tidings send our scouts? I prythee,
speak.

Mass. The English army, that divided was

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from your side,
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide:
Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I;
For live I will not, if my father die. [son.]

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair
Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die:
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. — A Field of Battle.

Alarum: Excursions, wherein Talbot's Son is hemmed about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!

The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the race of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot? — pause, and take thy breath;

I gave thee life, and rescue'd thee from death.

John. O twice my father! twice am I thy son:
The life thou gav'st me first, was lost and done;
Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-faced victory. Then leaden axe,

Quicken'd with youthful spleen, and warlike rage,
Beat down Alencon, Orleans, Burgundy,

And from the pride of Gallia rescue'd thee.
The ireful bastard Orleans—that drew blood

From thee, my boy; and had the maidenhood
Of thy first fight—I soon encountered;

And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood; and, in disgrace,
Bespoke him thus: Contaminated, base,

And misbegotten blood I spill of thine,

Mean and right poor; for that pure blood of mine,
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy:—

Here, purpurs the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care;

Art not thou weary, John? How didst thou fare?

Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?

Fly, to revenge my death, when I am dead;
The help of one stands me in little stead.

O, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small bout.

If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age;

By me they nothing gain, as if I stay,
'Tis but the shortening of my life one day:

In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,
My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame:

All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay;
All these are sav'd, if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart, [heart:]

These words of yours draw life-blood from my
On that advantage, bought with such a shame,

(To save a paltry life, and slay right fame.)
Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly.

The coward horse, that bears me, full and dill;
And like me to the peasant boys of France:

To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance!
Surely, by all the glory you have won,

As if I fly, I am not Talbot's son:
Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot;

If soon to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot. [Crete, Tal.]
Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Thou loathe; thy life to me is sweet:

If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side;
And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII — Another Part of the same.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Talbot wounded, supported by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life? — mine own is gone! —

O, where's young Talbot? where's valiant John! — Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity!

Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee: —
When he perceiv'd me shrink, and on my knee,

His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,
And, like a hungry lion, did commence

Rough deeds of rage, and stern impatience;
But when my angry guardant stood alone,

'Tend'ring my ruin, and assaul'd of nose,
Dizzy-eyed fury, and great rage of heart,

Suddenly made him from my side to start
Into the clashing battle of the French:

And in that sea of blood my eye did drench
His overmounting spirit; and there died

My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Servants, bearing in the body of John Talbot.

Serv. O my dear lord I lo, where your son as borne! [to score,]

Tal. Thou antic death, which laugh'st at us here
Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,

Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,

In thy despite shall 'scape mortality —
O thou whose wounds become hard-favour'd

death,

Speak to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath:
Brave death by speaking, whether he will, or no;

Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe —
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks; as who should say — [day]

Had death been French, then death had died to-Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms;

My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Soldiers, adieu! I leave what I would have.

Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave. [Dies.]

Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies. Enter Charles, Alencon, Burgundy, Bastard, La Pucelle, and Forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in,
We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging wound,

Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said,
Thou maiden youth, be conquer'd by a maid:

But—with a proud mystical high scorn,—
He answered thus: Young Talbot was not born

To be the pillage of a virgin wench:
So, rushing in the bowels of the French,

He left me proudly, as unworthy fight. [knights:]
But, Doubtless, he would have made a noble

Serv. where he lies inhearn'd in the arms
Of the most bloody nurner of his harms.

Bast. How them to pieces, hack their bones asunder!

Where life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.
Char. O, no; to bear: for that which we have lost

During the life, let us not wroug it dead.

Enter Sir William Lucy, attended; a French Herald preceding.

Lucy. Herald,

To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux, York!
Else, far-well Talbot, France, and England's honour.

York. O God! that Somerset—who in proud
Duch stup my cornets—were in Talbot's place!
So should we have a valiant gentleman,
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire, and wrathful fury, makes me weep
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

Lacy. O, send some succour to the distressed
lord!

York. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike
We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily
All 'long of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lacy. Then, God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul!

And on his son, young John; whom, two hours
I met in travel toward his warlike father!
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;
And now they meet where both their lives are
done.

York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his young son welcome to his grave!
Away! vexation almost stops my breath,
That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of death.—
Lacy, farewell! no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.—
Mauco, Blais, Poitiers, and Tours are won away.
'Long all of Somerset, and his delay. [Exit.]

Lacy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bowels of such great commanders,
Sleeping neglectful duch betray to loss
The conquest of our scarce-won conquests,
That ever-living man of memory,
Henry the fifth.—Whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honour, lands, and all, hurry to loss. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Other Plains of Gascony.

Enter Somerset, with his Forces; an Officer of Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now;
This expedition was by York, and Talbot,
Too rashly plotted; all our general force
Might with a rally of the very town
Be buckled with; the over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his glory of former honour,
By this unbecomful, desperate, wild adventure:
York set him on to fight, and die in shame,
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Off. Here is sir William Lacy, who with me
Set from our o'er-match'd forces forth for aid.

Enter Sir William Lacy.

Som. How now, sir William! whither were you sent?

Lacy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold
Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions.
And whiles the honourable captain there
Drops bloodless sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage lying, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's
honour,

Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid.
Whiles he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yields up his life unto a world of odds:
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, and Burgundy,
Alencon, Rouen, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on, York should have sent him aid.

Lacy. And York as fast upon your grace ex-
Swearing that you withhold his levied host,
Collected for this expedition. [The horse;

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had
I owe him little duty, and less love:

And take fool scorn, to fawn on him by sending.
Lacy. The fraud of England, not the force of
France,

Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot:
Never to England shall he bear his life;
But dies, betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will despatch the bursemen
straight:

Within six hours they will be at his aid. [Re-enter]

Lacy. Too late comes rescue; he is then, or
For fly he could not, if he would have fled;
And fly would Talbot never, though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot then adieu!
Lacy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot and John his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee,
To tutor thee in stratagems of war;
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd,
When spleen are, and weak unstable limbs,
Should bring thy father to his dropping chair.

But,—O malignant and ill-boding stars!—
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unapproach'd danger:

Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse;
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight; come, dally not, begone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your son?
And shall I fly? O, if you love my mother,
Dis honour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard, and a slave of me:

The world will say,—He is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled, when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.
John. He, that flies us, will ne'er return again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.
John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly.

Your loss is great, so your regard should be:
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.

Upon my death the French can ill be bent;
In yours they will—in you all hopes are lost.

Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;
But mine it will, that no exploit have done:

You fled for vantage, every one will swear;
But, if I live, they'll say it was for fear.

There is no hope that ever I will stay.
If, the first hour, I shrink, and run away.

Here, on my knee, I beg mortality,
Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's
Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee so.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.
Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him, but will be shame in me.
Tal. Those never had'st reason, nor must not lose it.

John. Yes, your renowned name; Shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If death be so apparent, then both fly. [Die.]
Tal. And leave my followers here, to fight and
My age was never tainted with such shame.

That for a trifle, that was bought with blood!
Let me be unpair in this doubtful strife.
I see no reason, if I wear this rose,

I deduce on a red rose.
That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset than York:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both:
As well they may upbraid me with my crown,
Because, forsooth, the king of Scots is crown'd.
But your discretions better can persuade,
Than I am able to instruct or teach:
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.—
Cousin of York, we institute your grace
To be our regent in these parts of France:—
And good my lord of Somerset, unite
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot:—
And, like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together, and digest
Your angry choler on your enemies.
Ourselves, my lord protector, and the rest,
After some respite, will return to Calais;
From thence to England, where I hope are long
To be presented, by your victories.

With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout (Flourish. Enter King Henry, Glo. Son

*War. My lord of York, I promise you, the king
Practis'd, methought, did play the orator.
York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,
In that he wears the badge of Somerset.*

*War. 'Tush! that was but his fancy, blame him
not;*

I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm.
York. And if I wot he did.—But let it rest;
Other affairs must now be managed.

*(Enter York, Warwick, and Vernon.)
Ecc. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy rival.*

For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there
More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils,
Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd.
But howe'er, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of nobility,
'Tis should ring of each other in the court,
This loathsome bandying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.

'Tis much, when sceptres are in children's hands:
But more, when envy breeds unkind division;
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpet.
Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, on the walls, the General of the French Forces, and others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry king of England;
And thus he would:—Open your city gates,
Be humble to us: call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects,
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power:
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire;
Who, in a moment, even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-breaving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. 'Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody avenger!

The period of thy tyranny approacheth.

On us thou canst not enter, but by death:
For, I protest, we are well fortified;
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the armies of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squamous pitch'd
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
To rive thee in dangerous artillery
Upon us Christian soul and English Talbot.
Lo! there thou stand'st, a trembling valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit:
'Tis in the last of glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, due thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

(Drum after off.)

Hark! hark! the dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy music to thy numerous soul;
And mine shall ring thy dire depart ure out.

(Enter General, &c. from the walls.)

Tal. He fails not, I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.—

O, negligent and heedless discipline!
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale;
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Muzz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be then in blood:
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch;
But rather, bloody-mad, and desperate stage,
Turn on the bloody bounds with heads of steel,
And make the coward stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine.
And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.—
God, and Saint George! Talbot, and England's
right,

Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!

(Exeunt.)

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter York, with Forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the dauphin?
Mess. They are return'd, my lord; and gave it out.

That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power
To fight with Talbot: As he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered
Two nightier troops than that the dauphin led;
Which join'd with him, and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset;
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Remembered Talbot doth expect my aid;
And I am lorded by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chivalier:
God comfort him in this necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English
strength,

Never as needful on the earth of France,
Sour to the rescue of the noble Talbot;
Who now is girded with a waist of iron,
And bound'd about with a steel destruction:

Before we met, or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire, did run away;
In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself, and divers gentlemen beside,
Were there surpris'd, and taken prisoners.
Then judge, great lords, if I have done amies;
Or whether that such towards ought to wear
This ornament of knight-hood, yea, or no.
Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous,
And ill becoming any common man;
Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader.
Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords,

Knights of the garter were of noble birth;
Valiant, and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress
But always resolute in most extremes.
He then, that is not furnished in this sort,
Dare but usurp the sacred name of knight,
Profaning this most honourable order;
And should (if I were worthy to be judge,)
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.

K. Hen. Stain to thy countrymen! thou hear'st thy doom:

Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight;
Henceforth we banish thee, on pain of death.—
[Exit Fastolf.]

And now, my lord protector, view the letter
Sent from our uncle duke of Burgundy.

Glo. What means his grace, that he hath charg'd his style?

[Viewing the superscription.]
No more but, plain and bluntly, — To the king!
Hath he forgot, he is his sovereign!
Or doth this churlish superscription
Pretend some alteration in good will?
What's here! — I have, upon especial cause, — [Reads.]

Mov'd with compassion of my country's wreck,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds upon, —
Forsook your pernicious faction.

And join'd with Charles, the rightful king of France.
O monstrous treachery! Can this be so;
That in alliance, aid, and oaths,
There should be found such false dissembling
guile! [voit.]

K. Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy re-
Glo. He doth, my lord; and is become your foe.
K. Hen. Is that the worst, this letter doth contain?

Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.
K. Hen. Why then, lord Talbot there shall talk
with him,

And give him chastisement for this abuse: —
My lord, how may you? are you not content?

Tal. Content, my liege! Yes; but that I am prevented.

I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd.
K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight:

Let him perceive, how ill we brook his treason;
And what offence it is, to doubt his friends.

Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still,
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.]

Enter Vernon and Basset.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign!
Bas. And me, my lord, grant me the combat too!

Ver. This is my servant; Hear him, noble
prince!

Bas. And this is mine; Sweet Henry, favour
him!

K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave
to speak. —

Say, gentlemen, What makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom?

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong. [Wrong.]

Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me
K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both complain?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you
Bas. Crossing the sea from England into France,
This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the rose I wear;

Saying — the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth,
About a certain question in the law.

Arr'd betwixt the duke of York and him;
With other vile and ignominious terms:
In confutation of which rude reproach,
And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms.

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:
For though he seem, with forged quaint conceit,
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him;

And he first took exceptions at this badge,
Pronouncing — that the paleness of this flower
Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?
Som. Your private grudge, my lord of York, will out,

Though he'll so cunningly you smother it.
K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness rules in brain-sick men;

When, for so slight and frivolous a cause,
Such factious emulations shall arise! —
Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.

York. Let this dissension first be tried by fight,
And then your highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;
Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset.
Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.
Glo. Confirm it so! Confounded be your strife!
And perish ye, with your audacious prate!

Presumptuous vassals! are you not ashamed,
With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the king and us?

And you, my lords, — methinks, you do not well,
To bear with their perverse objections;
Much less, to take occasion from their mouths
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves;

Let me persuade you, take a better course.
Exc. It grieves his highness: — Good my lords, be friends. [Mutatis.]

K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be com-
Henceforth, I charge you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this quarrel, and the cause. —
And you, my lords, — remember where we are;
In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation:

If they perceive dissension in our looks,
And that within ourselves we disagree,
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilful disobedience, and rebel?

Beside, What infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified,
That, for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henry's peers, and chief nobility,
Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of
France!

O, think upon the conquest of my father,
My tender years: and let us not forgo

By wounding ruin of the cruel foe!
As looks the mother on her lovely babe,
When death doth close his tender dying eyes,
See, see the pining malady of France;
Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,
Which thou thyself hast given her woful breast!
O, turn thy edged sword another way; (help!)
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that One drop of blood, draw from thy country's bosom.

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign
Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears,
And wash away thy country's stained spots!

Ber. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her
words,

Or nature makes me suddenly relent. [on thee,
Puc. Besides, all French and France exclaims
Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.

Who justify thou with, but with a lovely nation,
That will not trust thee, but for profit's sake!
When Talbot hath set footing once in France,
And fastidied thee that instrument of ill,
Who thou, but English Henry, will be lord,
And thou be thrust out, like a fugitive!

I'll we to mind,—and mark but this, for proof;—
Was not the duke of Orleans thy foe?
And was he not in England prisoner?

But, when they heard he was thine enemy,
They set him free, without his ransom paid.

In spite of Burgundy, and all his friends.
See then! thou fight'st against thy countrymen.

And join'st with them which will be thy slaughter-men!
Come, come, return; return, thou want'st no lord;
Charles, and the rest, will take thee in their arms.

Ber. I am vanquished; these haughty words of her's

Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees.—
Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen!

And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace:
My forces and my power of men are yours;—
So, farewell, Talbot! I'll no longer trust thee.

Puc. Dost thou like a Frenchman; turn, and turn again!

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in
And doth deserve a coronet of gold. [powers;

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our
And seek how we may prejudice the foe.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Paris. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, and other Lords, Vernon, Bassett, &c. To them Talbot, and some of his Officers.

Tal. My gracious prince,—and honourable peers,—

Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have awhile given truce unto my wars,
To do my duty to my sovereign:

In sign whereof, this arm,—that hath reclaim'd
To your obedience fifty fortresses.

Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,
Landed five hundred prisoners of esteem.

Let fall his sword before your highness' feet;
And, with submissive loyalty of heart,

Ascribes the glory of his conquest got,
First to my God, and next unto your grace.

K. Hen. Is this the lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester,
That hath so long been resident in France?

Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.

K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain, and victorious lord!

When I was young, (as yet I am not old,)
I do remember how my father said,

A stouter champion never handled sword.
Long since we were resolved of your truth,

Your faithful service, and your toil in war;
Yet never have you tasted our reward.

Or been requerd of so much as thanks,
Because till now we never saw your face:

Therefore, stand up; and, for these good deserts,
We here create you earl of Shrewsbury;

And in our coronation take your place.

[Exeunt King Henry, Gloucester, Talbot and Nobles.]

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,
Disgracing of the colours that I wear

In honour of my noble lord of York.—
Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?

Bas. Yes, sir: as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your saucy tongue

Against my lord, the duke of Somerset.

Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.

Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as York.

Ver. Har'ke ye; not as: in wisdom take ye that [Strikes him.]

Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such,

That, whose draws a sword, 'tis present death;
Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood.

But I'll use a his majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to venge this wrong:

When thou shalt see, I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Ver. Well, maccreant, I'll be there as soon as
you,

And, after, meet you sooner than you would.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room of State.

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, Exeter, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Winchester, Warwick, Talbot, the Governor of Paris, and others.

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Wm. God save king Henry, of that name the sixth!

Glo. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath.—
[Governor kneels.]

That you elect no other king but him:

Eaten none friends, but such as are his friends;

And none your foes, but such as shall pretend
Malicious practices against his state.

That shall ye do, so help you righteous God!

[Exeunt Gov. and his Train.]

Enter Sir John Fastolfe.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais

To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,

Writ to your grace from the duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the duke of Burgundy, and thee.

I would, base knight, when I did meet thee next,
To tear the garter from thy craven's leg.

[Plucking it off.]

(Which I have done) because unworthily
Thou wast installed in that high degree—

Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,

When hat in all I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one.—

For Talbot means no goodness, by his looks.
God be wi' you, my lord! we came, sir, but to
That we are here.

(Exeunt La Pucelle, &c. from the walls.)

Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be long.
Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest shame!—
Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house, (Prick'd on by publick wrongs sustain'd in France.)

Either to get the town again, or die:
And I,—as sure as English Henry lives,
And as his father here was conqueror;
As sure as in this late-betrayed town
Great Cesar-de-lion's heart was barried;
So sure I swear, to get the town, or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy own.
Tal. But, ere we go, regard this dying prince,
The valiant duke of Bedford:—Come, my lord,
We will bestow you in some better place,
Fitter for sickness, and for crazy age.

Bur. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me:
Here will I sit before the walls of Rouen,
And will be partner of your weal or woe.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade
you.

Bur. Not to be gone from hence; for once I
That stout Pendragon, in his litter, sick,
Came to the field, and vanquished his foes:
Methinks, I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Unlambent spirit in a dying breast!—
Then be it so:—Heaven keep old Bedford safe!—
And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,
But gather we our forces out of hand,
And set upon our hoasting enemy.

(Exeunt Burgundy, Talbot, and Forest, leaving Bedford, and others.)

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Sir John Fastolfe, and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste!

Fast. Whither away! to save myself by flight;
We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What! will you fly, and leave lord Talbot!

Fast. Ay,
All the Talbots in the world, to save my life.

Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee!
(Exit.)

*Retreat: Excursions. Enter, from the town, La Pucelle, Alencon, Charles, &c. and exeunt.
Alone.*

Bur. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven pleases:

For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.

What is the trust or strength of foolish man!

They, that of late were daring with their scoffs,

Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

(Dies, and is carried off in his chair.)

Alarum: Enter Talbot, Burgundy, and others.

Tal. Lost, and recover'd! in a day again!

This is a double honour, Burgundy:

Yet, heaven have glory for this victory!

Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy

Enshrines thee in his heart; and there erects

'Tis noble deeds, as valour's monument. [now!

Tal. T'was a gentle duke. But where is Pucelle?

I think, her old familiar is asleep:

Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his glories? [Grief.

What, all a-morr! Rouen hangs her head for

'Tis such a valiant company are fled.

Now will we take some order in the town,
Placing therein some expert officers;
And then depart to Paris, to the king:
For there young Harry, with his nobles, lies.

Bur. What wills lord Talbot, pleasest Burgundy.

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
The noble duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen;
A braver soldier never couched lance,
A gentler heart did never away in court:
But kings, and mightiest potentates, must die:
For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. The Plains near the City

Enter Charles, the Bastard, Alencon, La Pucelle and Forces.

Pac. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered:
Care is no cure, but rather curative,
For things that are not to be remedied.

Let frastok Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a peacock sweep along his tail:
We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train,
If Dauphin, and the rest, will be but rul'd.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy cunning had no diffidence;
One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the world.
Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,
And have thee reverend like a blessed saint;
Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Pac. Then thus it must be; thus doth Joan devise;

By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
We will entice the duke of Burgundy
To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.

Char. Ay, marry, sweetest, if we could do that,
France were no place for Henry's warriors;
Nor should that nation boast it so with us.

But be extirp'd from our provinces. [France,

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'd from
And not have title to an earldom here. [work,

Pac. Your honours shall perceive how I will
To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drums heard.

Hark, by the sound of drum, you may perceive
Their powers are marching un-o Paris-ward.

An English March. Enter and pass over at a distance, Talbot and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread;
And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. *Enter the Duke of Burgundy
and Forces.*

Now, in the rearward, comes the duke, and his;
Fortune, in favour, makes him lag behind;
Summon a parley, we will talk with him.

[A parley sounded.

Char. A parley with the duke of Burgundy.

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy!

Pac. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles! for I am marrouing hence. [thy words.

Char. Speak, Pucelle: and enchant him with

Pac. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of
France!

Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious.

Pac. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,
And see the cities and the towns desol'd

K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone.
But all the whole inheritance I give.

That doth bring unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plea. Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop then, and set your knees against my feet!

And, in reversion of that duty done.

I girt thee with the valiant sword of York:

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet;

And rise created princely duke of York.

Plea. And so thrive Richard, as thy foes may

And as my duty springs, so perish they. [fall]

That girdle one thought against your majesty!

All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty duke of York!

Som. Perish, base prince, ignoble duke of York!

[Aside.]

Glo. Now will it best avail your majesty.

To cross the seas, and to be crown'd in France:

The presence of a king engenders love

Amongst his subjects, and his loyal friends;

As it dissimulates his enemies.

K. Hen. When Gloucester says the word, king
Henry goes;

For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.

Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Exc. Ay. we may march in England, or in
Not seeing what is likely to ensue: [France.]

This late dissension grown betwixt the peers

Burns under feigned ashes of feign'd love.

And will at last break out into a flame:

As feasted members rot but by degrees.

Till bones, and flesh, and sinews, fall away.

So will this base and envious discord breed.

And now I fear that fatal prophecy.

Which, in the time of Henry nam'd the fifth,

Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,—

That Henry, born at Monmouth, should win all;

And Henry, born at Windsor, should lose all:

Which is so plain, that Gloucester dith wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Before Rouen.

Enter La Pucelle disguised, and Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen.

Through which our policy must make a breach:

Take heed, be wary how you place your words;

Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men,

That come to gather money for their corn.

If we have entrance, (as I hope, we shall.)

And that we find the cheerful watch but weak,

I'll by a sign give notice to our friends.

That Charles the dauphin may encounter them.

I Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the

And we be lords and rulers over Rouen; [city.]

Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks.]

Guar'd [Within.] Qui est là?

Puc. Paysans, pauvres gens de France:

Poor market-folks, that come to sell their corn.

Guar'd. Enter, go in: the market bell is rung.

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy inward to the ground. [Pucelle, &c. enter the city.]

Enter Charles, Bastard of Orleans, Alencon, and

Forces.

Chor. Saint Dennis bless this happy stratagem!

And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle, and her practitioners;

Now she is there, how will she specify

Where is the best and safest passage in?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower: [Alen.]

Which, once discern'd, shows, that her meaning
No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter La Pucelle on a battlement; holding out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding torch

That joyneth Rouen unto her countrymen:

But burning fatal to the traitors. [friend.]

Bast. See, noble Charles! the beacon of our

The burning torch in yonder turret stands

Chor. Now shine it like a comet of revenge

A prophet to the fall of all our foes!

Alen. Defer no time, Delays have dangerous ends;

Enter, and cry—The Dauphin!—presently.

And then do execution on the watch. [They enter.]

Alarums. Enter Talbot, and certain English.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears.

If Talbot but survive thy treachery,—

Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,

Hath wrought this hellish mischief unawares,

That hardly we escap'd the pride of France.

[Exeunt to the town.]

*Alarums: Excursions. Enter, from the town, Bedford, brought in sick, in a chair, with Talbot, Burgundy, and the English Forces. Then, enter on the walls, La Pucelle, Charles, Bastard, Alencon,
and others.*

Puc. Good morrow, gallants! want ye corn for bread?

I think, the duke of Burgundy will fast,

Before he'll buy again at such a rate:

'Twas full of darnel; Do you like the taste?

Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend, and shameless countezan!

I trust, ere long, to choke thee with thine own.

And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Chor. Your grace may starve, perhaps, before that time. [Treason!]

Bed. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge this

Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard? I break a lance.

And run a tilt at death within a chair!

Tal. Fool fiend of France, and hag of all despite,

Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours!

Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age,

And twit with cowardice a man half dead?

Damuel, I'll have a bout with you again,

Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are you so hot, sir?—Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.—

[Talbot, and the rest, consult together.]

God speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker?

Tal. Dare ye come forth, and meet us in the field? [fools.]

Puc. Believe, your lordship takes us then for to try if that our own be ours, or no.

Tal. I speak not of that railing Hecate!

But unto thee, Alencon, and the rest:

Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior, hang!—base muleteers of France!

Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,

And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

Puc. Captains, away: let's get us from the wall,

And that engenders thunder in his breast,
And makes him roar these accusations forth.
But he shall know, I am as good—

Glo. As good? As good!

Thou husband of my grandfather!

Win. Ay, lordly ear: For what are you, I pray,

But one imperious in another's throne!

Glo. Am I not the protector, saucy priest?

Win. And am I not a prelate of the church?

Glo. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,

And useth it to patronage his theft.

Win. Unreverent Gloucester!

Glo. Thou art reverent, Thou art reverent,

Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life.

Win. This Rome shall remedy.

War. Room thither then.

Sam. My lord, it were your duty to forbear.

War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne.

Sam. Methinks, my lord should be religious,

And know the office that belongs to such.

War. Methinks, his lordship should be humbler;

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.

Sam. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy, or unhallow'd, what of that!

Is not his grace protector to the king?

Win. Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue;

Least it be said, Speak, errand, when you should;

Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?

Else would I have a fling at Winchester. [Aside.]

K. Hen. Uncles of Gloucester, and of Winchester,

The special watchmen of our English weal;

I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,

To join your hearts in love and amity.

O, what a scandal is it to our crown,

That two such noble peers as ye, should jar!

Behove me, lords, my tender years can tell,

Civil dissension is a viperous worm,

That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth—

[A noise within: Down with the tawny coats!]

What tumult's this?

War. An uproar, I dare warrant,

Begun through malice of the bishop's men.

[A noise again: Stones! Stones!]

Enter the Mayor of London, attended.

May. O, my good lords,—and virtuous Henry,—

Pity the city of London, pity us!

The bishop and the duke of Gloucester's men,

Forbidden hie to carry any weapons,

Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble-stones;

And banding themselves in contrary parts,

Do pelt so fast at one another's pate,

That many have their gaily brains knock'd out:

Our windows are broken down in every street,

And we, for fear, compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter, skirmishing, the Retainers of Gloucester and Winchester, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself,

To hold your slaughter'ring hands, and keep the

Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife.

1 Serv. Nay, if we be Forbidden stones, we'll fall to't with our teeth.

2 Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.

[Skirmish again.]

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish

And set this unaccustom'd fight aside. [broil.]

1 Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man

Just and upright; and for your royal birth,

Inferior to none, but his majesty.

And ere that we will suffer such a prince,

So kind a father of the commonweal,

To be disgraced by an unlearn'd mate,

We, and our wives, and children, all will fight,

And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy force.

2 Serv. Ay, and the very perings of our man's Shall pitch a field, when we are dead. [Skirmish again.]

Glo. Stay, stay, I say!

And, if you love me, as you say you do,

Let me persuade you to forbear a while.

K. Hen. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!

Can you, my lord of Winchester, behold

My sighs and tears, and will not once relent?

Who should be pitiful, if you be not?

Or who should study to prefer a peace,

If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. My lord, protector, yield;—yield, Winchester:—

Except you mean, with obstinate repulse,

To slay your sovereign, and destroy the realm.

You see what mischief, and what murder too,

Hath been enacted through your enmity;

Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the king commands me stop;

Or, I would see his heart out, ere the priest

Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the duke

Hath banish'd moodily discontented fury,

As by his-smoothed brows it doth appear:

Why look you still so stern and tragical?

Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.

K. Hen. Fye, uncle Beaumont! I have heard you preach.

That malice was a great and grievous sin:

And wilt not you maintain the thing you teach.

But prove a chief offender in the same?

War. Sweet king!—the bishop hath a kindly gird.

For shame, my lord of Winchester! relent:

What, shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee;

Love for thy love, and hand for hand I give.

Glo. Aye; but, I fear me, with a hollow heart—

See here, my friends, and loving countrymen;

This token serveth for a flag of truce,

Betwix ourselves, and all our followers:

So help me God, as I dissemble not!

Win. So help me God, as I intend it not! [Aside.]

K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind duke of Gloucester,

How joyful am I made by this contract!

Away, my masters! trouble us no more;

But join in friendship, as your lords have done.

1 Serv. Content; I'll to the surgeon's.

2 Serv. And so will I.

3 Serv. And I will see what physick the tavern affords. [Exeunt Servants, Mayor, &c.]

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious overseer;

Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet

We do exhibit to your majesty.

Glo. Well unx'd, my lord of Warwick;—for,

sweet prince,

An if your grace mark every circumstance,

You have great reason to do Richard right:

Especially, for those occasions

At Eltham-place I told your majesty.

K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force.

Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is,

That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;

So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.

Win. As will the rest, as will, I think, Winchester.

That I may kindly give one fainting kiss.—
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stark.

Why didst thou say—of late thou wert deepslid?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm.

And, in that case, I'll tell thee my disease.

This day, in argument upon a case,

Some words there grew twixt Somerset and me:

Among which terms, he used his harsh tongue;

And did upbraid me with my father's death;

Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,

Else with the like I had requited him:

Therefore, good uncle,—for my father's sake,

In honour of a true Plantagenet,

And for alliance' sake,—declare the cause

My father, earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd

me,

And hath detain'd me, all my flow'ring youth,

Within a lathhouse dungeon, there to pine,

Was cur'd instrument of his decease. [was:]

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that

For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.

Mor. I will; if that my fading breath permit,

And death approach not ere my tale be done.

Henry the fourth, grandfather to this king,

Depos'd his cousin Richard—Edward's son,

The first-begotten, and the lawful heir

Of Edward King, the third of that descent;

During whose reign, the Percees of the north,

Fighting his usurpation meet against,

Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne:

The reason mov'd them warlike lords to this,

Was—for that young Richard thus remov'd,

Leaving no heir begotten of his body,

I was the next by birth and parentage;

For by my mother I deriv'd am

From Lionel duke of Clarence, the third son

To king Edward the third, whereas he

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,

Being but fourth of that hercock line.

But mark; as, in this haughty great attempt,

They labour'd to plant the rightful heir,

I lost my liberty, and they their lives.

Long after this, when Henry the fifth,—

Succeeding his father Brimbroke,—did reign,

Thy father, earl of Cambridge,—then deriv'd

From famous Edward Langley, duke of York,—

Marrying my sister, that thy mother was,

Again, in pity of my hard distress,

Loosed an army; wooing to redeem,

And have install'd me in the dukedom;

But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,

And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,

In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True; and thou seest, that I no issue

have;

And that my fainting words do warrant death:

'Thou art my heir; the rest, I wish thee gather;

And yet be wary in thy studious care. [me:]

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with

But yet, methinks, my father's execution

Was nothing less than bloody tyranny.

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic;

Strive—fix'd in the house of Lancaster,

And, like a mountain, not to be remov'd.

But now thy uncle is removing hence;

As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd

With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O, uncle, would some part of my young

years

Might but redeem the passage of your age!

Mor. Thus dost thou wrong me; as the slaughterer doth.

Which giveth many wounds, when one will kill.

Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;

Only, give order for my funeral;

And so farewell; and far be all thy hopes!

And prosperous be thy life, in peace, and war!

[Exit.]

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul!

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,

And like a hermit, wearied thy days—

Well, I will rock him counsel in my breast;

And what I do imagine, let that rest—

Keepers, convey him hence; and I myself

Will see his burial better than his life.

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out Mortimer.

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,

Clink'd with ambition of the meaner sort:—

And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,

Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,—

I doubt not, but with honour to redeem:

And therefore haste I to the parliament;

Either to be restored to my blood,

Or make my ill the advantage of my good. [Exit]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. The Parliament-House.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Gloucester,

Warwick, Somerset, and Suffolk; the Bishop of Winchester, Richard Plantagenet, and others.

Gloucester offers to put up a bill; Winchester

snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated hums,

With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,

Humphrey of Gloucester? if thou canst accuse,

Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,

Do it without invention suddenly;

As I with sudden and extemporal speech

Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Gl. Presumptuous priest! this place commends my passion.

Or thou should'st find thou hast dishonour'd me.

Think not, although in writing I prefer'd

The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,

That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able

Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:

No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,

Thy lewd, pestiferous, and diabolical pranks,

As very infants prattle of thy pride.

'Thou art a most pernicious usurer;

Forward by nature, teemey to peace;

Lascivious, wanton, more than well becomes

A man of thy profession and degree:

And for thy treachery, What's more manifest

In that thou hid'st a trap to take my life,

As well at London bridge, as at the Tower I beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were aid'd,

The king, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt

From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloucester, I do defy thee.—Lords, vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall reply.

If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,

As he will have me, How am I so poor!

Or how hap'st it, I seek not to advance

Or raise myself, but keep my wounden calling?

And for dissension, Who preferreth peace

More than I do,—except I be provoked?

No, my good lords, it is not that offends;

It is not that, that hath incens'd the duke:

It is, because no one should away but he;

No one, but he, should be about the king;

Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,
Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red.
And fall on my side so against your will.

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,
And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on; Who else I

Law. Unless my study and my books be false,
The argument you held, was wrong in you;
(To Somerset.)

In sign whereof, I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?
Som. Here, in my scabbard; meditating that,
Shall do your white rose in a bloody red.

Plan. Menn time, your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet,

'Tis not for fear, but anger,—that thy cheeks
Blush for pure shame, to counterfeit our roses;
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?
Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;

Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.
Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses.

That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,
I scorn thee and thy fashion, peevish boy.

Som. Turn not thy scorn this way, Plantagenet.

Plan. Proud Poole, I will; and scorn both him and thee.

Som. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.

Som. Away, away, good William De-la-Poole!
We grace the yeoman, by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will, thou wrought'st him,
Somerset;

His grandfather was Lionel, duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward king of England;
Springing less yeomen from so deep a root!

Plan. He hears him on the place's privilege,
Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.

Som. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words.

On any plot of ground in Christendom:

Was not thy father, Richard, earl of Cambridge,

For treason executed in our late king's days?

And, by his treason, stand'st not thou attainted,

Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?

His treason yet lives guilty in thy blood;

And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attainted, not attainted;

Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;

And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,

Were growing time once open'd to my will.

For your partaker Poole, and you yourself,

I'll raise you in my book of memory.

To scourge you for this apprehension:

Look to it well; and say you are well warn'd!

Som. Ay, thou shalt find us ready for thee still:

And know us, by these colours, for thy foes;

For these my friends, in spite of thee, shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,

As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,

Will I for ever, and my faction, wear;

Until it wither with me to my grave,

Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Som. Go forward, and be clock'd with thy ambition!

And so farewell, until I meet thee next. [Exit.]

Som. Have with thee, Poole.—Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.]

Plan. How I am brav'd, and must perforce endure it!

War. This blot, that they object against your
Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament.

Called for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester:
And, if this be not then created York,

I will not live to be accounted Warwick.
Meantime, in signal of my love to thee,

Against proud Somerset, and William Poole,
Will I upon thy party wear this rose:

And here I prophecy,—This brawl to-day,
Grown to this faction, in the Temple garden,

Shall send, between the red rose and the white,
A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plan. Good master Vernon, I am bound to you,
That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.
Law. And so will I.

Plan. Thanks, gentle sir.
Come, let us four to dinner: I dare say,
This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same. A Room in the Tower.

Enter Mortimer, brought in a chair by Two Keepers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.

Even like a man new hail'd from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment:

And these grey locks, the paravents of death,
Nestor-like aged, in an age of care,

Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer. [Spent.—]
'These eyes,—like lamps whose wasting oil is

Wax dim, as drawing to their extremest:
Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening grief;

And pitiless arms, like to a wither'd vine
That droops his sapless branches to the ground!—

Yet are these feet—whose strengthless stay is gone,

Unable to support this lump of clay,—
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,

As witting I no other comfort have.—
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

I Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come.

We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber;
And answer was return'd, that he will come.

Mor. Enough: my soul shall then be satisfied—
Poor gentlemen! his wrong both equal mine.

Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,
(Before whose glory I was great in arms),

This loathsome sequestration have I had;
And even since then hath Richard been observ'd,

Depriv'd of honour and inheritance:
But now, the arbitrator of despairs,

Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence;

I would, his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter Richard Plantagenet.

I Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come. [Enter.]

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend! Is he come?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus graciously.

Your nephew, late-despised Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms, I may embrace his neck,
And in his bosom spend my latter sleep:

O, tell me, when my lips do touch his cheeks,

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madam,
According to your ladyship's desire'd,
By message crav'd, is lord Talbot come.
Count. And he is welcome. What! is this the man!

Mess. Madam, it is.
Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad,
That with his name the mothers still their babes
I see, report is fabulous and false:
I thought, I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf:
It cannot be, this weak and wither'd shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you;
But, since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now!—Go ask him, whether he goes.

Mess. Stay, my lord Talbot: for my lady craves
To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her, Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then thou art prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my gallery thy picture hangs;
But now the substance shall endure the like;
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyrants, these many years,
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captive.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha! (turn to moon)

Count. Laughest thou, wretch! thy worth shall
Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond,
To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow,

Wherewith to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself:
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see, is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity:
I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain it.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the noose;

He will be here, and yet he is not here;

How can these contraries agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently.

He winds a Horn. Drums heard; then a peal of Ornament. The Gates being forced, enter Souldiers.

How say you, madam! are you now persuaded,
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?
These are his substance, sinews, arms, and
strength.

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks;
Ruzeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse:
I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited,
And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.

Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;

For I am sorry, that with reverence

I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor miscon-strue

The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body
What you have done, hath not offended me;
No other satisfaction do I crave,
But only (with your patience) that we may Taste of your wine, and see what care you have;
For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart; and think me honoured

To feast so great a warrior in my house.

(Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the Earls of Somerset, Suffolk, and Warwick; Richard Plantagenet, Vernon, and another Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Nef. Within the Temple Hall we were two
The garden here is more convenient. (loud)

Plan. Then say at once, if I maintain'd the truth;

Or, else, was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law;

And never yet could frame my will to it;

And, therefore, frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my lord of Warwick, then, between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch,

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,
Between two blades, which bears the better temper,

Between two horses, which doth bear him best,
Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,
I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment;

But in these nice sharp quills of the law,

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forlance;

The truth appears so naked on my side,

That any perblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,

So clear, so shining, and so evident,

That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-ty'd, and so loath
to speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts;

Let him, that is a true-born gentleman,

And stands upon the honour of his birth,

If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,

Pluck off this liver pluck a white rose with me.

Som. Let him that is so coward, nor so fastitious,

But dare maintain the party of the truth,

Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours; and, without all
Of base insinuating flattery, (colour)

I pluck this white rose, with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose, with young Somers-

And say withal, I think he held the right. (exit)

Ver. Stay, lords, and gentlemen; and pluck no more.

Till you conclude—that he, upon whose side

The fewest roses are crupp'd from the tree,

Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good master Vernon, it is well objected;

If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I.

Sent. [Within] Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

The French leap over the walls in their shirts. Enter, several ways, Bastard, Alençon, Reiguer, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords! what, all unready so!

Bast. Unready! ay, and glad we 'scape'd so.
Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,

Hearing alarms at our chamber doors.

Alen. Of all exploits, since first I follow'd arms, Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprize More venturous, or desperate than this.

Bast. I think, this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles; I marvel, how he Enter Charles and La Pucelle.

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard!

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame!

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,

Make us partakers of a little gain,

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike?

Sleeping, or waking, must I still prevail,

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?

Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,

This sudden mischief never could have fall'n.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default;

That, being captain of the watch to-night,

Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept,

As that whereof I had the government,

We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And, for myself, must part of all this night,

Within her quarter, and mine own precinct,

I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels; [in?]

Then how, or which way, should they first break?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case.

How, or which way; 'tis sure, they found some place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was made.

And now there rests no other shift but this,—

To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,

And lay new platforms to enlounge them.

Alençon. Enter an English Soldier, crying a 'Talbot! a Talbot! They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword; [left]

For I have laden me with many spoils,

Using no other weapon but his name. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Orléans. Within the Town.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burmundy, a Captain, and others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,

Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.

Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit

[Retreat sounded.]

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury;

And here advance it in the market-place,

The middle centre of this cursed town—

Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;

For every drop of blood was drawn from him,
There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night

And, that hereafter ages may behold

What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,

Within their chancel'd temple I'll erect

A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd:

Upon the which, that every one may read,

Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orléans;

The treacherous manner of his mournful death,

And what a terror he had been to France.

But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,

I muse, we met not with the Dauphin's grace;

His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc;

Nor any of his false confederates. [begin,

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord Talbot, when the fight

Rous'd on the sudden from their downy beds,

They did, amongst the troops of armed men,

Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bar. Myself (as far as I could well discern,

For smoke, and dusky vapours of the night)

Am sure, I scar'd the Dauphin, and his train;

When arm in arm they both came swiftly run-

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves, [sing,

That could not live asunder day or night.

After that things are set in order here,

We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! which of this princely train

Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his sons

So much applaud through the realm of France!

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak

with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, countess of Auvergne,

With modesty admiring thy renown,

By me entreats, good lord, thou wouldst vouch-

To visit her poor castle where she lies; [safe

That she may boast, she hath beheld the man

Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bar. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see, our wars

Will turn unto a peaceful comick sport.

When ladies crave to be encounter'd with,—

You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for, when a world of men

Could not prevail with all their oratory,

Yet hath a woman's kindness over-ru'd:—

And therefore tell her, I return great thanks;

And in submission will attend on her.—

Will not your honours bear me company?

Bed. No, truly; it is more than manners will;

And I have heard it said,—Unbidden guests

Are often welcomed when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.

Come hither, captain. [Whispers.]—You perceive

my mind.

Capt. I do, my lord; and mean accordingly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

Enter the Countess and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge; [n.e.

And, when you have done so, bring the keys to

Fort. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Count. The plot is laid: if all things fall out

I shall as famous be by this exploit, [right,

As Scythian Thomyris by Cyrus' death.

Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,

And his achievements of no less account:

Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,

To give their censure of those rare reports.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them!
A woman, clad in armour, chaseth them.

Enter La Pucelle.

Here, here she comes:—I'll have a bout with thee;
Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee:
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.
Puc. Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee.

Tal. Heaven, can you suffer hell so to prevail!
My breast I'll burst with strainings of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chuse this high-minded strumpet.
Puc. Talbot, fare well; thy hour is not yet come:
I must go victual Orleans forthwith;
Overtake me, if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
Help Salisbury to make his testament:
This day is ours, as many more shall be.

[Pucelle enters the town with Soldiers.
Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;

I know not where I am, nor what I do:
A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal,
Drives back our troops, and conquers as she lists:
So bees with smoke, and doves with poisonous stench,

Are from their hives, and houses, driven away.
They call'd us, for our fierceness, English dogs;
Now, like to whelps, we crying run away.

[A short alarm.
Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the bones out of England's bowels;
Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
Sheep run not half so timorous from the wolf,
Or horse, or oxen, from the leopard.
As you fly from your out-aheld slaves.

[Alarm. Another skirmish.
It will not be:—Retire into your trenches:
You all commented 'unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.—
Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans,
In spite of us, or aught that we could do.
O, would I were to die with Salisbury!
The shame hereof will make us hide my head!

[Alarm. Retreat. Enter Talbot and his Forces, &c.

SCENE VI.—The same.

Enter, on the walls, Pucelle, Charles, Reignier,
Alençon, and Soldiers

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls;
Recon'd is Orleans from the English wolves:—
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.
Char. Divinest creature, bright Asraen's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success? (ter.
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next.—

France, triumph in thy glorious prophesies!—
Reconver'd is the town of Orleans:
More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reign. Why ring not out the bells throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires,
And feast and banquet in the open streets.
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy.

When they shall hear how we have play'd the

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;

For which, I will divide my crown with her:
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall, in procession, sing her endless praise.
A stately pyramid to her I'll rear,
Than Rhodope's, or Memphis', ever was:
In memory of her, when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious
Than the rich jewel'd coffer of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
Come in: and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory.

[Flourish. Retreat.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter to the gates a French Sergeant, and Two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your pikes, and be vigilant:
If any noise, or soldier, you perceive,
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

I Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.]
Thus are poor servants
(When others sleep upon their quiet beds)
Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, and Fluellen, with scaling-ladders; their drums bearing a dead march.

Tal. Lord regent,—and redoubted Burgundy,—
By whose approach, the regions of Artois,
Welloun, and Picardy, are friends to us.—
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted:
Embrace we then this opportunity;
As fitting best to quitance their deceit,
Contriv'd by art, and baseful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France!—how much he wrongs his fame.

Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
To join with witches, and the help of hell.

Char. Traitors have never other company.—
But what's that Pucelle, whom they term so pure?
Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and he so martial!
Bar. Pray God, she prove not masculine ere long:

If underneath the standard of the French,
She carry armour, as she hath begun. [aspire:]
Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with God in his fortress; in whose conquests none,
Let us resolve to scale their finny bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways;
That, if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their towers.

Bed. Agreed; I'll to yon corner.

Bar. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.—

Now, Salisbury! for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty I am bound to him.

[The English scale the walls, crying St. George!
a Talbot! and all enter by the Town.

Was. Abominable Glouster! guard thy head;
For I intend to have it, ere long. [Exeunt.
May. See the count clear'd, and then we will depart — (hear!
Good God! that nobles should such stomachs
I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — France. Before Orleans.

Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner and his Son.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd;
And how the English have the suburbs won.
Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them,
How'er unfortunate I miscal'd my aim.
M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me:

Chief master-gunner am I of this town;
Something I must do, to procure me grace.
The prince's exploits have inform'd me.
How the English, in the suburbs close intrench'd,
Went through a secret gate of iron bars
In yonder tower, to overpeer the city;
And thence discover, how, with most advantage,
They may vex us with shot, or with assault.
To intercept this inconvenience,
A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;
And fully even these three days have I watch'd,
If I could see them. Now, boy, do thou watch.
For I can stay no longer
If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word:
And thou shalt find me at the governor's. [Exit.
Son. Father, I warrant you; take you no care;
I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.

Enter, in an upper chamber of a tower, the Lords Salisbury and Talbot, Sir William Glansdale, Sir Thomas Gargrave, and others.

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd!
How wert thou handled, being prisoner?
Or by what means co'st thou to be releas'd?
Discourse, I pray thee, on this turret's top.
Tal. The duke of Bedford had a prisoner,
Called — the brave lord Ponton de Sautrailes;
For him I was exchanged and ransomed.
Set with a beaver of arms by far,
Once, in contempt, they would have har'd me;
Which I, disdain'd, scorn'd; and craved death
Rather than I would be so ill'd esteem'd.
In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd. (heart!
Bot. O! the treacherous Fastolf wounds my Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
If I saw had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not, how thou wert entertain'd. (twaits

Tal. With scoffs, and scorn, and contumelious
In open market-place produc'd they me,
To be a public spectacle to all:
Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
The scare-crow that affrights our children so.
Then broke I from the officers that led me:
And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground,
To hurl at the beholders of my shame.
My grisly countenance made others fly;
None durst come near, for fear of sudden death.
In iron walls they deem'd me not secure.
So great fear of my name amongst them was spread,

That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel,
And spurn in pieces posts of adamant:
Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had,
That walk'd about me every minute while;
And if I did but stir out of my bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd;
But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.

Now it is supper-time in Orleans:
Here, through this grate, I can count every one,
And view the Frenchmen how they fortify:
Let us look in, the sight will much delight thee —
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glansdale,
Let me have your express opinions.

Where is best place to make our battery next?
Ger. I think, at the north gate; for there stand horns.

Glas. And I, here, at the bulwark of the broken.
Tal. For aught I see, this city must be furnish'd,
Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Shot from the town. Salisbury and Sir
The Gargrave fall.

Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners!

Ger. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful man!
Tal. What chance is this, that suddenly hath cross'd us? —

Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak;
How far'st thou, mirror of all mortal men?
One of thy eyes, and thy cheek's side struck off —
Accursed tower! accursed fatal hand!
That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!
In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame;
Heary the fifth he first train'd to the wars;
Whilst any trumpet did sound, or drum struck up,
His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field. —
Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury! though thy speech
doth fail,

One eye thou hast, to look to heaven for grace:
The sun with one eye vieweth all the world. —
Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,
If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hand! —
Bear hence his body, I will help to bury it. —
Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?
Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him.
Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;
Thou shalt not die, whilst —

He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me;
As who should say, *When I am dead and gone,
Remember to avenge me on the French.* —
Maugreton, I will; and Nero-like,
Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn:
Wretched shall France be only in my name.

[Thunder heard; afterwards an alarm.
What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens!
Whence cometh this alarm, and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gathered
head:

The dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd. —
A holy prophetess, new risen up. —
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.

(Salisbury groans.

Tal. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan!

It irks his heart, he cannot be reveng'd. —
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you: —
Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or degfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels,
And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we'll try what these daunt'd Frenchmen dare. [Exeunt, bearing out the bodies.

SCENE V. — The same. Before one of the Gates.

Alarm. Skirmishings Talbot pursueth the Dauphin, and direct him in; then enter Joan la Pu-celle, driving Englishmen before her. Then enter Talbot.

Puc. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!
Fie! till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says, I'll confirm; we'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.
This night the siege assuredly I'll raise:
Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days
Since I have enter'd into these wars.
Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself,
Till, by broad spreading, it disperse to nought.
With Henry's death, the English circle ends;
Dispersed are the glories it included.
Now am I like that proud insulting ship,
Which Caesar and his fortune bare at once.

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?
Thou with an eagle art inspired then
Helen, the mother of great Constantine,
Nor yet Saint Philip's daughters, were like thee.
Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,
How may I reverently worship thee enough!

Alec. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege.

Rep. Woman, do what thou canst to save our Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz'd.
Char. Presently we'll try:—Come, let's away about it:

No prophet will I trust, if she prove false.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—London. Hill before the Tower.

Enter, at the gates, the Duke of Gloucester, with his Serving-men, in blue coats.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day:
Since Henry's death, I fear there is conveyance,
Where be these waiters, that they wait not here!
Open the gates; Gloucester it is that calls.

[Servants knock.]

1 Ward. [Within] Who is there that knocks so imperiously?

1 Serv. It is the noble duke of Gloucester.

2 Ward. [Within,] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

1 Serv. Answer you so the lord protector, villains!

[Answer him:]

1 Ward. [Within] The lord protect him! so we do not otherwise than we are will'd.

Glo. Who willed you? or whose will stands, but mine!

There's none protector of the realm, but I.—

Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize:

Shall I be floated thus by daughill groons?

Servants rush at the Tower gates. Enter to the gates, Woodville, the Lieutenant.

Wood. [Within] What noise is this! what treason here we here!

Glo. Lieutenant, is he here? whose voice I hear!
Open the gates: here's Gloucester, that would enter.

Wood. [Within] Have patience, noble duke; I may not open;

The cardinal of Winchester forbids:

From him I have express commandment,

That thou, nor none of thine, shall be let in.

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him 'fore me!

Arrogant Winchester! that haughty prelate,
Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could break

Thou art no friend to God, or to the king:

Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

1 Serv. Open the gates unto the lord protector;
Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter Winchester, attended by a Train of Servants in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey! what means this? [shout out!]

Glo. Peel'd priest, dost thou command me to be

Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor,
And not protector, of the king or realm

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator;
Thou, that contriv'st to murder our dead lord;

Thou, that giv'st whores indulgence to sin:
I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat;

If thou proceed in thus thy insolence. [shout!]

Win. Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a
This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,

To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt. [shout!]

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee
Thy scarlet robes, as a child's bearing cloth

I'll use, to carry thee out of this place

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I bear thee to thy face. [face!—]

Glo. What! am I dar'd, and bearded to my Draw, men, for all this privileged place;

Blue-coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware your beard!

[Gloucester and his men attack the Bishop. I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly:

Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat;
In spite of pope, or dignities of church,

Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloucester, thou'lt answer this before the pope.

Glo. Winchester goose, I cry—a rope! a rope!
Now beat them hence, Why do you let them stay!—

Thou'lt chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's ai-
Out, tawny coats!—out, scarlet hypocrite!

Here a great tumult. In the midst of it, Enter the Mayor of London, and Officers.

May. Fye, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,

Thus contumeliously should break the peace!

Glo. Peace, mayor; thou know'st little of my wrongs.

Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king,
Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use

Win. Here's Gloucester, too, a foe to citizens:
One that still motions war, and never peace,

O'ercharging your free purses with large fines;
That seeks to overthrow religion,

Because he is protector of the realm;
And would have armour here out of the Tower,

To crown himself king, and suppress the prince.

Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. [Here they skirmish again.]

May. Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous
But to make open proclamation:—

Come, officer, as loud as e'er thou can'st.

Off. All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day, against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death.

Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law:
But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloucester, we'll meet; to thy dear cost, be sure!

Thy heart-blood I will have, for this day's work.

May. I'll call for clubs, if you will not away:
This cardinal is more haughty than the devil.

Glo. Mayor, farewell: thou dost but what thou may'st.

Otherwhales, the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,
Faintly beseege us one hour in a month.

Alca. They want their porridge, and their fat bull-beeves:

Either they must be dieted like mules,
And have their provender tyed to their mouths,
Or piteously they will look, like drowned mice.

Reg. Let's raise the siege; Why live we idly
here?

Talbot is taken, whom we wot to fear;
Remainseth nose, but mad-brain'd Salisbury;
And he may well in fretting spend his gull,
Nor men, nor money, hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarm; we will rush on
them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French:—
Him I forgive my death, that killeth me,
When he sees me go back one foot, or fly.

[Exeunt.]

Alarums; Escarsons: afterwards a Retreat.

Re-enter Charles, Alencon, Reigner, and others.

Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I?—

Dogs! cowards! dastards!—I would ne'er have seen,

But that they left me midst my enemies.

Reg. Salisbury is a desperate homicide;

He fighteth as one weary of his life.

The other lords, like lions wanting food,

Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alca. Forward, a countryman of ours, records

England all Oivers and Rowlands bred,

During the time Edward the third did reign.

More truly now may this be verified;

For none but Samson, and Goliasses,

It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten!

Lean raw-bon'd rascals! who would e'er suppose

They had such courage and awiarity?

Char. Let's leave this town; for they are hair-brain'd slaves.

And hunger will enforce them be more eager:

Of old I know them; rather with their teeth

The walls they'll tear down, than forsake the siege.

Reg. I think, by some odd gimmals, or device,

Their arms are set, like clocks, still to strike on;

Else ne'er could they hold out so, as they do.

By my consent, we'll e'en let them alone.

Alca. Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Bast. Where's the prince Dauphin? I have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Methinks, your looks are sad, your cheer appall'd;

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?

Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:

A holy maid hither with me I bring,

Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven,

Ordained us to raise this tedious siege,

And drive the English forth the bounds of France.

The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,

Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome;

Whom's past, and what's to come, she can descry.

Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,

For they are certain and infallible.

Char. Go, call her in: [Exit Bastard.] But, first,

to try her skill,

Reigner. stand thou as dauphin in my place:

Question her proudly, let thy looks be stern:—

By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.

[Retires.]

Enter La Pucelle, Bastard of Orleans, and others.

Reg. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wond'rous feats?

Puc. Reigner, is't thou that thinkest to beguile
me?

Where is the dauphin?—come, come, from behind;

I know thee well, though never seen before.

Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me:

In private will I talk with thee apart:—

Stand back, you lords, and give us leave awhile.

Reg. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter:

My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.

Heaven, and our lady gracious, hath it pleas'd
me,

To shine on my contemptible estate:

Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs,

And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,

God's mother deign'd to appear to me:

And, in a vision full of majesty,

Will'd me to leave my base vocation,

And free my country from calamity:

Her aid she promis'd, and assur'd success:

In complete glory she reveal'd herself;

And, whereas I was black and swart before,

With those clear rays which she infus'd on me,

That beauty am I bless'd with, which you see.

Ask me what question thou canst possible,

And I will answer unpremeditate:

My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,

And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.

Resolve on this: Thou shalt be fortunate,

If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms:

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make,—

In single combat thou shalt buckle with me:

And, if thou vanquishest, thy words are true;

Otherwise, I renounce all confidence.

Puc. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd sword,

Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side:

The which, at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's church-yard,

Out of a deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then come, o' God's name, I fear no wun-dour.

Puc. And, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a fight.

Char. Stay, stay thy hands; thou art an Aim-
And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whose'er helps thee, 'tis thou that most help me:

Impudently I burn with thy desire:

My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,

Let me thy servant, and not sovereign, be;

'Tis the French dauphin sueth to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,

For my profession's sacred from above:

When I have chased all thy fues from hence,

Then will I think upon a recompense.

Char. Mean time, look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reg. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Alca. Doubless, he shames this woman to her smock;

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reg. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps us mean?

Alca. He may mean more than we poor men do these women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reg. My lord, where are you? what device
Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture;
Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Guyors, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before down Henry's course!

Speak softly; or the men of those great towns
Will make him burn his tent, and rise from death.
Glo. Is Paris lost? Is Rouen yielded up?

If Henry were recall'd to life again, [ghost.
These news would cause him once more yield the Eze. How were they lost? what treachery was us'd? [noise.]

Mess. No treachery; but want of men and Among the soldiers this is muttered.—

That here you maintain several factions;
And, whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your generals.
One would have his ring worn, with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;
A third man thinks, without expense at all,
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English nobility!
Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot;
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Eze. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
These tidings would call forth her flowing tales.
Bed. Be they concern; repent I am of France:—
Give me my steeled coat, I'll fight for France:—
Away with these disgraceful wailing robes!
Wounds I will lend the French, instead of eyes,
To weep their interminable miseries.

Enter another Messenger.

3 Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad intelligence:

France is revolted from the English quite;
Except some petty towns of no import:
The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims;
The bastard of Orleans with him join'd;
Reignier, duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
The duke of Alencon fleeth to his side. [him!]

Eze. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to O, whither shall we fly from this reproach!

Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies' throats:—

Bed. If, thou be slack, 'till fight it out.

Bed. Glimmer, why doubt'st thou of my forward-
ness!

An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My gracious lords,—to add to your injuries,

Wherewith you now bedew king Henry's hearse,—
I must inform you of a dismal fight,
Betwixt the stout lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! who rein Talbot overcame I see not!

3 Mess. O, no; wherein lord Talbot was overthrown.

The circumstances I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last, this dreadful lord,
Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,
By three and twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon:
No leisure had he to enraun his men;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers;
Instead whereof, sharp stakes, pluck'd out of hedges,

They pitched in the ground confusedly.
To keep the hotmen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continu'd;
Where valiant Talbot, above human thought,

Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.

Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand
him;

Here, there, and every where, enrag'd he slew:
The French exclaim'd, The devil was in arms;

All the whole army stood amaz'd on him:
His soldiers, spryng his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! a Talbot! cried out again.

And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.
Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up,
If sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward;

He being in the vaward, plac'd behind,
With purpose to relieve and follow them.)

Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
Hence grew the general wreck and massacre,

Enclosed were they with their enemies:
A base Walliam, to win the Dauphin's grace,
Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;

Whom all France, with their chief assembled
strength,

Durst not presume to look once in the face.
Bed. Is Talbot slain! then I will slay myself,

For living idly here, in pomp and ease,
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foe-men is betray'd.

3 Mess. O no, he lives; but is took prisoner.
And lord Scyles with him, and lord Hungerford:

Most of the rest slaughter'd, or took, likewise.
Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay:
I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne,

His crown shall be the ransom of my friend;
Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.—
Farewell, my masters; to my task will I:

Bumfries in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint George's feast withal:

Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

3 Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is be-sieg'd;

The English army is grown weak and faint:
The earl of Salisbury craveth supply.

And hardly keeps his men from mutiny.
Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Eze. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn;

Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it; and here take leave,
To go about my preparation. [Exit]

Glo. I'll to the Tower, with all the haste I can,
To view the artillery and munition;

And then I will proclaim young Henry king. [Exit]

Eze. To Eltham will I, where the young king is,
Being ordain'd his special governor;

And for his safety there I'll best advise. [Exit]

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend;

I am left out; for me nothing remains.
But long I will not be Jack out-of-office;

The king from Eltham I intend to send,
And sit at chiefest stern of publick weal.

[Exit. Scene closes]

SCENE II. — France. Before Orleans.

*Enter Charles, with his Forces; Alencon, Reignier
and others.*

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens,

So in the earth, to this day is not known:
Late did he shine upon the English side;

Now we are victors, upon us he smiles.
What towns of any moment, but we have!

At pleasure here we lie, near Orleans;

SCENE,—partly in England, and partly in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — Westminster Abbey.

Dead march. Corpse of King Henry the Fifth discovered, lying in state; attended on by the Dukes of Bedford, Glouster, Exeter; the Earl of Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, Herald, &c.

And. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

Come! import change of times and states,
Brandish your crystal trophies in the sky;
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars,
That have consorted unto Henry's death!
Henry the fifth, too famous to live long!
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth
Glo. England ne'er had a king until his time.
Virtue he had, deserving to command:
His brazen shield did blind men with his beams;

His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings:
His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,
More dazzled and drove back his enemies,
Than mid-day sun, fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech:
He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered.

Exc. We mourn in black; Why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead, and never shall revive:

Upon a wooden coffin we attend;

And death's dishonourable victory

We with our stately presence glory.

Like captives bound to a triumphant car,

What! shall we curse the planets of misapp,

That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?

Or shall we thank the subtle-witted French

Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,

By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Wsa. He was a king blest of the King of kings.

Unto the French the dreadful judgment day

So dreadful will not be, as was his sight.

The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:

The church's prayers made him so prosperous

Glo. The church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd,

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd;

None do you like but an effeminate prince,

Whom, like a school-boy, you may over-awe.

Wsa. Glouster, what'er we like, thou art pro-tectour;

And lookest to command the prince, and realm.

Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,

More than God, or religious churchmen, may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh;

And ne'er throughout the year to church thou

Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these jars, and rest your minde in peace!

Let's to the altar:—Heralds, wait on us:—

Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms;

Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead—

Posterity, await for wretched years,

When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck;

Our tale be made a nourish of salt tears,

And none but women left to wail the dead.—

Henry the fifth! thy ghost! advocate:

Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!

Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!

A far more glorious star thy soul will make

Than Julius Cæsar, or bright—

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all

Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,

drur, en baissant la main d'une oostre indigne servitude; racines moy, je vous supplie, mon tres puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Koth. Les dames, et damoiselles, pour estre boisees devant leur noyers, il n'est pas le coutume de France.

K. Hen. Madam, my interpreter, what says she? Alice. Dat it is not be the fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell what is, baiser, en English.

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entendre better que moy.

K. Hen. It is not the fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Ouy, ornament.

K. Hen. O Kate, nice customs curt'ey to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak late of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places, sets the mouths of all find faults: as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country, in denying me a kiss: therefore patiently and yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England, than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the French King and Queen, Burgundy, Bedford, Gloucester, Exeter, Westmoreland, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! my royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English. Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz; and my condition is not smooth: so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her you must make a circle: if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked, and blind: Can you blame her then, being a maid yet ruse over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consent to.

K. Hen. Yet they do wink, and yield; as love is blind, and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do.

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent to winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure hand-laws, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time, and a hot summer; and so I will catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so; and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness; who cannot see many a fair French trait, for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

Pr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspectively, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls, that war hath never entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Pr. King. So please you.

K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden cities you talk of, may wait on her: so the maid that stood in the way of my wish, shall show me the way to my will.

Pr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article: His daughter, first; and then, in sequel, all. According to their firm proposed natures.

Eze. Only, he hath not yet subscribed this:—Where your majesty demands,—That the king of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition in French,—Notre tres cher filz Henry roy d'Angleterre, heritier de France; and thus in Latin,—Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus, rex Anglia, et heres Francie.

Pr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied. But your request shall make me let it pass.

K. Hen. I pray you then, in love and dear alliance, let that one article rank with the rest: [Alce. And, thereupon, give me your daughter.]

Pr. King. Take her, fair son; and from her blood raise up

Issue to me: that the contending kindoms Of France and England, whose very shores look With envy of each other's happiness, [Isle May cease their hatred; and this dear conjunction Plant neighbourhood and christian-like accord In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Now welcome, Kate:—and bear me That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen.

[Flourish.]

Q. Isab. God, the best maker of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!

As man and wife, being two, are one in love, So be there 'twixt your kindoms such a spousal,

That never may ill office, or fell jealousy, Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage, Thrust in between the paction of these kindoms, To make divorce of their incorporate league;

That English may as French, French Englishmen, Receive each other!—God speak thus Amen!

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage;—on My lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath, And all the peers, for surety of our leagues.

Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me; And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be!

[Exeunt.]

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the Alor. Ouy; that de tongues of de mans is be

K. Hen. The princess is the better English woman. I'faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding: I am glad, thou can'st speak no better English: for, if thou could'st, thou would'st find me such a plain king, that thou would'st think, I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say—I love you; then, if you urge me further than to say—Do you in faith I wear out my suit.
Give me your answer; i'faith, do; and so clap hands and a bargain: How say you, lady?

Kath. Sans/ vostre honneur, me understand well.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me: for the one, I have neither words nor measure; and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength.
If I could win a lady at leap frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of brugging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife. Or, if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favour, I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off; but, before God, I cannot look greenly, nor gasp out my eloquence, nor have I so cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of the temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun burning, that never looks in his glass for love of any thing he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier: if thou canst love me for this, take me: if not, to say to thee—that I shall die, is true; but—for thy love, by the lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncosed constancy; for he performs what do the right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places; for those fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours,—they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater; a rhyme is but a baillad. A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white; a curled pate will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow; but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and moon; or rather, the sun, and not the moon; for it shines bright, and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou wouldst have such a one, take me: And take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king: And what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. It is possible that I should love de enemy of France!

K. Hen. No; it is not possible, you should love the enemy of France, Kate: but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France: for I love France so well, that I will not part with a village of it: I will have it all mine: and, Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours, then yours is France: and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell wat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French; whicli, I am sure, will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. *Quand j'ay la possession
de France, et quand vous avez la possession de moi, (lent me wo, wat then? Saint Dennis be my sward!)—donc vostre rei France, et vous restez mesme.* It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer

the kingdom as to speak so much more French:
I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sans/ vostre honneur, le Francois que vous parlez, est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle.

K. Hen. No, 'faith, is't not, Kate: but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one.
But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English? Canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate?
I'll ask them. Come, I know, thou lovest me:
and at night when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will, to her, dispraise those parts in me, that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou be'st mine, Kate, (as I have a saving faith within me, tells me,—thou shalt,) I get thee with scumbling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder: Shall not thou and I, between Saint Dennis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople, and take the Turk by the beard?
I shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and, for my English moiety, take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon tres chere et divine deesse!

Kath. Your majesty 'ave Jausse French enough to deceive de most sage damoiselle dat is en France.

K. Hen. Now, I see upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate:
by which honour I dare not swear, thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now besurew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me; therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies, I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill-layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better; And therefore tell me, most true Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say—Harry of England, I am thine; which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud—England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken musick; for thy voice is musick, and thy English broken: therefore, queen of all Katha-rines, break thy mind to me in broken English.
Wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is, as it shall please de roy mon pere.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him. Kate

Kath. Den it shall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I will kiss your hand, and I call you—thy queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez: ma
foy, je ne veuz point que vous abaissez vostre gran-

King Henry.—O Kate, nice customs curtsy to great kings.

HENRY V.. Act V., Scene II.

Welsh correction teach you a good English condition.
But hateful ducks, rough thistles, kerkasses, burs
Losing both beauty and utility.

Exit.
Post. Dull fortune play the huswife with thee
now!

News have I, that my Neph is dead i' the spital
Of malady of France;
And there my reazovous is quite cut off
Old I do wax; and from my weary limbs
Honour is coddell'd I. Well, I sawd with I turn,
And something toan to outpurs of quick hand.
To England will I steal, and there I'll steal;
And patches will I get unto these scars,
And swear, I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Troyes in Champagne. An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Enter, at one door, King Henry, Bedford, Gloucester, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and other Lords; at another, the French King, Queen Isabel, the Princess Katharine, Lords, Ladies, &c., the Duke of Burgundy, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!

Onto our brother France,—and to our sister
Health and fair time of day:—joy and good wishes
To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine;
And (as a branch and member of this royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd),
We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy:—
And, princes French, and peers, health to you, all! [face.]

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your Most worthy brother England: fairly met:—
So you are, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England,
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them,
Against the French, that met them in their bent,
The fatal balls of murdering basilisks;
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality: and that this day
Shall change all griefs, and quarrels, into love.

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Hen. My duty to you both, on equal love, Great kings of France and England! That I have labour'd [deavours.]

With all my wits, my pains, and strong en-
To bring your most imperial majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview,

Your mightiness on both parts heat can witness.
Since then my office hath so far prevail'd,
That face to face, and royal eye to eye,
You have congregated: let it not disgrace me,
If I demand, before this royal view,

What reb, or what impediment, there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled peace,
Dear nurse of arts, plenty, and joyful births,
Should not, in this best garden of the world,
Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage!

Alas! she hath from France too long been chas'd;
And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in its own fertility.

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies: her hedges even-pleached,—
Like prisoners wildly over-grown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twice: her fallow less
The dromel, hemlock, and rank fumitory,
Doth root upon: while that the coulter rusts,
That should deracinate such savagery:

The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth
The treckled cowslip, harnet, and green clover
Wanting the scythe, all unconcerned, rank,

Conceives by illness; and noth'g teems,
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kerkasses, burs
Losing both beauty and utility.

And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges
Defective in their natures, grow to wilkness;
Even so our houses, and ourselves, and children,
Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country;
But grow, like savages,—as soldiers will,
That nothing do but meditate on blood,—
To swear, and stern looks, diffus'd attire,
And everything that seems unnatural,
Which to reduce in'o our former favour,
You are assembled; and my speech entreats,
That I may know the let, why gentle peace
Should not expel these inconveniences,
And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If duke of Burgundy, you would the
peace,

Whom want gives growth to the imperfections
Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands;
Whose tenours and particular effects
You have, enobledly briefly, in your hands.

Hen. The king hath heard them; to the which,
There is no answer made. [as yet.]

K. Hen. Well then, the peace,
Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye
O'er-glanc'd the articles: pleaseth your grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed
To re-survey them, we will suddenly,
Pass our accept, and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall.—Go, uncle Exeter.— [Exit.]

And brother Clarence,—and you, brother Gloucester,
Warwick,—and Hunnigdon,—go with the king;
And take with you free power, to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdom best
Shall see advantageous for our dignity,
Any thing in, or out of, our demands;
And we'll consign thereto.—Will you, fair sister,
Go with the princes, or stay here with us!

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with
them;

Haply, a woman's voice may do some good.
When articles, too nicely urg'd, be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here
She is our capital demand, compris'd [with us:]
Within the fore rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.
[Exeunt all but Henry, Katharine, and her Gentlewoman.]

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair!
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms,
Such as will enter at a lady's ear,
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your English.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez moy, I cannot tell what is—like me.

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate; and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable a les angel?

Alice. Ouy, vrayment, (aous) vostre grace) ainsi dit-il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines des tromperies.

let there be sung Non nobis, and Te Deum.
 The deed with clarity eulog'd in clay,
 We'll then to Calais; and to England then;
 Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men. (Exeunt.)

ACT V.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story,

That I may prompt them: and of such as have,
 I humbly pray them to admit the excuse
 Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
 Which cannot in their huge and proper life
 Be here presented. Now we bear the king
 Towards Calais: grant him there; there seen,
 Heave him away upon your winged thoughts,
 Altwart the sea: Behold, the English beach
 Piles in the flood with men, with wives, and boys, Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea,

Which, like a mighty whiffier 'fore the king,
 Seems to prepare his way: so let him land;
 And, solemnly, see him set on to London.
 So swift a pace hath thought, that even now
 You may imagine him upon Blackheath:
 Where that his lords desire him, to have borne
 His bruised helmet, and his bended sword,
 Before him, through the city: he forbids it,
 Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride;
 Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent,
 Quite from himself, to God. But now behold,
 In the quick forge and workinghouse of thought,
 How London doth pour out her citizens!
 The mayor, and all his brethren, in best sort,—
 Like to the senators of the antique Rome,
 With the plebeians swarming at their heels,—
 Go forth, and fetch their conquering Caesar in:
 As, by a lower, but by loving likelihood,
 Were now the general of our gracious empress
 (As, in good time, he may) from Ireland coming,
 Bringing rebellion brunched on his sword,
 How many would the peaceful city quit,
 To welcome him! much more, and much more
 cause.

Did they this Harry. Now in London place him;
 (As yet the lamentation of the French
 Invites the king of England's stay at home;
 The emperor's coming in behalf of France,
 To order peace between them;) and omit
 All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd,
 Till Harry's back-return again to France;
 There must we bring him; and myself have play'd

The interim, by remembering you 'tis past.
 Then brook abridgment; and your eyes advance
 After your thoughts, straight back again to France. (Exit.)

SCENE I.—France. An English Court of Guard.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right: but why wear you yo'r leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you, as my friend, captain Gower; The rascally, scald, beggarly, lousy, prapping knave, Pistol,—which you call yourself, and all the 'orld, know to be no better than a fellow, look you now, of no merits,
 —as he comes to me, and prims me proud and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek: it was in a place where I could not breed no oc-tentions with him; but I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter Pistol.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings, nor his turkey-cocks.—Got pless you, ancient Pistol! you scurvy, lousy knave, Got pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou Bedlam? I dost thou thurst, base 'Trojan.

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
 Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek; because,
 look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader, and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.]
 Will you be so good, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base 'Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when Got's will is: I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals; come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again.] You called me, yesterday, mountain-squire; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to; if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain; you have astonished
 him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will put his pate four days:—Pite, I pray you; it is good for your green wound, and your piously cuxdom.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly; and out of doubt, and out of questions too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge; I eat, and eke I swear.—

Flu. Eat, I pray you: Will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel; thou dost see, I eat.

Flu. Much good to you, scald knave, heartily.
 Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is good for your prunken cuxdom. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at them; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is good:—Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes, verily, and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat, in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but oxleeks. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.]

Pist. All hell shall arr for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition,— begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour,—and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words!
 I have seen you gleeking and gulling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English to the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel;
 you find it otherwise; and, henceforth, let a

For I do know Fluellen valiant,
And touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury :
Follow, and see there be no harm between them —
Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. — Before King Henry's Pavilion.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant, it is to knight you, captain.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Got's will and his pleasure, captain, I beseech you now, com' apace to the king: there is more good toward you, peradventure, than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove? [glove.]

Flu. Know the glove? I know, the glove is a

Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it. [Strikes him.]

Flu. 'Shind, an arrant traitor, as any's in the universal 'orld, or in France, or in England.

Gow. How now, sir? you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu. Stand away, captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into pious. I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat — I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him; he's a friend of the duke of Alençon's.

Enter Warwick and Gloucester.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu. My lord of Warwick, here is (praised be God for it!) a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter King Henry and Exeter.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter?

Flu. My liege, here is a villain, and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he, that I gave it to in change, promised to wear it in his cap; I promised to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your majesty hear now, (savouring your majesty's honour), what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lowly knave it is: I hope, your majesty is plear me testimony, and witness, and avouchments, that this is the glove of Alençon, that your majesty is give me, in your conscience now.

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier; Look, here is the fellow of it. 'Twas I, indeed, thou promisedst to strike; and thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the 'orld.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my liege, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen. It was ourself thou didst abuse.

Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your highness suffered under that shape, I beseech you take it for your own fault, and not mine: for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore, I beseech your highness pardon me.

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns.

And give it to this fellow. — Keep it, fellow; And wear it for an honour in thy cap, Till I do challenge it — Give him the crowns: — And, captain, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his pelly: — Hold, there is twelve pence for you, and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prais, and prables, and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I warrant you, it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a good will; I can tell you, it will serve to mend your shoes: Come, wherefore should you be so painful? Your shoes is not as good: 'tis a good shilling, I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald: are the dead number'd?

Her. Here is the number of the slain, slaughter'd

French. [Delivers a paper.]

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?

Ere. Charles duke of Orleans, nephew to the John duke of Bourbon, and lord Bouciquart: Of other lords, and barons, knights, and squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand

French, [number]

That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this

And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead

One hundred twenty six: added to these,

Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen,

Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which,

Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights:

So that, in these ten thousand they have lost,

There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries;

The rest are — princes, barons, lords, knights,

squires,

And gentlemen of blood and quality.

The names of those their nobles that lie dead, —

Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;

Jaques of Chatillon, admiral of France;

The master of the cross-bows, lord Rambois;

Great master of France, the brave sir Guichard

Dauphin;

John duke of Alençon; Antony duke of Brabant,

The brother to the duke of Burgundy;

And Edward duke of Bar: of lusty earls,

Grandpré, and Roussé, Fauconberg, and Foix,

Beaumont, and Marle, Vaudemont, and Lestrade.

Here was a royal fellowship of death: —

Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another paper.]

Edward the duke of York, the earl of Suffolk,

Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire:

None else of name; and, of all other men,

But five and twenty. O God, thy arm was here,

And not to us, but to thy arm alone.

Ascribe we all. — When, without stratagem,

But in plain shock, and even play of battle,

Was ever known so great and little loss,

On one part and on the other? — Take it, God,

For it is only thine!

Ere. 'Tis wonderful! [Largo:]

K. Hen. Come, so we in procession to the vi-

And be it death proclaimed through our host,

To boast of this, or take that praise from God,

Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, and please your majesty, to tell how many is killed? [Indignat.]

K. Hen. Yes, captain; but with this acknow-

That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great good.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites;

pipes, and knaveries, and nocks; I am forget his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he: I can tell you, there is good men born at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty.

Alarm. Enter King Henry with a part of the English Forces; Warwick, Glouster, Exeter, and others.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to France Until this instant.—Take a trumpet, herald; Ride thou unto the horsemen on yon hill; If they will fight with us, bid them come down, Or void the field; they do offend our sight: If they'll do neither, we will come to them; And make them skirr away, as swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings: Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have; And not a man of them, that we shall take, Shall taste our mercy:—Go, and tell them so.

Enter Montjoy.

Exc. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald? know'st thou not,

That I have find the bones of mine for ransom?—Comest thou again for ransom! [noise]

Mont. No, great king: I come to thee for charitable licence.

That we may wander o'er this bloody field, To look our dead, and then to bury them; To sort our nobles from our common men; For many of our princes (woe the while!) Lie drownd and smok'd in mercenary blood; (So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs In blood of princes; and their wounded steeds Fret fetlock deep in gore, and, with wild rage, Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters, Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great king, To view the field in safety, and dispose Of their dead bodies.

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald, I know not, if the day be ours, or no; For yet a many of your horsemen peer, And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!

What is the castle call'd, that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it—Agincourt. [noise]

K. Hen. Then call we this—the field of Agincourt.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great uncle Edward the pluck prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave battle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true: if your majesty is remembered of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leaks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which your majesty knows, to this hour is an honourable badge of the service; and, I do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Ivar's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour: For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh pluck out of your body, I can tell you that: God place it and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Cheshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the world: I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so!—Our heralds go with him;

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead.

On both our parts.—Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to Williams. Enter Montjoy and others.]

Exc. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the rage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a French, that swag'ered with me last night: who, if 'a live, and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o'the ear: or, if I can see my glove in his cap, (which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear, if alive,) I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, captain Fluellen? Is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be, his enemy is a gentleman of great wit, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath: if he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain, and a Jack-sauce, as ever his plack shoe trod upon God's ground, and his earth, in my conscience, is.

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who servest thou under?

Will. Under captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a good captain: and is good knowledge and literature in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege.

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap: When Alencon and myself were down together, I plucked this glove from his helm; if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alencon and an enemy to our person: if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost love me.

Flu. Your grace does me as great honours, as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once: an please God of his grace, that I might see it.

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, an please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him. [Exit.]

K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, and my brother Glouster,

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels:

The glove, which I have given him for a favour, May, haply, purchase him a box o'the ear; It is the soldier's; I, by bargain, should wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick;

If that the soldier strike him, (as I judge By his blunt bearing, he will keep his word,) Some sudden mischief may arise of it;

Boy. Survez vous le grand capitaine.

[Exit French soldier.]

I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the saying is true,—the empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Berdolph, and Nym, had ten times more valour than this roaring devil! the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger; and they are both hanged; and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it, but I say.

[Exit.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Bourbon, Constable, Rambures, and others.

Con. O diable!

Orl. O seigneur!—le jour est perdu, tout est perdu! Das. Mort de ma vie! I am confounded, all!

Reproach and everlasting shame

Sits mocking in our plumes.—O meechante fortune! Do not run away.

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Das. O perdurable shame!—let's stab ourselves. Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for!

Orl. Is this the king we sent for his ransom? Bow. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!

Let us die instant: Once more back again; And he that will not follow Bourbon now, Let him go hence, and, with his cap in hand, Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door, Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog, His fairest daughter is contuminate. Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us Let us, in heaps, go offer up our lives! Unto these English, or else die with fame.

Orl. We are enough, yet living in the field, To smother up the English in our throngs, If any order might be thought upon.

Throng: Bow. The devil take order now! I'll to this. Let life be short; else shame will be too long.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter King Henry and Forces; Exeter, and others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice-valiant countrymen:

But all's not done, yet keep the French the field! Exe. The duke of York commends him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice within this hour,

I saw him down; thrice up again, and fighting; From helmet to the spur, all blood he was.

Exe. In which army (brave soldier) doth he lie Landing the plume; and by his bloody side, (Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,) The noble earl of Suffolk also lies.

Suffolk first died; and York, as I haggled over, Comes to him, where in gore he lay unstee'd, And takes him by the beard; kisses the gashes, That bloodily did yawn upon his face;

And cries aloud,—Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk! My soul shall thine keep company to heaven;

Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abroad; As, in this glorious and well-foughten field,

We kept together in our chivalry!

Upon these words I came, and cheer'd him up: He smil'd me in the face, caught me his hand,

And with a feeble gripe, says,—Dear my lord,

Commend my service to my sovereign.

So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck

He threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lips;

And so, expos'd to death, with blood he seal'd

A testament of noble-ending love.

The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd

Those waters from me, which I would have stopp'd;

But I had not so much of man in me.

But all my mother came into mine eyes,

And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not;

For, hearing this, I must perform compass'd

With mistful eyes, or they will miss too.—

[Alarums.]

But, hark; what new alarm is this same!

The French have reinforc'd their scatter'd men:—

Then every soldier kill his prisoners;

Give the word through.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Flu. Kill the boys and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms: 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer'd, in the world: In your conscience now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain there's not a boy left alive; and the cowardly rascals, that ran from the battle, have done this slaughter: besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent; wherefore the king, most worthy, hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant king!

Flu. Ay, he was born at Monmouth, captain Gower: What call you the town's name, where Alexander the pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the great.

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig, great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckoning, save the praise is a little variations.

Gow. I think Alexander the great was born in Macedon; his father was called—Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon, where Alexander is born. I tell you, captain,—if you look in the maps of the world, I warrant, you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth: it is called Wye, at Monmouth; but it is out of my brains, what is the name of the other river: but 'tis all one, 'tis as like as my fingers to my fingers, and there is salmon in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferently well; for there is figure in all things. Alexander (God knows, and you know,) in his rage, and his furies, and his wraths, and his choler, and his mood, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicated in his brains, did, in his rage and his anger, look you, kill his best friend, Clytus.

Gow. Our king is not like him in that; he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take tales out of my mouth, ere it is made an end and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: As Alexander is kill his friend Clytus, being in his rage and his cups; so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgment, is turn away the fat knight with the great pelly-doublet: he was full of jests, and West. Perish the man, whose mind is backward now!

K. Hen. Tho' dost not wish more help from England, cou-in!

West. God's will, my liege, 'would you and I Without more help, might fight this battle out!

K. Hen. Why, were thou hast unwish'd five thousand men;

Which likes me better, than to wish us one —
You know your places; God be with you all!

Tuckst. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee, king Harry,

If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound,
Before this most assumed overthrow:

For, certainly, thou art as near the gulf,
Thou needs must be engulged. Besides, in mercy,

The constable desires thee—thou wilt mind
Thy followers of repentance; that their souls

May make a peaceful and a sweet retire
From off these fields, where (wretches) their poor

bodies
Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now? back;
Mont. The constable of France

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer
Bed them achieve me, and then sell my bones.

Good God! why should they mock poor fellows
thus!

The man, that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.

A many of our bodies shall, no doubt,
Find native graves; upon the which, I trust,

Shall witness live in brass of this day's work;
And thus, that leave their valiant bones in France,

Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,
They shall be fain'd; for there the sun shall greet

them,
And draw their honours reeking up to heaven;

Leaving their earthly parts to choke your dimes.
The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.

Mark then a bounding valour in our English;
That, being dead, like to the bullet's grazing,

Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of mortality

Let me speak proudly:—Tell the constable,
We are but warriors for the working day;

Our gayness, and our gilt, are all besmirch'd
With raiment marching in the painful field;

There's not a piece of feather in our host,
(Guard argument, I hope we shall not fly.)

And time hath worn us into slovenry;
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;

And my poor soldiers tell me—yet ere night
They'll be in fresher robes; or they will pluck

The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads,
And turn them out of service. If they do this,

(As, if God please, they shall,) my ransom then Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour;

Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald;

They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints:

Which if they have as I will leave 'em to them,
Shall yield them little, tell the constable.

Mont. I shall, king Harry. And so fare thee
well:

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.
K. Hen. I fear, thou'll once more come again for ransom.

Enter the Duke of York.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg
The leading of the vaward.

K. Hen. Take it, brave York. — Now, soldiers, march away:—

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — The Field of Battle.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter French Soldier, Pistol, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur.

Fr. Sol. Je pense, que vous estes le gentilhomme de bonne qualite.

Pist. Quality, call you me? — Construe me, art thou a gentleman? What is thy name? I discuss.

Fr. Sol. O seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O seigneur Dew should be a gentleman:—
Perpend my words, O seigneur Dew, and mark:—

O seigneur Dew, thou diest on point of fox,
Except, O seigneur, thou do give to me

Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez misericorde! vous pitie de moy!

Pist. Mow shall not serve, I will have forty noys!
For I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat,

In drops of crimson blood.
Fr. Sol. Est il impossible d'eschapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, cur!

Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat,
Offer'st me brass?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moy!

Pist. Say'st thou me so? is that a ton of mow?
Come hither, boy; Ask me this saviour in French,

What is his name
Boy. Escoutez: Comment estes vous appelle?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says, his name is—master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firr him, and ferret him!—discuss the same in French unto him

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firr.

Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faires vous prest; car ce soldat icy est dispose tout a cette heure de couper vostre gorge.

Pist. Ouy, couper gorge, par ma foy, pesant,
Unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns;

Or manured shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison;
gardez ma vie, et je vous donneray deux cent escus.

Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and, for his ransom, he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him—my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son serment, de per-donner aucun prisonnier; neantmoins, pour les escus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberte, le franchissement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille remercemens: et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombe entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et tres distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks: and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy seigneur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show —
Follow me, cur.

[Exit Pistol.]

Ren. What will you have them weep our horses' blood?
How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattled, you French peers. [horse!]

Com. To horse, your gallant princes! straight to do but behold you poor and starved band, And your fair show shall sock away their souls, Leaving them but the shales and husks of men. There is not work enough for all our hands; Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins To give each naked curtle-ax a stain— That our French gallants shall to-day draw out And sheath, for lack of sport: let us but blow on them.

The vapour of our valour will overturn them. 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords, That our superfluous lackeys, and our peasants,— Who, in unnecessary action, swarm About our squares of battle,—were enough To purge this field of such a kindling foe: Though we, upon this mountain's basis by, Took stand for idle speculation: But that our honours must not. What's to say? A very little little let us do, And all is done. Then let the trumpet sound The tucket-annunciation, and the note to mount: For our approach shall so much dare the field, That England shall couch down in fear, and yield.

Enter Grandpré.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?

You island carions, desperate of their bones, Ill-favour'dly become the morning field: Their ragges, curtains poorly are let loose, And our air snakes them passing scornfully. Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host, And faintly through a rusty heaver peeps. Their horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks, With torch-staves in their hand: and their poor jades [hips] Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and The gum down-ruping from their pale-dead eyes; And in their pale dull mouths the gimmel bit Lies foul with chewed grass, still and motionless; And their executors, the knavish crows, Fly o'er them all, impatient for their hour. Description cannot suit itself in words, To demonstrate the life of such a battle In life so lifeless as it shows itself.

Com. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death. [suits.]

Dum. Shall we go send them dinners, and fresh And give their fasting horses provender, And after fight with them?

Com. I say hit for my guard; On, to the field: I will the banner from a trumpet take, And see it, for my haste. Come, come away! The sun is high, and we outwear this day. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The English Camp.

Enter the English Host; Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Salisbury, and Westmoreland.

Glo. Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to view their West. Of fighting men they have full threescore thousand.

Exr. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.

Sol. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful God be wi' you princes all; I'll to my charge:

If we no more meet, till we meet in heaven, Then, joyfully,—my noble lord of Bedford,— My dear lord Gloucester,—and my good lord Exeter,— And my kind kinsman,—warriors, all adieu!

Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Exr. Farewell, kind lord, fight valiantly to-day; And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it. For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.

[Exit Salisbury.]

Bed. He is as full of valour, as of kindness; Princely in both.

West.

O that we now had here

Enter King Henry.

But one ten thousand of those men in England That do no work to-day!

K. Hen. What's he, that wishes so? My cousin Westmoreland!—No, my fair cousin: If we are marked to die, we are enough

To do our country loss; and if to live, The fewer men, the greater share of honour.

God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more. By Jove, I am not covetous for gold;

Nor care I, who doth feed upon my cost; It yeames me not, if men my garments wear;

Such outward things dwell not in my desires: But, if it be a sin to covet honour,

I am the most offending soul alive. No, faith, my cos, wish not a man from England:

God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour, As one man more, methinks, would share from me.

For the best hope I have, O, do not wish one more: Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he, which hath no stomach to this fight, Let him depart; his passport shall be made,

And crowns for convoy put into his purse: We would not die in that man's company,

That fears his fellowship to the with us. His day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

He that outlives this day, and comes safe home, Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,

And rouse him at the name of Crispian. He, that shall live this day, and see old age,

Will yearly on the vigil feast his friends, And say—to-morrow is saint Crispian:

Then will he strip his sleeve, and show his scars, And say, these wounds I had on Crispin's day.

Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot, But he'll remember, with advantages,

What feats he did that day: Then shall our names Familiar in their mouths as household words,—

Harry the king, Bedford, and Exeter, Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,—

Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd: This story shall the good man teach his son;

And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by. From this day to the ending of the world,

But we in it shall be remember'd: We few, we happy few, we band of brothers

For he, to-day that sheds his blood with me, Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,

This day shall gentle his condition: And gentlemen in England, now a-bed, [there:] Shall think themselves accurs'd, they were not

And hold their manhoods cheap, while any speaks That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

Enter Salisbury.

Sol. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed:

The French are bravely in their battles set, And with all experience charge on us

K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so fully; but, when our throats are cut, he may be amused, and we use the wisest.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. Mass, you'll pay him then! That's a perilous shot out of an elder gun, that a poor and private displeasure can do against a monarch;
yet may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather.
You'll never trust his word after! Come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round;
I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of time, and I will wear it in my bonnet; then, if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove; give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap; if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, This is my glove, by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English for-a, be friends;
we have French quarrels enough, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: But it is no English treason to cut French crowns; and, to-morrow, the king himself will be a clipper.

[Exeunt Soldiers.]

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls,
Our debts, our careful wives, our children, and
Our sins, lay on the king;—we must bear all.
O hard condition!—two-born with greatness,
Subjected to the breath of every fool,
Whose sense no more can feel but his own wring!
What infinite heart's ease must kings neglect,
That private men enjoy!

And what have kings, that privates have not too,
Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

And what art thou, thou idol ceremony?

What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs, than do thy worshippers?

What are thy rents? What are thy comings-in?

O ceremony, show me but thy worth!

What is the soul of adoration?

Art thou night elixir, balme, degree, and form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?

Wherein thou art less happy being fear'd
Than being feared?

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet,
But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great greatness,
And thou thy ceremony give thee cure!

Thou hast thy fever, though the fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation!

Will it give place to flexure and low bending?

Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's
knee,

Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream,
That play'st so subtly with a king's repose;
I am a king, that find thee; and I know
Thou art the helm, the mantle, the sceptre, and the ball,
The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,
The intertissued robe of gold and pearl,

The furred title running 'fore the king,
The throne he sits on, nor the tale in pomp
That beats upon the high shore of this world,—
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,
Not all these, laid in bed unjustical,
Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave;
Who, with a body fill'd, and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressed bread,
Never sees horrid night, the child of hell;
But, like a lackey, from the rise to set,
Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night
Sleeps in Elysium; next day, after dawn,
Doth rise, and help Hyperion to his horse,
And follows so the ever-running year,
With profitable labour, to his grave:
And, but for ceremony, such a wretch,
Winding up days with toil, and nights with sleep,
Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king.
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it; but in gross brain little wots
What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace,
Whose hours the peasant best advantage.

Enter Enjolbar.

Ep. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,

Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. Good old knight,

Collect them all together at my tent:

I'll be before thee.

Ep. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers'
hearts!

Possess them not with fear; take from them now
The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them!—Not to-day, O

Lord,

O not to-day—think not upon the fault

My father made in compassing the crown!

I Richard's body have interr'd new;

And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears,

Than from it issued forced drops of blood.

Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,

Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up

Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built

Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests

Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do:

Though all that I can do, is nothing worth;

Since that my penitence comes after all,

Imploping pardon.

Enter Gloster.

G'o. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloster's voice!—Ay;

I know thy errand, I will go with thee:—

The day, my friends, and all things stay for me

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — The French Camp.

Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Rambures, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up my lords. [Qu'ry' ha!]

Dau. Montez a cheval!—My horse! violet, luc!

Orl. O brave spirit!

Dau. Via!—les caux et la terre!

Orl. Rien puis? l'air et le feu!

Dau. Ciel! Cousin Orleans.

Enter Constable.

Now, my lord Constable!

Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service

Dau. Mount them, and make us known in their hides;

That their hot blood may run in English eyes,

And doubt them with superfluous courage. Ha!

Enter Fluellen and Gower, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Fla. So, in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and ancient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kept: if you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle taddle, or pibble pabble, in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise.

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you heard him all night.

Fla. If the enemy is an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should alow, look you, be an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb; in your own conscience now!

Gow. I will speak lower.

Fla. I pray you, and beseech you, that you will.

[Enter Gower and Fluellen.]

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion, There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Bates, Court, and Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

Bates. I think it be; but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but, I think, we shall never see the end of it.—Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you?

K. Hen. Under our Thousus Erpuellham.

Will. A good old commander, and a most kind gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?

K. Hen. Even as men wrecked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king!

K. Hen. No; nor it is not meet he should. For, though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man, as I am; the violet smells to him, as it doth to me; the element shows to him, as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions: his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet, when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing; therefore, when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are: Yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army.

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will; but, I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in the Thames up to the neck; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were cut here.

K. Hen. By my truth, I will speak my conscience of the king; I think, he would not wish himself any where but where he is.

Bates. Then, 'would he were here alone; so should he be sure to be ransom'd, and a many poor men's lives saved.

K. Hen. I dare say, you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this, to feel other men's moods: Methinks, I could not die any where so contented, as in the king's company; his cause being just, and his quarrel honourable.

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough, if we know we are the king's subjects: if his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.

Will. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make; when all those legs, and arms, and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all—We died at such a place; some, swearing; some, crying for a surgeon; some, upon their wives left poor behind them; some, upon the debts they owe; some, upon their children newly left. I am afraid there are few do well, that die in battle; for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it; whom to disobey, were against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So, if a son, that is by his father sent about merchandise, do foolishly miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him; or if a servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers, and die in many irremediable inequities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation;—But this is not so; the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so apologetic, if it came to the arbitrament of sword, can try it out with all suspected soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law, and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his bundle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished, for here breach of the king's laws, in now the king's quarrel; where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and where they would be safe, they perish: Then if they die unpunished, no more is the king guilty of their damnation, than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or, not dying, the time was blessedly lost, wherein such preparation was gained; and, in him that escapes, it were not an to think, that making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill is upon his own head, the king is not to answer for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say, he would not be ransom'd.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheer-

Orl. It is now two o'clock : but, let me see,— my ten.
We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murremur, and the poring dark,
Fill the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of
night.

The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch :
Fire answers fire ; and through their pale flames
Each battle sees the other's umber'd face :
Stood threat'ning stood, in high and beautiful neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear ; and from the tents
The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.
The country cooks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy morning comes.
Proud of their numbers, and secure in soul,
The confident and over-lusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice ;
And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night,
Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English.

Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently, and idly ruminate
The morning's danger ; and their gesture end,
Investing lack-lust cheeks, and war-worn coats,
Presateth them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O, now, who will behold

The royal captain of this ruin'd band,
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent,
Let him cry—Praise and glory on his head !
For forth he goes, and visits all his host ;
Bids them good-morrow, with a modest smile ;
And calls them—brothers, friends, and country-
men.

Upon his royal face there is no note
How dread an army hath enrounded him ;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watch'd night ;
But freshly looks, and overbears attaint
With cheerful countenance, and sweet majesty ;
That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks :
A large universal, like the sun,
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear. Then mean, and gentle all,
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night ;
And so our scene must to the battle fly ;
Where, (O for pity !) we shall much disgrace—
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill dispos'd in brawl ridiculous—
The name of Agincourt : Yet, sit and see :
Minding true things, by what their mockeries be.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.—The English Camp at Agincourt.

Enter King Henry, Bedford, and Gloster.

K. Hen. Gloster, 'tis true, that we are in great danger ;
Thy's greater therefore should our courage be.—

Good morrow, brother Bedford.—God Almighty !
There is some soul of godness in things evil ;
Would men observingly still it out ;
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful, and good husbandry :
Besides, they are our outward consciences,
And preachers to us all ; admonishing,
That we should dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow, old sir Thomas Erpingham :
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France.

Erp. Not so, my liege ; this lodging likes me better,
Since I may say—now lie I like a king.

K. Hen. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains.

Upon example ; so the spirit is eased ;
And, when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt,
The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drisway grave, and newly move
With casted slough and fresh legidity.
Lend me thy cloak, sir Thomas.—Brothers
both,

Commend me to the princes in our camp ;
Do my good morrow to them ; and, anon,
Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloster and Bedford.]

Erp. Shall I attend your grace ?

K. Hen. No, my good knight ;
Go with my brothers to my lords of England :
I and my husband must debate a while,
And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble
Harry !

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart ! thou speak-est cheerfully.

Enter Pistol.

Pist. Qui va là ?

K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me ; Art thou officer ?

Or art thou base, common, and popular ?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trailest thou the pismant pike ?

K. Hen. Even so : What are you ?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the king.

Pist. The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold,

A lad of life, an imp of fame ;

Of parents good, of fat most valiant :

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart-strings

I love the lovely bully. What's thy name ?

K. Hen. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy ! a King, art thou of Cornish crew ?

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Knowest thou Fluellen ?

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leak about his gate.

Upon Saint Davy's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art thou his friend ?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The fo for thee then !

K. Hen. I thank you : God be with you !

Pist. My name is Pistol called.

[Exit.]

K. Hen. It suits well with your fierceness.

pear in him, but only in patient stillness, while his rider mounts him: he is, indeed, a horse; and all other jades you may call—beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bedding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as fluent as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all: 'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world (familiar to us, and unknown) to lay apart their particular functions, and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise, and began thus:—Wonder of nature.—

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.—

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Me foy! the other day, methought, your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So, perhaps, did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Orl. O! then, belike, she was old and gentle; and you rode, like a Kerne of Ireland, your French horse off, and in your straight trousers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warned by me then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bugs; I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears her own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. Le chien est retourne a son propre vomissement, et la truie lacer au bourbur: thou nakedest use of any thing.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress; or any such proverb, so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars, or suns, upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously; and 'twere more honour, some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well, were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. 'Would, I were able to load him with his doers! Will it never be day! I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way: But I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Why will you go to hazard with me for twenty English prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.

Dau. 'Tis midnight, I'll go arm myself. [Exit.]

Orl. The dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think, he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is, simply, the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity; and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that, by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he?

Con. Murry, he told me so himself; and he said, he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not, it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it, but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour; and, when it appears, it will hate.

Orl. It will never said well.

Con. I will rap that proverb with—There is flattery in friendship.

Orl. And I will take up that with—Give the devil his due.

Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil: have at the very eye of that proverb, with—A pox of the devil!

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much—A fool's bolt is soon shot.

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tent.

Con. Who hath measured the ground?

Mess. The lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.—Would it were day!—Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the dawning, as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this king of England, to mope with his fat-braided followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples: You may as well say,—that's a valiant flea that darts out his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs, in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives; and then give them great meals of beef, and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves, and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then we shall find to-morrow—they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm: Come, shall we about it?

Go. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue; that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in great commanders' names, and they will learn you by rote, where services were done:—at such and such a scone, at such a breach, at such a convey; who could off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on; and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-turned oaths: And what a beard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, will do among foaming bottles, and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on! but you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellous mistook.

Fla. I tell you what, captain Gower;—I do perceive, he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is; if I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.] Hark you, the king is coming; and I must speak with him from the bridge.

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, and Soldiers.

Fla. Got pleas your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen! I camest thou from the bridge?

Fla. Ay, so please your majesty. The duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the bridge: the French is gone off, look you; and there is gallant and most brave passages: Marry, 'th'avernary was have possession of the bridge; but he is enforced to retire, and the duke of Exeter is master of the bridge: I can tell your majesty, the duke is a brave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Fla. The perdition of 'th'avernary hath been very great, very reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church, one Bartholp, if your majesty know the man: his face is all bubuckles, and whekles, and knots, and flames of fire; and his lips plove at his nose, and it is like a cowl of fire, sometimes plove, and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off;—and we give express charge, that, in our marches through the country, there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for; none of the French upbraided, or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket sounds. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then, I know thee; What shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king:—Say thou to Harry of England, Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep; Advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him, we could have rebuked him at Harfleur: but that we thought not good to bruise an injury, till it were full ripe:—now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repeat his folly, see his weakness, and assure our suzerainty. bid him, therefore, consider of our reasons: which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested: which, in weight to answer, his petitions would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the number of his kneelown too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own persons, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this mid-vengeance; and all him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master; so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee And tell thy king,—I do not seek him now; But could be willing to march on to Calais Without impeachment: for, to say the smooth, [Took] (Though 'tis no wisdom to confer so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage.) My people are with sickness much infected; My numbers lessen'd; and those few I have, Almost no better than so many French: Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herak! I thought, upon one pair of English legs [Gt.] Did march three Frenchmen. — Yet, forgive me That I do brag thus!—this your air of France Hath blown that vice in me; I must repeat. Go, therefore, tell thy master, here I am; My ransom, is this frail and worthless trunk; My army, but a weak and sickly guard; Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himself, and such another weigh bour, [Joy.] Stand in our way. There's for thy labour, Mont! Go bid thy master well advise himself: If we may pass, we will; if we be hinder'd, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood Drench: and so, Montjoy, fare you well. The sum of all our answer is but this: We would not seek a battle, as we are; Nor as we are, we say, we will not shun it; So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness.

Glo. I hope, they will not come upon us now.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

[March.] March to the bridge; it now draws toward Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves; And on to-morrow bid them march away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. — The French Camp, near Agincourt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Ramours, the Duke of Orleans, Dauphin, and others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. — 'Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Con. My lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour,—

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Con. What a long night is this! — I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasteras. Ca, ha! He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volent, le Perceus, qui a les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I swear, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg.

Con. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perceus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never sp-

Let us not live in France; let us quit all,
And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Duc. O Dieu vœux! I shall a few sprays of us—
The emptying of our fathers' luxury,
Our vices, put in wild and savage stock,
Spent up so suddenly into the clouds,
And overlook their grafters! (hastards!)

Boar. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman
Mort de me suis! If they march along
Unfright withal, but I will sell my dukedom,
To buy a slubbery and a dirty farm
In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Com. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle!

Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull?
On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale,
Killing their fruit with frowns! Can sodden water,

A drench for our-rein'd jades, their barley broth,
Decorate their cold-blood to such valiant heat!
And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine,
Seem frosty! O, for the honour of our land,
Let us not hang like rumpen carles (people
Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty
Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields;
Pour—we may call them, in their native lorda.
Duc. By faith and honour,

Our madmen mock at us; and plainly say,
Our mettle is bred out; and they will give
Their bodies to the lust of English youth,
To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Boar. They bid us—to the English dancing-schools;

And teach insolence high, and swift courtesies;
Saying, our grace is only in our heels,
And that we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy, the herald I speed
him hence;

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.—
Up, princes: and, with spirit of honour edg'd,
More sharper than your swords, hie to the field;
Charles De-la-trê, high constable of France;
You, dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berry,
Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;
Jacques Chastillon, Rambures, Vandennut,
Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg,
Foix, Lestrails, Boucqualt, and Charolais; High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,

For your great seats, now quit you of great shame;
Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land
With pennons pointed in the blood of Harfleur—
Rash on his heat, as doth the melted snow
Upon the ralleys—whose low vernal seat
The Alps doth spit and send his rheum upon:
Go down upon him,—you have power enough.—
And in a captive chariot, into Rouen
Bring him our prisoner.

Com. This becomes the great.
Sorry am I, his numbers are so few,
His soldiers sick, and furnish'd in their march;
For, I am sure, when he shall see our army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear.
And, for achievement, offer us his ransom.

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy;

And let him say to England, that we send
To know what willing ransom he will give.—
Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Duc. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.—

Now, forth, lord constable, and princes all;
And quickly bring us word of England's fall.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The English Camp in Ploardy.

Enter Gower and Fluellen.

Gow. How now, captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent service committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Aeneas; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my livings, and my uttermost powers:
he is not, (God be praised and pleased!) any hurt
in the world; but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ensica there at the bridge,—I think, in my very conscience, he is as valiant as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world: but I did see him do gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called—ancient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Enter Pistol.

Flu. Do you not know him? Here comes the
man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours:
The duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Baroloph, a soldier firm and sound of heart,
Of honour valour, hath,—by cruel fate,
And giddy fortune's furious sickle wheel,
That godless blind,

That stands upon the rolling restless stone,—

Flu. By your patience, ancient Pistol. Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler before her eyes, to signify to you that fortune is blind: And she is painted also with a wheel; to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and variations, and mutabilities: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls:—In good truth, the poet is make a most excellent description of fortune: fortune, look you, is an excellent moral.

Pist. Fortune is Baroloph's foe, and frowns on
him;

For he hath stol'n a pie, and hanged must 'a be.
A damned death!

Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free,
And let not being his wind-pipe suffocate:

But Exeter hath given him the doom of death,
For par of little price.

Therefore, captain, speak, the duke will hear thy voice;
And let not Baroloph's vital thread be cut
With edge of penny cord, and vile reproach:

Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Ancient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, ancient, it is not a thing to rejoice at: for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his great pleasure, and put him in executions; for disciplines ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd; and ago for thy

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit Pistol.]

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal;
I remember him now; a bawd; a cutpurse.

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a uttered as brave words at the bridge, as you shall see in a summer's day:
But it is very well: what he has spoke to me,
that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Jenny. Ah ! that's a foul fault.

[A parley sounded.

Gow. The town sounds a parley.
Fls. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. — The same. Before the Gates of Harfleur.

The Governor and some Citizens on the walls; the English Forces below. Enter King Henry and his Train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest parley we will admit:
Therefore, to our best mercy give yourselves;
Or like to men proud of destruction,
Defy us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier,
(A name, that, in my thoughts, becomes me best,) I begin the battery once again,
I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur,
Till in her ashes she be buried.
The gates of mercy shall be all shut up;
And the dead's soldier, — rough and hard of heart, —

In liberty of bloody hand, shall range
With countenance wide as hell; mowing like grass
Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants.
What is it then to me, if impious war,
Array'd in flames, like to the prince of fiends, —
Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation?
What is't to me, when you yourselves are cause,
If your own madens fall into the hand
Of but not forcing violation?
What rein can hold contentious wickedness,
When down the hill he holds his fierce career?
We may as bootless spend our vain command
Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil,
As send precepts to the Leviathan
To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur,
Take pity of your town, and of your people,
Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command;
Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace
O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds
Of deadly murder, spoil, and villainy.

If not, why, in a moment, look to see
The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand
Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;
Your fathers taken by the silver beards;
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the wall;
Your naked infants spitted upon pikes;
Whiles the mad mothers with their howls confused
Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry
At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.
What say you? will you yield, and this avoid?
Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gow. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The dauphin, whom of succour we entreated,
Returns us — that his powers are not yet ready
To raise so great a siege. Therefore, dread king,
We yield our town, and lives, to thy soft mercy:
Enter our gates; dispose of us, and ours;
For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates. — Come, uncle Exeter,
Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain,
And fortify it strongly against the French:
Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,
The winter coming on, and sickness growing
Upon our soldiers, — we'll retire to Calais.
To night in Harfleur will we be your guest;
To-morrow for the march are we address'd.

[Flourish. The King, &c. enter the town.]

SCENE IV. — Rouen. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Katharine and Alice.

Kath. Alice, tu as été en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je le prie, m'enseignes; si faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez-vous la main, en Anglois?

Alice. La main? elle est appelée, de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? mes, foy, je oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendray. Les doigts? je pense, qu'ils sont appelés de fingers; ouy, de fingers.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingers. Je pense, que y suis le bon escolier. J'ay gagné deux mois d'Anglois vilement. Comment appelez-vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles? les appellons, de nails.

Kath. De nails. Escoutez; dites moy, si je parle bien: de hand, de fingers, de nails.

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon Anglois.

Kath. Dites moy en Anglois, le bras.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude.

Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je m'en ferois la repetition de tous les mots, que vous m'avez appris des a present.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez moy, Alice; escoutez: De hand, de fingers, de nails, de arm, de bilbow.

Alice. De elbow, madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu! je m'en oublie; De elbow.

Comment appelez-vous le col?

Alice. De neck, madame.

Kath. De neck: Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de neck: le menton, de sin.

Alice. Ouy. Sans vostre honneur; en verité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droict que les natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre par la grace de Dieu; et en peu de temps.

Alice. N'avez-vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ay enseigné?

Kath. Non, je reciteray a vous promptement. De hand, de finger, de nail, —

Alice. De nail, madame.

Kath. De nail, de arme, de elbow.

Alice. Sans vostre honneur, de elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis je; de elbow, de neck, et de sin. Comment appelez-vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. De foot, madame; et de cou.

Kath. De foot, et de cou? O Seigneur Dieu! ces sont mots de son manant, corrompue, grosse, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user.

Je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les Seigneurs de France, pour tout le monde. Il faut de foot, et de cou, avant-moins. Je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: De hand, de finger, de nail, de arm, de elbow, de neck, de sin, de foot, de cou.

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour nous aller nous a dîner.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. — The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter the French King, the Dauphin, Duke of Bourbon, the Constable of France, and others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain, he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,

Knocks go and come; God's vassals drop and die;
And sword and shield,
In bloody field,
Doth win immortal fame.

Boy. 'Would I were in an alehouse in London!
—I would give all my fame for a put of ale, and safety.

Pist. And I:
If wishes could prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I hie.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as bird doth sing on bough.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Got's blood!—Up to the prenches, you rascals! will you not up to the prenches!

[Driving them forward.
Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould!
Abate thy rage, abate thy mainly rage!
Abate thy rage, great duke! [chuck]
Good bawcock, bate thy rage! use lenity, sweet Nym. These be good humours!—your honour wins bad humours.

[Exeunt Nym, Pistol, and Bardolph, followed by Fluellen.]

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am buy to them all three: but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for, indeed, three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph,—he is white-liver'd, and red-faced; by the means whereof, 'a fuses it out, but fights not. For Pistol,—he hath a killing tongue, and a quiet sword: by the means whereof 'a breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym,—he hath heard, that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest 'a should be thought a coward: but his few bad words are match'd with as few good deeds; for 'a never brake any man's head but his own; and that was against a post, when he was drunk. They will steal any thing, and call it,—purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case; bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching; and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew, by that piece of service, the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchiefs: which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket, to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villainy goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. [Exit Boy.]

Re-enter Fluellen, Gower following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines; the duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke, it is not so good to come to the mines: For, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war; the conceivings of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th' adversary (you may discuss under the duke, look you,) is dight himself four yards under the countermines; by Cheshu, I think, 'a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, 'a faith.

Flu. It is certain Macmorris, is it not?
Gow. I think, it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the 'orld: I will verily as much in his beard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you—of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter Macmorris and Jamy, at a distance.

Gow. Here 'a comes; and the Scots captain, captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous valorous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition, and knowledge, in the ancient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the 'orld, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say, gud-day, captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, goot captain Jamy.

Gow. How now, captain Macmorris? have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given o'er?

Moc. By Chish la, tish ill done: the work is give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and by my father's soul, the work is ill done; it is give over: I would have blowed up the town, so Chish save me, la, in an hour.
O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill
done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I preech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly, to satisfy my opinion, and partly, for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline;
that is the point.

Jamy. It will be very gud, gud felth. gud captains both: and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry.

Moc. It is no time to discourse, so Chish save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet calls us to the breach; and we talk, and, by Chish, do nothing; 'tis shame for us all: so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand; and there is threats to be cut, and works to be done; and there is nothing done, so Chish sa' me, la.

Jamy. By the mess, are these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, aile do guile service, or aile lige i' the grund for it; ay, or go to death;
and aile pay it as valorously as I may, that sall
I surely do, that is the breff and the long: Mary, I wad full faim heard some question 'tween you
'tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, wader your correction, there is not many of your union—

Moc. Of my nation? What is my nation?
is a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal! What is my nation? Who talks of my nation!

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, captain Macmorris, perni-venture, I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought: to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself,
both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Moc. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chish save me, I will cut off; or head.

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

(That, if requiring fail, he will compel.)
 And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
 Deliver up the crown; and to take merry
 On the poor souls, for whom 'his hungry war
 Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head
 Turns he the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
 The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans
 For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers,
 That shall be swallowed in this controversy.
 This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message;
 Unless the dauphin be in presence here,
 To whom expressly I bring greeting too. [ther:
Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this fur-
 To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
 Back to our brother England

Das. For the dauphin,
 I stand here for him; What to him from England? [tempt,

Esc. Scorn, and defiance; slight regard, con-
 And any thing that may not become
 The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
 This says my king; and, if your father's highness
 Do not, in great of all demands at large,
 Sweden the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
 He'll call you to so hot an answer for it,
 That caves and woonly vaultings of France
 Shall chide your trespass, and return your mock
 In second accent of his ordinance.

Das. Say, if my father render fair reply,
 It is against my will: for I desire
 Nothing but odds with England; to that end,
 As matching to his youth and vanity,
 I do present him with these Paris balls

Esc. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,
 Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe;
 And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference
 (As we, his subjects, have in wonder found,)
 Between the promise of his greater days
 And these his masters now; now he weighs time,
 Even to the utmost grain; which you shall read
 In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full. [king

Esc. Despatch us with all speed, lest that our
 Come here himself to question our delay;
 For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon despatch'd with fair conditions:

A night is but small breath, and little pause,
 To answer matters of this consequence.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Chorus.

Chs. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene
 In motion of no less celerity [flies,
 Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen
 The well appointed king at Hampton pier
 Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet
 With sixteen streamers the young Phœbus fanning.
 Play with your fancies; and in them behold,
 Upon the bempen tackle, ship-boys climbing;
 Hear the shrill whistle, which doth order give
 To winds confused; behold the threaten'd sails, borne with the invisible and creeping wind,
 Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,
 Breasting the lofty surge: O, do but think,
 You stand upon the verge, and behold
 A city on the inconstant billows dancing;
 For so appears this fleet majestical,
 Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow!
 Grapple your minds to sterage of this navy;
 And leave your England, as dead midnight still,

Guarded with grandures, babies, and old women,
 Either past, or not arriv'd to, pith and pumaure:
 For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
 With one appearing hair, that will not follow
 These call'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France? [mege:]

Work, work, your thoughts, and therein see a
 Behold the ordinance on their carriages.
 With fatal mouths zapping on girded Harfleur.
 Suppose, the ambassador from the French comes back:

Tells Harry—that the king doth offer him
 Katharine his daughter; and with her, to dowry
 Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
 The offer likes not: and the noble gunner
 With lustuck now the devilish cannon touches.

[Alarm; and chambers go off.
 And down goes all before them. Still he kind,
 And eke out our performance with your mind.
 [Exit.

SCENE I.—The same. Before Harfleur.

Alarum. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Bedford,
 Gloucester, and Soldiers, with scaling ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;

Or close the wall up with our English dead!
 In peace, there's nothing so becomes a man,
 As modest stillness, and humility;
 But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
 Then imitate the action of the tiger:
 Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
 Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage.
 Then lend the eye a terrible aspect:

Let it pry through the portage of the head,
 Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it.
 As fearfully, as doth a galled rock,
 O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
 Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.

Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostril wide,
 Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
 To his full height!—On, on, you noblest English,
 Whose blood is set from fathers of war-proof!

Fathers, that, like so many Alexanders,
 Have, in these parts, from morn till even fought,
 And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.
 Dishonour not your mothers; now attest

That those whom you call'd fathers, did beget
 Be copy now to men of grosser blood, [you!]
 And teach them how to war!—And you, good

you men,
 Whose limbs were made in England, show us
 The mettle of your pasture; let us swear [not;
 That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt

For there is none of you so mean and base,
 That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.
 I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
 Straining upon the start. The game's a-foot;
 Follow your spirit; and, upon this charge,
 Cry—God for Harry! England! and Saint George!

[Exeunt. Alarm, and chambers go off.

SCENE II.—The same.

*Forces pass over; then enter Nym, Bardolph,
 Pistol, and Boy.*

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Nym. 'Pray thee, corporal, stay; the knocks are too hot; and, for mine own part, I have not a cuse of lives: the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-soar of it.

Pist. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound;

Nym. Shall we shog off! the king will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away.—My love, give me thy lips.

Look to my chattels, and my moveables;
Let senses rule; the word is, Pitch and pay;
Trust none;
For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes.

And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck;
Therefore, cassio be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy crystals.—Yoke-fellows in arms,
Let us to France! like horse-leeches, my boys;
To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck! [say.]

Doy. And that is but unwholesome food, they say.
Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.]
Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it;
but adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear; keep close, I thee command.

Quick. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—France. A Room in the French King's Palace.

Enter the French King, attended; the Dauphin, the Duke of Burgundy, the Constable, and others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English with full power upon us;

And more than carefully it us concerns,
To answer royally in our defences.
Therefore the dukes of Berry, and of Bretagne,
Of Brabant, and of Orleans, shall make forth.—
And you, prince Dauphin,—with all sweet despatch,

To line and new repair our towns of war,
With men of courage, and with means defendant:
For England's approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulf.
It fits us then, to be as provident
As fear may teach us, out of late examples
Left by the fatal and neglected English
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe:
For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom,
(Though war, nor so known quarrel, were in question.)

But that defences, musters, preparations,
Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,
As were a war in expectation.

Therefore, I say, 'tis meet we all go forth,
To view the sick and feeble parts of France;
And let us do it with no show of fear;
No, with no more, than if we heard that England

Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance:
For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
Her sceptre so fantastically borne
By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,
That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, prince Dauphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king:

Question your grace the late ambassadors.—
With what great state he heard their embassy,
How well supplied with noble counsellors,
How modest in exception, and withal
How terrible in countenance resolution,—
And you shall find, his vanities fore-spent
Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,
Covering discretion with a coat of folly;
A earlener do with ordure hide those roots
That show, first spring, and by must decay.

Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high constable;
But though we think it so, it is no matter:
In cases of defence, 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems:
So the proportions of defence are fill'd,
Which, of a weak and niggardly projection,
Doth, like a miser, spoil his coat, with scanting
A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we king Harry strong;
And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet him.
The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us;
And he is bred out of that bloody strain,
That haunted us in our familiar paths:
Witness our too much memorable shame,
When Cressy battle fatally was struck,

And all our princes captiv'd, by the hand
Of that black name, Edward black prince of Wales;

Whiles that his mountain sire,—on mountain standing,

Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,—
Saw his heroidal seed, and smil'd to see him
Mangle the work of nature, and defiance
The patterns that by God and by French fathers
Had twenty years been made. 'Tis in a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Henry King of England

Do crave admittance to your majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present audience.—
Go, and bring them.

[Exeunt Mess. and certain Lords]

You see, this chase is holy fellow'd, friends.

Dau. I turn head, and stop pursuit: for coward dogs

Most spend their mouths, when what they seem
Runs far before them. Good my overreign,
Take up the English short; and let them know
Of what a monarchy you are the head:
Self love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with Exeter and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother England!
Exe. From him; and thus he greets your majesty.

He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself and lay apart
The borrow'd glories, that, by gift of heaven,
By law of nature and of nations, 'long
To him, and to his heirs; namely, the crown,
And all wide-stretched honours that pertain,
By custom and the ordinance of times,
Unto the crown of France. That you may know,
'Tis no sinister, nor no awkward claim,
Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd days,

Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable line,
[Over a paper.]

In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you, overlook this pedigree;
And, when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what followeth? [crown]

Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the Even in your hearts, there will be rake for it:
And therefore in fierce tempest as he coming,
In thunder, and in earthquake, like a Jove;

That admiration did not whoop at them;
But thou, faint all proportion, didst bring in Wonder, to wait on treason and on murder;
And whatsoever cunning fiend it was,
That wrought upon thee so preposterously,
I'll put the voice in hell for excellence;
And o'er her devil, that suggest by treasons,
The hottest and bungle up damnation
With patches, colours, and with forms being fetich'd

From glistering semblances of piety;
But he that temper'd thee hede thee stand up,
Gave thee no instance why thou should'st do treason.

Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor.
If that same demon, that hath gull'd thee thus,
Should with his lion gait walk the whole world,
He might return to vasty Tartar back,
And tell the legions—I can never win
A soul so easy as that Englishman's.
O, how hast thou with jealousy infected
The sweetness of alliance! Show men dutiful!
Why, so didst thou: Seem they grave and learned!

Why, so didst thou: Come they of noble family?
Why, so didst thou: Seem they religious?
Why, so didst thou: Or are they spare in diet;
Free from gross passion, or of mirth, or anger;
Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood;
Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement;
Not working with the eye, without the ear,
And, but in purged judgment, trusting neither?
Such, and so finely baited, didst thou seem;
And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot
To mark the full-fraught man, and best induced,
With some suspicion, I will weep for thee;
For the revolt of thine, methinks, is like
Another fall of man: Their faults are open,
Arrest them to the answer of the law:—
And God acquit them of their practices!

Exr. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard, earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry, lord Scroop of Masham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland.

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd.

And I repent my fault, more than my death;
Which I beseech your highness to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me,—the gold of France did not seduce;

Although I did admit it as a motive,
The sooner to effect what I intended;
But God be thanked for prevention;
Which I in suffrance heartily will rejoice,

Beseeching God, and you, to pardon me.

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice
At the discovery of most dangerous treason.

Than I do at this hour joy in myself,
Prevented from a damned enterprise:

My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.

You have conspir'd against our royal person,
Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his offers

Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death:
Wherein you should have sold your king to slaughter.

His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt,
And his whole kingdom into desolation:
Touching our person, seek we no revenge;

But we our kingdom's safety must so tender.

Whose ruin you three sought, that to her laws
We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
Poor miserable wretches, to your death;
The last whereof, God, of his mercy, give you
Patience to endure, and true repentance
Of all your dear offences!—Bear them hence.

[Exeunt Conspirators, guarded.
Now, Lords, for France; the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.

We doubt not of a fair and lucky war:

Since God so graciously hath brought to light

This dangerous treason, lurking in our way

To hinder our beginnings, we doubt not now,

But every rub is smother'd on our way.

Then forth, dear countrymen; let us deliver

Our puissance into the hand of God,

Putting it straight in expedition.

Cheerly to sea; the signs of war advance:

No king of England, if not king of France.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—London. Mrs. Quickly's House in Eastcheap.

Enter Pistol, Mrs. Quickly, Nym, Bardolph, and Boy.

Quick. Prythee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.—
Bardolph, be blithe;—Nym, raise thy vaunting veins;

Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is
And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. 'Would, I were with him, wheresome'en
he is, either in heaven, or in hell!

Quick. Nay, sure, not in hell; he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom.

'A made a finer end, and went away, as it had been any christom child; 'a parted even just between twelve and one, e'en at turning of the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and 'a habb'd of green fields. How now, sir John? quoth I:

what, man! be of good cheer. So 'a cried out—God, God, God! three or four times: now to comfort him, bid him, 'a should not think of God: I hoped, there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet: So, 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say, he cried out of sack.

Quick. Ay, that 'a did.

Bard. And of women.

Quick. Nay, that 'a did not.

Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said, they were devils incarnate.

Quick. 'A could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never liked.

Boy. 'A said once, the devil would have him about women.

Quick. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatick; and talked of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a hen stuck upon Bardolph's nose; and 'a said, it was a black soul burning in hell-fire?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone, that maintained that fire: thus 'a all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. I shall have my noble !
Plat. In cash most justly paid
Nym. Well, then, that's the humour of it.

Re-enter Mrs. Quickly.

Quick. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to sir John : Ah, poor heart, he is so shaken of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath ran bad humours on the knight, that's the even of it.

Plat. Nym, thou hast spoke the right ; His heart is fructed, and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good knave ; but it must be as it may ; he passes some humours, and careers.

Plat. Let us coudole the knight ; for, lambkins, we will live. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Southampton. A Council Chamber.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Westmoreland.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold, to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves !

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
 Crowned with faith, and constant loyalty.

Bed. The king hath note of all that they intend,
 By interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow,
 Whom he hath cloy'd and grac'd with princely favours,

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell
 His sovereign's life to death and treachery !

Trumpet sounds. Enter King Henry, Scroop,
 Cambridge, Grey, Lords, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard.

My lord of Cambridge,—and my kind lord of Masham,

And you, my gentle knight,—give me your thoughts :
 Think you not, that the powers we bear with us,
 Will cut their passage through the force of France ;
 Doing the execution, and the act,
 For which we have in hand assembled them ?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that : since we are well per-
 We carry not a heart with us from hence,
 That grows not in a fair consent with ours ;
 Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wish
 Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd, and lov'd.

Than is your majesty : there's not, I think, a sub-
 That sits in heart-rief and uneasiness
 Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. Even those, that were your father's enemies.

Have steep'd their galls in honey ; and do serve
 With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness ;

And shall forget the office of our hand,
 Sower than quittance of desert and merit,
 According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steeld sinews toil ;
 And labour shall refresh itself with hope,
 To do your grace incessant services.

F. Hen. We judge no less.—Uncle of Exeter,
 Enlarge the man committed yesterday.

That ran'd against our person : we consider,

It was excess of wine that set him on ;
 And, on his more advice, we pardon him.

Scroop. That's merry, but too much security.
 Let him be punish'd, sovereign : lest example
 Breed, by his surffiance, more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O, let us yet be merciful.

Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir, you show great mercy, if you give him life.

After the taste of much correction. [The

K. Hen. Alas, your too much love and care of
 Are heavy crosses 'gainst this poor wretch.

If little faults, proceeding on dissembler,
 Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye.

When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and di-
 Appear before us ?—We'll yet enlarge that man,

Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey,—in their
 dear care,

And tender preservation of our person,—
 Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes ;

Who are the late commissioners ?

Cam. I, one, my lord ;

Your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scroop. So did you me, my liege.

Grey. And me, my royal sovereign.

K. Hen. Then, Richard, earl of Cambridge, there is yours.—[Knight,

There yours, lord Scroop of Masham, and, sir
 Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours :—

Read them ; and know, I know your worthiness.—
 My lord of Westmoreland,—and uncle Exeter,—

We will aboard to-night.—Way, how now, gentlemen !

What see you in those papers, that you kuse
 So much complexion !—look ye, how they change !

Their cheeks are paper.—Why, what read you
 there,

That hath so cowarded and chas'd your blood
 Out of appearances ?

Cam. I do confess my fault ;
 And do submit me to your highness' mercy.

Grey. Scroop. To which we all appeal. [Late,

K. Hen. The mercy, that was quick in us but
 By your own counsel as suppress'd and kill'd :

You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy ;
 For your own reasons turn into your bosoms.

As dogs upon their masters, worrying them.—
 See you, my princes, and my noble peers,

These English monsters ! My lord of Cambridge
 here,—

You know, how apt our love was, to accord
 To furnish him with all appertinents

Belonging to his honour ; and this man
 Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd,

And sworn unto the practices of France,
 To kill us here in Hampton : to the which,

This knight, no less for bounty bound to us
 Than Cambridge is,—hath likewise sworn.—

But O !

What shall I say to thee, lord Scroop ? thou cruel,
 Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature !

Thou, that dost bear the key of all my counsels
 That knew'st the very bottom of my soul,

That almost might'st have crown'd me into gold,
 Would'st thou have practis'd on me for thy use ?

May it be possible, that foreign hire
 Could out of thee extract one spark of evil,

That might annoy my finger ? 'Tis a strange
 That, though the truth of it stands off as snow

As black from white, my eye will scarcely see it.
 Treason and murder, ever kept together.

As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,
 Working so grossly in a natural cause,

One, Richard earl of Cambridge; and the second, Henry lord Scroop of Masham; and the third, Sir Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland.—Have, for the gift of France, (O guilt, indeed!) Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France; And by their hands this grace of kings must die, (if hell and treason hold their promises,) Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton. Linger your patience on; and well digest The abuse of distance, while we force a play. The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed; The king is set from London; and the scene is now transported, gentles, to Southampton: There in the playhouse now, there must you sit: And thence to France shall we convey you safe, And bring you back, charming the narrow seas To give you gentle pass; for, if we may, We'll not offend one stomach with our play. But, till the king come forth, and not till then, Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. (Exit.)

SCENE I.—The same. Eastcheap.

Enter Nym and Bardolph.

Bard. Well met, corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are ancient Pistol and your friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little; but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles;—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink, and hold out mine iron: it is a simple one; but what though! It will toast cheeks; and it will endure cold as another man's sword will; and there's the honour of it.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast, to make you friends; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France; let it be so, good corporal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and, certainly, she did you wrong; for you were truth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell; things must be as they say: men may sleep, and they may have their thrusts about them at that time; and, some say, knives have edges. It must be as it may; though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter Pistol and Mrs. Quickly.

Bard. Here comes ancient Pistol, and his wife:—good corporal, be patient here.—How now, mine honest Pistol?

Pist. Base like, call'st thou me—hoist? Now, by this hand I swear, I scorn the term; Nor shall my Nell keep lockers.

Quick. No, by my troth, not long: for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen, that live luxuriously by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. (Nym draws his sword.) O well-a-day, lady, if he be not drawn now! O Lord! here's corporal Nym—now shall we have wilful adultery and murder committed. Good lieutenant Bardolph, good corporal, offer nothing here.

Nym. Hush! Pist. Hush! for these, Ioland dog! thou prick-ered ear of Ioland.

Quick. Good corporal Nym, show the valour of a man, and put up thy sword.

Nym. Will you stand off? I would have you solus (Shouting his sword.)

Pist. Solus, egregious dog! O viper vile! The solus in thy most marvellous face; The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat, And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy nose, perly; And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth! I do retort the solus in thy bowels; For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up, And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Bartholomew, you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well: if you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your ruts a little, in good terms, as I may; and that's the honour of it. (Wight!)

Pist. O braggard vile, and damned furious The grave doth gape, and doting death is near; Therefore exhale. (Pistol and Nym draw.)

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say:—he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. (Draws.)

Pist. An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate.

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give:

Thy spirits are must fall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour of it.

Pist. Corpe le gorge, that's the word!—I thee defy again.

O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get? No; to the spital go,

And from the powdering tub of infamy

Fetch forth the Lazar kite of Crease's kind,

Doll Tear-sheet she by name, and her spouse:

I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly

For the only she; and—Peace, there's enough.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master,—and you, hostess;—he is very sick, and would to bed.—Good Bardolph, put thy nose between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan: faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue.

Quick. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days; the king has killed his heart.—Good husband, come home presently.

(Exit Mrs. Quickly and Boy.)

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together. Why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and floods for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting!

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have; that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound; Push home.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too. Prythee, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings, I won of you at betting!

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay And liquor likewise will I give thee. And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood: I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me.—Is not this just?—for I shall sutler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.

Give me thy hand.

That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously;
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Fly to one mark;
As many several ways meet in one town;
As many fresh streams run in one self sea;
As many lives close in the dial's centre;
So many a thousand actions, once about,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege,
Divide your happy England into four;
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
If we, with thrice that power left at home,
Cannot defend our own door from the dog,
Let us be worried; and our nation lose
The name of hardiness, and policy. [Dauphin.]

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the [Exit an Attendant. The King ascends his throne]

Now are we well resolv'd; and,—by God's help;
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,—
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe,
Or break it all to pieces: Or there we'll sit,
Ruling, in large and ample empery,
O'er France, and all her almost kingly dukedoms.
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them;
Either our history shall, with full mouth,
Speak freely of our acts; or else our grave,
Like Turkish mutes, shall have a tongueless mouth.
Not worship'd with a waxen epithaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for, we hear,
Your greeting is from him, not from the king.

Ans. May it please your majesty, to give us
leave

Freely to render what we have in charge,
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The dauphin's meaning, and our embassy?

K. Hen. We are tyrant, but a Christian
king;

Unto whose grace our passion is as subject,
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons:
Therefore, with frank and with uncurbed plaintell us the dauphin's mind. [News.]

Ans. Thus, then, in few.

Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, king Edward the third.
In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says,—that you savour too much of your youth;
And bids you be advi'd, there's nought in France
That can be with a humble galliard won;
You cannot revel into dukedoms there:
He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tun of treasure; and, in lieu of this,
Desires you, let the dukedoms that you claim
Bear no more of you. This the dauphin speaks.

K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?

Ans. Tennis-balls, my liege.

K. Hen. We are glad, the dauphin is so pleasant with us:

His present, and your pains, we thank you for;
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,
We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set,
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard:
Tell him, he hath made a match with such a wraugler,

That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chace: And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wickier days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.

We never valu'd this poor seat of England;
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
To barbarous license; As 'tis ever custom.
That men are merrier when they are from home
But tell the dauphin,—I will keep my state,
Be like a king, and show my sail of greatness;
When I do rouse me in the throes of France:
For that I have laid by my majesty,
And pludded like a nun for working-days;
But I will rise there with so full a glory,
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
Yea, strike the dauphin blind to look on us.
And tell the pleasant prince,—this mock of his
Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones; and his soul Shall stand sure charged for the wasteful vengeance [Dauphin]

That shall fly with meck for many a thousand Shall thus his mock mock out of their dear husbands: [Down:]

Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles
And some are yet unborn, and unborn.
That shall have cause to curse the dauphin's
But this less all within the will of God. [Down.]
To whom I do appeal; And in whose name,
Tell you the dauphin, I am coming on,
To venge me as I may, and to put forth
My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
So, get you hence in peace; and tell the dan-
His jest will savour but of shallow wit. [Down.]
When thousands weep, more than did laugh at
it.

Convey them with safe conduct.—Fare you well.
[Exit Ambassadors.]

Eze. This was a merry message.
K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it. [Dauphin from his throne.]

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour
That may give furtherance to our expedition:
For we have now no thought in us but France:
Serve three to God, that run before our business.
Therefore, let our proportion for these wars
Be soon collected; and all things thought upon,
That may, with reasonable swiftness, add
More feathers to our wings; for, God before,
We'll clude this dauphin at his father's door.
Therefore, let every man now task his thought,
That this war action may on foot be brought.
[Exit.]

ACT II.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now all the youth of England are on fire,
And sicken dalliance in the warfare lies:
Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought
Reigns solely in the breast of every man:
They sell the pasture now to buy the horse;
Following the mirror of all Christian kings,
With winged heels, as English Mercuries.
For now sits Expectation in the air;
And hides a sword, from hilts unto the point,
With crown imperial, crowns and coronets,
Promis'd to Harry and his followers.
The French, advis'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadful preparation,
Shake in their fear; and with pale policy
Seek to divert the English purposes.
O England! model to thy inward greatness,
Like little body with a mighty heart,—[do]
What might'st thou do, that honour would these Were all thy children kind and natural!
But see thy fault! France hath in these found out
A nest of hollow bowmen, which he fills [noise—]
With treacherous crowns; and thence corrupted

Beyond the river Sala, in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say,
King Pepin, which deposed Chilperick,
Dad, as their general, being descended
Of Blithind, which was daughter to king Clothair.
Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also,—that usurp'd the crown
Of Charles the duke of Lorrain, sole heir male
Of the true line and stock of Charles the great,—
To fine his title with some show of truth,
(Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,) Convey'd himself as heir to the lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son
Of Charles the great. Also king Lewis the tenth,
Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience.
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
That fair queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was issue of the lady Ermenegare,
Daughter to Charles the forward duke of Lorrain:
By the which marriage, the line of Charles the great

Was re-anted to the crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female:
So do the kings of France unto this day;
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law,
To bar your highness claiming from the female;
And rather choose to hide them in a nest,
Than amply to imbure their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I, with right and conscience, make this claim?

Camf. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!
For in the book of Numbers it is writ,—
When the son dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag,
Look back unto your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great grandsire's tomb,
From whom you claim; invoke his warlike spirit,
And your great uncle's, Edward the black prince;
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France;
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling, to behold his lion's whelp
Forge in blood of French nobility
O noble English, that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France;
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work, and cold for action!

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant arm renew their feats:
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage, that renew'd them,
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprizes.

Em. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth

Do all expect that you should rescue yourself,
As did the former lines of your blood.

West. They know, your grace hath cause, and means, and might.

So hath your highness: never king of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects;
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,

And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Camf. O, let their bodies follow, my dear liege,
With blood, and sword, and fire, to win your right:
In and whereof, we of the spirituality

Will raise your highness such a mighty sum,
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors. [French;

K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the
But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make good use of us
With all advantages.

Camf. They of these marches, gracious ave-
Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the paltering borderers.

K. Hen. We do not mean the couraging snatchers only,

But fear the main intentment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
For you shall read, that my great grandfather
Never went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force:
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays;
Girding with grievous siege, castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook, and trembled at the ill-neighbourhood. [harm'd, my liege:

Camf. She hath been then more fear'd than
For hear her best exemplify by herself,—
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken, and impounded as a stray.
The king of Scots: whom she did send to France,
To fill king Edward's fame with prouder knags;
And make your chronicle as rich with praise,
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures.

West. But there's a saying, very old and true,—
If that you will France win,

Then with Scotland first begin;
For once the eagle England leant in prey.
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs;
Playing the mouse, in absence of the cat,
To spoil and have more than she can eat.

Ely. It follows then, the cat must stay at home:
Yet that is but a cure's necessity;
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
The adrook head defends itself at home:
For government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one consent;
Congruing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Camf. True: therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience: for so work the honey bees;
Creatures, that, by a rule in nature, teach
The set of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king, and officers of sorts:
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home;

Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad;
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor:
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing maunds building roofs of gold;
The civil citizens kneading up the honey;
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate;
The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,—

Leaving his body as a paradise,
To envelop and contain celestial spirits;
Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Never came reformation in a flood,
With such a heady current, scouring faults;
Nor never Hell's-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.
Cent. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire, the king were made a prelate:
Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You'd say,—it hath been all-in-all his study:
Let his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle render'd you in music:
Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter: that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences;
So that the art and practice part of life
Must be the mistress to this theorick:

Which is a wonder, how his grace should glean it;
Since his addiction was to courses vain:
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow;
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports;
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle;

And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best,
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality;
And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet crevice in his faculty.

Cent. It must be so: for miracles are ceased;
And therefore we must needs admit the means,
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty
Incline to it, or no?

Cent. He seems indifferent;
Or, rather, swaying more upon our part
Than cherishing the exhibitors against us:
For I have made an offer to his majesty,—
Upon our spiritual convocation,
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France,—to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?
Cent. With good acceptance of his majesty.
Save, that there was not time enough to hear
(As I perceiv'd, his grace would fain have done),
The severals, and unhidden passages,
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms—
And, generally, to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great grandfather.

Ely. What was the impudent that broke this off?

Cent. The French ambassador, upon that incrav'd audience: and the hour, I think, is come,
To give him hearing: is it four o'clock?

Ely. It is.
Cent. Then go we in, to know his embassy;
Which I could, with a ready guess, declare,
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you: and I long to hear it.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room of State in the same.

Enter King Henry, Glouster, Bedford, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and Attendants

K. Hen. Where is my gracious lord of Canterbury? Not here in presence. [bury]

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.
West. Shall we call in the ambassador, my
liege?

K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin; we would be re-
Before we hear him, of some things of weight,
That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury and Bishop
of Ely.

Cent. God and his angels guard your sacred
And make you long become it! [throned]

K. Hen. Sure, we thank you.
My learned lord, we pray you to proceed;
And justly and religiously unfold to us,
Why the law Salique, that they have in France,
Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim.
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, rest, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your understanding soul
With opening titles miscreate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth;
For God doth know, how many, now in health,
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to:

Therefore take heed how you impawn our person,
How you awake the sleeping sword of war:
We charge you in the name of God, take heed:
For never two such kingdoms did contend,
Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops
Are every one a woe, a sore complaint,
'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords.

That make such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjuration, speak, my lord,
And we will hear, note, and believe in heart,
That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd
As pure as sin with baptism. [You peers]

Cent. Then hear me, gracious sovereign,—and
That owe your lives, your faith, and services,
To this imperial throne:—There is no bar
To make against your highness' claim to France,
But this, which they produce from Pharamond,—
In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant,

No women shall succeed in Salique land;
Which Salique land the French unjustly glose,
To be the rear of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this law and female bar.
Yet their own authors faithfully affirm,
That the land Salique lies in Germany,
Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe:
Where Charles the great, having subdued the Saxons,

There left behind and settled certain French;
Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establish'd there this law,—to wit, no female
Should be inheritrix in Salique land;
Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call'd—Meisen.
Thus doth it well appear, the Salique law
Was not devised for the realm of France;
Nor did the French possess the Salique land
Until four hundred one and twenty years
After defunction of king Pharamond.
Idly supposed the founder of this law;
Who died within the year of our redemption.
Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the great Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for any thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already he be killed with your hard opinions: for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are tow'd, I will bid you good night; and so kneel down before you,—but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

diers, Messengers, and Attendants.

The SCENE, at the beginning of the Play, lies in England; but afterwards wholly in France.

Enter Chorus.

O, for a muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention!
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
And merchants to behold the swelling scene!
Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars; and, at his heels,
Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword,
and fire,
Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles all,
The flat unraised spirit, that hath dar'd
On this unworthy scaffold, to bring forth
So great an object: Can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France? or may we cram
Within this wooden O the very casques
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O, pardon: since a crouched figure may

Attest, in little place, a million:

And let us, ciphers to this great accompt,

On your imaginary forces work:

Suppose, within the girdle of these walls

Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,

Whose high upreared and abutting fronts

The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder

Pieces out our imperfections with your thoughts,

Into a thousand parts divide one man,

And make imaginary puissance:

Think, when we talk of horses, that you see them

Printing their proud hoofs i'the receiving earth:

For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our

king.

Carry them here and there: jumping o'er times;

Turning the accomplishment of many years

Into an hour-glass: For the which supply,

Admit me chorus to this history;

Who, prologue like, your humble patience pray,

Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Ante-chamber in the King's Palace.

*Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Bishop
of Ely.*

Can. My lord, I'll tell you,—that self bill is ord'd.

Which, in the eleventh year o' the last king's
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the scrambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?

Can. It must be thought on. If it pass against

We lose the better half of our possession: (us)

For all the temporal lands, which men devout

By testament have given to the church,

Would they strip from us; being valued thus,—

As much as would maintain, to the king's honour,

Full fifteen earls, and fifteen hundred knights;

Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;

And, to relief of lazars, and weak age,

Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,

A hundred almshouses, right well supplied;

And to the coffers of the king beside. (b)ll

A thousand pounds by the year: Thus runs the

Ely. This would drink deep.

Can. "I would drink the cup and all.

Ely. But what prevention?

Can. The king is full of grace, and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Can. The courses of his youth promised it me.

The breath no sooner left his father's body,

But that his wisdom, mortified in him,

Seem'd to die too: yea, at that very moment,

Consideration like an angel came,

And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him;

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion.

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me.

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him: thinking of nothing else; putting all affairs else in oblivion; as if there were nothing else to be done, but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis semper idem, for aboeque hoc nihil est: 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver, And make thee rage. Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance, and contagious prison; Haul'd thither

By most mechanical and dirty hand:—
Rouse up revenge from about den with fell Aleoto's snake.

For Doll is in; Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

(Shouts within, and the trumpets sound.)

Pist. There roard's the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

Enter the King and his Train, the Chief Justice among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, king Hall! my royal Hall!

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fate!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy!

King. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wife? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

King. I know thee not, old man: Fall to thy prayers;

How ill white hairs become a fool, and jester! I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,

So surfeit-swoll'n'd, so old, and so profane;

But, being awake, I do despise my dream.

Make less thy body, hence, and more thy grace;

Leave gormandizing; know, the grave doth gape

For thee three wider than for other men:—

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest;

Presume not, that I am the thing I was: forsooth,

For heaven doth know, so shall the world perceive: That I have turn'd away my former self;

So will I those that kept me company.

When thou dost hear I am, as I have been,

Approach me; and thou shalt be as thou wast,

The tutor and the feeder of my riots:

Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,—

As I have done the rest of my misleaders.—

Not to come near our person by ten mile.

For compentence of life, I will allow you.

The lack of means enforce you not to evil:

And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,

We will,—according to your strength, and qualities,—

Give you advancement.—Be it your charge, my
To see perform'd the word of our word.—

Set on. (Exeunt King and his Train.)

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, sir John: which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, master Shallow. I do not you grieve at this: I should be sent for in private to him; look you, he must see me thus to the world. Fear not your advancement: I will be the man yet, that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how; unless you give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: thus that you heard, was but a colour.

Shal. A colour, I fear, that you will die in, sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours; go with me to dinner. Come, lieutenant Pistol;—come, Bardolph:—I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter Prince John, the Chief Justice, Officers, &c.

Ch. Just. Go, carry sir John Falstaff to the Fleet;

Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord,—

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you anon.

Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero me conrasta.

(Exeunt Fal. Shal. Pist. Bard. Pace, and Officers.)

P. John. I like this fair proceeding of the king's: He hath intent, his woulded followers

Shall all be very well provided for;

But all are banish'd, till their conversations

Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

P. John. The king hath call'd his parliament, my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

P. John. I will lay odds,—that, ere this year expire,

We hear our civil swords, and native fire,
As far as France: I heard a bird so sing,
Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.

Come, will you hence? (Exeunt.)

EPilogue. — Spoken by a Dancer.

First, my fear: then, my court'ry: last, my speech. My fear is, your displeasure; my court'ry, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardon. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me: for what I have to say, is of mine own making; and what, indeed, I should say, will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture.—Be it known to you, (as it is very well,) I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better. I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this; which, if, like an ill venture, it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promised you. I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: hate me some, and I will pay you some, and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment,—so dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlemen here have forgiven me; if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlemen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not

Fal. Why, now you have done me right.
[To Silence who drinks a bumper.]
Sil. Do me right,
And dub me knight:
Santiago.
Is't not so?
Fal. 'Tis so.
Sil. Is't so? Why, then say, an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. An it please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court? let him come in.—

Enter Pistol.

How now, Pistol?

Pist. God save you, sir John!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good.—Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in the realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think 'a be; but Goodman Puff of Barrow.

Pist. Puff!

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!—Sir John, I am thy Pistol, and thy friend, And helter-skelter have I rode to thee; And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys, And golden times, and happy news of price.

Pist. I prythee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news! Let king Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.

[Sings.]
Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons? And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Sil. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament, therefore.

Sil. Give me pardon, sir;—If, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it, there is but two ways; either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian? speak, or die.

Sil. Under king Harry.

Pist. Harry the fourth? or fifth?

Sil. Harry the fourth.

Pist. A fustra for thine office!—Sir John, thy tender lambskin now is king; Harry the fifth's the man. I speak the truth: When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like The brazen Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door; the things I speak are true.

Fal. Away, Bardolph; saddle my horse.—Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine.—Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day!—I would not take a knight-hood for my fortune.

Pist. What! I do bring good news?

Fal. Carry master Silence to bed.—Master Shallow my lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am fort's steward. Get on thy boots: we'll ride all night.—O, sweet Pistol:—Away, Bardolph. [Exit Bard.]—Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and, withal, devise something to do thyself good.—Boot, boot, muster Shallow: I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been my friends; and woe to my lord chief justice!

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also! Where is the life that late I led? I say they; Why, here it is; Welcome these pleasant days. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Street.

Enter Beadles, dragging in Hostess Quickly, and Doll Tear-sheet.

Host. No, thou arrant knave; I would I might die, that I might have thee hanged: thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

1 Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me; and she shall have whipping cheer enough, I warrant her; there hath been a man or two lately killed about her.

Doll. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on; I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal; an the child I now go with, do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain.

Host. O the Lord, that sir John were come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

1 Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead, that you and Pistol beat among you.

Doll. I'll tell thee what, thou thin man in a censor! I will have you as soundly awined for this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy furnished correctioner: if you be not awinged, I'll forswear half-kirtles.

1 Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Host. O, that right should thus overcome might! Well; of sufferance comes ease.

Doll. Come, you rogue, come; bring me to a justice.

Host. Ay; come, you starved blood-hound.

Doll. Goodman death! Goodman bones!

Host. Thou stony thou!

Doll. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal!

1 Bead. Very well. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A publick Place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter two Grooms, strewing rushes.

1 Groom. More rushes, more rushes.

2 Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

1 Groom. It will be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation: Despatch, despatch. [Exeunt Grooms.]

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Bardolph, and the Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace: I will leap upon him, as 'a comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good night.

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me.—O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. [To Shallow.] But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so.

To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person:
Nay, more; to spurn at your most royal image,
And mock your workings in a second body.
Question your royal thoughts, make this case yours.

Be now the father, and propose a son:
Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
Behold yourself so by a son disinherited;
And then imagine me taking your part,
And, in your power, soft silencing your son:
After this cold consideration, sentence me;
And, as you are a king, speak in your state,
What I have done, that misbecame my place,
My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

King. You are right, justice, and you weigh this well;

Therefore still bear the balance, and the sword;
And I do wish your honours may increase,
Till you do live to see a son of mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.

So shall I live to speak my father's words;—
*Happy am I, that have a man so bold,
That dares do justice on my proper son,
And not less happy, having such a son,
That would drive up his greatness so
Into the heads of justice.*—You did commit me:

For which, I do commit into your hand
The unsain'd sword that you have used to bear;

With this remembrance,—[that you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit,
As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand;

You shall be as a father to my youth:
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear;

And I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well practis'd, wise directions.——

And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;—
My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my affections;—
And with his spirit sadly I survive.

To mock the expectation of the world;
To frustrate prophecies; and to raise out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath proudly flow'd in vanity, till now:

Now doth it turn, and ebb back to the sea;
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods,
And flow henceforth in formal majesty.

Now call we our high court of parliament:
And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go
In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;

That war, or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us:—
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.

[To the Lord Chief Justice.]
Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember'd, all our state:
And [God conspiring to my good intents]
No prince, nor peer, shall have just cause to say,—
Heaven shorten Harry's happy life one day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Glostershire. The Garden of Shallow's House.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, Bardolph, the Page, and Davy.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth;—come, cousin Silence;—and then to bed.

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, sir John:—merry, good sir.—Spread,
Davy; spread, Davy; Well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses: he is your serving-man, and your husbandman.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, sir John.—By the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper:—A good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down:—come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah I quote-a,—we shall do nothing but eat, and make good cheer.

[Singing.]
And praise heaven for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there,
So merrily,
And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart!—Good master
Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give master Bardolph some wine,
Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; [seating Bardolph end the Page at another table.] I'll be with you anon:—
most sweet sir, sit.—Master page, good master page, sit; profuse! What you want in next, we'll have in drink. But you must bear; [The heart's ill.]

Shal. Be merry, master Bardolph;—and my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife's as all;
[Singing.]
For women are shrews, both short and tall;
'Tis merry in hall, when beards wog all,
And welcome merry shrews-tide.

Be merry, be merry, &c.
Fal. I did not think, master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Shal. Well said, master Silence. I'll have been merry twice and once, ere now.

Re-enter Davy.
Davy. There is a dish of leather-onats for you.
[Setting them before Bardolph.]

Shal. Davy,—
Davy. Your worship!—I'll be with you straight.
[To Bard.]—A cup of wine, sir!

Sil. A cup of wine, that's brisk and fine,
And drink unto the v'man mine; [Singing.]
And a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, master Silence.

Sil. And we shall be merry;—now comes in the sweet of the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, master Silence.

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come; [Singing.]
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: If thou wantest any thing, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart.—Welcome, my little tiny thief; [to the Page.] and welcome, indeed, too.—I'll drink to master Bardolph, and to all the cavaliers about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.
Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,— Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together. Ha! will you not, master Bardolph?

Bard. Yes, sir, in a pottle pot.

Shal. I thank thee:—The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: he will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Luck no bring;
be merry. [Singing heard.] Look who is a down there: Ho! who knocks? [Exit Davy]

air; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.

Shel. Go to; I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, sir John? Come, off with your boots. — Give me your hand, master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shel. I thank thee with all my heart, kind master Bardolph; — and welcome, my tall fellow. [To the Page.] Come, sir John. [Exit Shallow.]

Fal. I'll follow you, good master Robert Shallow. Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing, to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: 'They, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man; their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society, that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would honour his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with master Shallow, that no man could better command his servants. It is certain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant carriage, is caught as men take diseases, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their company. I will devise master smooth, out of this Shallow, to keep prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing-out of six fashions, (which is four terms or two notions), and he shall laugh without intermissions. O, it is much that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh, till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up.

Fal. [Within.] Sir John!

Shel. I come, master Shallow; I come, master Shallow. [Exit Falstaff.]

SCENE II. — Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Warwick and the Lord Chief Justice.

War. How now, my lord chief justice! whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king? [Ended.]

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all.

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature; and, to our purpose, he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me with him.

The service that I truly did his life Hath left me open to all injuries. [Not.]

War. Indeed, I think the young king loves you.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not; and do arm myself to welcome the condition of the time; Which cannot look more hideously upon me Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter Prince John, Prince Humphrey, Clarence, Westmoreland, and others.

War. Here comes the heavy issue of dead Harry; O, that the living Harry had the temper Of him, the worst of those three gentlemen!

How many nobles then should hold their places, That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. Alas! I fear all will be overturn'd.

P. John. Good morrow, cousin Warwick.

P. Humph. Cl. Good morrow, cousin.

P. John. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument is all too heavy to admit much talk.

P. John. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier! P. Humph. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend, indeed!

And I dare swear, you borrow not that face

Of seeming sorrow; it is, sure, your own.

P. John. Though no man be assur'd what grieves You stand in coldest expectation: [To him,]

I am the surrier; 'would, 'twere otherwise.

Cl. Well, you must now speak sir John Falstaff fair;

Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,

Led by the impartial conduct of my;

And never shall you see, that I will beg

A ragged and forgetful remission —

If truth and upright innocence fail me,

I'll to the king my master that is dead.

And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter King Henry V.

Ch. Just. Good morrow; and heaven save your majesty!

King. This new and gorgeous garment, nescis not so easy on me as you think.

Brothers, you mix your sadnesses with some fear;

This is the English, not the Turkish court;

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds.

But Harry Harry: Yet be sad, good brothers,

For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you;

Sorrow so royally in you appears,

That I will deeply put the fashion on,

And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad.

But entertain no more of it, good brothers,

Than a joint burden laid upon us all.

For me, by heaven, I had you be assur'd,

I'll be your father and your brother too;

Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares.

Yet weep, that Harry's dead; and so will I;

But Harry lives, that shall convert cause tears,

By number, into hours of happiness.

P. John, &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me: — and you most; [To the Chief Justice.]

You are, I think, assur'd I love you most.

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,

Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

King. No!

How might a prince of my great hopes forget

So great indignities you laid upon me!

What! rate, rebuke, and roughly sent to prison

The immediate heir of England! Was this easy!

May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten!

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father;

The image of his power lay then in me;

And, in the administration of his law.

Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth,

Your highness pleased to forget my place.

The majesty and power of law and justice.

The image of the king whom I presented,

And struck me in the very seat of judgment;

Whereon, as an offender to your father,

I gave bold way to my authority,

And did commit you. If the deed were ill,

Be you contented, wearing now the garland.

To have a son set your degrees at naught;

To pluck down justice from your awful bench,

The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did, with the least affection of a welcome,
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest rascal is.
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

K. Hen. O my son!
Heaven put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou might'st win the more thy father's love.

Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed;
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. Heaven knows, my son,

By what by-paths, and indirect crook'd ways,
I met this crown; and I myself know well,
How troublesome it sat upon my head;
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the toil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seem'd, in me,
But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand;
And I had many living, to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel, and to bloodshed,
Wounding supposed peace: all these bold fears,
Thou see'st, with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument; and now my death
Changes the mode: for what in me was purchas'd,

Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So thou the garland wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,

Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;
And all thy friends, which thou must make thy friends,

Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
I cut them off: and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land;

Least rest, and lying still, might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course, to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels; that action, henceforth
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so.
That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
Now I come by the crown, O God, forgive me!
And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

P. Hen. My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me:
Then plain and right must my possession be;
Which I, with more than with a common pain,
Against all the world will rightlily maintain.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Warwick, Lords, and others.

K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster. [royal father!]

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness, to my father.
K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness, and peace.
son John:

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare, wither'd trunk: upon thy sight,
My worldly business makes a period.—
Where is my lord of Warwick?

P. Hen. My lord of Warwick!

K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.
K. Hen. Laud be to God!—even there my life must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years,
I should not die but in Jerusalem;
Which vainly I supposed, the Holy Land:—
But, hear me to that chamber: there I'll lie;
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Gloucestershire. A Hall in Shallow's House.

Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pye, sir, you shall not away to-night.—What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted: there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy?

Enter Davy.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy,—let me see. Davy; let me see:—yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus:—those precepts cannot be served: and, again, sir,—Shall we sow the headland with wheat?

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook:—Are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yea, sir.—Here is now the smith's note, for shoeing, and plough-irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and paid:—sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the hucket must needs be had:—And, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the suck he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shal. He shall answer it:—Some pigeons, Davy; a couple of short-legged hens; a joint of mutton; and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend of the court is better than a penny in purse. Use him men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are backbitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy. About thy business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor; that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir: but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot cure or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is none honest friend,

Which heaven shall guard : And put the world's whole strength

Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me : This from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit.

A. Hen. Warwick! Gloster! Clarence!

Re-enter Warwick, and the rest.

Cla. Dost the king call?
War. What would your majesty? How fares
your grace?

K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone, my Cla. We left the prince my brother here, my liege.

Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

K. Hen. The prince of Wales? Where is he?
let me see him.

He is not here.

War. This door is open; he is gone this way.

P. Humph. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

K. Hen. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?

War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it.

K. Hen. The prince hath 'a'en it hence :—go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty, that he doth suppose

My sleep my death?—

Find him, my lord of Warwick; chide him hither
[Exit Warwick.]

This part of his conjoins with my disease, [are]
And helps to end me.—See, sons, what things you
How quickly nature falls into revolt,

When gold becomes her object!
For this the foolish over-careful fathers

Have broke their sleep with thoughts, their brains with care.

Their bones with industry;
For this they have engrossed and piled up
The cank'rd heaps of strange-schewed gold;

For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their souls with arts, and martial exercises:

When, like the bee, tolling from every flower
The virtuous sweets: [honey.]

Our throats pack'd with wax, our mouths with
We bring it in the hive; and, like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste

Yield his engrossments to the ending father.—

Re-enter Warwick.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,

Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks;
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow,

That tyranny, which never quail'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife

With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

K. Hen. But whither did he take away the crown?

Re-enter Prince Henry.

Lo, where he comes.—Come hither to me
Harry:—

Depart this chamber, leave us here alone.
[Exeunt Clarence, Prince Humphrey,

Lords, &c.]

P. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak again.

K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought:

I stay too long by thee; I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for my empty chair,

That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine
honours?

Before thy hour be ripe. O foolish you h! [these Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm
Stay but a little: for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind,
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that, which, after some few hours,
Were thine without offence: and, at my death,
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:

Thy life did manifest, thou lov'st me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.

Thou had'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whistled on thy stony heart,

To stab at half an hour of my life.
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?

Then get thee gone: and dig my grave thyself;
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear,

That thou art crown'd, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse

Be drops of balm, to sanctify thy head:
Only compound thee with forgotten dust;

Give that, which gave thee life, unto the worms.
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;

For now a time is come to mock at form,
Harry the fifth is crown'd:—Up, vanity!

Down, royal state! all you sage counselors, hence!
And to the English court assemble now,

From every region, spes of illeness!
Now, neighbour confuses, purge you of your scum;

Have you a ruffian, that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night; rob, murder, and commit

The oldest sins the newest kind of ways!
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:

England shall d'uble gild his treble gilt:
England shall give him office, honour, might;

For the fifth Harry from curi'd licence plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog

Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.
O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!

When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do, when not is thy care?

O, thou wilt be a wilderness again.
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!

P. Hen. O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears, [Kneeling.]

The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke,

Ere you with grief had spoke, and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown;

And he that wears the crown immortally,
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more,

Thou as your honour, and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise,

(Which my most true and inward dutieous spirit Teacheth,) thus prostrate and exterior bending!

Heaven witness with me, when I here came in And found no course of breath within your majesty.

How could it struck my heart! If I do feign,

O, let me in my present wilderness lie;
And never live to shew the incredulous world

The noble change that I have purposed!
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,

(And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,)
I spake unto the crown as having sense,

And thus upgrad'd it. The care on thee depending Hath fed upon the body of my father;

Therefore, thou best of gold, art worst of gold.
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,

Præserting life in medicine potable:
But this, most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd,

Has cost thy bearer up. Thus, my most royal
liege,

Accusing it, I put it on my head;
To try with it,—as with an enemy.

Thou had'st before my face murder'd my father,—

And he, the noble image of my youth,
Is overpread with tears;—Therefore my grief
Stretches itself beyond the hour of death;
The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape,
In forms imaginary, the undreaded days,
And rotten times, that you shall look upon
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.
For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,
When mensus and lavish manners meet together,
O, with what wings shall his affections fly
T'wards frustrating peril and oppos'd decay!
War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite.

The prince but studies his companions [grange,
Like a strange tongue; wherein, to gain the law-
'Tis needful, that the most immodest word
Be look'd upon, and learn'd: which once attain'd,
Your highness knows, comes to no further use,
But to be known, and hated. So, like gross terms,
I be prince will, in the perfectness of time,
Cast off his followers: and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
By which his grace must mete the lives of others;
Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom, when the bee does hive her comb [loud!
In the dead carrion.—Who's here! Westmore-

Enter Westmoreland.

West. Health to my sovereign! and new happiness

Added to that, that I am to deliver! [hand:
Prince John, your son, doth kiss your grace's
Mowbray, the bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all,
Are brought to the correction of your law;
There is not now a rebel's sword unseen bed,
But peace puts forth her olive every where.
The manner how this action hath been borne,
Here at more leisure may your highness read;
With every course, in his particular. [loud,
K. Hen. O Westmoreland, thou art a summer
Which ever in the haunch of winter sings
The lifting up of day. Look! here's more news.

Enter Harcourt.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty:
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of!
The earl Northumberland, and the lord Bardolph,
With a great power of English, and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrow:
The manner and true order of the fight,
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick!
Will fortune never come with both hands full,
But waste her fair words still in foulest letters!
She either gives a stomach, and no food,—
Such are the pills in health; or else a feast,
And takes away the stomach,—such are the rich.
That have abundance, and enjoy it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news;
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy:—
O me! come near me, now I am much ill.

[Swoons.

P. Humph. Comfort, your majesty!

Cla. O my royal father!
West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself, look up! [fits

War. Be patient, princes; you do know, these Are with his highness very ordinary.
Stand from him, give him air: we'll straight be well. [goings]

Cla. No, no; he cannot long hold out these

The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mare, that should confine it as,
So thin, that life looks through, and will break
out. [obscure]

P. Humph. The people fear me; for they do
Unfather'd heirs, and loathly birds of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Hath found some months asleep, and leap'd them over.

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no reb between:

And the old folk, time's doting chroniclers,
Say, it did so, a little time before
That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and li'd.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king reverses. [loud]

P. Humph. This apoplex will, certainly, be his.
K. Hen. I pray you, take me up, and bear me
hence

Into some other chamber: softly, pray.

[They convey the King into an inner part of the room, and place him on a bed.

Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.
K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.
War. Less noise, less noise.

Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Who saw the duke of Clarence?
Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

P. Hen. How now! ran within doors, and some abroad!

How doth the king?

P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?

Tell it him

P. Humph. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

P. Hen. If he be sick

With joy, he will recover without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords;—sweet prince, speak low;

The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will please your grace to go along with us?

P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by the king. [Exeunt all but P. Henry.

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keepst the ports of slumber open while

To many a watchful night!—sleep with it now!

Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,

As he, whose brow, with humely luggin bound,
Shines out the watch of night. O majesty!

When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit like a rich armour worn in heat of day.

That smacks with safety. By his gates of breath

There lies a downy feather, which stirs not:

Did he aspire, that light and weightless down

Perform must move. — My gracious lord! my father!

This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep,

That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd

So many English kings. Thy due, from me,

Is tears, and heavy sorrows of the blood;

Which nature, love, and filial tenderneess,

Shall, O dear father, pay thee plentifully:

My due, from thee, is this imperial crown:

Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,

Derives itself to me. Lo, here it sits,—

[Putting it on his head.

Pal. And a famous true subject took him.
Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are,
That led me hither: had they been ruin'd by me,
You should have won them dearer than you have.
Pal. I know not how they sold themselves; but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away; and I thank thee for these.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

P. John. Now, have you left pursuit?
West. Retraire is made, and execution stay'd.
P. John. Send Coleville, with his confederates,
To York, to present execution:—
Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure. [Exeunt some with Coleville.]
And now despatch me toward the court, my lords;
I hear, the king my father is sore sick;
Our news shall go before us to his majesty.—
Which, cousin, you shall hear,—to comfort him;
And with sober speed will follow you.
Pal. My lord, I beseech you give me leave to go through Gloucestershire: and, when you come to court, stand, my good lord, pray, in your good report.
P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition,
Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

[Exit.]
Pal. I would, you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom.—Good faith, this same young sower blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh;—but that's no marvel, he drinks so wine. There's never any of these demurs been come to any proof: for this drink doth so overcool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches: they are generally fools and cowards;—which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and crudy vapours which environ it: makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of mirth, fery and delectable shapen; which deliver'd o'er to the voice, (the tongue,) which is the barth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is,—the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inward to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face; which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm: and then the vital concoction, and mixed petty spirits, muster me all to their captain, the heart,—who, great, and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris: So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack; for that sets it a-work: and learning a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil, till sack consumes it, and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it, that prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterle, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good, and good store of, fertile sherris;
so that he is become very hot, and valiant: I had a thousand sons, the first human principle
I would teach them, should be,—to forswear this poisonous, and addict themselves to sack.

Re-enter Bardolph.

How now Bardolph!

Bord. The army is discharged all, and gone.
Pal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire;
and there will I visit master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Prince Humphrey, Warwick, and others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if heaven doth give successful end
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And every thing lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pause us, till these rebels, now afraid,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War. Both which, we doubt not but your majesty shall enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester,
Where is the prince your brother?

P. Humph. I think, he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

P. Humph. I do not know, my lord.
K. Hen. Is not his brother, Thomas of Gloucester, with him? [Enter here.]

P. Humph. No, my good lord; he is in presence.

K. Hen. What would my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance, thou art not with the prince thy
He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him? Thomas,
Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy;
And noble offices thou may'st effect
Of mediation, after I am dead.

Between his greatness and thy other brethren:—
Therefore, omit him not: blurt not his love;
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace,
By seeming cold, or careless of his will.

For he is gracious, if he be observ'd;
He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day for melting charity:

Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint,
As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws cougeled in the spring of day.

His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd:
Cuide him for faults, and do it reverently.

When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth:
But, being moody, give him line and scope;
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working. Learn this,
Thomas.

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends;
A hoop of gold, to bind thy brothers in;
That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion,
(As force perforce, the age will pour it in,)
Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As mountain, or rash gunpowder.

Cl. I shall observe him with all care and love.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him,
Thomas?

Cl. He is not there to-day; he dwells in London.

K. Hen. And how accompanied? I can't thou tell that.

Cl. With Piers, and other his continual followers.

K. Hen. Mark subject, as the fates, not to words;

Th' news of peace; let them have joy, and part:
I know, it will well please them; Hie thee, captain.

Arch. To you, my noble lord of Westmoreland.

West. I pledge your grace: And, if you knew

I have bestow'd, to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely: but my love to you
Shall show itself more openly hereafter.

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it:—

Health to my lord, and gentle cousin, Mowbray.

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy seasons:

For I am, on the sudden, something ill.

Arch. Against ill chances, men are ever merry;

But heaviness foretells the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow [morrow]

Serves to say thus,—Some good thing comes to—

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true. [Shouts within]

P. John. The word of peace is render'd; Hark, how they shout!

Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory.

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest;

For then both parties truly are subdued,

And neither party loser.

P. John. Go, my lord,

And let our army be discharged too.—

[Exit Westmoreland.]

And, good my lord, so please you, let our trunks

march by us, that we may persecute the men

We should have coy'd withal.

Arch. O, good lord Hastings,

And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by.

[Exit Hastings.]

P. John. I trust, my lords, we shall lie to night

together.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand.

Will not go off until they hear you speak.

P. John. They know their duties.

Re-enter Hastings.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already:

Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses [up,

East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke

Each hurries toward his home, and sporting place [which

West. Good tidings, my lord Hastings; for the

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:

And you, lord archbishop,—and you, lord Mowbray, of capital treason I attach you both. [Hray,

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West. Is your assembly so?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?

P. John. I pawn'd thee none:

I promis'd you redress of these same grievances

Whereof you did complain; which, by mine ho-

I will perform with a most christian care. [Hray,

but, for you, rebels,—look to taste the due

Meat for rebellion, and such acts as yours.

But shallowly did you these arms commence.

Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.—

Strike up our drums, pursue the scatter'd army;

Heaven, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.—

Some guard these traitors to the block of death;

Treason's true bed, and yielder-up of breath.

[Re-enter

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Alarums: Excursions Enter Falstaff and Coleville, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you; and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is—

Coleville of the dale.

Fal. Well then, Coleville is your name: a knight is your degree; and your place, the dale: Coleville shall s'il be your name: a traitor your degree;

and the dungeon your place,—a place deep enough; so shall you still be Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whome'er I am.

Do ye yield, sir? or shall I swear for you? If I do sweat, they are drops of thy lovers; and they weep for thy death: therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my merry.

Cole. I think, you are sir John Falstaff; and, in that thought, yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine; and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indelicacy, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: My womb, my womb, my womb undoes me—Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland,

and others.

P. John. The heat is past, follow no further

now:

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.—

[Exit West.]

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?

When every thing is ended, then you come:

These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,

One time or other break some gallows' back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus; I never knew yet, but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? Have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought?

I have speeded hither with the very extreme inch of possibility; I have foundered nine-score and odd poets: and here, travel-tainted as I am,

have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken

sir John Coleville of the dale, a most furious knight, and valorous enemy: But what of that?

he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome,—I came,

saw, and overcame.

P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not; here he is, and here I yield him: and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds: or, by the lord,

I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top of it, Coleville kissing

my foot: 'To the which course, if I be enforced,

if you do not all show like gilt two-pences, to me;

while I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the candles of the element, which show like pins' heads to her; believe not the word of the noble: Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

P. John. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

P. John. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, the may do me good, and call it what you will.

P. John. Is thy name Coleville?

Cole. It is, my lord.

P. John. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

We come within our awful banks again,
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

Hast. This will I show the general. Please you, lords.

In sight of both our battles we may meet :
And either end in peace, which heaven so frame !
Or to the place of difference call the swords
Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.
[Exit West.]

Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom, tells me,

That no conditions of our peace can stand.

Hast. Fear you not that : if we can make our
peace

Upon such large terms, and so absolute,
As our conditions shall consist upon.

Mowb. Ay, but our valour shall be such,

That every right and false-derived cause—

Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason,

Shall, to the king, taste of this action :

That, were our royal faith martyrs in love,

We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind,

That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,

And good from bad find no partition. [weary

Arch. No, no, my lord : Note this,—the king is

Of dainty and such picking grievances :

For he hath found,—to end one doubt by death,

Reverses two greater in the helm of life.

And therefore will he wipe his tables clean ;

And keep no tell-tale in his memory,

That may repeat and history his loss

To new remembrance : For full well he knows,

He cannot so precisely weed this land,

As his mad doubts present occasion :

His fies are so enrobed with his friends,

That, plucking to unfix an enemy,

He doth unfix us, and, shake, a friend.

So that this land, like an offensive wife,

That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,

As he is striking, holds his infant up,

And hanks result'd correction in the arm

That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods

On late offenders, that he now doth lack

The very instruments of chastisement :

So that his power, like to a fangless lion,

May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true :—

And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,

If we do now make our stoicism well,

Our peace will, like a broken limb united,

Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.

Here is return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

West. The prince is here at hand : Pleaseth

your lordship,

To meet his grace just distance 'tween our arms

! [set forward.]

Mowb. Your grace of York, in God's name then

Arch. Before, and greet his grace :—my lord,

we come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.

*Enter, from one side, Mowbray, the Archbishop,
Hastings, and others : from the other side, Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, Officers, and Attendants.*

P. John. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray :

Good day to you, gentle archbishop :

And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all.—
My lord of York, it better shou'd with you.
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you, to hear with reverence

Your exposition on the holy text ;
Than now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum.

Turning the word to sword, and life to death.
That man, that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,

Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack, what mischief might he set abroad,
In shadow of such greatness ! With you, lord
bishop,

It is even so :—Who hath not heard it spoken,
How deep you were within the books of God !
To us, the speaker in his parliament ;

To us, the imagin'd voice of God himself ;

The very opener and intelligencer

Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,

And our dull workings : O, who shall believe,

But you misuse the reverence of your place ;

Empty the countenance and grace of heaven,

As a false favourite doth his prince's name,

In deeds dishonourable ? You have taken up,

Under the counterfeited zeal of God,

The subjects of his substitute, my father ;

And, both against the peace of heaven and him,

Have here up-swarm'd them.

Arch. Good my lord of Lancaster,

I am not here against your father's peace :

But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland,

The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,

Croud us, and crush us, to this monstrous form,

To hold our safety up. I sent your grace

The parcels and particulars of our grief :

The which hath been with scorn shou'd from the

Whereon this Hydra son of war is born : court,

Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep.

With grant of our most just and right desires ;

And true obedience of this madness cur'd,

Stump tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes

To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,

We have supplies to second our attempt ;

If they miscarry, theirs shall second them :

And so, success of mischief shall be born ;

And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up,

Whiles England shall have generation.

P. John. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,

To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your grace, to answer them directly.

How far forth you do like their articles ?

P. John. I like them all, and do allow them well :

And swear here by the honour of my blood,

My father's purposes have been mistak'd ;

And some about him have too lavishly

Wrested his meaning, and authority.—

My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd,

Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you,

Discharge your powers unto their several counties,

As we will ours : and here, between the armies,

Let's drink together friendly, and embrace

That all their eyes may bear these tokens home,

Of our restored love, and amity.

Arch. I take your princely word for these redress'd [word :

P. John. I give it you, and will maintain my

And thereupon I drink unto your grace.

Hast. Go, captain, [to an Officer] and deliver to the army

I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd,
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords,
Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody usurpation
With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,— Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd;
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd;

Whose learning and good letters peace hath touch'd;
Whose white investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,—
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself,
Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace,
Into the harsh and boist'rous tongue of war?

Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood,
Your pens to lances; and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet, and a point of war? [stands
Arch. Wherefore do I this?—so the question

Briefly, to this end:—We are all diseas'd;
And, with our surfeiting, and wanton hours,
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And we must bleed for it: of which disease

Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician;
Nor do I, as an enemy to peace;

Troop in the throngs of military men:
But, rather, show a while like fearful war,
To diet rank minds, sick of happiness;

And purge the obstructions, which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd [suffer:
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we

And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run,
And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere
By the rough torrent of occasion:

And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles;
Which, long ere this, we offer'd to the king,
And might by no suit gain our audience:

When we were wrong'd, and would unfold our griefs,
We are denied access unto his person
Even by those men that most have done us wrong.

The dangers of the days but newly gone,
[Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet-appearing blood,] and the examples
Of every minute's instance, [present now,]
Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms:

Not to break peace, or any branch of it;
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied?
Wherein have you been galled by the king?

What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you?
That you should seal this lawless bloody book
Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine,
And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,
To brother born an household cruelty,
I make my quarrel in particular.

West. 'There is no need of any such redress;
Or, if there were, it not belongs to you.

Moss. Why not to him, in part; and to us all,
That feel the bruises of the days before;
And suffer the condition of these times
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honours?

West. O my good lord Mowbray,
Construe the times to their necessities,
And you shall say indeed,—it is the time,
And not the king, that doth you injuries.

Yet, for your part, it not appears to me,
Either from the king, or in the present time,

That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on: Were you not restor'd
To all the duke of Norfolk's territories,
Your noble and right well-remember'd father's?

Moss. What thing, in honour, had my father
lost,
That need to be reviv'd, and breath'd in me?

The king, that lov'd him, as the state stood then,
Was, force perforce, compell'd to haush him:
And then, when Harry Bolingbroke, and he,—
Being mounted, and both roused in their seats,
Their neighing couriers darning of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down,
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,
And the loud trumpet blowing them together,
Then, then, when there was nothing could have staid

My father from the breast of Bolingbroke,
O, when the king did throw his warlike down,
His own life hung upon the staff he threw:
Then threw he down himself, and all their lives,
That, by indictment, and by dint of sword,
Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

West. You speak, lord Mowbray, now, you know not what:
The earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman:
Who knows, on whom fortune would then have smil'd?

But, if your father had been victor there,
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry:
For all the country, in a general voice, [love,
Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers, and
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on,
And bless'd, and grac'd indeed, more than the
king.

But this is mere digression from my purpose.—
Here come I from our princely general.
To know your griefs; to tell you from his grace
That he will give you audience: and wherein
It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them; every thing set off,
That might so much as think you enemies.

Moss. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer;
And it proceeds from policy, not love.

West. Mowbray, you overween, to take it so;
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear:
For, lo! within a ken, our army lies:
Upon mine honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear.

Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
Then reason wills, our hearts should be as good:—
Say you not then, our offer is compell'd.

Moss. Well, by my will, we shall admit no
parley. [fence:
West. That argues but the shame of your offence: case shies no handling.

Hast. Hath the prince John a full commission,
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's name:
I muse, you make so slight a question.

Arch. Then take, my lord of Westmoreland,
this schedule;
For this contains our general grievances:—
Each several article herein redress'd;
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are misnew'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form:
And present execution of our wills
To us, and to our purposes, consider'd.

Phil. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, sir John, which four will you have?

Phil. Do you choose for me.

Shal. Marry then,—Mouldy, Bull-calf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Phil. Mouldy, and Bull-calf:—For you, Mouldy, stay at home still: you are past service; and, for your part, Bull-calf,—grow till you come unto it; I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, sir John, do not yourself wrong; they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Phil. Will you tell me, master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, master Shallow.—Here's Wart!—you see what a rugged appearance it is: he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off, and on, swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow Shadow,—give me this man; he presents no mark to the enemy; the fawn may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife: And, for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones.—Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Phil. Come, manage me your caliver. So:—very well:—go to:—very good:—exceeding good.—O, give me always a little, lean, old, chapped, bald stick.—Well said, rascal, Wart; thou'rt a good coach: hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's-master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end green, (when I lay at Clement's inn,—I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show), there was a little quiver fellow, and 'a would manage you his piece thus; and 'a would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in: rah, lah, lah, would 'a say; boom, would 'a say; and away again would 'a go, and again would 'a come:—I shall never see such a fellow.

Phil. These fellows will do well, master Shallow.—God keep you, master Silence; I will not use many words with you:—Fare you well, gentlemen, both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to night.—Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, heaven bless you, and prosper your affairs, and send us peace! As you return, visit my house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure, I will with you to the court.

Phil. I would you would, master Shallow.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke, at a word. Fare you well. [Exeunt Shallow and Silence.]

Phil. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. O, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt Bardolph, Recruits, &c.] As I return, I will fetch of these justices: I do see the bottom of justice Shallow. Lord, lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wisdom of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turnbul'-street; and every third word a lie, deer paid to the hearer, than the Turk's truncheon. I do remember him at Clement's inn, last a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: he was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible: he was the very Genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him—mandrake: he came ever in the rearward of the fashion; and sung those tunes to the over-scratched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and swore—they were his fancies, or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's danger become a squire; and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard; and then he hurst his head, for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it; and told John of Gaunt, he beat his own name; for you might have trust'd him, and all his apparel, into an eel-skin; the case of a robe laughing was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and bees. Well: I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard, but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dare be a bat for the old pike, I see no reason, in the law of nature, but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the Archbishop of York, Mowbray, Hastings, and others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree forest, an't shall please your grace. [Verses fo.th.]

Arch. Here stand, my lords: and send discom-
To know the number of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.

My friends, and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd
New-dated letters from Northumberland:
Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:—
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortence with his quality,
The which he could not levy; whereupon
He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers,
That your attempt may overlive the hazard.
And fearful meeting of their opposite. [Grounds.]
Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch
And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy: [Enter]
And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand. [Exit.]
Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them
Let us sway on, and face them in the field.

Enter Westmoreland.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Mowb. I think, it is my lord of Westmoreland
West. Health and fair greeting from our general,
The prince, lord John and duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my lord of Westmoreland, in

peace;
What doth concern your coming?

West. Then, my lord,

Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion
Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rage,
And countenance'd by boys, and beggary:

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i'faith! things that are mouldy, back use: Very singular good!—In faith, well said, sir John; Very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

[To Shallow.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now, for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy, you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside; Know you where you are?—For the other, sir John:—let me see; Simon Shallow!

Fal. Ay marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cokil soldier.

Shal. Where's Shallow?

Shal. Here, sir.

Fal. Shallow, whose son art thou?

Shal. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's soul like enough; and thy father's shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male: It is often so, indeed; but not much of the father's substance.

Shal. Do you like him, sir John?

Fal. Shallow will serve for summer,—prick him;—for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha!—you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well.—Francis Feeble!

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor, he would have pricked you.—Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle, as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat?

Fee. I will do my good will, sir; you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the warful dove, or most magnanimous mouse.—Prick the woman's tailor well, master Shallow; deep, master Shallow.

Fee. I would, Wart might have gone, sir.

Fal. I would, thou wert a man's tailor; that thou might'st mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier, that is the leader of so many thousands: Let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Shal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble.—Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bull-calf of the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let us see Bull-calf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow!—Come, prick me Bull-calf till he roar again.

Bull. O lord! good my lord captain,—

Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art pricked?

Bull. O lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whorem cold, sir; a cough, sir; which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs, upon his coronation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown; we will have away thy cold; and I will take such order, that thy friends shall ring for thee.—Is here all?

Shal. Here is two more called than your number: you must have but four here, sir;—and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, in good troth, master Shallow.

Shal. O, sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's fields?

Fal. No more of that, good master Shallow, no more of that.

Shal. Ha, it was a merry night. And is Jane Night-work alive?

Fal. She lives, master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Never, never: she would always say, she could not abide master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-ruba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain, she's old; and had Robin Night-work by old Night-work, before I came to Clement's man.

Sl. That's fifty-five years ago.

Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that, that this knight and I have seen!—Ha, sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, sir John, we have; our watch-word was, How, boys?—Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner:—O, the days that we have seen!—Come, come.

[Enter Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence.]
Bull. Good master corporate Bardolph, stand my friend; and here is four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go; and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but, rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends; else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And good master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody to do any thing about her, when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself: you shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fee. By my troth, I care not;—a man can die but once:—We owe God a death:—I'll not bear a base mind:—an't be my destiny, no; an't be not so: No man's too good to serve his prince; and, let it go which way it will, he that does this year, is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou't a good fellow.

Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

[Re-enter Falstaff, and Justices.]

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four of which you please.

Bard. I will give you with you:—I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bul. calf.

Would, of that seed, grow to a greater false-
ness;

Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities:
And that some word even now cries out on us;
They say, the bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord;
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the fear'd:—Please it your grace,
To go to bed: upon my life, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth,
Shall bring this prize in very easily.

To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance, that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill;
And these unseason'd hours, perforce, must add
Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel:
And, were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Court before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire.

Enter Shallow and Silence, meeting; Mouldy, Shallow, Wart, Feeble, Bull-calf, and Servants behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early starter, by the rood. And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Shl. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow?
and your fairest daughter, and mine, my goddaughter Ellen?

Shl. Alas, a black ouzel, cousin Shallow.

Shal. By ye and nay, sir, I dare say, my cousin William is become a good scholar: He is at Oxford, still, is he not?

Shl. Indeed, sir; to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the inns of court shortly:
I was once of Clement's inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Shl. You were called—lusty Shallow, then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing: and I would have done any thing, indeed, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Bars, and Francis Pickhouse, and Will Squele, a Cotswold man,—you had not four such swinge-backers in all the inns of court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the buns-rohes were; and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Fal-staff, now sir John, a hoy; and page to Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

Shl. This sir John, cousin, that comes hither about soldiers?

Shal. The same sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogin's head at the court gate, when he was a crack, not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a frutierer, behind Gray's inn. O, the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Shl. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, tis certain; very sure, very sure:
death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all: all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stanford fair!

Shl. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain.—Is old Double of your town living yet?

Shl. Dead, sir.

Shal. Dead!—See, see!—he drew a good bow:
And dead!—he shot a fine shot.—John of Gaunt loved him well, and bequeath much money on his head. Dead!—he would have clapp'd it the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.—How a score of ewes now?

Shl. Thereafter as they be: a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Enter Bardolph, and one with him.

Shl. Here come two of sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir; I knew him a good backward man: How doth the good knight? may I ask, how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon: a souldier is better accommodated, than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated!—it is good, yea, indeed, it is: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated!—it comes from accommodo: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir: I have heard the word.
Phrases, call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword, to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command. Accommodated;
That is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated: or, when a man is,—being,—whereby,— he may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaff.

Shal. It is very just:—Look, here comes good sir John.—Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand: By my troth, you look well, and bear your years very well: welcome, good sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good master
Robert Shallow:—Master Sure-card, as I think.

Shal. No, sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Shl. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Yes! this is hot weather.—Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.
Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll?
where's the roll?—Let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so; Yea, marry, sir:—Ralph Mouldy:—let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so.—Let me see: Where is Mouldy?

Moud. Here, an't please you.

Shal. What think you, sir John? a good limbed fellow: young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moud. Yea, an't please you.

Enter Peto.

P. Hen. Peto, how now! what news?
Peto. The kind your father is at Westminster;
And there are twenty weak and wearied posts
Come from the north: and, as I came along,
I met, and overtook, a dozen captains,
Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,
And asking every one for sir John Falstaff.

P. Hen. By heaven, Peto, I feel me much to
So idly to profane the precious time; (blame,
When tempest of common ion, like the south
Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt,
And drop upon our bare unarmed heads. (night,
Give me my sword, and cloak:— Falstaff, good [Exeunt Prince Henry, Peto, Peto,
and Bardolph]

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpicked.
[Knocking heard.] More knocking at the door.

Re-enter Bardolph

How now! what's the matter?
Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently;
a dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. Hark the musicians, sirrah. [To the Page.]
Farewell, hostess:—farewell, Doll.—You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches:
If I be not sent away post, I will see you again
ere I go.

Doll. I cannot speak;—if my heart be not ready to burst:—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Falstaff and Bardolph.]

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, and passed time; but an honest and truer-hearted man,—Well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tear-sheet,—

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Within.] Bid mistress Tear-sheet come to my master.

Host. O run, Doll, run; run, good Doll.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, in his nightgown, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go, call the earls of Surrey and of Warwick;

But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters.
And well consider of them: Make good speed.—
[Exit Page.]

How many thousands of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep!—Sleep, gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down,
And steep my senses in forgetfulness!

Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee; [her;
And lull'st with buzzing night-flies to thy slum-
Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'st with sounds of sweetest melody?
O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile,
In loathsome beds; and leav'st the kingly couch,
A watch-case, or a common 'larum-bell?
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains

In cradle of the rude imperious surge,
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them
With deaf'ning clamours in the slippery clouds,
That, with the hurly, death itself awakes—
Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude;
And, in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty.

K. Hen. Is it good mornrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

K. Hen. Why then, good mornrow to you all, my
Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege. [Kingdom]

K. Hen. Then you perceive, the body of our
How foul it is; what rank diseases grow,
And with what danger, near the heart of it.

War. It is but as a body, yet, disemper'd;
Which to his former strength may be restor'd;
With good advice, and little medicine:—
My lord Northumberland will soon be cou'd.

K. Hen. O heaven! that one might read the book of fate;

And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent
[Weary of solid firmness] melt itself
Into the sea! and, other times, to see

The beauteous girl of the ocean
Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,
And changes fill the cup of alteration
With divers liquors! O, if this were seen,
The happiest youth,—viewing his progress through,

What perils past, what crosses to ensue,—
Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.
I'm not ten years gone.

Since Richard and Northumberland, great friends,
Did feast together; and, in two years after,
Were they at wars: It is but eight years, since
This Percy was the man nearest my soul;
Who like a brother lov'd in my affairs,
And laid his love and life under my foot;
Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard,
Gave him defiance. But which of you was by,
(You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember.)

[To Warwick.]

When Richard,—with his eye brimful of tears,
Then check'd and rais'd by Northumberland,—
Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy!
Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which
My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne:—
'Tis true, then, heaven knows, I had no such intent;
But that necessity so bow'd the state,
That I and greatness were compell'd to turn:—
The time shall come, thus did he follow it,
The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into corruption:—so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition,
And the division of our army.

War. There is a history in all men's lives,
Figuring the nature of the times decur'd:
The which observ'd, a man may prophecy,
With a near aim, of the main chance of things
As yet not come to life; which in their seeds,
And weak beginnings, lie intresur'd.
Such things become the hatch and brood of times;
And, by the necessary form of this,
King Richard might create a perfect guess
That great Northumberland, thou false to him,

Doll. Do, if thou darest for thy heart: if thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Proce. The music is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play:—Play, sirs.—Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Doll. Faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pie, when wilt thou leave fighting o'days, and joining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter behind, Prince Henry and Poins, disguised like Drapers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Doll. Sirrah, what humour is the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: he would have made a good pantler, he would have chipped bread well.

Doll. They say, Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit? hang him, bahona! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard; there is no more conceit in him, than is in a mallet.

Doll. Why does the prince love him so then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a business; and he plays at quints well, and eats conger and frumel; and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons; and rides the wild mare with the boys; and jumps upon joint-stools; and swears with a good grace; and wears his boot very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg; and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties he hath, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoidances.

P. Hen. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore.

P. Hen. Look, if the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange, that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanac to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not issuing to his master's old tables; his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering husbies.

Doll. Nay, truly; I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Doll. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money on Thursday; thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come: it grows late, we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me, when I am gone.

Doll. By my troth, thou'lt see me a weeping, an thou mayest so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return.—Well, hearken thou, end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis.

P. Hen. Poins. Anon, anon, sir. [Advancing.]

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's!—And art not thou Poins's brother?

P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead?

Fal. A better than thou; I am a gentleman, thou art a drawer.

P. Hen. Very true, sir: and I am come to draw you out by the ears.

Host. O, the lord preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London.—Now the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad empoind of majesty,—by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome. [Leaving his hand upon Doll.]

Doll. How! you fat fool, I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenue, and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the host.

P. Hen. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous, civil gentleman?

Host. 'Blessing o' your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

P. Hen. Yes; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gads-hill: you knew, I was at your back; and spoke it on purpose, to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no, no, no; I did not think, thou wast within hearing.

P. Hen. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, on mine honour; no abuse.

P. Hen. Not! to dispraise me; and call me—pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what!

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him;—in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal;—none, Ned, none;—no, boys, none.

P. Hen. See now, whether pure fear, and entire cowardice, doth not make thee wroth this virtuous gentleman to close with us! Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? or is the boy of the wicked? Or honest Bartholomew, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bartholomew, irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malworms. For the boy,—there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too.

P. Hen. For the women,—

Fal. For one of them,—she is in hell already, and burns, poor soul! For the other,—I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think, thou art quit for that: Murry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which, I think, thou wilt howl.

Host. All victuallers do so: What's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

P. Hen. You, gentleman,—

Doll. What says your grace?

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against.

Host. Who knocks an loud at door? look to the door there, Francis.

so, I can tell whereupon: for, says he, you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive. Reverie, says he, no swaggering companions.—There comes none here;—you would bless you to hear what he said;—no, I'll no swaggerers.

Pat. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, he; you may strike him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance.—Call him up, drawer.

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater: But I do not love swaggering; by my truth, I am the worse, when one says—swagger: feel, masters, how I slunk; look you, I warrant you.

Doll. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yes, in every troth, do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf; I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Pist. 'Save you, sir John.

Pat. Welcome, sweet Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon nine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, sir John, with two bullets.

Pat. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs, nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. 'Then to you, mistress Dorothy; I will charge you.

Doll. Charge me! I scorn you, scabby companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, black-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, mistress Dorothy.

Doll. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy booz, away! by this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you!—Since when, I pray you, sir?—What, with two points on your shoulder? much!

Pist. I will murder your ruff for this.

Pat. No more, Pistol; I would not have you go off here: discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain.

Doll. Captain! thou innumerable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called—captain! if captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their wages upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what! for teasing a poor whore's ruff in a lawdy-house!—He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes, and dried cakes. A captain! these villains will make the word captain as odious as the word occupy; which was an excellent good word before it was ill-sorted: therefore captains had need look to it.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Pat. Hark thee hither, mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I: tell thee what, corporal Bardolph;—I could tear her:—I'll be revenged on her.

Page. Pray thee, go down.

Pist. I'll see her damned first:—to Plato's damned like, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down! down, dogs! down fautors! Have we not liars here!

Host. Good captain Pistol, be quiet; it is very late, I faith: I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall packhorses, And hollow pimper'd jades of Asia,

Which cannot go but thirty miles a day, Compare with 'seams, and with Cambrils, And Trojan Greeks? I say, rather damn them with King Corberus; and let the welkin roar. Still we fall foul for toys!

Host. By my truth, captain, these are very better words.

Bard. Be gone, good ancient; this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs; give crowns like pins; Have we not liars here?

Host. O my word, captain; there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think, I would deny her? for God's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then, feed and be fat, my fair Calipolis: Come, give's some sack.

St fortuna me tormenta, sperato me contenta.—Fear we brouchailes! no, let the fend give fire: Give me some sack;—and, sweetheart, lie thou there. [Lying down his sword.]

Come we to full points here! and are el celeris nothing?

Pat. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neck: What! we have seen the seven stars.

Doll. Thrust him down stairs; I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! I know we not Gullaway nags!

Pat. Quot him down, Bardolph, like a shew-grout stalling; nay, if he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision? shall we imbrue?—[Snatching up his sword.] Then death ruck me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds Unwound the sisters three! Come, Atropas, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Pat. Give me my rapier, boy.

Doll. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Pat. Get you down stairs.

[Drawing, and driving Pistol out.]

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll for-wear keeping house, afore I'll be in these terrors and terrors. So; murder, I warrant now.—Alas, what put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons. [Exeunt Pistol and Bardolph.]

Doll. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal is gone. Ah, you whoreson little valiant villain, you.

Host. Are you not hurt? the gron? 'twould thought, he made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter Bardolph.

Pat. Have you turned him out of doors?

Bard. Yes, sir. The rascal's drunk: you have hurt him, sir, in the shoulder.

Pat. A rascal! to brave me!

Doll. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! Come, let me wipe thy face;—come on, you whoreson chops;—Ah, rogue! I faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the nine worthies. Ah, villain!

Pat. A rascally slave! I will toss the rugie in a blanket.

Would turn their own perfection to abuse,
To seem like him: So that, in speech, in gait,
In diet, in mirth, in humours of delight,
In mirth, in rules, in humours of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashion'd others. And him,—O wondrous
him!

O miracle of men!—him did you leave,
(Secured to none, unseconded by you,)
To look upon the hideous and of war
In disadvantage; to abide a field,
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name
Did seem defensible:—so you left him:—
Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong,
To hold your honour more precious and nice
With others, than with him: let them alone;
The marshal, and the archbishop, are strong;
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me,
With new lamenting ancient overights.
But I must go, and meet with danger there;
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O, fly to Scotland,
Fill that the nobles, and the armed commons,
Have of their pismance made a little taste. [King.]

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves,
First let them try themselves: So did your son;
He was so suffer'd; so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough,
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband. [Loud.]
North. Come, come, go in with me: 'tis with my
As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way.
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back:—
I will resolve for Scotland; there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Boar's
Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.

Enter Two Drawers.

1 Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there! apple-Johns? thou know'st, sir John cannot endure an apple-John.

2 Draw. Mass, thou sayest true: The prince once set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and told him, there were five more sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said, I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights. It angered him to the heart: but he hath forgot that.

1 Draw. Why these, cover, and set them down:
And see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise;
mistress Tear-sheet would fain hear some music.
Despatch:—The room where they supped, is too hot; they'll come in straight.

2 Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince, and master Thins anon: and they will put on two of our jerkins, and aprons; and sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

1 Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis: It will be an excellent stratagem.

2 Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak. [Exit.]

Enter Hostess and Doll Tear-sheet.

Host. Faith, sweet heart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality: your pulse beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose: But, if'thuth, you have drunk too much canaries; and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere you can say,—

What's this? How do you now?

Doll. Better than I was. Hem.

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Look, here comes sir John.

Enter Falstaff, singing.

Fal. When Arthur first in court—Empty the Jordan.—
And was a worthy king: [Exit Drawer.]
How now, mistress Doll?

Host. Sick of a cold: yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a cold, they are sick.

Doll. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me.

Fal. You make fat rascals, mistress Doll.

Doll. I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue,
grant that.

Doll. Ay, marry; your chains and our jewels.

Fal. Your brooches, pearls, and oesker;—for to serve bravely, is to come halting off, you know:
To come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely: to venture upon the charged chambers bravely:—

Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet, but you fall to some discord:
you are both, in good truth, as rheumatick as two dry stones; you cannot one bear with another's confinement: What the good-year! one must hear, and that must be you: [to Doll.] you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Doll. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hoghead? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him; you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold.—Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter Drawers.

Draw. Sir, ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul mouth'd rat rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: no,
by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbours;
I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name and fame with the very best.—Shut the door.—There comes no swaggerers here; I have not lived all this while, to have swaggering now:—shut the door,
I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Host. Pray you, pacify yourself, sir John; there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? It is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally, sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before master Tinsck, the deputy, the other day;
and, as he said to me,—It was no longer ago than Wednesday last.—Neighbour Quickly, says he,— master Dumb, our minister, was by then.—Neighbour Quickly, says he, receive those that are cry'd for, says he, you are in an ill name;—now he said

Enter Bardolph and Page.

Bard. Save your grace!

P. Hen. And yours, most noble Bardolph!

Bard. Come, you virtuous ass, [to the Page.] you foolish fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man at arms are you become! Is it such a matter, to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead?

Page. He called me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes; and, methought, he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.

P. Hen. Hath not the boy pruned?

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away!

P. Hen. Instruct us, boy: What dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a fire-brand; and therefore I call him her dream.

P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interpretation.—There it is, boy. [Gives him money.]

Poins. That this good blossom could be kept from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve these.

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

P. Hen. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town; there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect.—And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician: but that moves not him; though that be sick, it dies not.

P. Hen. I will allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he looks his place; for, look you, how he writhes.

Poins. [Reads.] John Falstaff, knight,—Every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself. Even like those that are kin to the king; for they never prick their finger, but they say, There is some of the king's blood spilt. How comes that? I say he that takes upon him not to conceive: the answer is as ready as a borrow-er's cup: I am the king's poor cousin, sir.

P. Hen. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But the letter:—

Poins. Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry prince of Wales, greeting.—Why, this is a certificate.

P. Hen. Peace!

Poins. I will imitate the honourable Roman in brevity:—he sure means brevity in breath; short-winded.—I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears, thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou may'st, and so farewell.

There, by you and no, (which is as much as to say, as thou wost him.)

Jack Falstaff, with my familiars; John, with my brothers and sisters; and sir John with all Europe.

My lord, I will steep this letter in sack, and make him eat it.

P. Hen. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins. May the wench have no worse fortune! but I never said so.

P. Hen. Well, thus we play the fools with the time; and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds, and mock us.—Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

P. Hen. Where sups he? doth the old bear feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord; in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord; of the old church.

P. Hen. Snp any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old mistress Quickly, and mistress Doll Tear-sheet.

P. Hen. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

P. Hen. Every gentle kin, as the parish heifers are to the town-bull.—Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

P. Hen. Sirrah, you boy,—and Bardolph;—no word to your master, that I am yet come to town: There's for your silence.

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir,—I will govern it.

P. Hen. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.]—This Doll Tear-sheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London.

P. Hen. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leather jerkins, and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

P. Hen. From a god to a bull? a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a pretence? a low transformation! that shall be mine: for, in every thing, the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Warkworth. Before the Castle.

Enter Northumberland, Lady Northumberland, and Lady Percy.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs: Put not you on the visage of the times, And be, like them, to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more: Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn; And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O yet, for God's sake, go not to these wars!

The time was, father, that you broke your word, When you were more eudeard to it than now;

When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry

Threw many a northward look, to see his father Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.

Who then persuaded you to stay at home? There were two honours lost: yours, and your son's.

For yours,—my heavenly glory brighten it! For his,—it stuck upon him, as the sun In the grey vault of heaven: and, by his light, Did all the chivalry of England move

To do brave acts; he was, indeed, the glass Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.

He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait: And speaking thick, which nature made him

blemiish,

Became the accents of the valiant;

For those that could speak low, and tardily,

Fal. As I am a gentleman;—

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman;—Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate, and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking; and for thy walls,—a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the prodigal, or the German hunting in waterwork, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings, and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound if thou canst. Come, an it were not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy sword: Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Pray thee, sir John, let it be but twenty nobles; 'faith I am loath to pawn my plate, in good earnest, la.

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown: I hope you'll come to supper: You'll pay me all together!

Fal. Will I live?—Go, with her, with her; (to Bardolph) hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tear-sheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words, let's have her.

(Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, Officers, and Page.)

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Bannockburn, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: What's the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse.

Are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland, and the archbishop.

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently: Come, go along with me, good master Gower.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here: I thank you, good sir John.

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, master Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Ch. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. (Exeunt.)

SCENE II.—The same. Another Street.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins.

P. Hen. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought, weariness durst not have attacked one of so high blood.

P. Hen. 'Faith it does me; 'twould it discolour the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Both it must show vilely in me, to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weak a composition.

P. Hen. Belike then, my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name! or to know thy face tomorrow! or to take note how many pair of silk-stockings thou hast; wit, these, and those that were the peach-colour'd ones? or to hear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superfluity, and one other for use?—but that, the tennis-court keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland; and God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen, shall inherit his kingdom; but the mal-wives say, the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly? Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time?

P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes; and let it be an excellent good thing.

P. Hen. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

P. Hen. Why, I tell thee,—it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee, (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

P. Hen. By this hand, thou think'st me as far in the devil's book as thou, and Falstaff, for obduracy and persistency: Let the end try the man. But I tell thee,—my heart bleeds inwardly, that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

Poins. The reason?

P. Hen. What would'st thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

P. Hen. It would be every man's thought: and thou art a blessed fellow, to think as every man thinks; never a man's thought in the world keeps the road so way better than thine: every man would think me as hypocrite indeed. And what acquires your most wonderful thought, to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd, and so much enrailed to Falstaff.

P. Hen. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoken of, I can hear it with my own ears: the worst that they can say of me is, that I am a second brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.

P. Hen. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had him from me christened: and look, if the fellow have not transformed him again.

Host. Yes, good master Snares; I have entered him and more as well.

Snares. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Host. Alas the day! take heed of him; he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly: in good faith, a' cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out: he will slain like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I but hit him once; as a' come but within my vice:—

Host. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score:—Good master Fang, hold him sure;—good master Snares, let him not 'scape. He comes continually to Pie-corner (saving your manhoods), to buy a saddle; and he's invited to dinner to the lubber's head in Lambert-street, to master Smoot's the silkman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my cause so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long loan for a poor lone woman to bear; and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong.—

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Page, and Bardolph.

Yonder he comes; and that arrant malice-mouse knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, master Fang and master Snares; do we, do we, do we your offices.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead! what's the matter!

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets!—Draw, Bardolph; cut me off the villain's head; throw the quean in the channel.

Host. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? I thou tastardly rogue! Murder, murder! O thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers, and the king's? O thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed; a man queller, and a woman queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two.—Thou wot'st, wot'st thou? thou wot'st, wot'st thou? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fastidiant! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, attended.

Ch. Just. What's the matter? keep the peace here, be!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me!

Ch. Just. How now, sir John! what, are you bawling here?

[ness]
[both this become your place, your time, and busi-]
You should have been well on your way to

York.—

Stand from him, fellow! Wherefore hang'st thou on him?

Host. O, my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord: it is for all, all I have; he hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his;—but I will have some of it out again, or I'll ride thee o' nights, like the mare.

Fal. I think, I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, sir John? Fye! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation! Are you not ashamed, to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself, and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Whitsun-week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keesh, the butcher's wife, come in then, and call me gossip Quickly! coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us, she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some; whereby I told thee, they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarly with such poor people; saying, that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-mate; deny it, if thou canst.

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says, up and down the town, that her eldest son is like you; she hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you, I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in pure and person.

Host. Yes, in truth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Prythee, peace.—Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her; the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this snapp without reply. You call honestable boldness, impudent sauciness; if a man will make court'ry, and say nothing, he is virtuous; No, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your satirist; I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong; but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess. [Taking her aside.]

Enter Gower.

Ch. Just. Now, master Gower: What news? Goss. The king, my lord, and Harry prince of Wales.

Are near at hand; the rest the paper tells.

SCENE III.—York. A Room in the Archbishop's Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the Lords Hastings, Mowbray, and Bardolph.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause, and know our means:

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all,
Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:—
And first, lord marshal, what say you to it?

Mowb. I will allow the occasion of our arms:
But gladly would be better satisfied,
How, in our means, we should advance ourselves
To look with forehead bold and big enough
Upon the power and puissance of the king.

Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file
To five and twenty thousand men of choice;
And our supplies lie largely in the hope
Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns
With an increased fire of injuries.

Bard. The question then, lord Hastings, standeth thus:

Whether our present five and twenty thousand
May hold up head without Northumberland.

Hast. With him, we may.

Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point;
But if without him we be thought too feeble,
My judgment is, we should not step too far
Till we had his assistance by the hand:
For, in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this,
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise
Of aide uncertain, should not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis very true, lord Bardolph: for, indeed,
It was young Hotspur's care at Shrewsbury.

Bard. It was, my lord; who liv'd himself with Eating the air on promise of supply, [hope,
Flattering himself with project of a power
Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts:
And so, with great imagination,
Proper to madmen, led his powers to death,
And, winking, leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt,
To lay down likelihoods, and forms of hope.

Bard. Yes, in this present quality of war:—
Indeed the instant action, [a cause on foot,
Lives so in hope, as in an early spring
We see the appearing buds; which, to prove fruit,
Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair,
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model;
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection:
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then, but draw anew the model
In fewer offices; or, at least, dissent
To build at all? Much more, in this great work,
[Which is, almost, to pluck a kingdom down,
And set another up,) should we survey
The plot of situation, and the model;
Consent upon a sure foundation;
Question surveyors: know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo,
To weigh against his opposite; or else,
We fortify in paper, and in figures,
Using the names of men, instead of men:
Like one, that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it: who, half through,
Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created cost
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant, that our hopes [yet likely of fair birth]
Should be still-born, and that we now profess'd

The utmost man of expectation:

I think, we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

Bard. What! is the king but five and twenty thousand? [Bardolph]

Hast. To us, no more: nay, not so much, lord
For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
Are in three heads; one power against the French,
And one against Glendower; perforce, a third
Must take up us: So is the uniform king
In three divided; and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths
Together,

And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh

Baying him at the heels: never fear that.

Bard. Who, as it like, should lead his forces hither?

Hast. The duke of Lancaster, and Westmoreland:

Against the Welsh, himself, and Harry Monmouth;

But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on;
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice,
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited:—
An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he, that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond man! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke,

Before he was what thou wouldst have him be!
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him,
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou discharge
Thy glutton brawm of the royal Richard?

And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it! What trust is in these times? [do,

They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him
Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that throw'st dust upon his gouldy head,
When through proud London he came sighing on
After the admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this! O thoughts of men account!
Past, and to come, seem best; things present worst. [on]

Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter Hostess; Fang, and his Boy, with her; and Snare following.

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the action?

Fang. It is entered.

Host. Where is your yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? will he stand to't?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Host. O lord, ay: good master Snare

Serv. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest sir John Falstaff.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief; from study, and perturbation of the brain: I have read the cause of his effects in Gules: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think, you are fallen into the disease; for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, a'n't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels, would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not, if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord; but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt, cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to seal a new-healed wound; your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little glided over your night's exploit on Gads-hill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'ersporting that action.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf, is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassel candle, my lord: all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravity, gravity, gravity.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light; but, I hope, he that looks upon me, will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell: Virtue is of so little regard in these coster-monger times, that true valour is turned bear-herd: Pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You, that are old, consider not the capacities of us that are young: you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls: and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with antiquity? I and will you yet call yourself young? Pys, fye, fye, sir John!

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice,—I have lost it with hollaring, and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box o'the ear that the prince gave you,—he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible hear: I have checked him for it; and the young lion repents: murr, not in ashes, and sackcloth; but in new silk, and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven send the prince a better companion!

Fal. Heaven send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and prince Harry: I hear, you are going with lord John of Lancaster, against the archbishop, and the earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea: I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day! for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, an I brandish any thing but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can creep out his head, but I am thrust upon it: Well, I cannot last ever: But it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say, I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God, my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is. I were better to be eaten to death with rust, than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; And God bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound, to furnish me forth!

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny: you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well: Commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

(Exeunt Chief Justice and Attendant.)

Fal. If I do, filip me with a three-man beetle.—A man can no more separate age and covetousness, than he can part young limbs and lechery: but the goat galls the oxe, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the degrees prevent my courses.—Boy!

Page. Sir!

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and two pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable.—Go bear this letter to my lord of Lancaster; this to the prince: this to the earl of Westmoreland; and this to old mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin: About it: you know where to find me. (Exit Page.) A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the oxe, or the other, plays the rogue with my great toe. It is no matter, if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable: A good wit will make use of any thing; I will turn disease to commodity. (Exit)

And doth enlarge his rancour with the blood
Of fair king Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones:

Derives from heaven his quarrel, and his cause;
Tells them, he doth bestride a bleeding land,
Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke;
And more, and less, do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before; but, to speak
truth,

This present grief hath wip'd it from my mind.
Go in with me; and counsel every man
The aptest way for safety, and revenge:
Get posts, and letters, and make friends with speed;

Never so few, and never yet more need.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. A Street.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but, for the party that ow'd it, he might have more diseases than he knew
for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: The brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to vent any thing that tends to laughter, more than I invent, or is invented on me: I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee, like a ewe, that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap, than to wait at my heels. I was never muzzed with an agate till now; but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel: the jewel, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet flegged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand, than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say, his face is a face-royal: God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair anise yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he will be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine. I can assure him.—What said master Dumbleton about the satin for my short clock, and slope?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph: he would not take his bond and yours: he liked no, the security.

Fal. Let him be damned like a glutton! May his tongue be hotter!—A whoreson Achitophel!
a rascally yea-fir-mouth knave! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security!—The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles;
and if a man is thorough with them in honest
taking up, then they must stand upon—security.
I had as lief they would put raimen in my mouth, as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security: for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it; and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him.—
Where's Bardolph?

Page. He's gone into Smithfield, to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, and an Attendant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bar-dolph.

Fal. Wait close, I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Atten. Falstaff, a't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery?

Atten. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury; and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back
again.

Atten. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him, I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder, my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure, he is, to the hearing of any thing good.—Go, pluck him by the elbow: I must speak with him.

Atten. Sir John,——

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there not wars? Is there not employment? Dost thou the king lack subjects? I do not the rebels need soldiers! I thought it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Atten. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiiership aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so.

Atten. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiiership aside; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! if thou get'st any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hang'd: You hunt-counter, hence!
avaunt!

Atten. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord!—Glad give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad: I heard say your lordship was sick:
I hope, your lordship goes abroad by advice.
Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time; and I must humbly beseech your lordship, to have a reverend cure of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear, his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty:—You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him! I pray, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson raigning.

Ch. Just. Wilt tell you use of it? he uses it as Hath left a witness'd usurpation, —

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord;
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask,
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son, and brother?
Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begun,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him half his Troy was burn'd;
But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death, ere thou report'st it.
Thus thou would'st say, — Your son did thus, and
thus:

Your brother thus: so fought the noble Douglas:
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds:
But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise,
Ending with — brother, son, and all are dead.

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet:
But, for my lord your son, —

North. Why, he is dead.
See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath!
He, that but fears the thing he would not know,
Hath, by instinct, knowledge from others' eyes.
That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak,
Morton;

Tell thou thy earl, his divination lies;
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace,
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid:
Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead.
I see a strange confusion in those eyes;
Thou shak'st thy head; and hold'st it fear, or sin,
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so:
The tongue offends not, that reports his death;
And he doth sin, that doth belie the dead;
Not he, which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news
Hath but a loss of office; and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Remember'd kneeling a departing friend.

Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry, I should force you to believe
That, which I would to heaven I had not seen;
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
Read'ring fast quittance, wearied and outbreath'd, (down

To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat
The never-daunted Percy to the earth,

From whence with life he never more sprung up.
In few, his death (whose spirit lent a fire
Even to the dustiest peasant in his camp)
Being bruited once, took fire and heat away
From the best-temper'd courage in his troops:
For from his metal was his party steel'd;

Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead.
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement, flies with greatest speed;
So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss,

Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear,
That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim,
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety,
Fly from the field: Then was that noble Worcester

Too soon to'en prisoner: and that furious Scot,
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword
Had thrice slain the appearance of the king,

'Gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backs: and, in his flight, Stumbling in fear, was took. The sun of all
Is — that the king hath weep; and hath sent out

A speedy power to encounter you, my lord,

Under the conduct of young Lancaster,
And Westmoreland: this is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn.

In poison there is physic; and these news,
Having been well, that would have made me sick,
Being sick, have in some measure made me well:
And as the wretch, whose fever-weak'd joints,
Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life,
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keeper's arms; even so my limbs,
Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief,
Are thrice themselves: hence therefore, thou nice crutch;

A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel,
Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly quondam,
Thou art a guard too wanton for the head,
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with iron; And approach
The ragged'st hour that time and spite dare bring,
To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland!

Let heav'n kiss earth! Now let not nature's hand
Keep the wild flood confus'd! let order die!
And let this world no longer be a stage,
To feed contention in a lingering act;
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
And darkness be the burer of the dead! [loud.

Tra. This strained passion doth you wring, my Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices
Learn on your health; the which, if you give o'er
To stormy passion, must perforce decay.
You cast the event of war, my noble lord, [said,
And sum'd the account of chance, before you
Let us make head. It was your presumption,
That in the dole of blows your son might drop:
You knew, he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge,
More likely to fall in, than to get o'er:
You were advis'd, his flesh was capable
Of wounds, and scars; and that his forward spirit
Would lift him where no trade of danger rang'd;

Yet did you say, — Go forth; and some of them,
Though strongly apprehended, could restrain
The stiff-borne action: What hath then befallen,
Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth,
More than that being which was like to be?

Bard. We all, that are engaged to this loss
Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas
That, if we wrought our life, 'twas ten to one:
And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd;
Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd;
And, since we are o'er-set, venture again.

Come, we will all put forth; body, and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time: And, my most noble
lord,

I hear for certain, and do speak the truth, —
The gentle archbishop of York is up,
With well-appointed powers; he is a man,
Who with a double surety binds his followers.
My lord your son had only but the corpse,
But shadows, and the shows of men, to fight:

For that same word, rebellion, did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls;
And they did fight with queasiness, constraint,
As men drunk potuouse; that their weapons only
Seem'd on our side, but, for their spirits and souls,
This word, rebellion, it had froze them up.
As fish are in a pond; but now the bishop
Turns insurrection to religion:
Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thought is,
He's follow'd both with body and with soul;

*Lady Northumberland.
Lady Percy.
Husker Quicky.
Dull Tear-sheet.*

Lords and other Attendants; Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, Drummers, Beadles, Grooms, &c.

SCENE. — England.

INDUCTION.

Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle.

Enter Rumour, painted full of tongues.

Rum. Open your ears; For which of you will stop

The vent of hearing, when loud Rumour speaks!
I, from the orient to the dropping west,
Making the wood of yew our trumpet, still unaid
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride;
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
I speak of peace, while covert enmity,
Under the smile of safety, wounds the world:
And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful musters, and prepar'd defence;
Whilst the big year, swoll'n with some other grief,
Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter! Rumour is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures;
And of so easy and so plain a stop,
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known body to anatomize
Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
I run before king Harry's victory;
Who, in a bloody field by Shrewsbury,
Hath beaten down young Hotspur, and his troops,
Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? my office is
To noise abroad,—that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword;
And that the king before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
Thus have I rumour'd through the peasant towns
Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland,
Lies crafty sick: the posts come bringing on,
And not a man of them brings other news
Than they have learn'd of me; From Rumour's
tongues
They bring smooth comforts false worse than true wrongs. (Exit.)

ACT I.

SCENE I. — The same.

The Porter before the Gate; Enter Lord Bardolph.

Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho! — Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?

Bard. Tell thou the earl,
That the lord Bardolph doth attend him here.
Port. His handspike is walk'd furth into the orchard;

Please it your honour, knock but at the gate,
And he himself will answer.

Enter Northumberland.

Bard. Here comes the earl.

North. What news, lord Bardolph? every minute now
Should be the father of some stratagem:
The times are wild; contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose,
And bears down all before him.

Bard. Noble earl,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.
North. Good, an heaven will!

Bard. As good as heart can wish:—
The king is almost wounded to the death;
And, in the fortune of my lord your son,
Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts Kill'd by the hand of Douglas: young prince John,
And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field;
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk sir John,
Is prisoner to your son: O, such a day,
So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won,
Came not, till now, to dignify the times,
Since Caesar's fortunes!

North. How is this deriv'd?
Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence,

A gentleman well bred, and of good name.
That freely render'd me these news for true.

North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom
I sent.

On Trenchard last to listen after news.
Bard. My lord, I over-ride him on the way;
And he is furnish'd with no certainties,
More than he haply may retail from me.

Enter Travers.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you? (Knock.)

Trav. My lord, Sir John Umfrville turn'd me
With joyful tidings: and being better hors'd,
Out-ride me. After him, came, spurring hard,
A gentleman almost forsaken with speed.
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.
He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him
I did demand, what news from Shrewsbury.
He told me, that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold:
With that, he gave his able horse the heel,
And, bending forward, struck his armed heels
Against the panting sides of his poor jade
Up to the navel-head; and starting so,
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! — Again.
Said he, young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur, couldst thou that rebellion
Had met ill luck?

Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what:—
If my young lord your son have not the day,
Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barway: never talk of it. (Travers.)
North. Why should the gentleman, that rode by Gave then such instances of loss?

Bard. Who, he?
He was some hilding fellow, that had staid
The horse he rode on; and, upon my life,
Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter Morton.

North. Yes, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf,
Foretells the nature of a tragic volume:
So looks the strand, whereon the imperious flood

P. John. But, soft! whom have we here? Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

P. Hen. I did; I saw him dead, breathless and bleeding

Upon the ground—

Art thou alive? or is it fantasy?

That plays upon our eyesight? I prythee, speak; We will not trust our eyes, without our ears:—
Thou art not what thou seem'st.

P. Hen. No, that's certain; I am not a double man: but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy: [throwing the body down.] if your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Dost thou?—Lord, lord, how this world is given to lying!—I grant you I was down, and out of breath; and so was he: but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clo-k. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them, that should reward valour, bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

P. Hen. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.

P. Hen. This is the strangest fellow, brother John.

Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back: For my part, if a lie may do thee grace, I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A retreat is sounded.]

The trumpet sounds retreat, the day is ours. Come, brother, let's to the highest of the field, To see what friends are living, who are dead.

[Exeunt Prince Henry and Prince John.]

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.

[Exit, bearing off the body.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

The trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Prince Henry, Prince John, Westmoreland, and others, with Worcester and Vernon, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.—Ill-spirited Worcester! did we not send grace, Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?

And would'st thou turn our offers contrary?

Messure the tenor of thy kinsman's trust!

Three knights upon our party slain to-day,

A noble earl, and many a creature else,

Had been alive this hour.

If, like a christian, thou hadst truly borne

Between our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to;

And I embrace this fortune patiently,

Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and

Vernon too:

Other offenders we will pause upon.—

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon, guarded.]

How goes the field?

P. Hen. The noble Scot, lord Douglas, when he saw

The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,

The noble Percy slain, and all his men

Upon the foot of fear,—fled with the rest;

And, falling from a hill, he was so hurt'st,

That the pursuers took him. At my tent

The Douglas is; and I beseech your grace,

I may dispose of him.

K. Hen.

With all my heart.

P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you

This honourable bounty shall belong:

Go to the Douglas, and deliver him

Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:

His valour, shown upon our crests to-day,

Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,

Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

K. Hen. Then this remains,—that we provide our power.—

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland,

Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest

speed,

To meet Northumberland, and the prelate Scroop,

Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:

Myself,—and you, son Harry,—will towards Wales

To fight with Glendower, and the earl of March.

Rebellion in this land shall lose its sway,

Meeting the check of such another day:

And since this business so fair is done,

Let us not leave till all our own be won

[Exeunt.]

SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

King Henry the Fourth.
Henry, Prince of Wales, afterwards
King Henry V.
Thomas, Duke of Clarence,
Prince John of Lancaster, afterwards
(2 Henry V.) Duke of Bedford, Prince Humfrey of Gloucester, afterwards (2 Henry V.) Duke of Gloucester.
Earl of Warwick,
Earl of Westmoreland,
Gower,
Harcourt,
Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench.
A gentleman attending on the Chief Justice his sons of the King's party.

Earl of Northumberland,
Scroop, Archbishop of York,
Lord Mowbray,
Lord Hastings,
Lord Bardolph,
Sir John Coleville,
Travers and Morton, domestics of Northumberland.
Falstaff, Bardolph, Pistol, and Page.
Purvis and Petto, attendants on Prince Henry.
Shallow and Silence, country justices.
Devay, servant to Shallow.
Mouldy, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, and Bulcalf recruits.
Fang and Snare, sheriff's officers.
Runmour.
A Porter.
A Dancer, speaker of the epilogue.

*answering to the
King.*

P. Hen. We have been too long:—Come, cousin Westmoreland,
Our duty this way lies; for God's sake come.

[Exeunt Prince John and Westmoreland.]

P. Hen. By heaven, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster,
I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:
Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;
But now, I do respect thee as my soul.

K. Hen. I saw him hold lord Percy at the point,
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown warrior.

P. Hen. O, this boy [i*Exit*.]
Lends mettle to us all.

Alarums. Enter Douglas.

Doug. Another King! they grow like Hydras!
I am the Douglas, fatal to all thine [heads:
That wear these colours on them.—What art thou,
That counterfeits't the person of a king?

K. Hen. The king himself; who, Douglas,
grieves at heart,

So many of his shadows thou hast met,
And not the very king. I have two boys,
Seek Percy, and myself, about the field:
But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will essay thee; so defend thyself.

Doug. I fear, thou art another counterfeiter:
And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king:
But mine, I am sure, thou art, whoso'er thou be,
And thus I win thee.

[They fight; the King being in danger, enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like

Never to hold it up again! the spirits
Of Shrewsbury, St Albans, and in my arms:
It is the prince of ales, that threatens thee;
Who never promiseth, but he means to pay.

[They fight; Douglas flies.
Heerly, my lord: How fares your grace?
Sir Nicholas Gawayne hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton: I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe a while;
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion on;
And show'd, thou mak'st some tender of my life,
In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

P. Hen. O heaven! they did me too much injury,

That ever said, I hearken'd for your death.
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you;
Which would have been as speedy in your end,
As all the poisonous potions in the world,
And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton, I'll to sir Nicholas
Gawayne. [Exit King Henry.]

Enter Hotspur.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my Hot. My name is Harry Percy. [name.]

P. Hen. Why, then I see
A very valiant rebel of the name.

I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;
Nor can one England brook a double reign,
Of Harry Percy, and the prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is come
To the end of one of us: And 'would to God,
Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

P. Hen. I'll make it greater, ere I part from
thee:

And all the budding honours on thy crest
I'll crop, to make a Garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities.

[They fight.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal!—Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Enter Douglas; he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit Douglas. Hotspur is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast rob'd me of my youth:
I better brook the loss of battle life,
Than these proud titles thou hast won of me;
They wound my thoughts, worse than thy sword
my flesh:—

But thought'st the slave of life, and life time's fool:
And time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy,
But that the earthy and cold hand of death
Lies on my tongue:—No, Percy, thou art dust,
And food for— [Dies]

P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy: Fare thee well, great heart!

Ill-weav'd ambition, how art thou shrunk!
When that this body did contain a spirit,
A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
But now two paces of the widest earth
Is room enough:—This earth, that bears thee dead,
Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.
If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
I should not make so dear a show of zeal:—
But let my favours hide thy mangled face;
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
For doing thus far nigh of tenderness:
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!
Thy isomy sleep with thee in the grave,
But not remember'd in thy epitaph!—

[He sees Falstaff on the ground.
What! old acquaintance! could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life! Poor Jack, farewell!
I could have better spar'd a better man.
O, I should have a heavy mass of thee,
If I were much in love with vanity.
Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,
Though many dearer, in this bloody fray:—
Embowl'd will I see thee by and by:
Till then, in blood by noble Percy be. [Exit.

Fal. [Rising slowly.] Embowell'd! if thou em-bowel me to day, I'll give you leave to powder me, and eat me too, to-morrow. 'Shood, 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot tournament Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit! I lie, I am no counterfeiter: To die is to be a counterfeiter;
for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man: but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeiter, but the true and perfect image of life indeed.—The better part of valour is—discretion: in the which better part, I have saved my life. 'Zounds, I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead: How, if he should counterfeit too, and rise? I am afraid, he would prove the better counterfeiter. Therefore I'll make him sure: yea, and I'll swear I killed him. Why may not he rise, as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me. Therefore, sirra, [stabbing him.] with a new wound in your thigh,
come you along with me.

[Takes Hotspur on his back.

Re-enter Prince Henry and Prince John.

P. Hen. Come, brother John, full bravely hast thou slash'd
Thy madden sword.

As if he master'd there a double spirit
Of fear him, and of learning, instantly.
There did he pause; But let me tell the world,—
If he outlive the envy of this day,
England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his wantonness.

Hot. Cousin, I think, thou art enamoured
Upon his follies; never did I hear
Of any prince, so wild, at liberty:—
But, be he as he will, yet once ere night
I will embrace him with a soldier's arms,
That he shall shrink under my courtesy.—
Arm, arm, with speed:—And, fellows, soldiers,
friends.

Better consider what you have to do,
Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now.
O gentlemen, the time of life is short:
To spend that shortness basely, were too long.
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour,
And if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us!
Now for our conscience,—the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes on apace.

Hot. I think him, that he cuts me from my tale,
For I profess not talking; only this—
Let each man do his best: and here draw I
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal
In the adventure of this perilous day.
Now,—Experience!—Percy!—and set on.—
Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace:
For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall
A second time do such a courtesy.

[The trumpets sound. They embrace, and exeunt.]

SCENE III. — Plain near Shrewsbury.

Excursions, and parties fighting. Alarms to the battle. Then enter Douglas and Blunt, meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle thus Thou crimest me? What honour dost thou seek Upon my head?

Doug. Know then, my name is Douglas;
And I do haunt thee in the battle time,
Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true. [Thought]

Doug. The lord of Stafford dear to-day hath Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, king Harry,
The sword hath ended him: so it shall thee,
Un less thou yield thee as my prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot;
And thou shalt find a king that will revenge
Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight, and Blunt is slain.]

Enter Hotspur.

Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou fought at Holmedon
I never had triumph'd upon a Scot. [Thus,]

Doug. All's done, all's won; here breathless lies the king.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. Thus, Douglas? no, I know this face full
well:

A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt;

Semblably furrish'd like the king himself.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes;

A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear.

Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king?

Hot. The king hath many marching in his coats.

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats:
I'll murder all his warlike piece by piece,
Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up, and away;

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt.]

Other Alarms. Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Though I could 'scape shot free at London,
I fear the shot here: here's no scoring, but upon the pate.—Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt:—there's honour for you: Here's no vanity!
—I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too:
God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than my own bowels.—I have led my ragamuffins where they are peppered: there's but three of my hundred and fifty left alive; and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. What, stand'st thou idle here? lend me thy sword!

Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff
Under the loofs of wanton cushions,
Whose deaths are unreveng'd: Prythee, lend thy sword.

Fal. O Hal, I prythee, give me leave to breathe awhile.—Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy,
I have made him sure.

P. Hen. He is, indeed: and living to kill thee.
Lend me thy sword, I prythee.

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou get'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if
thou wilt.

P. Hen. Give it me: What, is it in the case?

Fal. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot; there's that will sack a city.

[The Prince draws out a bottle of sack.]

P. Hen. What, is't a time to jest and dally now!

[Throws it at him, and exit.]

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pursue him.
If he do come in my way, so; if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a caliban of me.
I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath:
Give me life: which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. — Another part of the Field.

Alarms. Excursions. Enter the King, Prince Henry, Prince John, and Westmoreland.

K. Hen. I pry thee,
Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much:—
Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.
P. Hen. I do beseech your majesty, make up
Less your retirement do amaze your friends.

K. Hen. I will do so.

My lord of Westmoreland, lend him to his tent.
West. Come, my lord, I will lead you to your tent. [help:]

P. Hen. Lead me, my lord! I do not need your
And heaven forbid, a shallow scratch should drive
The prince of Wales from such a field as this;
Whose state's notability I set on us,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches;

To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour, that may please the eye
Of fickle changelings, and poor discontents,
Which gaze, and rub the elbow, at the news
Of turpitude interlarded.
And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colours, to impudently stain;
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
Of pell-mell havock and confusion.

[soul]
P. Hen. In both our armies, there is many a
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
The prince of Wales doth join with all the world
In praise of Henry Percy: By my hopes,—
This present enterprise set off his head,—
I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, or more valiant-young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry:
And so, I hear, he doth account me too:
Yet this before my father's majesty,—
I am content, that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation;
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight.

K. Hen. And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture
these

Albeit, considerations infinite
Do make against it:—No, good Worcester, no,
We love our people well; even those we love,
That are misled upon your cousin's part:
And, will they take the offer of our grace,
Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man
Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his:
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What he will do:—But if he will not yield,
Rebuke and draw correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone;
We will not now be troubled with reply:
We offer fair, take it advantage.

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon.]
P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life:
The Douglas and the Hotspur both together
Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge:

For, on their answer, will we set on them:

And God defend us, as our cause is just!

[Exeunt King, Blunt, and Prince John.]
Hal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and beseege me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a colossus can do these that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Hal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well.

P. Hen. Why, thou owest God a death. [Exit.]

Hal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no matter: Honour prick me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on! how then!
Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No.
Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery then? No. What is honour? A word. What is that word, honour?
What is that honour? Air. A trim reckoning!—
Who hath it? He that died o'Wednesday. Duth he feel it? No. Duth he hear it? No. Is it inseparable then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it:—therefore I'll none of it:
Honour is a mere scutcheon, and so ends my catechism. [Exit.]

SCENE II. — The Rebel Camp.

Enter Worcester and Vernon.

Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, sir
Richard,

The liberal kind offer of the king.

Vern. 'Twere best, he did.

Wor.

Then are we all undone.

It is not possible, it cannot be.

The king should keep his word in loving us;

He will suspect us still, and find a time

To punish this offence in other faults:

Suspicion shall be all stuck full of eyes:

For treason is but trusted like the fox;

Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,

Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.

Look how we can, or sad, or merrily,

Interpretation will misquote our looks;

And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,

The better cherish'd, still the nearer death

My nephew's trespass may be well forgot.

It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of blood;

And an adopted name of privilege,—

A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen:

All his offences live upon my head,

And on his father's:—we did train him on;

And, his corruption being taken from us,

We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.

Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know,

In any case, the offer of the king.

Vern. Deliver what you will, I'll say, 'tis so.

Here comes your cousin.

Enter Hotspur and Douglas; and Officers and Soldiers behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd:—Deliver up

My lord of Westmoreland.—Uncle, what news?

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the lord of Westmoreland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly!

[Exit.]

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid!

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances,

Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus,—

By now forswearing that he is forsworn:

He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge

With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter Douglas.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen; to arms! for I have thrown

A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth.

And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did hear it;

Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before

the king.

And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O, 'would the quarrel lay upon our heads;

And that no man might draw short breath to-day,

But I, and Harry Blountmouth! Tell me, tell me,

How shew'd his tasking? I seem'd it in contempt!

Vern. No, by my soul; I never in my life,

Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly,

Unless a brother should a brother dare

To gentle exercise and proof of arms.

He gave you all the duties of a man;

'Trim'd' up your praises with a princely tongue;

Spoke your deservings like a chronicle;

Making you ever better than his praise,

But still disparaging praise, valued with you;

And, which became him like a prince indeed,

He made a blushing oval of himself;

And chid his truant youth with such a grace,

Into his title, the which we find
Too undirect for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king?
Hot. Not so, sir Walter; we'll withdraw awhile.

Go to the king; and let there be impawn'd
Some surely for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall mine uncle
Bring him our purposes; and so farewell.

Blunt. I would, you would accept of grace and love.

Hot. And, may be, so we shall.

Blunt. Pray heaven, you do!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—York. A Room in the Archbishop's House.

Enter the Archbishop of York, and a Gentleman.

Arch. Hie, good sir Michael; bear this sealed brief.

With winnowed haste, to the lord marshal;
This to my cousin Scrop; and all the rest
To whom they are directed: if you knew How much they do import, you would make Genl. My good lord, [haste.]
I guess their tenor.

Arch. Like enough, you do.

To-morrow, good sir Michael, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch: For, sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to understand,
The king, with mighty and quick-raised power,
Meets with lord Hurry; and I fear, sir Michael,—
What with the sickness of Northumberland,
(Whose power was in the first proportion,)
And what with Owen Glendower's absence, thence.

(Who with them was a rated sinew too,
And comes not in, o'er-ruled by prophecies.)—
I fear, the power of Percy is too weak
To wage an instant trial with the king.

Genl. Why, good my lord, you need not fear:
there's Douglas,

And Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer's not there.

Genl. But there is Morike, Vernon, lord
Harry Percy;

And there's my lord of Worcester; and a head
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is; but yet the king hath drawn

The special head of all the land together:—

The prince of Wales, lord John of Lancaster,

The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt;

And many more our rivals, and dear men

Of estimation and command in arms. [oppos'd.]

Genl. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear;

And, to prevent the worst, sir Michael, speed:

For, if lord Percy thrive not, ere the king

Damns his power, he means to visit us,—

For he hath heard of our confederacy,—

And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against him;

Therefore, make haste: I must go write again

To other friends; and so farewell, sir Michael.

[Exeunt, severally.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The King's Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter King Henry, Prince Henry, Prince John of Lancaster, Sir Walter Blunt, and Sir John Falstaff.

K. Hen. How bloody the sun beems to peer
Above your dusky hill! the day looks pale
At his distemperature.

P. Hen. The southern wind

Doth play the trumpet to his purposes;

And, by his hollow whistling in the leaves,

Foretells a tempest, and a blustering day.

K. Hen. Then with the losers let it sympathize

For nothing can seem foul to those that win.—

Trumpet. Enter Worcester and Vernon.

How now, my lord of Worcester! 'tis not well,

That you and I should meet upon such terms

As now we meet: You have deceiv'd our trust;

And made us doff our easy robes of peace,

To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel:

That is not well, my lord, this is not well

What say you to't? will you again unknot

This churlish knot of all-abhorred war?

And move in that obedient orb again,

Where you did give a fair and natural light;

And be no more an exhal'd meteor,

A prodigy of fear, and a portent

Of bruched mischief to the unborn times?

Wor. Hear me, my liege:

For mine own part, I could be well content

To entertain the lag-end of my life

With quiet hours; for, I do protest,

I have not sought the day of this dislike. [then?]

K. Hen. You have not sought it! how comes it?

Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

P. Hen. Peace, chewet, peace.

Wor. It pleas'd your majesty to turn your looks

Of favour, from myself, and all our house;

And yet I must remember you, my lord,

We were the first and dearest of your friends.

For you, my staff of office did I break

In Richard's time; and parted day and night

To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,

When yet you were in place and in account

Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.

It was myself, my brother, and his son,

That brought you home and boldly did outdare

The dangers of the time; You swore to us,—

And you did swear that oath at Doncaster;—

That you did nothing purpose against the state;

Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n right,

The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster:

To this we swore our aid. But, in short space,

It rain'd down fortune showering on your head;

And such a flood of greatness fell on you,—

What with our help; what with the absent king—

What with the injuries of a wanton time;

The seeming sunderances that you had borne;

And the contrarious winds, that held the king

So long in his unlucky Irish wars,

That all in England did repute him dead,—

And, from this swarm of fair advantages,

You took occasion to be quickly wou'd

To gripe the general away into your band:

Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster;

And, being fed by us, you us'd us so

As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird,

Useth the sparrow: did oppress our nest;

Grew by our feeling to so great a bulk,

That even our love durst not come near your sight

For fear of swallowing, but with nimble wing

We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly

Out of your sight, and raise this present head:

Whereby we stand opposed by such means

As you yourself have forc'd against yourself;

By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,

And violation of all faith and truth

Sworn to us in your younger enterprize. [laid.]

K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articaof Westmoreland. I cry you mercy; I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith, sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there; and you too; but my powers are there already: The king, I can tell you, looks for us all; we must away all night.

Fal. Tut, never fear me; I am as vigilant, as a cat to steal cream.

P. Hen. I think, to steal cream indeed: for thy theft hath already made thee better. But tell me, Jack; Whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to tuss: food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit, as well as hester: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, — I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, — I am sure, they never learned that of me.

P. Hen. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs, bare. But, sirrah, make haste: Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the king encamped?
West. He is, sir John; I fear, we shall stay too long.

Fal. Well. [Exeunt.]
To the latter end of a fry, and the beginning of a
Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Douglas, and Vernon.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd; stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well;
You speak it out of fear, and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life,
(And I dare well maintain it with my life),

If well-respected honour bid me on,

I hold as little counsel with weak fear,

As you, my lord, or any Scot that lives:—

Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle,

Which of us fears.

Doug. Yes, or to-night.

Ver. Content.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much, being men of such great leading,

That you foresee not what impediments

Drag back our expedition: Certain horse

Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up:

Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day:

And now their pride and mettle is asleep,

Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,

That not a horse is half the half himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy

In general, journey-bated, and brought low;

The better part of ours is full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours:

For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

[The trumpet sounds a parley.]

Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the
If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect. [king,

Hot. Welcome, sir Walter Blunt; And 'would
You were of our determination! [To God.]

Some of us love you well: and even these some

Envy your great deserving, and good name;

Because you are not of our quality,

But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend, but a ill I should stand

So long as, out of limit, and true rule,

You stand against anointed majesty! [To o.]

But, to my charge.—The king hath sent to know

The nature of your griefs; and whereupon

You conjure from the breast of civil peace

Such bold hostility, teaching his dutious land

Audacious cruelty: If that the king

Have any way your good deserts forgot,—

Which he confesseth to be manifold,—

He bids you name your griefs; and, with all

speed,

You shall have your desires, with interest;

And pardon absolute for yourself, and these,

Herein misused by your suggestion.

Hot. The king is kind; and, well we know, the

king

Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.

My father, and my uncle, and myself,

Did give him that same royalty he wears:

And,—when he was not a x and twenty a'ring,

Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low,

A poor unmindeed outliew seeking home,—

My father gave him welcome to the shore;

And,—when he heard him swear and vow to God,

He came but to be duke of Lancaster,

To sue his livery, and beg his peace:

With tears of innocency, and terms of zeal,—

My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd,

Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.

Now, when the lords, and barons of the realm,

Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,

The more and less came in with cap and knee;

Met him in boroughs, cities, villages;

Attended him on bridges, stool in lanes.

Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths

Gave him their heirs: as pages follow'd him

Even at the heels in golden multitudes.

He presently,—as greatness knows itself,—

Steps me a little higher than his vow

Made to my father, while his blood was poor,

Upon the naked shore at Ravenspur;

And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform

Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees,

That lie too heavy on the commonwealth:

Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep

Over his country's wrongs; and, by this face

This seeming brow of justice, did he win

The hearts of all that he did nudge for.

Proceeded further; cut me off the heads

Of all the favourites, that the absent king

In deputation left behind him here.

When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then, to the point —

In short time after, he depos'd the king;

Soon after that, depos'd his life;

And, in the neck of that, tak'd the whole state;

To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman March

(Who is, if every owner were well plac'd,

Indeed his king,) to be incas'd in Wales,

There without ransom to lie forfeited:

Disgrac'd me in my happy victories;

Sought to entrap me by intelligence;

Rated my uncle from the council-board;

In rage dismiss'd my father from the court,

Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong:

And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out

This head of safety; and, withal, to pry

By some, that know not why he is away,
That wisdom, loyalty, and more dislike
Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence;
And think, how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearful faction,
And breed a kind of question in our cause:
For, well you know, we of the offering sale
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement;
And stop all sight-holes, every loop, from whence
The eye of reason may pry in upon us:
This absence of your father's draws a curtain,
That shows the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.
I, rather, of his absence make this use:—
It lends a lustre, and more great opinion,
A hurst dare to our great enterprise.
Than if the earl were here: for men must think,
If we, without his help, can make a head
To push against the kingdom: with his help
We shall overturn it topsey-turvy down.—
Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.

Dow. As heart can think: there is not such a word
Spoke of in Scotland, as this term of fear.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hot. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.
Ver. Pray God, my news be worth a welcome,
lord.

The earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,
Is marching hitherwards; with him, prince John.
Hot. No harm: what more?

Ver. And further, I have learn'd,—
The king himself in person is set forth,
Or hitherwards intended speedily.
With strong and mighty preparation.

[son.]
Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his
The humble-kneed and-cap prince of Wales,
And his counsels, that shall'd the world assuage,
And laid it pass?

Ver. All furnish'd, all in arms,
All plumed like ostriches, that wing the wind;
Bated like eagles having lately bath'd;
Glittering in golden coats, like images;
As full of spirit as the month of May,
And gorgeous as the sun at Midsummer;
Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.
I saw young Harry,—with his beaver on,
His cunies on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,—
—come from the ground like feather'd Mercury,
And vaulted with such ease into his seat,
As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship.

Hot. No more, no more; worse than the sun in March,

This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come;
They come like sacrifices in their trim,
And to the fire-ey'd god of smoky war,
All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them:
The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit,
Up to the ears in blood. I saw on fire,
To hear the rich reprisal is no gain,
And yet not ours:—Come, let us take my horse,
Who is to bear us, like a thunderbolt,
Against the bosom of the prince of Wales:
Hurry to hurry still, hot horse to horse,
Meet, and we'll part, till one drop down a curse.—
O, that Glendower were come!

Ver. There is more news:
I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along.
He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.

Dow. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound

Hot. What may the king's whole little reach
Ver. To thirty thousand.

[unto I]
Hot. Forty let it be;
My father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of us may serve as great a day.
Come, let us make a muster speedily:
Downsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Dow. Talk not of dying; I am out of fear
Of death, or death's hand, for this one half year.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A publick Road near Coventry.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry: fill me a bottle of sack: our soldiers shall march through: we'll to Sutton-Coldfield to-morrow.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.

Fal. And if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coynage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet us at the town's end.

Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit.]

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a souldier garnet. I have misused the king's proceedings. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds.
I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons: inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the banns; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver, worse than a struck fowl, or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such tuns and bottles, with hearts in their bellies no larger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores: and such as, indeed, were never soldiers; but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tap-sters, and outiers trade-fallen; the caskers of a calm world, and a lump peace; ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old faced ancient;
and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think, that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prolegals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating druff and husks. A mud fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had unlodged all the gibbets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scare crows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat:—Nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on: far, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison. There's but a shirt and a half in all my company; and the half-shirt is two napkins, tacked together, and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Alban's, or the red-nose inn-keeper of Daintry: But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter Prince Henry and Westmoreland.

P. Hen. How now, blown Jack? how now quilt?

Fal. What, Hal? How now, mad was? what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire!—My good uncle

Fal. Yes: if he said my ring was copper.
P. Hen. I say, 'tis copper: Darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare: but, as thou art prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

P. Hen. And why not, as the lion?

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion: Dost thou think, I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? I say, as I do. I pray God, my girl's break!

P. Hen. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine: it is all filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed rascal, if there were any thing in thy pocket but tavern reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor pennyworth of sugar-candy, to make thee loaz-winded; if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain. And yet you will stand to it; you will not pocket up wrong: Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Hast thou hear, Hal? thou knowest, in the state of innocency, Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villany? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man; and therefore more frailty.—You confess, then, you picked my pocket!

P. Hen. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee: Go, make ready breakfast: love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me treatable to any honest reason: thou seest, I am pacified.—Still!—Nay, prythee, be gone. [Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: For the robbery, lad,—How is that answered?

P. Hen. O, my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee:—The money is paid back again.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying back again, 'tis a double labour.

P. Hen. I am good friends with my father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer, the first thing thou doest, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord.

P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would, it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O, for a fine thief, of the age of two and twenty, or thereabouts! I am lamentably unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels, they offend none but the virtuous: I laud them, I praise them.

P. Hen. Bardolph!—

Bard. My lord.

P. Hen. Go bear this letter to lord John of Lancaster.

My brother John; this to my lord of Westmoreland.—

Go, Puns, to horse, to horse; for thou, and I, have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.—Jack,

Meet me to-morrow i'th Temple-hall:

At two o'clock i'th afternoon:

There shalt thou know thy charge; and there receive

Money, and order for their furniture.

The land is burning: Percy stands on high;

And either they, or we, must lower lie.

[Exeunt Prince, Puns, and Bardolph.]

Fal. Rare words! brave words!—Hostess, my breakfast; come.

O, I could wish this tavern were my drum.

[Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, and Douglas.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: If speaking truth,

In this flue age, were not thought flattery, Such attribution should the Douglas have, As not a soldier of this season's stamp

Should go so general current through the world. By heaven, I cannot flatter: I defy

The tongues of soothers; but a braver place In my heart's love, hath no man than yourself: Nay, task me to the world; approve me, lord.

Doug. Thou art the king of honour:

No man so potent breathes upon the ground, But I will beard him.

Hot.

Do so, and 'tis well:—

Enter a Messenger, with letters.

What letters hast thou there?—I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father,—

Hot. Letters from him! why comes he not himself? [Sick.]

Mess. He cannot come, my lord; he's grievous

Hot. Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick, In such a justling time? Who leads his power?

Under whose government come they along?

Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.

Wor. I prythee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth;

And at the time of my departure thence.

He was much fear'd by his physicians. [Whole.]

Wor. I would, the state of time had first been

Ere he by sickness had been visited;

His health was never better worth than now

Hot. Sick now! drup now! this sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprize:

'Tis outching hither, even to our camp—

He writes me here,—that inward sickness—

And that his friends by deputation could not

So soon be dr. wn; nor did he think it meet,

To lay so dangerous and so dear a trust

On any soul remov'd, but on his own.

Yet doth he give us bold advertisement,—

That with our small conjunction, we should on,

To see how fortune is dispos'd to us;

For, as he writes, there is no quailing now;

Because the king is certainly possess'd

Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Wor. Your father's sickness is a main to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lupp'd off:—

And yet, in faith, 'tis not: his present want

Seems more than we should find it:—Were it good,

To set the exact wealth of all our states

All at one cast; to set so rich a main

On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?

It were not good: for therein should we read

The very bottom and the soul of hope;

The very list, the very utmost bound

Of all our fortunes.

Doug. 'Faith, and so we should;

Where now remains a sweet reversal.

We may boldly spend upon the hope of what

Is to come in:

A comfort of retirement lives in this.

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,

If that the devil and mischance look big

Upon the maidenhead of our affairs. [Here.]

Wor. But yet, I would your father had been

The quality and hair of our attempt

Brooks no divorce: it will be thought

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why there it is:—come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given, as a gentleman need to be; virtuously enough: swore little; died, not above seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house, not above once in a quarter—of an hour; paid money that I borrowed, three or four times; lived well, and in good compass: and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass; out of all reasonable compass, sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life: Thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the poop.—but 'tis in the nose of thee; thou art the knight of the burning lamp.

Bard. Why, sir John, my face does you no harm.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's head, or a memento mori; I never see thy face, but I think upon hell-fire, and lives that lived in purple: for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to vir us, I would swear by thy face; my oath should be, By this fire; but thou art altogether given over, and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou ran'st up Gads-hill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus, or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O, thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire-light! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night between tavern and tavern; but the cock that thou hast drunk me, would have bought me lights as good cheap, at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that misadventure of yours with fire, any time this two and thirty years: Heaven reward me for it!

Bard. 'Sblood, I would my face were in your belly!

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart burned.

Enter Hostess.

How now, dame Partlet the hen! have you inquired yet, who pecked my pocket?

Host. Why, sir John! what do you think, sir John! do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant; the title of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Fal. You lie, hostess; Bardolph was shaved, and lost many a hair; and I'll be sworn, my pocket was pecked: Go to, you are a woman, go.

Host. Wilt thou? I defy thee: I was never called so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough.

Host. No, sir John; you do not know me, sir John: I know you, sir John; you owe me money, sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fal. Dowles, filthy dowles: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters of them.

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, sir John, for your diet, and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it; let him pay.

Host. He! alas, he is poor; he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? look upon his face: What call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks; I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a yunker of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn, but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's, worth forty mark.

Host. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper.

Fal. How! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-rap; and, if he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

Enter Prince Henry and Poina, marching. Falstaff meets the Prince, playing on his truncheon, like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad? is the wind in that door, 'faith! must we all march?

Bard. Yes, two and two. Newgate-fashion.

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well, he is an honest man.

Host. Good, my lord, hear me.

Fal. Prythee, let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house, they pick pockets.

P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pounds a-piece, and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

P. Hen. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Fal. So I told him, my lord: and I said, I heard your grace say so: And my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is; and said he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What! he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee, than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing! why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am no thing to thank God on. I would thou should'st know it: I am an honest man's wife: and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to any otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave thou!

Fal. What beast? I why an otter.

P. Hen. An otter, sir John! why an otter?

Fal. Why! she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so; thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal? a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, sir John, you said so.

Soon kin led, and soon burn'd: carled his state;
 Mingled his royalty with capering fools;
 Had his great name profaned with their scorn:
 And gave his countenance against his name,
 To laugh at gibbous boys, and stand the push
 Of every headless ruin comparative;
 Grew a companion to the common streets,
 Enfeoff'd himself to popularity;
 That being daily swallow'd by men's eyes,
 They surfeited with honey; and began
 To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little More than a little is by much too much.
 So, when he had occasion to be seen,
 He was but as the cuckoo in June,
 Heard, not regarded: seen, but with such eyes,
 As, sick and blunted with community,
 Afford no extraordinary gaze,
 Such as is lent on son-like majesty
 When it shines seldom in admiring eyes;
 But rather drow'd, and hung their eye-lids
 down,
 Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect
 As cloudy men use to their adversaries;
 Being with his presence glutted, gorge'd, and full.
 And in that very line, Harry, stand'st thou:
 For thou hast lost thy princely privilege,
 With vile participation; not an eye
 But is a-weary of thy common sight,
 Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more;
 Which now doth that I would not have it do,
 Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious
 lord,

Be more myself.

K. Hen. For all the world,
 As thou art to this hour, was Richard then
 When I from France set foot at Ravensburg;
 And even as I was then, is Percy now.
 Now by my sceptre, and my soul to boot,
 He hath more worthy interest to the state,
 Than thou, the shadow of succession:
 For, of no right, nor colour like to right,
 He doth fill fields with harness in the realm:
 Turns head against the lion's armed jaws;
 And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
 Leads ancient lords and revered bishops on,
 To bloody battles, and to bruising arms.
 What never-dying honour hath he got Against renowned Douglas: whose high deeds,
 Whose hot incursions, and great name in arms,
 Holds from all soldiers chief majority.
 And military title capital.

Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ!
 Thrice hath this Hotspur Mars in swathing clothes
 This infant warrior in his enterprizes
 Discomfited great Douglas: 'a'en him once,
 Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
 To fill the mouth of deep defiance up,
 And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
 And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,

(mer,
 The archbishop's grace of York, Douglas, Morticardate against us, and are up.
 But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
 Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
 Which art my nearst and dearest enemy?
 'Thou art like enough,—through vassal fear,
 Base inclination, and the start of spleen,—
 To fight against me under Percy's pay.
 To dog his heels, and court'sy at his frowns,
 To show how much degenerate thou art.

P. Hen. Do not think so, you shall not find it so:
 And God forgive them, that have so much sway'd

Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!
 I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
 And, in the closing of some glorious day,
 Be bold to tell you, that I am your son:
 When I will wear a garment all of blood,
 And stain my favours in a bloody mask,
 Which, wash'd away, shall accuse my shame with
 And that shall be the day, whene'er it lights, 't.
 That this same child of honour and renown,
 This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight
 And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet;
 For every honour sitting on his helm,
 'Would they were multitudes; and on my head
 My shame redoubled! for the time will come,
 That I shall make this northern youth exchange
 His glorious deeds for my indignities.
 Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
 To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;
 And I will call him to so strict account,
 That he shall render every glory up,
 Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
 Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
 This, in the name of God, I promise here:
 The which if he be pleas'd I shall perform,
 I do beseech your majesty, may save
 The long-grown wounds of my intemperance:
 If not, the end of life cancels all tuncs;
 And I will die a hundred thousand deaths,
 Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.

K. Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in this:—
 Thou shalt have charge, and sovereign trust, herein.

Enter Blunt.

How now, good Blunt! thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath the business that I come to speak
 Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,—
 That Douglas, and the English rebels met,
 The eleventh of this month, at Shrewsbury:
 A mighty and a fearful head they are,
 If promises be kept on every hand,
 As ever offer'd foul play in a state.

K. Hen. The earl of Westmoreland set forth today;
 With him my son, lord John of Lancaster;
 For this advertisement is five days old:—
 On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set
 Forward; on Thursday, we ourselves will march:
 Our meeting is Bridenorth: and, Harry, you Shall march through Gloucestershire; by which account,

Our business valued, some twelve days hence
 Our general forces at Bridenorth shall meet.
 Our hands are full of business: let's away;
 Advantage feeds him fat, while men delay.

(Exeunt.)

SCENE III.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Bear's
 Head Tavern.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not hate? do I not dwindle? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown: I am wither'd like an old apple, John. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a pepper-corn, a brewer's horse; the inside of a church! Company, villanous company, hath been the spoil of me.

I am too perfect in; and, but for shame,
In such a varley would I answer thee.
(Lady M. speaks.)

I unders and thy kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disputation:
But I will never be a truant, love,
'Till I have learn'd thy language: for thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly peun'd,
Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,
With ravishing division, to her lute.

Gwend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad.

(Lady M. speaks again.)

Mort. O, I am ignorance itself in this.

Gwend. She bids you

Upon the wanton rushes lay you down,
And rest your gentle head upon her lap,
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your eye-lids crown the god of sleep;
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness;
Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep,
As as the difference betwixt day and night.

The hour before the heavenly-harmonies'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east. (Sings.)

Mort. With all my heart I'll sit, and hear her
By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Gwend. Do so:

And those musicians that shall play to you,
Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence;
Yet straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.

Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down: (thy lap.)

Come, quick, quick; that I may lay my head in Lady P. Go, ye giddy gooses.

Gwendolower speaks some Welsh words, and then the Music plays.

Hot. Now I perceive, the devil understands
And 'tis no marvel, he's so humorous. (Welsh;)
By'r lady, he's a good musician.

Lady P. Then should you be nothing but musical;
for you are altogether governed by humours.
Lie still, ye think, and hear the lady sing in Welsh.

Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.

Lady P. Would't thou have thy head broken?

Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still.

Hot. Neither; 'tis a woman's fault.

Lady P. Now God help thee!

Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.

Lady P. What's that?

Hot. Peace! she sings.

A Welsh SONG, sung by Lady M.

Hot. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hot. Not yours, in good sooth! 'Heart, you s wear like a count-maker's wife! Not you, in good sooth; and, As true as I live; and, As God shall mend me; and, As sure as day:
And giv't such surecoat surety for thy oaths,
As if thou never walk'dst further than Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a lady, as thou art,
A good mouth-filling oath; and leave, in sooth,
And such protest of pepper-gingerbread,
To velvet-guards, and Sunday-citizens.

Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be red-breast teacher. As the indentures be drawn, I'll sway within these two hours; and so come in when ye will. (Exit.)

Gwend. Come, come, lord Mortimer; you are as
As hot lord Percy is on fire to go. (slow.)

By this our book's drawn: we'll but seal, and
To horse immediately. (then)
Mort. With all my heart. (Exit.)

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Prince of Wales, and Lords.

K. Hen. Lords, give us leave; the Prince of Wales and I

Must have some conference; But be near at

For we shall presently have need of you—

(Exit.) Lords.

I know not whether God will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done,
That, in his secret doom, out of my blood
He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me;
But thou dost, in thy passages of life,
Make me believe.—that thou art only mark'd
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven,
To punish my mis-treadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,

Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match'd withal, and grafted to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hulk their level with thy princely heart?

P. Hen. So please your majesty, I would, I could

Quit all offences with as clear excuse,
As well as, I am doubtful, I can purge
Myself of many I am charg'd withal:
Yet such extenuation let me beg;
As, in reproof of many tales devis'd,—

Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,—
By smiling pick-thanks and base news-mongers,
I may, for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wander'd and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission.

K. Hen. God pardon thee!—yet let me wonder, Harry,

At thy affection, which do hold a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost;
Which by thy younger brother is supplied;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court and princes of my blood;
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd; and the soul of every man
Prophetically does forethink thy fall.

Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar company;
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,

Had still kept loyal to possession;
And left me in reputable banishment,
A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.
By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But, like a comet, I was wonder'd at;

That men would tell their children, This is he;
Others would say,—Where's that Which is Dolingrate?
And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,
And dress'd myself in such humility,

That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
Even in the presence of the crowned king.
Thus did I keep my person fresh, and new;
My presence, like a robe put on new,

Ne'er seen, but wonder'd at; and so my state,
Seldom, but sumptuous, showed like a feast;
And won, by rareness, such solemnity
The skipping king, he ambled up and down
With shallow jesters, and rash tapia wags,

Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too!

How 'scape he agrees, in the devil's name?

Glend. Come, here's the map; shall we divide our right,

According to our threefold order ta'en?

Mort. 'Tis archdeacon hath divided it

Into three lumps, very equally:

England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,

By south and east, a to my part assigned;

All westward, Wales beyond the Severn shore,

And all the fertile land within that bound,

To Owen Glendower:—and, dear coz, to you

The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.

And our indentures tripartite are drawn:

Which being sealed interchangeably,

(A business that this night may execute,)

To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I,

And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth,

To meet your father, and the Scottish power,

As is appointed us at Shrewsbury.

My father Glendower is not ready yet,

Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days:—

Within that space, [to Glend.] you may have drawn together [men.]

Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentle-

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you, lords.

And in my coaches shall your ladies come:

From whom you now must steal, and take no leave;

For there will be a world of water shed,

Upon the parting of your wives and you. [here,

Hot. Methinks my money, worth from Burton

In quantity equals but one of yours:

See how this river comes me cranking in,

And cuts me, from the best of all my land,

A huge half-moon, a monstrous castle out.

I'll have the current in this place damm'd up;

And here the smug and silver Trent shall run,

In a new channel, fair and evenly:

It shall not wind with such a deep indent,

To rob me of so rich a bottom here. [doth.

Glend. Not woud I it shall, it must; you see, it

Mort. Yes, [up

But mark how he bears his course, and runs me

With like advantage on the other side;

Girding the opposed continent as much,

As on the other side it takes from you. [here,

Wor. Yes, but a little charge will trench him

And on the north side win this cape of land;

And then he runs straight and even.

Hot. I'll have it so; a little charge will do it.

Glend. I will not have it alter'd.

Hot. Will not you?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hot. Who shall say me nay?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hot. Let me not understand you then;

Speak it in Welsh. [you:]

Glend. I can speak English, lord, as well as

For I was train'd up in the English court;

Where, being but young, I fram'd to the harp

Many an English ditty, lovely well,

And gave the tongue a helpful ornament;

A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry, and I'm glad of't with all my heart:

I had rather be a kitten and cry—mew,

Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers:

I had rather hear a brazen cuckold turn'd,

Or a dry wheel grate on an axle-tree;

And that would set my teeth nothing on edge.

Nothing so much as mimicry poetry;

'Tis like the fore'd gait of a shuffling nag.

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

Hot. I do not care: I'll give thrice so much

To my well-deserving friend: [loud

But, in the way of bargain, mark ye me,

I'll cavi on the north part of a hour.

Are the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?

Glend. The moon shines fair, you may away by

I'll haste the writer, and, withal, [sings:]

Break with your wives of your departure hence:

I am afraid, my daughter will run mad,

So much she dotes on her Mortimer. [Exit.

Mort. Fye, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!

Hot. I cannot choose; sometimes he angers me,

With telling me of the midwarp and the ant,

Of the dreamer Merlin, and his prophecies;

And of a dragon and a finess fish,

A clip-wing'd griffin, and a moulted raven,

A couching lion, and a ramping cat,

And such a deal of skimbale skumble stuff

As puts me from my faith. I tell you what,—

He held me, but last night, at least nine hours,

In reckoning up the several devils' names,

That were his hockies: I cried, humph—and well,

—go to,—

But mark'd him not a word. O, he's as tedious

As is a tired horse, a railing wife;

Worse than a smoky house:—I had rather live

With cheese and garlic, in a windmill, far,

Than feed on cates, and have him talk to me,

In any summer-house in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman;

Exceedingly well read, and peevish

In strange conceits: valiant as a lion,

And wondrous affable; and as beautiful

As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin?

He holds your temper in a high respect,

And curbs himself even of his natural scope,

When you do cross his humour: 'faith, he does;

I warrant you, that man is not alive,

Might so have tempted him as you have done,

Without the taste of danger and reproach;

But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

Wor. In faith, my lord, you are too wilful-blame;

And since your coming hither, have done enough

To put him quite beside his patience.

You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault;

Though sometimes it show greatness, courage,

blood.

(And that's the dearest grace it renders you.)

Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,

Defect of manners, want of government,

Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain:

'The least of which, haunting a nobleman,

Losses men's hearts; and leaves behind a stain

Upon the beauty of all parts besides,

Beguiling them of commendation. [speed:]

Hot. Well, I am school'd; good manners be your

Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter Glendower, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me,—

My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps; she will not part

with you,

She'll be a soldier too, she'll'll to the wars.

Mort. Good father, tell her,—that she, and my daughter, shall follow in your conduct speedily.

[Glendower speaks to his daughter in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. She's desperate here; a peevish self-will'd harlotry.

One no persuasion can do good upon.

[Lady M. speaks to Mortimer in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy looks: that pretty Welsh

Which thou poorest down from these swelling

beauteous,

P. Hen. And thou a natural coward, without iustinct.

Fal. I deny your major: if you will deny the sheriff, so: if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope, I shall as soon be strangled with a halter, as another.

P. Hen. Go, hide thee behind the arras;—the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face, and good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had: but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me.

P. Hen. Call in the sheriff.

Enter Sheriff and Carrier.

Now, master sheriff; what's your will with me?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry hath follow'd certain men into this house.

P. Hen. What men? [lord:]

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter.

P. Hen. The man, I do assure you, is not here: For I myself at this time have employ'd him.

And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee, That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time, Send him to answer thee, or any man, For any thing he shall be charged withal: And so let me entreat you leave the house.

Sher. I will, my lord: There are two gentlemen Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

P. Hen. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men,

He shall be answerable: and so, farewell.

Sher. Good night, my noble lord.

P. Hen. I think it is good morrow: Is it not?

Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock.

[Exit Sheriff and Carrier.]

P. Hen. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth.

Poins. Falestaff!—fast asleep behind the arras, and snoring like a horse.

P. Hen. Hark, how hard he fetches breath: Search his pockets. [Poins searches.] What hast thou found?

Poins. Nothing but papers, my lord.

P. Hen. Let's see what they be: read them.

Poins. Item, A capon, 2s. 2d.

Item, Sauce, 4d.

Item, Sack, two gallons, 6s. 8d.

Item, Auchovies, and sack after supper, 2s. 6d.

Item, Bread, a halfpenny

P. Hen. O monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack!—What there is else, keep close; we'll read it at more advantage: there let him sleep till day. I'll to the court in the morning: we must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot; and, I know, his death will be a march of twelve-score. The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning; and so good morrow, Poins.

Poins. Good morrow, good my lord. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Bangor. A Room in the Archdeacon's House.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Mortimer, and Glendower.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure, And our inductions full of prosperous hope.

Hot. Lord Mortimer,—and cousin Glendower,—Will you sit down?—
And, uncle Worcester:—A plague upon it! I have forgot the map.

Glend. No, here it is.
Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur: For by that name as oft as Lancaster Doth speak of you, his cheek looks pale, and, with A rising sigh, he wisheth you in heaven.

Hot. And you in hell, as often as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him: at my nativity, The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes, Of burning comets; and, at my birth, The frame and huge foundation of the earth Shak'd like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done At the same season, if your mother's cat had But kitten'd, though yourself had ne'er been born.

Glend. I say, the earth did shake when I was born.

Hot. And I say, the earth was not of my mind, If you suppose, as fearing you it shook.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.

Hot. O then the earth shook to see the heavens And not in fear of your nativity.

Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth In strange eruptions: oft the teeming earth Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd By the imprisoning of unruly wind [ing] Within her womb; which, for enlargement striv- Shakes the old beldame earth, and topples down Sleeples, and moss-grown towers. At your birth, Our grandam earth, having this distemperance, In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin, of many men I do not hear these crossings. Give me leave To tell you once again,—that at my birth, The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes: The gods ran from the mountains, and the herds Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields. These signs have mark'd me extraordinary; And all the courses of my life do show, I am not in the roll of common men.

Where is he living,—clipp'd in with the sea That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales,— Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?

And bring him out, that is but woman's son, Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,

And hold me pace in deep experiments.

Hot. I think, there is no man speaks better Welsh:—

I will to dinner. [mad.]

Mort. Peace, cousin Percy: you will make him

Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Hot. Why, so can I; or so can any man: But will they come, when you do call for them?

Glend. Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command the devil. [mad]

Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil.

By telling truth; Tell truth, and shame the devil.

If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither, And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.

O, while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil.

Mort. Come, come.

No more of this unprofitable chat. [made head]

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke Against my power: thrice from the banks of Wye, And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him, Bootless home, and weather-bewitched back.

nail-heads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundred.

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true: it is like, we shall have good trading that way.—But, tell me, that art thou not horribly afraid? thou being heir apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it?

P. Hen. Not a whit, i'faith; I lack some of thy unstint.

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid to-morrow, when thou comest to thy father: if thou live me, precise an answer.

P. Hen. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shalt I content?—This chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

P. Hen. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bauble of straw.

Fal. Well, as the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved.—Give me a cup of sack, to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept: for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in king Cambray's vein.

P. Hen. Well, here is my loc. (hilarity.)

Fal. And here is my speech:—Stand aside, no host.

Fal. This is excellent sport, i'faith.

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain.

Host. O the father, how he holds his countenance!

Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my trustful queen,

For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Host. O rare! he doth it as like one of these harlequin players, as I ever see.

Fal. Peace, good put-put; peace, good tickle-brain.—Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the canonize, the more it is troubled on, the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly, a villainous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be son to me, here lies the point:—Why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed son of heaven prove a nicher, and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief, and take pursuance a question to be asked? There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast oft heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile; so doth the company thou keepest: for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears; not in pleasure, but in passion; not in words only, but in woes also:—And yet there is a virtuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

P. Hen. What manner of man, as it like your majesty?

Fal. A good portly man, i'faith, and a corpulent; of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by lody, inclining to threescore: and now, I remember me, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be lowly given, he deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the true may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

P. Hen. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

Fal. Depose me! if thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and manner, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker, or a poulter's hare.

P. Hen. Well, here I am set.

Fal. And here I stand.—Judge, my masters.

P. Hen. Now, Harry! whence come you?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

P. Hen. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false:—nay, I'll tickle ye for a young prince, i'faith.

P. Hen. Swearst thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace: there is a devil haunts thee, in the likeness of a fat old man: a tun of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that boiling-hatch of heatfulness, that swan of purple of droppings, that huge bombard of sack, that stuffed cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Mummingree ox with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey inquiry, that father ruffian, that vanity in years! Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning, but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villainy? wherein villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Fal. I would your grace would take me with you: Whom means your grace?

P. Hen. That villainous uncleanly misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Swan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know.

P. Hen. I know, thou dost.

Fal. But to say, I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old (the more the pity), his white hairs do witness it: but that he is (saving your reverence) a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know, is damned; if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord; banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poms: but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company; banish plump Jack, and banish all the world.

P. Hen. I do, I will. [A knock heard.]
[Enter Hostess, Francis, and Bardolph.]

Re-enter Bardolph, running.

Bard. O, my lord, my lord: the sheriff, with a most monstrous watch, is at the door.

Fal. Out, you rogue! play out the play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter Hostess, hastily.

Host. O Jesu, my lord, my lord!

Fal. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a tickleback: What's the matter?

Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door: they are come to search the house; Shall I let them in?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad, without seeming so.

and thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-ketch.

Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

P. Hen. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? Come, tell us your reason; What sayest thou to this?

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? No; were I at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! If reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I—

P. Hen. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin; this sanguine coward, this bed-prowser, this horse-back-breaker, this huge hill of flesh;—

Fal. Away, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried neat's-tongue, bull's perzie, you stock-fish,—O, for breath to utter what is like thee:—you tallow's yard, you slesh, you baw-cuse, you vile standing luck;—

P. Hen. Well, breathe a while, and then to it again: and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Poins. Mark, Jack.

P. Hen. We two saw you four set on four; you loathed them, and were masters of their wealth. —Mark now, how plain a tale shall put you down.—Then did we two set on you four: and, with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it; you, and can show it you here in the house:—and, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roused for mercy, and sell ran and feared, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done; and then say, it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack; What trick hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye, as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters: Was it for me, to kill the heir apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest, I am as valiant as Hercules: but beware instinct; the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter; I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself, and thee, during my life: I, for a valiant lion, and thou, for a true prince. But, by the Lord, lady, I am glad you have the money.—Hostess, clap to the doors; watch to night, pray to-morrow.—Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What, shall we be merry? I shall we have a play extempore!

P. Hen. Content;—and the argument shall be, the running away.

Fal. Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me.

Enter Hostess.

Host. My lord the prince,—

P. Hen. How now, my lady the hostess! what say'st thou to me?

Host. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door, would speak with you: he says, he comes from your father.

P. Hen. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother.

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed a midnight!—Shall I give him his answer?

P. Hen. Prythee, do, Jack.

Fal. Faith, and I'll send him pecking. [Exit.]

P. Hen. Now, sir; by'r lady, you fought fair;—so did you, Petr:—so did you, Barnhith: you are house too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince; no,—fye!

Bard. Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

P. Hen. Tell me now in earnest, How came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto. Why, he hacked it with his dagger: and said, he would swear truth out of England, but he would make you believe it was done in fact; and persuaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yes, and to tickle our noses with spear-grass, to make them bleed; and then to beslobber our garments with it, and to swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before, I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

P. Hen. O villain, thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blush'd extempore: Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ranst away; What instant hadst thou for it?

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

P. Hen. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses.

Bard. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, halter.

Re-enter Falstaff.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of bombast? How long is't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knees?

Fal. My own knee? when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist;—I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring: A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad: here was sir John. Broc from your father; you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the North, Percy; and he of Wales, that gave Ammunition the bastinado, and made Lucifer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh hook,—What, a plague, call you him?—

Poins. O, Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen, the same; and his son-in-law, Mortimer; and old Northumberland; and that sprightly Scot of Scots's, Douglas, that ran o'hurbuck up the hill perpendicular.

P. Hen. He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Fal. You have hit it.

P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Weik that rascal hath good metal in him: he will not run.

P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou then, to praise him so for running.

Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afust, he will not budge a foot.

P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mortlake, and a thousand blue-caps more: Worcester is stolen away to-night; thy father's herd is turned white with the news; you may buy land now as cheap as slinking mackerel.

P. Hen. Why then, 'tis like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy Poins. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye; what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? I come, what's the issue?

P. Hen. I am now of all humours, that have showed themselves humours, since the old days of goodman Adam, to the puling age of this present twelve o'clock at midnight. [Re-enter Francis, with wine.] What's o'clock, Francis?

Franc. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman!—His industry is—up-stairs, and down-stairs; his eloquence, the purloin of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the north: he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife,—For upon this quest life! I must work. O my sweet Harry, says she, how many hast thou killed to-day? Give my roan horse a drunch, says he, and answers, Some fourteen, an hour after: a trifle, a trifle. I prythee, call in Falstaff: I'll play Percy, and that damned brawn shall play daunce Mortimer his wife Rioo, says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter Falstaff, Gadshill, Bardolph, and Peto.

Poins. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! I marry, and anon!—Give me a cup of sack, boy.—Ere I lead this life long, I'll sell nether-stocks, and mend them, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards!—Give me a cup of sack, rogue.—Is there no virtue extant? [He drinks.]

P. Hen. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter? pitiful-hearted Titan, that melted at the sweet tale of the son! if thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You rogue, here's lime in this sack too: There's nothing but regency to be found in villainous man!—Ye a coward! is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it; a villainous coward!—Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then I am a shotten herring. There live not three good men unhung in England: and one of them is fat, and grows old; God help the while! a bad world, I say! I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or any thing: A plague of all cowards, I say still.

P. Hen. How now, woolpack! what matter you? Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You prince of Wales!

P. Hen. Why, you whoreson round man! what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that; and Poins there!

Poins. 'Zounds, ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward: but I would give a thousand pound, I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your back: Call you that, hacking of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. Give me a cup of sack:—I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

P. Hen. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunk'st last.

Fal. All's one for that. A plague of all cowards, still say I.

P. Hen. What's the matter?

[He drinks.]

Fal. What's the matter? there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this morning.

P. Hen. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four us.

P. Hen. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet; four through the hose; my buckler out through and through; my sword hacked like a hand-saw, ecce signum. I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not do. A plague of all cowards!—Let them speak: if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains, and the sons of darkness.

P. Hen. Speak, sure; how was it?

Gads. We four set upon some dozen,—

Fal. Sixteen, at least, my lord.

Gads. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Exhew Jew.

Gads. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us,—

Fal. And unbond the rest, and then come in the other.

P. Hen. What, fought ye with them all?

Fal. All! I know not what ye call, all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then I am no two-legged creature.

Poins. Pray God, you have not murdered some of them.

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for: I have peppered two of them: two, I am sure, I have paid; two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse.—Thou knowest my old ward,—here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me,—

P. Hen. What, four? thou said'st but two, even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus.

P. Hen. Seven? why, there were but four, even now.

Fal. In buckram.

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain else.

P. Hen. Prythee, let him alone; we shall have more anon.

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

P. Hen. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram, that I told thee of,—

P. Hen. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points being broken,—

Poins. Down fell their huses.

Fal. Began to give me ground: But I followed me close, came in foot and hand: and, with a thought, seven of the eleven I paid.

P. Hen. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two!

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves, in Kendal green, came at my back, and let drive at me;—for it was so dark, Hal, that thou could'st not see thy hand.

P. Hen. These lies are like the father that begets them; gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brained guts; thou knotty-pated

Prince Henry.—This olly rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth.
Peto.—Falstaff!—Fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

HENRY IV.—PART I., Act II., Scene IV.

I'll know your business, Harry, that I will.
I fear, my brother Mortimer doth stir
About his title; and hath sent for you.
To live his enterprise; But if you go—

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

Lady. Come, come, you paragon, answer me
Ihrectly to this question that I ask
In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry.
An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hot. Away

A way, you trifler!—Love I— I love thee not,
I care not for thee, Kate; this is no world,
To play with mummings, and to tilt with lips;
We must have bloody noses, and crack'd crowns,
And pass them current too.—Gods me, my horse!— (have with me!)

What say'st thou, Kate? what would'st thou
Lady. Do you not love me? do you not, indeed?
Well, do not then; for, since you love me not,
I will not love myself.—Do you not love me?
Nay, tell me, if you speak in jest, or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride?
And when I am o'horseback, I will swear
I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate;
I must not have you henceforth question me
Whether I go, nor reason whereabout:
Whither I must, I must; and, to conclude,
This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate.
I know you wise; but yet no further wise,
Than Harry Percy's wife: constant you are,
But yet a woman; and for secrecy,
No lady closer; for I well believe,
Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know;
And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate!

Lady. How! so far?

Hot. Not an inch further. But hark you, Kate!
Whither I go, thither shall you go too;
To-day will I set forth to-morrow you.—
Will this content you, Kate?

Lady.

It must, of force.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Boar's
Head Tavern.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins.

P. Hen. Ned, prythee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hast been, Hal?

P. Hen. With three or four loggerheads, amongst three or four score loggerheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leach of drawers; and can call them all by their Christian names, as—Toms, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy; and tell me flatteringly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff; but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy.—by the Lord, so they call me; and when I am king of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. They call—drinking deep, dying a martyr; and when you breathe in your water-lung, they cry—hem! and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any unker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned,—to swear on which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapp'd even now into my hand by an under-sinker; one that never spake but English in his life, then—Eight shillings and sixpence, and You are welcome; with this shrill salutation.—Anon, anon, sir! Scare a jowl of bastard

in the Half-moon, or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaff come, I prythee, do thou s'and in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer, to what end he gave me the sugar; and do thou never leave calling—Francis, that his tale to me may be nothing but—anon. Step aside, and I'll show thee a precedent.

Poins. Francis!

P. Hen. Thou art perfect.

Poins. Francis!

[Exit Poins.]

Enter Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.—Look down into the pomegranate, Ralph

P. Hen. Come hither, Francis!

Fran. My lord.

P. Hen. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth, five year, and as much as I—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Five years! by'rady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy u-denture, and to show it a fair pair of heels, and run from it?

Fran. O lord, sir! I'll be sworn upon all the banks in England, I could find in my heart—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see,—About Macmelmas next. I shall be—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, sir.—Pry you, stay a little, my

lord.

P. Hen. Nay, but hark you Francis:—For the sugar thou gavest me,—'twas a pennyworth, wasn't
it?

Fran. O lord, sir! I would it had been two.

P. Hen. I will give thee for it a thousand pounds:
ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon.

P. Hen. Anon, Francis? No, Francis: but tomorrow, Francis: or, Francis, on Thursday; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis,—

Fran. My lord,—

P. Hen. Wilt thou rob this leathern jerkin, crystal button, next-pated, agate-ring, pukestocking, caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,—

Fran. O lord, sir, who do you mean?

P. Hen. Why, then, your brown lustard is yours only drink: for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully in Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

P. Hen. Away, you rogue; Dost thou not hear them call?

[Here they both call him; the Drawer stands amaz'd, not knowing which way to go.]

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What! stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit Frac.] My lord, old sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the door; Shall I let them in?

P. Hen. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.] Poins!

Re-enter Poins.

Poins. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door: Shall we be merry?

Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say I; every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

I Thrs. Come, neighbour; the boy shall lead our horses down the hill: we'll walk afoot awhile, and ease our legs.

Thieves. Stand!

Thrs. Jesu bless us!

Fal. Strike; down with them; cut the villains' throats: Ah! whoremong caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves! they hate us, youth: down with them;
fleece them.

I Thrs. O, we are undone, both we and ours,
for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, gorbellied knaves: Are ye undone! No, ye fat chuffs; I would, your store were here! On, bacons, on! What, ye knaves?
young men must live: You are grand-jurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, I faith.

[Exeunt Fals, &c., driving the Travellers out.]

Re-enter Prince Henry and Poins.

P. Hen. The thieves have bound the true men:
Now could thou and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Poins. Stand close, I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Fal. Come, my masters, let us share, and then to horse before day. An the Prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring: there's no more valour in that Poins, than in a wild duck.

P. Hen. Your money. [Rushing out upon them.]

Poins. Villains.

[As they are sharing, the Prince and Poins set upon them. Falstaff, after a blow or two, and the rest, run away, leaving their booty behind them.]

P. Hen. Got with much ease. Now merrily to
horse:

The thieves are scatter'd, and possess'd with fear
So strongly, that they dare not meet each other;
Each takes his fellow for an officer.

Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death,
And lards the lean earth as he walks along:
Went not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poins. How the rogue roar'd! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Warkworth. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Hotspur, reading a letter.

—But, for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house.—He could be contented,—Why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house:—he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more. The purpose you undertake, is dangerous;
—Why, that's certain; 'tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink; but I tell you, my lord first, out of this nettle danger, we pluck this flower, safety. The purpose you undertake, is dangerous; the friends you have named, uncertain;
the time itself, unsuited; and your whole plot too light, for the counterpoise of so great an opposition.
—Say you so, my lord? I say unto you again,
you are a shallow, cowardly hind, and you lie.
What a lack-brain is this! By the Lord, our plot as a good plot as ever was laid; our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation: an excellent plot, very good friends. What a frosty-spirited rogue is this!

Why, my lord of York commends the plot, and the general course of the action. 'Zounds, an I were now by this rascal, I could hraise him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? lord Edmund Mortimer, my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not, besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in arms by the ninth of next month?
and are they not, some of them, set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this! an infidel! Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the king, and lay open all our proceedings. O, I could divide myself, and go to buffet, for moving such a dish of skimmed milk with so honourable an action!
Hang him! Let him tell the king: We are prepared: I will set forward to-night.

Enter Lady Percy.

How now, Kate? I must leave you within these two hours. [alone!]

Lady. O, my good lord, why are you thus
For what offence have I, this fortnight, been
A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed?
Tell me, sweet lord, what is't that takes from these

Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep?
Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth;
And start so often when thou art alone?
Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks;
And given my treasures, and my rights of thee,
To thick-ey'd musing, and curs'd melancholy?
In thy faint slumbers, I by thee have watch'd,
And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars;
Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed;
Cry, Courage;—to the field! And thou hast talk'd

Of sallies, and retires; of trenches, tents,
Of palisadoes, frontiers, parapets;
Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin;
Of prisoners' ransome, and of soldiers slain,
And all the 'currents of a heady fight.
Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war,
And thus hath so bestir'd thee in thy sleep,
That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow,
Like bubbles in a late disturbed stream:
And in thy face strange motions have appear'd,
Such as we see when men restrain their breath
On some great sudden haste. O, what portents are these?

Some heavy business hath my lord in hand,
And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hot. What, ho! is Giliams with the packet gone?

Enter Servant.

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago. [sheriff!]
Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even now. [exit!]

Hot. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it
Serv. It is, my lord.

Hot. That roan shall be my throne.
Well, I will back him straight: O opportunity!—
Bid Butler lead him forth into the park.

[Exit Servant.]

Lady. But hear you, my lord.

Hot. What say'st, my lady?

Lady. What is it carries you away?

Hot. My horse.

My love, my horse.

Lady. Out, you mad-headed ape!
A vessel hath not such a deal of spleen,
As you are tim'd with in faith.

Gads. What, ho! chamberlain!

Cham. [At a hand, quoth pick-purse.]

Gads. That's even as fair as—at hand, quoth the chamberlain: for thou variest no more from picking of purses, than giving direction doth from labouring; thou lay'st the plot how.

Enter Chamberlain.

Cham. Good-morrow, master Gadshill. It holds current, that I told you yesternight: There's a Franklin in the wilds of Kent hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company, last night at supper; a kind of auditor; one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter: they will away presently.

Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I pry thee, keep that for the hangman; for, I know, thou worship'st saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.

Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hangman? if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows: for, if I hang, old sir John hangs with me; and, thou knowest, he's no starveling. 'Tut! there are other Trojans that thou darest not of, the which, for sport sake, are content to do the profession some grace; that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot laud-rakers, no long-staff, sixpenny strikers; none of these mad, mutchie purple-luted male-worms; but with nobility, and tranquillity; burgonasters, and great oneyers; such as can hold in; such as will strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray: And yet I lie; for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth; or, rather, not pray to her, but prey on her; for they ride up and down on her, and make her their boots.

Cham. What, the commonwealth their boots! will she hold out water in foul way!

Gads. She will, she will; justice hath liquored her. We steal as in a castle, cock-sure; we have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible.

Cham. Nay, by my faith; I think you are more beholden to the night, than to fern-seed, for your walking invisible.

Gads. Give me thy hand: thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false thief.

Gads. Go to; Homo is a common name to all men. Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Farewell, you muddy knave. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — The Road by Gadshill.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins; Bardolph and Peto, at some distance.

Poins. Come, shelter, shelter: I have removed Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a gummed velvet.

P. Hen. Stand close.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Poins! Poins, and be hang'd! Poins!

P. Hen. Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal; What a bawling dost thou keep!

Fal. Where's Poins, Hal?

P. Hen. He is walked up to the top of the hill; I'll go seek him. [Pretends to seek Poins.]

Fal. I am accursed to rob in that thief's company; the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four furlongs by the squire further afoot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two-and-twenty years: and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hang'd; it could not be else; I have drunk medicines. — Poins! — Hal! — A plague upon you both! — Bardolph! — Peto! — I'll starve, ere I'll rub a foot further. An' 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man, and leave these rogues. I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground, is threescore and ten miles afoot with me; and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough: A plague upon't, when thieves cannot be true to one another! [They whistle.] Whew! — A plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues; give me my horse, and be hang'd.

P. Hen. Peace, ye fat guts! be down; lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood, I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to coil me thus!

P. Hen. Thou liest, thou art not coiled, thou art uncouiled.

Fal. I pry thee, good prince Hal, help me to my horse, good king's son!

P. Hen. Out, you rogue! shall I be your ostler?

Fal. Go, hang thyself in thy own hair-apparent garters! If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison: When a jest is so forward, and about too, I hate it.

Enter Gadshill.

Gads. Stand.

Fal. So I do, against my will.

Poins. O, 'tis our setter: I know his voice.

Enter Bardolph.

Bard. What news?

Gads. Case ye, case ye; on with your visors: there's money of the king's coming down the hill: 'tis going to the king's exchequer.

Fal. You lie, you rogue; 'tis going to the king's tavern.

Gads. There's enough to make us all.

Fal. To be hang'd!

P. Hen. Sir, you four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned Poins and I will walk lower; if they scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. How many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight, or ten.

Fal. Zounds! will they not rob us?

P. Hen. What, a coward, sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather; but yet no coward, Hal.

P. Hen. Well, we leave that to the proof.

Poins. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge; when thou need'st him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hang'd.

P. Hen. Ned, where are our disguises?

Poins. Here, hard by; stand close.

[Exeunt P. Henry and Poins]

But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his ear I'll holla—Mortimer!

Nay,
I'll have a startling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him.
To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you,
Cousin: a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly defy.
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke;
And that same sword-and-buckler prince of Wales,
But that I think his father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I'd have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Wor. Farewell, kinsman! I will talk to you,
When you are better temper'd to attend.

North. Why, what a wasp-stung and impatient
Art thou, to break into this woman's mood?

Hot. I long thine ear to no tongue but thine own!

Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods.

Nettled, and stung with pismires, when I hear
Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.

In Richard's time,—What do you call the place?—
A plague upon't!—it is in Gloucestershire:—

'Twas where the mad cap duke his uncle kept;
His uncle York:—where I first bow'd my knee

Unto this king of smiles, thus Bolingbroke.
When you and he came back from Ravensburg.

North. At Berkeley castle.

Hot. You say true:—
Why, what a cundy deal of courtesy

This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!
Look,—when his infant justice came to eye,

And,—gentle Harry Percy,—my kind cousin!
O, the devil take such cozeners!—God forgive

me!—
Good uncle, tell your tale, for I have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, to't again;
We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done, I faith.
Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners.

Deliver them up without their ransom straight,
And make the Douglas' son your only mean

For powers in Scotland; which,—for divers reasons,

Which I shall send you written,—be assur'd,
Will easily be granted.—You, my lord,—

(To Northumberland.)
Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd,—

Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble prelate, well belov'd,

The archbishop.
Hot. Of York, is't not?

Wor. True; who hears hard
His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop.

I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know

Is ruminated, plotted, and set down;
And only stays but to behold the face

Of that occasion that shall bring it on.
Hot. I smell it: upon my life, it will do well.

North. Before the game's afoot, thou still let'st slip.

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble
And then the power of Scotland, and of York,—

To join with Mortimer, ha!

Wor. And so they shall.
Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,
To save our heads by raising of a head:

For, bear ourselves as even as we can,
The king will always thank him in our debt;
And thank we think ourselves unsatisfied.

Till he hath found a time to pay us home.

And see already, how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Hot. He does, he does; we'll be reveng'd on him
Wor. Cousin, farewell:—No further go in this.

Than I by letters shall direct your course.
When time is ripe, (which will be suddenly.)

I'll sew to Glendower, and Lord Mortimer;
Where you and Douglas, and our powers, at once,

(As I will fashion it,) shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,

Which now we hold at much uncertainty.
North. Farewell, good brother: we shall thrive,
I trust.

Hot. Uncle, adieu:—O, let the hours be short, Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport! [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rochester. An Inn Yard.

Enter a Carrier, with a lantern in his hand.

1 Car. Heigh ho! An't be not four by the day, I'll be hang'd! Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not pecked. What carter!

Hot. [Within.] Anon, anon.
1 Car. I prythee, Tom, best Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point: the poor jade is wrung in the wither: out of all case.

Enter another Carrier.

2 Car. Pense and beaus are as dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the bus: this house is turned upside down, since Robin carter died.

1 Car. Poor fellow! never joyed since the price of oats rose; it was the death of him.

2 Car. I think this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am stung like a trench.

1 Car. Like a trench? by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.

2 Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jorden, and then we leak in your chimney; and your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a louse.

1 Car. What, carter: come away, and be hang'd, come away.

2 Car. I have a gammon of bacon, and two rizes of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.

1 Car. Odsbody! the turkies in my panner are quite starved.—What, carter!—A plague on these! I ha'th'thought never an eye in thy head! I can't not hear! An't were not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very villain.—
Come, and be hang'd.—Hast no faith in thee!

Enter Gadshill.

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock?

1 Car. I think it be two o'clock.

Gads. I prythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

1 Car. Nay, son, I pray ye; I know a trick worth two of that, I faith.

Gads. I prythee, lend me thine.

2 Car. Ay, when I canst lend.—Lend me thy lantern, quoth a!—Marry, I'll see thee hang'd first.

Gads. Sirrah carter, what time do you mean to come to London?

2 Car. Time enough to go to bed with a candle,
I warrant thee.—Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen; they will along with company, for they have great charge. [Exeunt Carriers.]

No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
For I shall never hold that man my friend.
Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost
To ransom home-reviled Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer!
He never did fall off, my sovereign liege.
But by the chance of war;—To prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds.

Those mouthed wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Severn's sedgey bank.
In single opposition, hand to hand.
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink.

Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood:
Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,
And hid his cramp head in the hollow bank.
Blood-stained with these valiant combatants.
Never did bare and barren policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly;

Then let him not be slander'd with revolt.
K. Hen. Thou dost belie him, Percy; thou dost believe him.

He never did encounter with Glendower;
I tell thee,
He durst as well have met the devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art not ashamed? But, arrah, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer:
Send me your prisoners with the speediest
means.

Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displease you.—My lord Northumberland,
We license your departure with your son:—
Send us your prisoners, or you'll hear of it.

[Exeunt King Henry, Blunt, and Train.]
Hot. And if the devil come and roar for them,
I will not send them:—I will after straight,
And tell him so; for I will ease my heart,
Although it be with hazard of my head.

North. What, drunk with choler I stay, and pause awhile;
Here comes your uncle.

Re-enter Worcester.

Hot. Speak of Mortimer?
Zounds, I will speak of him; and let my soul
Want mercy, if I do not join with him:
Yea, on his part, I'll empty all these veins,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop if I die dust,
But I will lift the down-trod Mortimer
As high 'tween the air as this unthankful king,
As this ingrate and canker'd Bolingbroke.

North. Brother, the king hath made your nephew mad.

Wor. Who struck this heat up, after I was gone?

Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners;
And when I urg'd the ransom once again
Of my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd pale;
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him: Was he not proclaim'd?

By Richard that dead is, the next of blood?

North. He was; I heard the proclamation:
And then it was, when the unhappy king
(Whose wrongs in us God pardon!) did set forth
Upon his Irish expedition;
From whence he, intercept'd, did return
To be detain'd, and, shortly, murdered.

Wor. And for whose death, we in the world's wide mouth

Live scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of. [Enter
Hot. But, soft, I pray you: Did king Richard Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer
Heir to the crown?

North. He did: myself did hear it.
Hot. Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin king
That wish'd him on the barren mountains starv'd.
But shall it be, that you,—that set the crown
Upon the head of this forgetful man:

And, for his sake, wear the detested blot
Of murderous subornation,—shall it be,
That you a world of curses undergo;
Being the agents, or base second means.

The cords, the ladder, or the hanging rather?
O, pardon me, that I descend so low,
To show the line, and the predicament.
Wherein you range under this subtle king.—
Shall it, for shame, be spoken in these days,
Or fill up chronicles in time to come,

That men of your nobility and power,
Did take them both in an unjust behalf.—
As both of you, God pardon it I have done,—
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose,
And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke?

And shall it, in more shame, be further spoken,
That you are forc'd, discarding, and shook off
By him, for whom these shames ye underwent?
No; yet time serves, wherein you may redeem
Your banish'd honours, and restore yourselves
Into the good thoughts of the world again:
Revenge the jeering, and disdain'd contempt,
Of this proud king; who studies, day and night,
To answer all the debt he owes to you,
Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.

Therefore, I say,—Peace, cousin, say no more;

Wor. And now I will unclasp a secret book,
And to your quick-convincing discontents
I'll read you matter deep and dangerous;
As full of peril, and advent'rous spirit,
As to o'erwalk a current, roaring loud,
On the unsteadfast footing of a spear. [swim :—

Hot. If he fall in, good night:—or sink or Send danger from the east unto the west,
So honour cross it from the north to south,
And let them grapple:—O! the blood more stirs,
To rouse a lion, than to start a hare.

North. Inauguration of some great exploit
Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

Hot. By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap,
To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon;
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the ground
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks;
So he, that doth redeem her thence, might wear
Without corral, all her dignities:
But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here,
But not the form of what he should attend.—
Good cousin, give me audience for a while.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. These same noble Scots,
That are your prisoners,—

Hot. I'll keep them all;
By heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them:
No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not:
I'll keep them, by this hand.

Wor. You start away,
And lend no ear unto my purposes.—
Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat:—
He said, he would not ransom Mortimer;
Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer

as it is at our pleasure to fall : and then they will adventure upon the exploit themselves ; which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them.

P. Hen. Ay, but 'tis like, that they will know us, by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

Hen. Tis ! our horses they shall not see, I'll tie them in the wood : our viors we will change, after we leave them ; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the mounce, to imask our noted out-wanl garments.

P. Hen. But, I doubt, they will be too hard for us.

Hen. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back ; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forewear arms. The virtue of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that the same fat rogue will tell us, when we meet at supper : how thirty, at least, he fought with ; what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured ; and, in the reproof of this, lies the jest.

P. Hen. Well, I'll go with thee ; provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap ; there I'll sup. Farewell.

Hen. Farewell, my lord. [Exit Poins.]

P. Hen. I know you all, and will awhile uphold The unyok'd humour of your idleness ; Yet herein will I imitate the sun ;

Who doth permit the base contagious clouds To smother up his beauty from the world ;

That, when he please again to be himself, Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at, By breaking through the foul and ugly mists

Of vapours, that did seem to strangle him. If all the year were playing holidays,

To sport would be as tedious as to work ; But, when they seldom come, they wish'd-for And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents. [Enter Poins.]

So, when this loose behaviour I throw off, And pay the debt I never promised,

By how much better than my word I am, By so much shall I falsify men's hopes ;

And, like bright metal on a sullen ground, My reformation, glittering o'er my fault,

Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes, Than that which hath no foil to set it off. I'll so offend, to make offence a skill ; Redeeming time, when men think least I will. [Exit Poins.]

SCENE III. — The same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and temperate, to stir at these indignities, [Enter Poins.]

And you have found me ; for, accordingly, You tread upon my patience ; but, be sure, I will from henceforth rather be myself,

Mighty, and to be fear'd, than my condition ; Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young And therefore lost that title of respect, [Enter Poins.]

Which the proud soul ne'er pays, but to the proud. Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves

The scourge of greatness to be used on it ; And that same greatness too which our own lives help to make so pearly. [Enter Poins.]

Nor. My lord, — [Enter Poins.]

K. Hen. Worcester, get thee gone, for I see And disobedience in these eyes : O, sir, Your presence is too bulk and peremptory,

And majesty might never yet endure The moody frontier of a servant brow. You have good leave to leave us ; when we need Your use and counsel, we shall send for you — [Exit Worcester.]

You were about to speak. [Enter Poins.] Yes, my good lord.

Those prisoners in your highness' name demanded.

Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took, Were, as he says, not with such strength denied, As is deliver'd to your majesty :

Either envy, therefore, or misprision Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners. But, I remember, when the fight was done, When I was dry with rage, and extreme toil,

Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword, Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly dress'd, Fresh as a bridegroom ; and his chin, new reap'd,

Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest home ; He was perfum'd like a milliner ;

And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held A pouncet-box, which ever and anon

He gave his nose, and took't away again ; — Who, therewith angry, when it next came there, Took it in snuff : — and still he smil'd and talk'd ;

And, as the soldiers bore dead bodies by, He call'd them — untanght knives, unmannerly,

To bring a slovenly unadorn'd course Betwixt the wind and his nobility.

With many holiday and lady terms He question'd me ; among the rest, demanded

My prisoners, in your majesty's behalf. I then, all smarting, with my wounds being cold,

To be so pester'd with a popinjay, Out of my grief and my impatience,

Answer'd negligently, I know not what ; [Enter Poins.] (mad, He should not, or he should not ; — for he made me

To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet, And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman,

Of gams, and drams, and wounds [Enter Poins.] (God save the mark !)

And telling me, the sovereign'st thing on earth Was pomegranate, for an inward bruise ;

And that it was great pity, so it was, That villainous salt-petre should be digg'd

Out of the bowels of the harmless earth, Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd

So cowardly ; and, but, for these vile guns, He would himself have been a soldier.

This bold unjointed chat of his, my lord, I answer'd indirectly, as I said ;

And, I beseech you, let not his report Come current for an accusation,

Betwixt my love and your high majesty. [Enter Poins.] The circumstance consider'd, good my

What then he said, so he uneasy it now. K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners ; But with proviso, and exception. —

That we, at our own charge, shall ransom straight His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer ; Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd

The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against the great magnanimous Glendower ; Whose daughter, as we hear, the earl of March Hath lately married. Shall our officers then and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing—lay by; and spent with crying—bring in: now, in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder; and, by and by, in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Be emptied, to redeem a traitor home ? Shall we buy treason ? and indent with fears, When they have lost and forfeited themselves ?

Fal. By the lord, thou say'st true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench?

P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle. And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag! what, in thy quips, and thy quiddities? what a plague have I to do with a buff jerkin?

P. Hen. Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning, many a time and oft.

P. Hen. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No; I'll give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

P. Hen. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch: and, where it would not, I have used my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so used it, that were it not here apparent that thou art heir apparent.—But, I pry thee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England when thou art king? and resolution thus fobbed as it is, with the rusty curb of old father antick the law? Do not thou, when thou art king, hang a thief.

P. Hen. No: thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I'll be a brave judge.

P. Hen. Thou judgest false already; I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves, and so become a rare hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort it jumps with my humour, as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you.

P. Hen. For obtaining of suits?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits: whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe. 'Shlood, I am as melancholy as a gib cat, or a lugged bear.

P. Hen. Or an old lion; or a lover's lute.

Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe.

P. Hen. What say'st thou to a hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes; and art, indeed, the most comparative, rascalliest,—sweet young prince,—But, Hal, I pry thee, trouble me no more with vanity. I would to God, thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought: An old lord of the council met me the other day in the street about you, sir; but I marked him not: and yet he talked very wisely, but I regarded him not; and yet he talked wisely, and in the street too.

P. Hen. Thou did'st well; for wisdom cries out in the streets, and no man regards it.

Fal. O, thou hast damnable iteration: and art, in lead, able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal,—God forgive thee for it! Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing; and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I must give over this life, and I will give it over: by the Lord, and I do not, I am a villain; I'll be damned, for never a king's son in Christendom.

P. Hen. Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, Jack?

Fal. Where thou wilt, lad, I'll make one; and I do not, call me a villain, and baffle me.

P. Hen. I see a good amendment of life in thee; from praying, to purse-taking.

Enter Poins, at a distance.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal: 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation. Poins!—Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a match. O, if men were to be moved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him! This is the most omnipotent villain that ever cried, Stand, to a true man.

P. Hen. Good morrow, Ned.

Poins. Good morrow, sweet Hal.—What says monsieur Remorse? What says sir John Sack-and-Sugar? Jack, how agrees the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou sold'st him on Good Friday last, for a cup of Madeira, and a cold capon's leg?

P. Hen. Sir John stands to his word. The devil shall have his bargain; for he was never yet a breaker of promises, he will give the devil his due.

Poins. Then art thou damn'd for keeping thy word with the devil.

P. Hen. Else he had been damn'd for cozening the devil.

Poins. But, my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill: There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses: I have victuals for you all, you have horses for yourselves; Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester: I have bespoken supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap; we may do it as secure as sleep: If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns; if you will not, tarry at home, and be hanged.

Fal. Hear me, Yedward: if I tarry at home and go not, I'll hang you for going.

Poins. You will, chaps!

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

P. Hen. Who! I rob! I thief? not I, by my faith.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou carest not of the blood royal, if thou dar'st not stand for ten shillings.

P. Hen. Well, then, once in my days I'll be a mad-cap.

Fal. Why, that's well said.

P. Hen. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

Fal. By the Lord, I'll be a traitor then, when thou art king.

P. Hen. I care not.

Poins. Sir John, I pry thee, leave the prince and me alone; I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, may'st thou have the spirit of persuasion, and be the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time want countenance. Farewell: You shall find me in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. Farewell, thou latter spring! Farewell, All-hallows summer! [Exit Falstaff.]

Poins. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow: I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Poins, and Gadshill, shall rob three men that we have already way-laid; yourself, and I, will not be there: and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

P. Hen. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poins. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, whither we

No more the thirsty Errands of this soil
 Shall daub her lips with her own children's blood;
 No more shall trenching war channel her fields,
 Nor bruise her flowers with the armed hoofs
 Of hostile paces: those oppressed eyes,
 Which—like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
 All of one nature, of one substance bred—
 Now lately meet in the intestine shock
 And furious close of civil butchery.
 Shall now, in mutual well-becoming ranks,
 March all one way: and be no more oppos'd
 Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies;
 The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
 No more shall out his master. Therefore, friends,
 As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
 (Whose soldiers now, under whose blessed cross
 We are impressed and engag'd to fight,)
 Forthwith a power of English shall we levy;
 Whose arms were moulded in their mother's womb

To chase those pagans, in those holy fields,
 Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet,
 Which, fourteen hundred years ago, were us'd
 For our advantage, on the bitter cross.
 But this our purpose is a twelvemonth old,
 And lo! less 'tis to tell you—we will go;
 There ere we meet not now:—Then let me hear
 Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
 What yesterday your council did decree,
 In forwarding this dear expedition.

West. My heart this haste was hot in question,
 And many limits of the charge set down
 But yet earnest: when, all awhirl, there came
 A post from Wales, laden with heavy news;
 Whose worst was,—that the noble Mortimer,
 Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
 Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,
 And a thousand of his people butchered:
 Upon whose dead corpses there was such misuse,
 Such beauty, gruesome transformation,
 By these Welsh women done, as may not be,
 Without much shame, re-told or spoken of.

K. Hen. It seems then, that the tidings of this Brake off our business for the Holy land. [Roud]
 West. This, match'd with other, did, my gracious lord;

For more uneven and unwelcome news
 Came from the north, and thus it did import.
 On Holy-rod day, the gallant Holspur there,
 Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
 That ever-valiant and approved Scot,
 At Holmedon met,
 Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour;
 As by discharge of their artillery,
 And shape of likelihood, the news was told;
 For he that brought them, in the very heat
 And pride of their contention did take horse,
 Uncertain of the issue any way. [friend]

K. Hen. Here is a dear and true-industrious
 Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
 Spent with the variation of each soul
 Betwixt that Holmedon and the seat of ours;
 And he hath brought us smooth and welcome
 The earl of Douglas is discounten'd;
 Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights,
 He'd in their own blood, did Sir Walter see
 On Holmedon's plains: Of prisoners, Holspur
 Mordake the earl of Fife, and eldest son
 Took to heaven Douglas; and the earls of Aul, of Murray, Angus, and Monteith.
 And is not that an honourable spoil?
 A gallant prize! ha, cousin, is it not?
 West. In faith,
 It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.

K. Hen. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin.

In envy that my lord Northumberland
 Should be the father of so blest a son:
 A son, who is the theme of honour's tongue;
 Amongst a grove, the very straightest plant;
 Who is sweet fortune's minion and her pride:
 Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,
 See riot and dishonour stain the brow
 Of my young Harry. O that it could be prov'd,
 That some night-tripping fairy had exchanged
 In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,
 And call'd mine—Perry, his—Plantagenet!
 'Then would I have his Harry, and he mine.
 But let him from my thoughts:—What think you, now?

Of this young Perry's pride! the prisoners,
 Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd,
 To his own use he keeps; and sends no word
 I shall have none but Mordake earl of Fife.
 West. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Malevolent to you in all aspects: [Worcester,
 Which makes him prone himself, and bristle up
 The crest of youth against your dignity.

K. Hen. But I have sent for him to answer this.
 And, for this cause, awhile we must neglect
 Our holy purposes to Jerusalem.
 Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
 Will hold at Windsor, so inform the lords:
 But come yourself with speed to us again:
 For more is to be said, and to be done,
 Than out of anger can be uttered.

West. I will, my liege.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Henry, Prince of Wales, and Falstaff.

Fal. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad?
 P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking
 Of old sack, and unallowing lives after supper, and sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly which thou would'st truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-colour'd tuffa; I see no reason, why thou should'st be so superfluous to demand
 the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed, you come near me now, Hal: for we, that take purses, go by the moon and seven stars; and not by Phobus,—he, that wonderfully knights so fast. And, I pray thee, sweet wag, when thou art king,—us, God save thy grace (majesty, I should say; for grace thou wilt have none.)

P. Hen. What! none?

Fal. No, by my troth; but so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.
 P. Hen. Well, how then! come, roundly, roundly.

Fal. Marry then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us, that are squares of the night's body, be call'd thieves of the day's beauty: let us be—Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon: And let men say, we be men of good government; being governed, as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we-steal

P. Hen. Thou say'st well; and it holds well too:
 for the fortune of us, that are the moon's men, doth ebb and flow like the sea; being governed, as the sea is, by the moon. As, for proof, now: A purse of gold last resolutely snatched on Monday night,

Exton As full of valour, as of royal blood :
Both have I split ; O, would the deed were good !
For now the devil that told me—I did well,
Says, that 'his deed is chronicled in hell.
This dead king to the living king I'll bear !—
Take hence the rest, and give them burial here.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.— Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

Flourish. Enter Bolingbroke and York, with Lords and Attendants.

Boling. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear
Is—that the rebels have consum'd with fire
Our town of Cinder, in Gloucestershire ;
But whether they be ta'en, or shun, we hear not.

Enter Northumberland.

Welcome, my lord : What is the news ?

North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness ;

The next news is,—I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent ;

The manner of their taking may appear
At large discours'd in this paper here.

[Presenting a paper.]
Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains,

And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter Fitzwater.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London

The heads of Broons, and Sir Bennet Seely ;
Two of the dangerous converted traitors,
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgotten ;

Right noble as thy mark, well I wot.

Enter Percy, with the Bishop of Carlisle.

Percy The grand conspirator, abbot of Westminster,
With clog of conscience, and sour melancholy,
Hath yielded up his body to the grave ;
But here is Carlisle living, to avenge
Thy kingly doom, and sentence of his pride.

Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom :—
Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,

More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life ;
So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife ;
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter Exton, with Attendants bearing a coffin.

Exton. Great king, within this coffin I present
Thy buried fear ; herein all breathless lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,
Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Exton, I thank thee well ; nor thou hast wrought

A deed of slander, with thy fatal hand,
Upon my head, and all this famous land.

Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did I this deed.

Boling. They have not power that do pass
Nor do I thee ; though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murderer, love him murdered.

The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour.
But neither my good word, nor princely favour :
With Cain go wander through the shade of night,
And never show thy head by day nor light.—
Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe.

That blood should sprinkle me, to make me guilty :

Come, mourn with me for what I do lament,
And put on sullen black, incontinent ;
I'll make a voyage to the Holy land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand :—
March sadly after ; grace my mournings here,
In weeping after this untimely beer. [Exeunt.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

*Enter King Henry, Westmoreland, Sir Walter
Blunt, and others.*

K. Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Find we a time for frightened peace to pant,
And breathe short-winded accents of new broils
To be commenced in strains as far remote.

Exton. Have I no friend? quoth he: he spake it twice,
And urg'd it twice together; did he not?
Serv. He did.
Exton. And, speaking it, he wistfully look'd on
As who should say,—I would, thou wert the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart;
Meaning, the king at Pomfret. Come, let's go;
I am the king's friend, and will rid his foe.

[Exeunt.]SCENE V.—Pomfret. The Dungeon of the Castle.Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. I have been studying how I may com-
This prison, where I live, unto the world: [pare
And], for because the world is populous, [me]
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it:—Yet I'll hammer it out.
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul;
My soul, the father: and these two beget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts,
And these same thoughts people this little world;
In humours, like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better sort,—
As thoughts of things divine,—are intermix'd
With scruples, and do set the word itself
Against the word:
As thus,—Come, little ones; and then again,—
It is as hard to come, as for a camel
To thread the postern of a needle's eye.
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders: how these vain weak nails
May tear a passage through the flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls;
And, for they cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content, flatter themselves,—
That they are not the first of fortune's slaves,
Nor shall not be the last: like silly beggars,
Who sitting in the stocks, refuge their shame,—
That many have, and others must sit there:
And in this thought they find a kind of ease,
Bearing their own misfortune on the back
Of such as have before endur'd the like.
Thus play I, in one person, many people,
And none contented: Sometimes am I king;
Then treason makes me wish myself a beggar,
And so I am: Then crushing penury
Persuades me I was better when a king;
Then am I king'd again: and, by-and-by,
Think that I am unking'd by Bolingbroke,
And straight am nothing:—But, whate'er I am,
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleas'd till he be eas'd
With being nothing.—Musiick do I hear?

[Musiick.]

Ha, ha! keep time:—How sour sweet musick is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept!
So is it in the musick of men's lives.
And here have I the daintiness of ear,
To check time broke in a disorder'd string;
But, for the concord of my state and time,
Had not an ear to hear my true time broke.
I wasted time, and now doth time waste me.
For now hath time made me his numbring clock:
My thoughts are minutes; and, with sighs, they jar [watch,
Their watches on to mine eyes, the outward
Whereto my finger, like a dial's point,
Is pointing still, in cleanness from tears.
Now, sir, the sound, that tells what hour it is,
Are clamorous groans, that strike upon my heart,
Which is the bell: So sighs, and tears, and groans,
Show minutes, times, and hours:—but my time
Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy,

While I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock.
This musick mads me, let it sound no more;
For, though it have holpe madmen to their wile,
In me, it seems it will make wise men mad.
Yet blessing on his heart that gives it me!
For 'tis a sign of love; and love to Richard
Is a strange brooch in this all-hating world.

Enter Groom.

Groom. Hail, royal prince!
K. Rich. Thanks, noble peer,
The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear.
What art thou? and how comest thou hither,
Where no man never comes, but that sad dog
That brings me food, to make misfortune live?
Groom. I was a poor groom of thy stable,
king, [York,
When thou wert king: who, travelling towards
With much ado, at length have gotten leave
To look upon my sometimes master's face.
O, how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld,
In London streets that coronation-day,
When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary!
That horse, that thou so often hast bestrid;
That horse, that I so carefully have dress'd!
K. Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me, gentle friend,
How went he under him?
Groom. So proudly, as if he disdain'd the ground.

K. Rich. So proud that Bolingbroke was on his
That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand;
This hand hath made him proud with clapping
him.
Would he not stumble? Would he not fall down, (Since pride must have a fall), and break the neck

Of that proud man, that did usurp his back?
Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee,
Since thou, created to be aw'd by man,
Was born to bear? I was not made a horse;
And yet I bear a burden like an ass,
Spur-gall'd, and tir'd by jauncing Bolingbroke.

Enter Keeper, with a dial.

Keeper. Follow, give place; here is no longer stay. [To the Groom.
K. Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wert away.
Groom. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. [Exit.
Keeper. My lord, will't please you to fall to
it.
K. Rich. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do.
Keeper. My lord, I dare not: Sir Pierre of Ex-lately came from the king, commands the cou-trary. [and thee!
K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster,
Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

[Beats the Keeper]Keeper. Help, help, help!Enter Exton, and Servants, armed.

K. Rich. How now! what means death in this rude assault? [meat.
Villain, thy own hand yields thy death's instrument. [Snatching a weapon, and killing one.
Go thou, and fill another room in hell.
[He kills another, then Exton strikes him down.
That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire.
That staggers thus my person.—Exton, thy fierce hand [own land
Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is upon high;
Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die. [Dna.

King Richard.—That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire,
That staggers thus my person.

RICHARD II., Act V., Scene v.

Boling. Intruded or committed, was this fault?
 'Tis but the first, how heinous are it be,
 To win thy after love, I pardon thee. [key.
Aum. Thou give me leave that I may turn thee
 That no man enter till my tale be done.
Boling. Have thy desire.

York. [Within] My liege, beware; look to thyself!
 Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.
Boling. Villain, I'll make thee safe. [Drawing.
Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand;
 Thou hast no cause to fear. [hardy king:
York. [Within.] Open the door, secure, fool-shall I, for love, speak treason to thy face!
 Open the door, or I will break it open.

[Bolingbroke opens the door.

Enter York.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle I speak;
 Recover breath: tell us how near is danger,
 That we may arm us to encounter it. [know
York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt
 The treason that my horse forbids me show.
Aum. Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise
 I do repent me: read not my name there, [past:
 My heart is not confederate with my hand.

York. 'Twas, villain, ere thy hand did set it
 I tore it from the traitor's bosom, kins; [down.—
 Fear, and not love, begets his penitence:
 Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove
 A serpent that will sting thee to the heart.
Boling. O heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy!
 O loyal father of a treacherous son!
 'Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain,
 From whence this stream through muddy passages.

Hath held his current, and defild himself!
 'Thy overflow of good converges to bad;
 And thy abundant goodness shall excuse
 This deadly blot in thy degressing son.

York. So shall my virtue be his vice's bawd;
 And he shall spread mine honour with his shame,
 As thriftless sows their scraping fathers' gold.
 Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies,
 Or my shame'd life in his dishonour lies:
 Thou kill'st me in his life; giving him breath,
 The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.

Duch. [Within.] What ho, my liege! for God's sake let me in. [eager cry I

Boling. What shrill-voiced suppliant makes this Duch. A woman, and thus unto, great king:—
 Speak with me, pity me, open the door: [in I.
 A heggert begs, that never begg'd before. [thing.

Boling. Our house is alter'd,—from a serious
 And now changed to The Beggar and the King.—
 My dangerous cousin, let your mother in;
 I know she's come to pray for your soul sin.

York. If thou do pardon, whomever pray,
 More sin, for this forgiveness, prosper may.
 This foster'd joint cut off, the rest rests sound;
 This, let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter Duchess.

Duch. O king, believe not this hard-hearted man;
 Love, loving not itself, loves other can.

York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here!

Shall thy old dogs once more a traitor rear?

Duch. Sweet York, be patient: Hear me, gentle liege. [Kneels.

Boling. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech:

For ever will I kneel upon thy knees,
 And never see day that the happy sees,

Till thou give joy: until thou bid me joy,
 By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.
Aum. Unto my mother's prayers I bend my knees [Kneels.

York. Against them both, my true joints benead be. [Kneels.

Ill may'st thou thrive, if thou grant any grace!
Duch. Plead he in earnest! Look upon his face:
 His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest;
 His words come from his mouth, ours from our
 breast:

He prays but faintly, and would be denied;
 We pray with heart, and soul, and all beside:
 His weary joints would gladly rue, I know;
 Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they
 grow:

His prayers are full of false hypocrisy;
 Ours, of true zeal and deep integrity.
 Our prayers do out-pray his: then let them have
 That mercy, which true prayers ought to have.
Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. Nay, do not say—stand up,
 But pardon, first: and afterwards, stand up.
 And if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,
 Pardon—should be the first word of thy speech.
 I never long'd to hear a word till now;
 Say—pardon, king; let pity teach thee how:
 'The word is short, but not so short as sweet;
 No word like pardon, for kings' mouths so meet.

York. Speak it in French, king; say, pardonnez may.

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy!

Ah, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,
 That set'st the word itsif against the word!—
 Speak, pardon, as 'tis current in our land;
 'Tis chopping French we do not understand.
 Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there:
 Or, in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear;
 That, hearing how our plants and prayers do pierce,

Pity may move thee, pardon to rehearse.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. I do not see to stand,
 Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.

Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

Duch. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee!
 Yet am I sick for fear: speak it again;

'Twice saying pardon, doth not pardon twain,
 But makes one pardon strong.

Boling. With all my heart
 I pardon him.

Duch. A god on earth thou art.

Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law,—and the abbot,

With all the rest of that consorted crew,— Destruction's right shall dog them at the heels.—
 Good uncle, help to order several powers
 To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are;
 They shall not live within this world, I swear,
 But I will have them, if I once know where.
 Uncle, farewell,—and cousin too, adieu:
 Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.

Duch. Come, my old son;—I pray God make thee new [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

Enter Exton and a Servant.

Exton. Dost thou not mark the king, what words he spake!

Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear?
 Was it not so!

Serv. Those were his very words.

The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
And barbarism itself have pitied him.
But heaven hath a hand in these events;
To whose high will we bound our calm contents.
To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
Whose state and honour I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Duck. Here comes my son Aumerle.
York. Aumerle that was:
But that is lost, for being Richard's friend.
And, madam, you must call him Rutland now:
I am in parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealty to the new-made king. [now,
Duck. Welcome, my son: Who are the violets
That strew the green lap of the new-come spring?
Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not:
God knows, I had as lief be none as one.
York. Well, bear you well in this new spring of time,

Lest you be cripp'd before you come to prime.
What news from Oxford? hold those jousts and triumphs?

Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do.

York. You will be there, I know.

Aum. If God prevent it not; I purpose so.

York. What seal is that, that hangs without thy bosom?

Yes, look'st thou pale? let me see the writing.

Aum. My lord, 'tis nothing.

York. No matter then who sees it:
I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech your grace to pardon me;

It is a matter of small consequence,

Which for some reasons I would not have seen.

York. Which for some reasons, sir, I mean to
I fear, I fear,— [see.]

Duck. What should you fear?
'Tis nothing but some bond, that he is enter'd into
For any apparel, against the triumph day. [bond]

York. Bound to himself? what doth he with a
That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool—

Boy, let me see the writing. [show it]

Aum. I do beseech you, pardon me: I may not

York. I will be satisfied; let me see it, I say.

[Snatches it, and reads.]

Treason! foul treason!—villain! traitor! slave!

Duck. What is the matter, my lord?

York. Ho! who is within there? [Enter a Servant.]

Saddle my horse.

God for his mercy! what treachery is here!

Duck. Why, what is it, my lord? [horse:]—

York. Give me my boots, I say;—saddle my

Now by mine honour, by my life, my troth.

I will approach the villain. [Exit Servant.]

Duck. What's the matter?

York. Peace, foolish woman. [son]

Duck. I will not peace:—What is the matter,

Aum. Good mother, be content; it is no more

Than my poor life must answer.

Duck. Thy life answer!

Re-enter Servant, with boots.

York. Bring me my boots, I will unto the king.

Duck. Strike him, Aumerle.—Poor boy, thou art amaz'd!

Hence, villain: never more come in my sight.—

[To the Servant.]

York. Give me my boots, I say.

Duck. Why, York, what wilt thou do?

Wilt thou not lade the trespass of thine own?

Have we more sons? or are we like to have?

Is not my becoming date drunk up with time?

And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age,

And rob me of a happy mother's name?

Is he not like thee? is he not thine own?

York. Thou fond mad woman,

Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy?

A dozen of them here have ta'en the sacrament,

And interchangeably set down their hands,

To kill the king at Oxford.

Duck. He shall be none;

We'll keep him here: Then what is that to him?

York. Away,

Fond woman! were he twenty times my son

I would approach him.

Duck. Hadst thou ground for him,

As I have done, thou'dst be more pitiful.

But now I know thy mind; thou dost suspect,

That I have been disloyal to thy husband,

And that he is a bastard, not thy son:

Sweet York, sweet husband, be not of that mind:

He is as like thee as a man may be,

Not like to me, or any of my kin,

And yet I love him.

York. Make way, unruly woman.

[Exit.]

Duck. After, Aumerle; mount thee upon his horse;

Spur, post; and get before him to the king.

And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.

I'll not be long behind; though I be old,

I doubt not but to ride as fast as York:

And never will I rise up from the ground,

Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee: Away;

Begone. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Bolingbroke, as King; Percy, and other Lords.

Bol. Can no man tell of any unruly son?

'Tis full three months, since I did see him last:—

If any plague hang over us, 'tis he.

I would to God, my lord, he might be found:

Inquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there,

For there, they say, he doth doth frequent,

With unrestrained loose companions:

Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,

And beat our watch, and rob our passengers;

While he, young, wanton, and effeminate boy,

Takes on the point of honour, to support

So dissolute a crew. [prince;]

Percy. My lord, some two days since I saw the

And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.

Bol. And what said the gallant? [stares]

Percy. His answer was,—he would unto the

And from the common's creature pluck a glove,

And wear it as a favour; and with that

He would honour the lustiest challenger.

Bol. As dissolute, as desperate; yet, through

I see some sparkles of a better hope, [boob]

Which elder days may happily bring forth.

But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle, hastily.

Aum. Where is the king?

Bol. What means

Our cousin, that he stares and looks so wildly?

Aum. God save your grace. I do beseech your majesty,

To have some conference with your grace alone.

Bol. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone.— [Exit Percy and Lords.]

What is the matter with our cousin now?

Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth. [Kneels.]

My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,

Unless a pardon, ere I rise, or speak.

Why should this favour'd grief be lodg'd in thee,
When triumph is become an alehouse guest?

K. Rich. Join not with grief, fair woman, do not so.

To make my end too sudden: learn, good soul,
To think our former state a happy dream;
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are
Shows us but this: I am sworn brother, sweet,
To grim necessity; and he and I
Will keep a league till death. His thee to France,
And cloister thee in some religious house:
Our holy lives must win a new world's crown.
Which our profane hours here have stricken down.

Queen. What is my Richard both in shape and
mind

Transform'd, and weaken'd? Hath Bolingbroke Depos'd thine intellect? Hath he been in thy
The lion, dying, thrusteth forth his paw [heart]
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be overpower'd; and is it thou, pupil-like,
Take thy correction mildly? kins the rod;
And fawn on rage with base humility,

Which art a lion, and a king of beasts? [beasts]
K. Rich. A king of beasts, indeed; if aught but I had been still a happy king of men [France]:
Good sometime queen, prepare thee hence for
Think, I am dead; and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, my last living leave.

In winter's tedious night, sit by the fire
With good old folks; and let them tell thee tales
Of woeful ages, long ago betid:

And, ere thou bid good night, to quit their grief,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,

And send the hearers' sorrows to their beds.
For why, the senseless brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,
And, in compassion, weep the fire out:

And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
For the depositing of a rightful king.

Enter Northumberland, attended.

North. My lord, the mund of Bolingbroke is chang'd;

You must to Bonifret, not unto the Tower.—
And, madam, there is order to'en for you;

With all swift speed you must away to France.
K. Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder wherewithal

The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,—
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is, ere foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into corruption: thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm, and give thee half,
It is too little help to him that all [way]
And he shall think that thou, which know'st the
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,
Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne
The love of wicked friends converts to fear;
That fear, to him; and hate turns one, or both,
To worthy d'neer, and deserved death. [end]

North. My guilt be on my head, and there au
Take leave, and part: for you must part, for hwi h

K. Rich. Doubly divorc'd!—Bad men, ye violate
A twofold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me;
And then, betwixt me and my married wife.—
Let me unloose the oath 'twixt thee and me;
And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made —
Part us, Northumberland; I towards the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness punes the climate:
My wife o France; from whence, set forth in pomp,

She came adorned hitherto like sweet May,
Sent back like Halloween, or short'at of day.

Queen. And must we be divorc'd? must we part?

K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart. [ine]

Queen. Banish us both, and send the king with North. That were some love, but little policy.

Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.
K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one

Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here;
Better far off, than—near, be ne'er the near.

Go, count thy way with sighs; I, mine with groans.

Queen. So longest way shall have the longest mourns.

K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short,

And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
Come, come, in woeful sorrow let's be brief.
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.
One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part;
Thus give I mine, and thus I take thy heart.

Queen. Give me mine own again; I were no good part, [Kiss again]

To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart.
So, now I have mine own again, begone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan. [delay]

K. Rich. We make we wail with this foul
Once more adieu, the rest let sorrow say [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke of York's Palace.

Enter York and his Duchess.

Duch. My lord, you told me, you would tell the rest.

When weeping made you break the story off
Of our two cousins coming into London.

York. Where did I leave it?

Duch. At that sad stop, my lord.
Where rude misgovern'd hands, from window-logs,

Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's head.
York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Boling-broke, mounted upon a hot and fiery steed, [brake]—
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,—
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course, While all tongues cried—God save thee, Boling-
broke!

You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage; and that all the walls,
With painted imagery, had said at once,—
Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespoke them thus,—I thank you, countrymen:
And thus still doing, thus he passed along.

Duch. Alas, poor Richard! where rides he the while?

York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grac'd actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his pratle to be tedious;
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes
Did scowl on Richard;—no man cried, God save
him;

No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home:
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head;
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,—
His face still combating with tears and smiles,
The badges of his grief and patience,—
I had had not God, for some strong purpose, steel'd

Commuted by your person, and your followers,
Against the state and profit of this land;
That, by contriving them, the souls of men
May dream it at you are worthily deposed.

K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I revel out
My weaved-up follies? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offence were upon record,
Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troop,
To read a lecture of them? If thou would'st,
There should'st thou find one heinous article,—
Containing the deposing of a king.

And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,—
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of heaven:
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,
I hint that my wretchedness doth hurt myself,—
I bough some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands.

Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin. [Exeunt.]

North. My lord, despatch: read o'er these articles.
K. Rich. Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see:

And yet salt water blinds them not so much,
But they can see a sort of traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest:
For I have given here my soul's consent,
To unlock the pompous body of a king;
Make glory base; and sovereignty a slave;
Proud majesty, a subject; state, a peasant.

North. My lord.—
K. Rich. No lord of thine, thou haught, insulting man.

Nor no man's lord; I have no name, no title,—
No, not that name was given me at the font.—
But 'tis usurp'd.—Alack, the heavy day,
That I have worn so many winters out,
And know not now what name to call myself!
O, that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water-drops! [Good.]
Good king,—great king,—(and yet not greatly)
And if my word be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight;
That it may show me what a face I have,
Since it is bankrupt of my majesty.

Boling. Go some of you, and fetch a looking-glass. [Exit an Attendant.]

North. Read o'er this paper, while the glass doth come. [To him.]

K. Rich. Friend! thou torment'st me ere I come Boling. Urge it no more, my lord Northumberland.

North. The commons will not then be satisfied.
K. Rich. They shall be satisfied: I'll read
When I do see the very book indeed [Enough.]
Where all my sins are writ, and that's—myself.

Re-enter Attendant with a glass

Give us that glass, and therein will I read.
No deeper wrinkles yet! Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wrinkles?—O, flattering glass,
Like to my followers in prosperity,
Thou dost beguile me! Was this face the face
That every day under his household roof
Did keep ten thousand men? Was this the face,
That, like the sun, did make beholders wink?
Was this the face, that fac'd so many follies,
And was at last out-fac'd by Bolingbroke?
A brittle glory shines in this face:
As brittle as the glory in the face;

[Throws the glass against the ground.]
For there it is, crack'd in a hundred shivers.—

Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport,—
How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.

Boling. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd the shadow of your face. [Exeunt.]

K. Rich. Say that again.
The shadow of my sorrow? Ha! let's see:—
'Tis very true, my grief lies all within;
And these external manners of lament
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,
That swells with silence in the torur'd soul;
There lies the substance: and I thank thee, king,
For thy great honesty, that no only giv'st
Me cause to wail, but teachest me the way
How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon,
And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin. [a king:]
K. Rich. Fair cousin! Why, I am greater than
For, when I was a king, my flatterers
Were then but subjects: being now a subject,
I have a king here to my flatterer.
Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Boling. Yet ask.
K. Rich. And shall I have?
Boling. You shall.

K. Rich. Then give me leave to go.
Boling. Whither?

K. Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your Boling. On, some of you, convey him to the Tower. [To all.]

K. Rich. O, good! Convey!—Conveyers are
That rise thus mildly by a true king's fall.

[Exeunt K. Richard, some Lords, and a Guard.] Boling. On Wednesday next, we solemnly set
down

Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves.
[Exeunt all but the Abbot, Bishop of Carlisle, and Aumerle.]

Abbot. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.
Car. The woe's to come; the children yet unborn

Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.

Aum. You holy clerkmen, is there no plot
To rid the realm of this pernicious blot?

Abbot. Before I freely speak my mind herein,
You shall not only take the sacrament
To bury mine intents, but to effect
Whatever I shall happen to devise:—
I see your brows are full of discontent,
Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears;
Come home with me to supper; I will lay
A plot, shall show us all a merry day. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Street leading to the Tower.

Enter Queen and Ladies.

Queen. This way the king will come; this is the
To Julius Caesar's ill-erected tower. [Way]
To whose first beacon my condemned lord
Is doom'd a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke:
Here let us rest, if this rebellious earth
Have any resting for her true king's queen.

Enter King Richard and Guards.

But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair rose wither: Yet look up; behold;
That you in pity may dissolve to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-love tears.
Ah, thou, the model where old Troy did stand;
Thou map of honour; thou king Richard's tomb
And not king Richard; thou most bewitching man,

Many a time hath blunish'd Norfolk fought
For Jesu Christ: in glorious Christian field,
Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross,
Against black Pagans, Turks, and Saracens:
And, wold' with works of war, retir'd himself
To Italy; and there, at Venice, gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long.

Boling. Why, hislop, is Norfolk dead?

Car. As sure as I live, my lord. [the howl]

Boling. Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to
Of good old Abraham!—Lords appellants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign you to your days of trial.

Enter York, attended.

York. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From plume-pluck'd Richard; who with willing soul

Adopts thee heir, and his high sceptre yields

To the possession of thy royal hand:

Ascend his throne, descending now from him,—

And long live Henry, of that name the fourth!

Boling. In God's name, I'll ascend the regal

Car. Marry, God forbid!— [throne.

Worst in this royal presence may I speak,

Yet best becoming me to speak the truth.

Would God, that any in this noble presence

Were enough noble to be upright judge

Of noble Richard; then true nobles would

Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.

What subject can give sentence on his king?

And who sits here, that is not Richard's subject?

Thieves are not judg'd, but they are by to hear,

Although apparent guilt be seen in them:

And shall the figure of God's majesty,

His captain, steward, deputy elect,

Anointed, crown'd, play'd many years,

Be judg'd by subject and inferior breath,

And he himself not present? O, forbid it, God,

That, in a Christian climate, souls retir'd

Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!

I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,

Stirr'd up by heaven thus boldly for his king.

My lord of Hereford here, whom you call king,

Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king:

And if you crown him, let me prophecy,—

The blood of English shall manure the ground,

And future ages grow from this foul act;

Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,

And, in this seat of peace, tumultuous wars

Shall kin with kin, and kind with kind confound;

Sword, horror, fear, and mutiny,

Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd

The field of Golgotha, and dead men's sculls.

O, if you rear this house against this house,

It will the woefullest division prove

That ever fell upon this cur'd earth:

Prevent, resist it, let it not be so,

Least child, child's children, cry against you—

wie! [pauses]

North. Well have you argu'd, sir; and, for your

Of capital treason we arrest you here:—

My lord of Westminister, be it your charge

To keep him safely till his day of trial.

May't please you, lords, to grant the commons'

suit.

Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view

He may surrender; so we shall proceed

Without suspicion.

York. I will be his conduct. [Exit.

Boling. Lords, you that are here under our arrest,

Procure your sureties for your days of answer:—
Little are we beholden to your love. [To Carlisle.
And little look'd for at your helping hands.

Re-enter York, with King Richard, and Officers, bearing the crown, &c.

K. Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a king,

Before I have shook off the regal thoughts?

Wier with I resign'd! I hardly yet learn'd

To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my knee:—

Give sorrow leave a while to tutor me

To this submission. Yet I well remember

The favours of these men: Were they not mine?

Did they not some time cry, all hail! to me?

So Judas did to Christ; but he, in twelve,

Found truth in all, but out; I, in twelve thirty, none.

God save the king!—Will no man say, amen?

Am I both priest and clerk? Well then, amen.

Give save the king! although I be not he;

And yet, amen, if heaven doth think him me—

To do what service am I sent for hither?

York. To do that office, of thine own good will,

Which thy majesty dost make thee offer,—

The resignation of thy state and crown

To Henry Bolingbroke.

K. Rich. Give me the crown:—Here, cousin seize the crown;

Here, on this side, my hand; on that side, thine

Now is this golden crown like a deep well,

That owes two buckets filling one another;

The emptier ever dashes in the air,

The other down, unseen, and full of water;

That bucket down, and full of tears, am I,

Drinking my griefs, whilst you mount up on high. [sign.

Boling. I thought you had been willing to re-

K. Rich. My crown, I am, but still my griefs are mine;

You may my glories and my state depose,

But not my griefs; still am I king of those.

Boling. Part of your cares you give me with your crown. [care down.

K. Rich. Your cares set up, do not pluck my

My care is—lust of care, by old care done;

Your care is—gain of care, by new care won;

The cares I give, I have, though given away;

They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.

Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown?

K. Rich. Ay, no;—no, ay,—for I must nothing be;

Therefore no, no, for I resign to thee.

Now mark me how I will undo myself.—

I give this heavy weight from off my head,

And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,

The pride of kingly sway from out my heart;

With mine own tears I wash away my balm,

With mine own hands I give away my crown,

With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,

With mine own breath release all dangerous oaths;

All pomp and majesty I do forswear;

My manors, rents, revenues, I forego;

My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:

God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!

God keep all vows unbroke, are made to thee!

Make use, that nothing live, with nothing dead;

And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd!

Long may'st thou live in Richard's seat to sit,

And soon lie Richard in an earthly pit!

God save king Henry, unking'd Richard says,

And send him many years of sunshine days!

What more remains?

North. No more, but that you read

[Offering a paper

These accusations, and these grievous crimes,

Divine his downfall! Say, where, when, and how.
 Cam'st thou by these ill-tidings? I speak, thou wretch.
 Gerd. Pardon me, madam: little joy have I,
 To breathe this news: yet, what I say is true.
 King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
 Of Bolingbroke; their fortunes both are weigh'd:
 In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,
 And some few vanities that make him light;
 But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
 Besides himself, are all the English peers.
 And with that odds he weighs king Richard down.
 Past you to London, and you'll find it so:
 I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Noble mischance, thou art so light of Doth not thy embassy bring to me. [foot,
 And am I last that knows it? O, thou think'st
 To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast.—Come, ladies, go.
 To meet at London London's king in woe—
 What, was I born to this! that my sad look
 Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?
 Gardener, for telling me this news of woe,
 I would, the plants thou graft'st may never grow.

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.]

Gerd. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse.

I would my skill were subject to thy curse—
 Here did she drop a tear; here, in this place,
 I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:
 Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
 In the remembrance of a weeping queen.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. Westminster Hall. The Lords spirited on the right side of the throne;
the Lords temporal on the left; the Commons below.

Enter Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Surrey, Northumberland, Percy, Fitzwater, another Lord, Bishop of Carlisle, Abbot of Westminster, and Attendants. Officers behind with Bagds.

Boling. Call forth Bagot:—

Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind;
 What thou dost know of noble Gloucester's death;
 Who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd
 The bloody office of his timeless end.

Bagot. Thou set before my face the lord Aumerle.

Boling. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man [longue]

Bagot. My lord Aumerle, I know your daring
 Fours to assay what once it hath deliver'd.
 In that dead time when Gloucester's death was plotted,

I heard you say.—*Is not my arm of length,
 That reached from the red-hot English court,
 As far as Calais, to my uncle's head?*

Aumerle mock other talk, that very time,
 I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
 The offer of an hundred thousand crowns,
 Than Bolingbroke's return to England;
 Adding withal, how best this land would be,
 In this your cousin's death.

Princes, and noble lords,
 What answer shall I make to this base man?
 Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars,
 As equal terms to give him chastisement?
 Either I must, or have mine honour sell'd
 With the attituder of his slanderous lips.—

There is my rage, the manual seal of death,
 That marks thee out for hell: I say, thou liest,
 And will maintain, what thou hast said, is false,
 In thy heart blood, though being all too base
 To stain the temple of my knightly sword.

Boling. Sure, firmer, thou shalt not take it up.
 Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
 In all this presence, that hath mov'd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathies,
 There is my gaze, Aumerle, in gaze to thine:
 By that fair sun that shows me where thou
 stand'st,

I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
 That thou wert cause of noble Gloucester's death.
 If thou deny'st it, twenty times thou liest;
 And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart.

Where it was forg'd, with my rapier's point.
 Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.

Fitz. Now, by my soul, I would it were thus Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damnd to hell for this [true]

Percy, Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is as
 In this appeal, as thou art all unjust:
 And, that thou art so, there I throw my rage,
 To prove it on thee to the extremest point
 Of mortal breathing; seize it, if thou dar'st.

Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
 And never brandish more revengeful steel
 Over the glittering helmet of my foe! [merle;
 Lord. I take the earth to the like, forsworn Aum.
 And spur thee on with full as many lies
 As may be holla'd in thy treacherous ear
 From sun to sun; there is my honour's pawn;
 Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st. [at all;

Aum. Who se's me else? by heaven, I'll throw
 I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
 To answer twenty thousand such as you.

Surrey. My lord Fitzwater, I do remember well
 The very time Aumerle and you did lock.

Fitz. My lord, 'tis true: you were in presence
 then;

And you can witness with me, this is true.
 Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is Fitz. Surrey, thou liest. [true.

Surrey. Dishonourable boy!
 That he shall lie so heavy on my sword,
 That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
 Till thou the lie giver, and that lie, do lie
 In earth as quiet as thy father's skull.

In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn;
 Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Fitz. How foully dost thou spur a forward
 horse!

If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
 I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness,
 And spit upon him, whilst I say, he lies,
 And lies, and lies: there is my bond of faith
 To thee to my strong correction.

As I intend to thrive in this new world,
 Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal:
 Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolk say,
 That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men
 To execute the noble duke at Calais.

Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a
 sure,

That Norfolk lies: here do I throw down this,
 If he may be repeal'd to try his honour. [surrey, Boling. These differences shall all rest under Till Norfolk be repeal'd: repeal'd he shall be,
 And, though mine enemy, restor'd again
 To all his land and seignories; when he's re-turn'd.

Against Aumerle we will enforce his trial.
 Cer. That honourable day shall ne'er be seen.—

Give Richard leave to live till Richard die!

You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says—ay.

North. My lord, in the base court he doth attend
To speak with you;—may't please you to come down!

K. Rich. Down, down, I come; like glistering
Waiting the manège of unspily jades.

[North. retires to Boling.]
In the base court? Base court, where knaves grow huse,

To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.
In the base court! Come down! Down, court!
down knave!

For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks should sing.

[Exeunt, from above.]

Bobyn. What says his majesty?

North. Sorrow and grief of heart
Makes him speak fondly, like a frantic man:
Yet he is come.

Enter King Richard, and his Attendants below.

Boling. Stand all apart,

And show fair duty to his majesty.—

My gracious lord,— [Kneeling.]

K. Rich. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knee.

To make the base earth proud with kissing it:
Me rather had, my heart might feel your love,
Than my unpleas'd eye see your courtesy.

Up, cousin, up; your heart is up, I know,
Thus high at least [touching his own head], although your knee be low.

Boling. My gracious lord, I come but for mine own.

K. Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,
As my true service shall deserve your love.

K. Rich. Well you deserve:—They well deserve to have,

That know the stroug'at and surest way to get.—
Uncle, give me your hand: my, dry your eyes;

Tears show that love, but want their remedies.—
Cousin, I am too young to be your father,

'T'ough you are old enough to be my heir.
What you will have, I'll give, and willing too;

For do we meet, what force will have us do.—
Set on towards London:—Cousin, is it so?

Boling. Yes, my good lord.
K. Rich. Then I must not say, no.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Langley. The Duke of York's Garden.

Enter the Queen and two Ladies.

Queen. What sport shall we devise here in this garden,

To drive away the heavy thought of care?

1 Lady. Madam, we'll play at bowls.

Queen. 'Twill make me think,
The world is full of rubs, and that my fortune
Runs 'gainst the bias.

1 Lady. Madam, we will dance.

Queen. My legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief:

'Therefore, no dancing, girl: some other sport.

1 Lady. Madam, we'll tell tales.

Queen. Of sorrow, or of joy?

1 Lady. Of either, madam.

Queen. Of neither, girl:
For if of joy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of sorrow;
Or if of grief, being altogether had,
It adds more sorrow to my want of joy:

For what I have, I need not to repeat;
And what I want, it boots not to complain.

1 Lady. Madam, I'll sing.

Queen. 'Tis well, that thou hast cause;
But thou should'st please me better, would'st thou
weep.

1 Lady. I could weep, madam, would it do you good.

Queen. And I could weep, would weeping do me good.

And never borrow any tear of thee.

But stay, here come the gardeners:

Let's step into the shadow of these trees.—

Enter Gardener and two Servants.

My wretchedness unto a row of pins.

They'll talk of state: for every one doth so

Against a change: Woe is forerun with woe.

[Queen and Ladies retire.]

Gard. Go, bind thou up yon dangle sprawks,
Which, like unruly children, make their sire
Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight:

Give some suppittance to the bleeding twigs—
Go thou, and, like an executioner,

Cut off the heads of too-fast-growing sprays,
That look too lofty in our commonwealth:

All must be even in our government.—
You thus employ'd, I will go root away

The noisome weeds, that without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

1 Serv. Why should we, in the compass of a Keep law, and form, and due proportion. [Pause.]

Showing, as in a model, our firm estate.

When our sea-walled garden, the whole land,
Is full of weeds; her fairest flowers cluk'd up,

Her fruit-trees all unprun'd, her hedges ruin'd,
Her knots disorder'd, and her wholesome herbs

Swarming with caterpillars!

Gard. Hold thy peace:—
He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd spring,
Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf:

The weeds, that his broad-spreading leaves did shelter,

That seem'd in eating him to hold him up,
Are pluck'd up, root and all, by Bolingbroke;

I mean the earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

1 Serv. What, are they dead?

Gard. They are; and Bolingbroke
Hath seiz'd the wasteful king.—O! what pity is it,

That he had not so trimm'd and dress'd his land,
As we this garden! We at time of year

Do wound the bark, the skin of our fruit-trees;

Least, being over-proud with sap and blood,
With too much riches it confound itself.

Had he done so to great and growing men,

They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taste
Their fruits of duty. All superfluous branches

We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:
Had he done so, himself had born the crown,

Which waste of idle hours hath quite thrown
down.

1 Serv. What, think you then, the king shall Gard. Depress'd he is already; and depress'd.

'Tis doubt, he will be: Letters came last night
To a dear friend of the good duke of York's,

That tell black tidings.

Queen. O, I am press'd to death,
Through want of speaking!—'Thou, old Adam's likeness, [Coming from her confinement]

Set to dress this garden, how darest [news]
'Thy harsh rude tongue sound this unpleasant

What Eve, what serpent hath suggested thee
To make a second fall of cursed man?

Why dost thou say, king Richard is depress'd?
Darest thou, thou little better think than I.

And sends alliance, and true faith of heart,
To his most royal person: hither come
Even at his feet to lay my arms and power,
Provided that, my banishment repeal'd,
And lands restor'd again, be freely granted:
If not, I'll use the advantage of my power,
And lay the summer's dust with showers of blood,
Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd English-
men:—

The wilkin', how far off from the mud of Boling-
Broke
It is, such a lion's tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of our king Kicke's land,
My sloping duty tenderly as I show.
Go, signify as much; while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain.— [Northumberland advances to the castle, with a trumpet.

Let's march without the noise of threatening drum,
That from the castle's tower'd battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perceiv'd:
Methinks, king Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water, when their thundering shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water:
The rage be his, while on the earth I rain
My waters; on the earth, and not on him.
March on, and mark king Richard how he looks.

A horn sounded, and answered by another trumpet within. Flourish. Enter on the walls King Richard, the Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle, Scroop, and Salisbury.

York. See, see, king Richard doth himself appear, as doth the blushing discontented sun,
From out the fiery portal of the east;
When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory, and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.
Yet looks he like a king; behold, his eyes,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth
Controlling majesty; Alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm should stain so fair a show!
K. Rich. We are amaz'd; and thus long have we stood. [To North.

To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,
Because we thought ourself thy lawful king;
And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful duty to our presence?
If we be not, show us the hand of God
That hath dismiss'd us from our stewardship;
For well we know, no hand of blood and bones
Can gripe the sacred handle of our sceptre,
Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.
And though you think that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls, by turning them from us,
And we are barren, and bereft of friends;—
Yet know,—my master, God omnipotent,
Is mustering in his clouds, on our behalf,
Armies of pestilence: and they shall strike
Your children, yet unborn and unbegot,
That lift your vassal hands against my head,
And threaten the glory of my precious crown.
Tell Bolingbroke (for you'd, methinks, he is),
That every stroke he makes upon my land
Is dangerous treason: He is come to ope
The purple testament of bleeding war;
But ere the crown he looks for live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons
Shall in become the flower of England's face;
Change the complexion of her mud-pale peace
To scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her pastures' grass with faithful English blood.

North. The king of heaven forbid, our lord the Should so with civil and unenvil arms [king

Be rush'd upon! Thy three-hundred cousin,
Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand;
And by the honourable tomb he swears,
That stands upon thy royal grandfather's bones,
And by the royalties of both your bloods,
Currents that spring from one most gracious head,
And by the buried hand of warlike Gaunt;
And by the worth and honour of himself,
Comprising all that may be sworn or said,—
His coming hither hath no further scope,
Than for his lived royalties, and to have Enfranchisement immediate on his knees;
Which on thy royal party granted once,
His glittering arms he will commend to rust,
His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart
To faithful service of your majesty.
This swears he, as he is a prince, is just;
And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him.

K. Rich. Northumberland, say,—thus the king returns:

His noble cousin is right welcome hither;
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commands—
We do desire ourselves, cousin, do we not,
[To Aun.

To look so poorly, and to speak so fair!
Shall we call back Northumberland, and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die? [words,
Aun. No, my good lord; let's fight with gentle Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful
words.

K. Rich. O God! O God! that e'er this tongue
That had the sentence of dread banishment
On you proud man, should take it off again
With words of smooth! O, that I were as great
As is my grief, or lesser than my name!
Or that I could forget what I have been!
Or not remember what I must be now! [hent, Sweet'st thou, proud heart? I'll give thee scope to Since thou have scope to beat both thee and me.
Aun. Northumberland comes back from Bollingbroke. [the solemn,

K. Rich. What must the king do now? Must
The king shall do it. Must he be depriv'd!
The king shall be contented. Must he lose
The name of king? O God's name, let it go:
I'll give my jewels for a set of beads;
My gorgeous palace, for a hermitage;
My gay apparel, for an alms-man's gown;
My figur'd goblets, for a dish of wood;
My sceptre, for a palmer's walking-staff;
My subjects, for a pair of carved saints;
And my large kingdom, for a little grave,
A little hole in the earth, an obscure grave;
Or I'll be buried in the king's highway,
Some way of common trade, where subjects' feet
May hourly trample on their sovereign's head:
For on my heart they tread, now whilst I live;
And, buried once, why not upon my head?—
Aumerle, thou weep'st; My tender-hearted cousin!
We'll make foul weather with despondent tears!
Our sighs, and they, shall lodge the summer sun,
And make a death in this revolving land.
Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding tears?
As thus;—I'll drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
Within the earth; and, therein laid,—There lies
Two kinsmen, dy'd; their graves with weeping eyes!
Would not this ill do well?—Well, well, I see
I talk but idly, and you mock at me.—
Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland,
What says king Bolingbroke? will his majesty

If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it.

I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.
Scrop. Peace have they made with him, indeed, my lord. [demonstrates]

K. Rich. O villains, vipers, damn'd without redemption, easily won to fawn on any man! [heart] Snakes in my heart-blod warm'd, that sting my 'Three Judasses, each one three worse than Judas! Would they make peace? 'terrible hell make war Upon their spotted souls for this offence! [percy] Scrop. Sweet love, I see, changing his posture to the sourd and most deadly hate:— Again scourge their souls; their peace is made With hands, and not with hands: those whom you curse.

Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound, And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.
Arm. Is Dooly, Green, and the eurl of Wiltshire, dead?

Scrop. Yea, all of them at Bristol lost their Arm. Where is the duke my father, with his power?

K. Rich. No matter where; of comfort no man Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs; Blask dust our paper, and with rainy eyes Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.

Let's choose executors, and talk of wills; And yet not so,—for what can we bequeath, Save our deposed bodies to the ground? Our lands, our lives, and a l're Bolingbroke's, And nothing can we call our own, but death;

And that small model of the barren earth, Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.

For heaven's sake, let us sit upon the ground, And tell sad stories of the death of kings:— How some have been deposed, some slain in war,

Some haunted by the ghosts they have deposed; Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd; All murder'd:—For within the hallow'd crown, That rounds the mortal temples of a king,

Keeps death his court; and there the sniv'ling ants, Scuttling his state, and grinning at his pomp; Allowing him a breath, a little scene,

To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks; Infusing him with self and vain conceit,— As if this flesh, which walls about our life,

Were brass impregnable, and humour'd thus, Comes at the last, and with a little pin [king] Bores through his castle wall, and—farewell! Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood

With solemn reverence; throw away respect, Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty,

For you have but mistook me all this while: I live with bread like you, feel want, taste grief, Need friends.—Subjected thus,

How can you say to me—I am a king? [worcester] Car. My lord, wise men ne'er wait their present But presently prevent the ways to wait.

To fear the foe, since fear opposeth strength, Gives, in your weakness, strength unto your foe, And so your foibles fight against yourself.

Fear, and be slain; no worse can come, to fight: And fight and die, is death destroying death; Where fearing dying, pays death servile breath.

Arm. My father hath a power, acquire of him; And learn to make a body of a limb.

K. Rich. These child's me well:—Proud Bolingbroke, I come To change blows with thee for our day of doom.

Thisague-bit of fear is over-blown; An easy task it is, to win our own.— Say, Scrop, where lies our uncle with his power? Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.

Scrop. Men judge by the complexion of the sky The state and inclination of the day;

So may you by my dull and heavy eye.

My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say. I play the torturer, by small and small, To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken:— Your uncle York hath join'd with Bolingbroke; And all your northern castles yielded up, And all your southern gentlemen in arms Upon his party.

K. Rich. Thou hast said enough— Besrewh thee, cousin, when dost lead me forth [To Aumerle].

Of that sweet way I was in to despair! [worcester] What say you now? What comfort have we By heaven, I'll hate him everlastingly,

That bids me be of comfort any more. Go to Flint castle; there I'll pine away; A king, woe's slave, shall knively woe obey.

That power I have, discharge; and let them go To ear the land that hath some hope to grow, For I have none:—Let no man speak again To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Arm. My liege, one word. [K. Rich.] He does me double wrong That wounds me with the flatness of his tongue.

Discharge my followers, let them hence:—Away From Richard's sight, to Bolingbroke's fur day. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Wales. Before Flint Castle.

Enter, with drums and colours, Bolingbroke and Forces; York, Northumberland, and others.

Boling. So that by this intelligence we learn, The Welshmen are dispers'd; and Salisbury Is come to meet the king, who lately landed.

With some few private friends, upon this coast. North. The news is very fair, and good, my lord; Richard, not far from hence, hath had his head.

York. It would become the lord Northumberland, To say—king Richard:—Alack, the heavy day, When such a sacred king should hide his head!

North. Your grace mistakes me; only to be woe Let I his title out. The time hath been,

York. Would you have been so brief with him, he would Have been so brief with you, to shorten you, For taking so the head, your whole head's length.

Boling. Mistake not, uncle, further than you should. [should] York. Take not, good cousin, further than you

Let you mistake: The heavens are o'er your head. Boling. I know it, uncle; and oppose not Myself against their will.—But who comes here?

Enter Percy.

Well, Harry; what, wilt not this castle yield? Percy. The castle royally is manau'd, my lord, Against thy entrance.

Boling. Royally! Why, it contains no king? Percy. Yes, my good lord, It doth contain a king; king Richard lies Within the limits of yon line and stone:

And with him are the lord Aumerle, lord Salisbury, Sir Stephen Scrop; besides a clergyman Of holy reverence, who, I cannot name.

North. Believe it, it is the bishop of Carlisle. Boling. Noble lord, [To North] Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle;

Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parle Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver. Harry Bolingbroke

On both his knees, doth kiss king Richard's hand

SCENE II. — The Coast of Wales. A Castle in view.

Flourish. Drums and Trumpets. Enter King Richard, Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle, and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Burroughly castle call you this at hand? [the air,]
Aum. Yes, my lord. How brooks your grace After late toiling on the breaking seas? [Joy,
K. Rich. Needs must I like it well: I weep for To stand upon my kinsmen once again. —
 Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
 Though rebels wound thee with their horses' hoofs:

As a lean parted mother with her child [sine:
 Plays fondly with her tears, and smiles in meet-
 So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my earth,
 And do thee favour with my royal hands.
 Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth.
 Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense:
 But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom,
 And heavy-tailed toads, lie in their way;
 Doing vengeance to the treacherous feet.
 Watch with usurping steps do trample thee.
 Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies:
 And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,
 Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder;
 Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
 Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies.
 Mock not my sensesless conjuration, lords:
 This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
 Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king
 Shall falter under foul rebellious arms.

Bishop. Fear not, my lord; that Power, that made you king,
 Hath power to keep you king, in spite of all.
 The means that heaven yields must be embraced,
 And not neglected; else, if heaven would,
 And we will not, heaven's offer we refuse:
 The proffer'd means of succour and redress.
Aum. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss;

Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
 Grows strong and great, in substance, and in friends. [not,

K. Rich. Uncomfortable cousin! know'st thou
 That when the searching eye of heaven is hid
 Behind the globe, and lights the lower world,
 Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen,
 In murders, and in outrage, bloody here;
 But when, from under this terrestrial ball,
 He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines,
 And darts his light through every guilty hole,
 Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,
 The cloak of night being pluck'd from off their backs,

Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves!
 So when this thief, this traitor, Bolingbroke, —
 Who all this while hath revel'd in the night,
 Whilst we were wand'ring with the antipodes, —
 Shall see us rising in our thirms the east,
 His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
 Not able to endure the sight of day,
 But, self-affrighted, tremble at his sin.
 Not all the water in the rough rude sea
 Can wash the beam from an unworried king:
 The breath of worldly men cannot depose
 The deputy elected by the Lord:
 For every man that Bolingbroke hath press'd
 To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown,
 God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
 A glorious angel: then, if angels fight,
 Weak men must fall; for heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury.

Welcome, my lord. How far off lies your power?
Sal. Not near, nor further off, my gracious lord,
 Than this weak arm: Discomfort guides my tongue,
 And bids me speak of nothing but despair.
 One day too late, I fear, my noble lord,
 Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth:
 O, call back yesterday, bid time return, [men:
 And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting
 To-day, to-day, unhappy day, too late,
 O'erthrow thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy state;
 For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wert dead,
 Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers'd and fled.

Aum. Comfort, my liege: why looks your grace so pale?
K. Rich. But now, the blood of twenty thousand
 Did triumph in my face, and they are fled;
 And, till so much blood thither come again,
 Have I not reason to look pale and deal?
 All souls that will be safe, fly from my side;
 For time hath set a blot upon my pride. [are.

Aum. Comfort, my liege, remember who you
K. Rich. I had forgot myself: Am I not king?
 Awake thou sluggard majesty! thou sleepest.
 Is not the king's name forty thousand names?
 Arm, arm, my name! a penny subject strikes
 At thy great glory. — Look not to the ground,
 Ye favourites of a king: Are we not high?
 High be our thoughts: I know, my uncle York Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who Comes here?

Enter Scroop.

Scroop. More health and happiness betide my liege,
 Than can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him.
K. Rich. Mine ear is open, and my heart prepared;

The worst is worldly loss, thou canst unfold.
 Say, in my kingdom lost I why, 'twas my care;
 And what loss is it to be rid of care?
 Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
 Greater he shall not be; if he serve God,
 We'll serve him too, and be his follow so:
 Revolt our subjects? that we cannot use;
 They break their faith to God, as well as us:
 Cry woe, destruction, ruin, loss, decay;
 The worst is — d. a. n. and death will have his day.

Scroop. Glad am I, that your highness is so arm'd

To bear the tidings of calamity.
 Like an unseasonable stormy day,
 Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores,
 As if the world were all dissolved to tears;
 So high above his limits swells the rage
 Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land
 With hard bright steel, and hearts harder than steel.

White beards have arm'd their thin and hairless scalps

Against thy majesty: boys, with women's voices,
 Strive to speak big, and clap their female joints
 In stiff unwieldy arms against thy crown:
 Thy very headmen learn to bend their bows
 Of double fatal yew against thy state;
 Yes, distaff-women manage rusty bills
 Against thy seat: both young and old rebel,
 And all grow worse than I have power to tell.

K. Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'st a tale so ill

Where is the earl of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
 What is become of Bushy? where is Green?
 That they have let the dangerous enemy
 Measure our confines with such peevish steps?

Bolton. Ah I was banish'd, I was banish'd Here-
But as I come, I come for Lancaster. [loud]
And, noble uncle, I beseech your grace,
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye:
You are my father, for, methinks, in you
I see old Gaunt alive; O then, my father!
Will you permit that I shall stand condemn'd
A wand'ring vagabond, my rights and royalties
Pluck'd from my arms, perforce, and given away
To upstart untitlings! Wherefore was I born
If that my cousin king be king of England,
It must be granted, I am duke of Lancaster.
You have a son, Aumerle, my noble kinsman;
Had you first died, and he been thus trod down,
He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father,
To rouse his wrongs, and chase them to the bay.
I am denied to sue my livery here.

And yet my letters-patent give me leave:
My father's goods are all distraint'd, and sold;
And these, and all, are all amiss employ'd.
What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And challenge law: Attornies are denied me;
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To my inheritance of free descent. [aloud]

North. The noble duke hath been too much
Ross. It stands your grace upon, to do him right.
Will. Base men by his endowments are made great. [this]

York. My lords of England, let me tell you
I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him right:
But in this kind to come, in braving arms,
Be his own carver, and cut out his way.
To find out right with wrong,—it may not be;
And you that do shet him in this kind,
Cherish rebellion, and are rebels all. [is]

North. The noble duke hath sworn, his coming
But for his own: and, for the right of that,
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid;
And let him ne'er see joy that breaks that oath.

York. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms;
I cannot mend it, I must needs curse them.
Because my power is weak, and all ill left:
But, if I could, by Him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoop
Unto the sovereign mercy of the king;
But, since I cannot, be it known to you,
I do remain as neuter. So, fare you well;
Unless you please to enter in the castle,
And there repose you for this night.

Bolton. An offer, uncle, that we will accept
But we must win your grace, to go with us
To Bristol castle; which, they say, is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their complices,
The caterpillars of the commonwealth.
Which I have sworn to weed, and pluck away.

York. It may be, I will go with you:—but yet
I'll pause;

For I am loath to break our country's laws.
Nor friends, nor foes, to me welcome you are:
Things past redress, are now with me past care.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Camp in Wales.

Enter Salisbury and a Captain.

Capt. My lord of Salisbury, we have staid ten
And hardly kept our countrymen together. [days],
And yet we hear no tidings from the king;
Therefore we will disperse ourselves: farewell.

Sol. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welsh-
The king repenseth all his confidence [man];
In thee. [stay]

Capt. 'Tis thought the king is dead; we will not
The lay-trees in our country are all wither'd,

And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven.
The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth,
And lean-look'd propheta whayer fearful change;
Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and leap,—
The one, in fear to lose what they enjoy
The other, to enjoy by rape and war:
These signs forewarn the death or fall of kings—
Farewell: our countrymen are gone and dead,
As well as our'd, Richard their king is dead. [Exit.]

Sol. Ah, Richard! with the eyes of heavy maul,
I see thy glory, like a shooting star,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament!
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest;
Thy friends are fled, to wait upon thy foes;
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Bolingbroke's Camp at Bristol.

Enter Bolingbroke, York, Northumberland, Percy, Willoughby, Ross; Officers behind, with Bushy and Green, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men.—
Bushy, and Green, I will not vex your souls
(Since presently your souls must part your bodies,)
With too much urging your pernicious lives.
For 'twere no charity: yet, to wash your blood
From off my hands, here, in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your death.
You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and defigur'd clean.
You have, in manner, with your sinful hours,
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him;
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears drawn from her eyes by your foul wrong.

Myself—a prince, by fortune of my birth;
Near to the king in blood; and near in love,
Till you did make him misinterpret me,—
Have stoop'd my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment:
Whilst you have fed upon your seignories,
Dispar'd my parks, and fell'd my forest woods;
From my own windows torn my household coat,
Raz'd out my impress, leaving me no sign—
Save men's opinions, and my living blood,—
To show the world I am a gentleman. [this]
This, and much more, much more than twice all Condemns you to the death:—See them deliver'd
over

To execution and the hand of death. [me.]

Bushy. More welcome is the stroke of death to Than Bolingbroke to England.—Lords, farewell.

Green. My comfort is, that heaven will take our souls,
And plague injustice with the pains of hell.

Boling. My lord Northumberland, see them despatch'd.

[Exeunt Northumberland and others, with prisoners.]

Uncle, you say, the queen is at your house:
For heaven's sake, fairly let her be entreated
To tell her, I send to her my kind commands:
Take special care my greetings be deliver'd.

York. A gentleman of mine I have despatch'd
With letters of your love to her at large [away];

Boling. Thanks, gentle uncle.—Come, lords,
To fight with Glendower and his complices.
Whilst to work, and, after, holiday. [Exeunt.]

Bolton. No; I'll to Ireland to his majesty.
Farewell! if heart's pressure he not vain,
We three here part, that we'll again meet again.

Bolton. That's as York thives to beat back Bolingbroke.
Greene. Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes
Is numbring sands, and drinking oceans dry;
Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.
Bolton. Farewell at once; for once, for all, and Greene. Well, we may meet again. [ever.
Bolton. I fear me, never. [Exit all.

SCENE III.—The Woods in Gloucestershire.

Enter Bolingbroke and Northumberland, with Forces.

Bolton. How far is it, my lord, to Berkley now?
North. Believe me, noble lord,
I am a stranger here in Gloucestershire.
I see high wild hills, and rough uneven ways,
Draw out our miles, and make them wearisome:
And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.
But, I bethink me, what a weary way
From Ravensburg to Cotswold, will be found
In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company;
Which, I protest, hath very much beguil'd
The tediousness and process of my travel:
But theirs is sweeten'd with the hope to have
The present benefit which I possess:
And hope to joy, a little less in joy,
Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords
Shall make their way seem short; as mine hath done.
By sight of what I have, your noble company.
Bolton. Of much less value is my company,
Than your good words. But who comes here?

Enter Harry Percy.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever—
Harry, how fares your uncle?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the queen? [court,
Percy. No, my good lord; he hath forsook the Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd
The household of the king.

North. What was his reason?
He was not so resolv'd, when last we spake together.

Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed
But he, my lord, is gone to Ravensburg. [traitor
To offer service to the duke of Hereford;
And sent me over by Berkley, to discover
What power the duke of York had levied there;
Then with direction to repair to Ravensburg.

North. Have you forgot the duke of Hereford,
boy?

Percy. No, my good lord: for that is not forgot,
Which never I did remember: to my knowledge,
I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now; this is the Percy. My gracious lord, I tender you my service as it is, being tender, raw, and young; [vice,
Which elder days shall ripen, and confirm
To more approved service and desert.

Bolton. I thank thee, gentle Percy: and be sure,
I count myself in making else so happy,
As in a soul remembering my good friends;
And, as my fortune ripens with thy love,
It shall be still thy true love's recompense:
My heart thus covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.

North. How far is it to Berkley? And what's it Keeps good old York there, with his men of war?
Percy. There stands the castle, by you talk of trees.

Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard;
And in it are the lords of York, Berkley, and Seymour else of name, and noble estimate. [mour;

Enter Ross and Willoughby.

North. Here come the lords of Ross and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

Bolton. Welcome, my lords: I wot your love
A banish'd traitor; all my treasury [pursues
Is yet but unfit thanks, which, more enrich'd,
Shall be your love and labour's recompense.

Ross. Your presence makes us rich, most noble
lord.

Will. And far surmounts our labour to attain it.
Bolton. Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor;

Which, till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty. But who comes here?

Enter Berkley.

North. It is my lord of Berkley, as I guess.
Berk. My lord of Hereford, my message is to you.

Bolton. My lord, my answer is—to Lancaster;
And I am come to seek that name in England;
And I must find that title in your tongue.

Before I make reply to aught you say. [meaning, Berk. Mistake me not, my lord;—'tis not my
To raise one title of your honour out:—

To you, my lord, I come [what lord you will],
From the most glorious regent of this land.
The duke of York; to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time.
And fight our native peace with self-born arms.

Enter York, attended.

Bolton. I shall not need transport my words by
you;

Here comes his grace in person.—My noble uncle!
[Kneels.

York. Show me thy humble heart, and not thy Whose duty is deceivable and false. [kneels,

Bolton. My gracious uncle!—

York. Tut, tut!

Grace me no grace, nor uncle me no uncle.
I am no traitor's uncle; and that word—grace,
In an ungracious mouth, is but profane.

Why have these banish'd and forbidden legs
Dare'd once to touch a dust of England's ground?

But then more why?—Why have they dar'd to
So many miles upon her peaceful bosom; [march
Fighting her pale-faced villages with war,
And occupation of despoiled arms?

Com'st thou because the mounted king is hence?
Why, foolish boy, the king is left behind,
And in my loyal bosom lies his power.

Were I but now the lord of such hot youth.
As when brave Gault, thy father, and myself, Rescued the Black Prince, that young Mars of
men.

From forth the ranks of many thousand French;
O, then, how quickly should this arm of mine,
Now prammer to the palsy, chase thee thee.

And minister correction to thy fault! [fault;

Bolton. My gracious uncle, let me know my
On what condition stands it, and wherein?

York. Even in condition of the worst degree.—
In gross rebellion, and the sacred treason:
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come,
Before the expiration of thy time,
In braving arms against thy sovereign.

Divides one thing entire to many objects;
Like perspectives, which, rightly gaz'd upon,
Show nothing but confusion: ey'd awry,
Disturbance form; so your sweet majesty,
Looking awry upon your lord's departure,
Finds shapes of griefs, more than himself, to wail:
Which, look'd on as it is, is sought but
Of what it is not. Then, thrice-gracious queen,
More than your lord's departure weep not;
None's not seen:

Or if it be, 'tis with false sorrow's eye,
Which, for things true, weeps things imaginary.
Queen. It may be so; but yet my inward soul
Persuades me, it is otherwise: How'er it be,
I cannot but be sad; so heavy sad.
As—though, in thinking, on no thought I think—
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bushy. 'Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious lady

Queen. 'Tis nothing less: conceit is still deriv'd
From some fore-father grief; mine is not so:
For nothing hath begot my something grief;
Or something hath the nothing that I grieve;
'Tis in reversion that I do possess;
But what it is, that is not yet known: what
I cannot name: 'tis nameless woe, I wot.

Enter Green.

Green. God save your majesty!—and well meet,
gentlemen,
I hope, the king is not yet shipp'd for Ireland.

Queen. Why hast thou not? 'tis better hope he is:

For his designs crave haste, his haste good hope:
Then wherefore dost thou hope, he is not shipp'd?

Green. That he, our hope, might have retir'd his power,

And driven into despair an enemy's hope,
Who strongly hath set footing in this land;
The murther'd Bolingbroke speaks himself,
And with uplifted arms is safe arriv'd
At Ravenspurge.

Queen. Now God in heaven forbid!
Green. O, madam, 'tis too true; and that is worse:—

The lord Northumberland, his young son Henry
The lords of Rame, Beaumont, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends, are fled to him.

Bushy. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland,

And all the rest of the revolting faction,
Traitors?

Green. We have: whereon the earl of Worth hath broke his staff, resign'd his stewardship,
And all the household servants fled with him
To Bolingbroke.

Queen. So, Green, thou art the midwife to my
And Bolingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir: [Weeps]
Now hath my soul brought forth her prickly;
And I, a gasping new-deliver'd mother,
Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join'd.

Bushy. Despair not, madam.

Queen. Who shall hinder me?
I will despair, and be at enmity
With crizzling hope; he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper-back of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter York.

Green. Here comes the duke of York.
Queen. With signs of war about his aged neck;
O, full of careful business are his looks!—

Uncle.

For heaven's sake, speak comfortable words.
York. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts:

Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth.
Where nothing lives, but craves care, and grief.
Your husband he is gone to save far off,
Whilst others come to make him lose at home:
Here am I left to underprop this land:
Who, weak with age, cannot support myself—
Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made;
Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, your son was gone before I came.
York. He was!—Why so!—go all which way it will!

The nobles they are fled, the commons cold,
And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side.—
Sirrah,

Get thee to Plashy, to my sister Gloster;
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound;
Hold, take my ring.

Serv. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lord-to day, as I came by, I call'd there:— [knapsack]
But I shall grave you to report the rest.

York. What is it, knave?

Serv. An hour before I came, the duchess died.
York. God for his mercy! what a tide of woes
Comes rushing on this woeful land at once!

I know not what to do. I would to God,
(So my untruth had not provok'd him to it),
The king had cut off my head with my brother's—
What, are there posts despatch'd for Ireland?—
How shall we do for money for these wars?—
Come, sister—cousin, I would say; pray, pardon
me.—

Go, fellow, [to the Servant.] get thee home, proand bring away the armour that is there.—

[Exit Servant]
Gentlemen, will you go muster men? If I know
How, or which way, to order these affairs,
Thus thrust disorderly into my hands,

Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen;
The one's my sovereign, whom both my oath
And duty binds defend; the other again,
Is my kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd;

Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right.
Well, somewhat we must do.—Come, cousin, I'll Dispose of you:—Go, muster up your men,
And meet me presently at Berkley-castle.

I should to Plashy too;—
But time will not permit:—All is uneven,
And every thing is left at six and seven.

[Exit York and Queen.]
Bushy. The wind sits fair for news to go to Ireland, but none returns. For us to levy power, [knapsack]
Propertionable to the enemy,
Is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the king is near the hate of those love not the king.

Bayot. And that's the wavering common: for their love

Lies in their purses; and whose empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bayot. If judgment be in them, then so do we,
Because we ever have been near the king.

Green. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Heralds
The earl of Wiltshire is already there. [knapsack]
Bushy. Thither will I with you: for little office
The hateful common will perform for us;
Except, like curs, to tear us all to pieces.—
Will you go along with us?

York. O, my liege,
Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, pleas'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and grue into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just? and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from time
His charters, and his customary rights;
Let not to-morrow then ensue to-day;
Be not thyself, for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God! (God forbid, I say true!)
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters patent that he hath
By his attorneys-general to sue
His livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will; we seize into our hands

His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.
York. 'I'll not be by, the while: My liege, fare-
well:

What will ensue hereon? there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood.
That their events can never fall out good. [Exit.]

K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire Bid him repair to us to Ely-house, (straight;
To see this business: To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow;
And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England,
For he is just, and always lov'd us well.—
Come on, our queen: to-morrow we must part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short. [Flourish.]

[*Exeunt King, Queen, Bushy, Aumerle,
Green, and Bagot.*]

North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead.

Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.
Will. Barely in title, not in revenue.

North. Richly in both, if justice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great; but it must break with a curse.

Ere't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue.

North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him ne'er speak more.

That speaks thy words again, to do thee harm!

Will. Tends that thou'dst speak, to the duke of
It is he so, out with it boldly, man; [Hereford?]

Quick is mine ear, to hear of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all, that I can do for him;

Unless you call it good, to pity him,

Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.

North. Now, afore heaven, 'tis shame such wounds are borne,

In him a royal prince, and many more
Of noble blood in this declining land.

The king is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers; and what they will inform,

Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all.

That will the king severely prosecute

'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.

Ross. The common hath he pill'd with grievous taxes.

And lost their hearts: the nobles hath he fin'd
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Will. And daily new exactions are devis'd;
As blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what;

But what, o' God's name, doth become of this!

North. Wars have not wasted it, for warr'd he
But basely yielded upon compromise. [Hath not,
That which his ancestors achieved with blows?

More hath he spent in peace, than they in wars.

Ross. The earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.

Will. The king's crown bankrupt, like a broken North. Reproach, and dissolution, hangeth over
him.

Ross. He hath not money for these Irish wars
His burdensome taxations notwithstanding,

But by the rubbing of the banish'd duke. [King?]

North. His noble kinsman: most degenerate
But lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,

Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm:

We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish. [For,

Ross. We see the very wreck that we must suffer, and unavoids is the danger now.

For suffering so the causes of our wreck. [Death,

North. Not so; even through the hollow eyes of
I spy life peering; but I dare not say

How near the tilings of our comfort is.

Will. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as 'thou dost ours.

Ross. Be confident to speak, Northumberland:
We three are but thyself, and, speaking so,

Thy words are but as thoughts: therefore, be bold.

North. Then thus:—I have from Port le Blanc,
In Brittany, receiv'd intelligence, [a bay

That Harry Hereford, Reginald lord Cobham,
[The son of Richard Earl of Arundel,]

That late broke from the duke of Exeter,
His brother, archbishop late of Canterbury,

Sir Thomas Erpingham, sir John Ramston,
Sir John Norbery, sir Robert Waterton, and Fraunce

as Quaint,—

All these, well furnish'd by the duke of Bretagne,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of war,

Are making hither with all due expedience,
And shortly mean to touch our northern shore:

Perhaps, they had ere this; but that they stay
The first departing of the king for Ireland.

If then we shall shake off our slavish yoke,
Imp out our drooping country's broken wing,

Redeem from broking pawn the hlemish'd crown,
Wipe off the dust that hides our sceptre's gilt,

And make high majesty look like itself,
Away, with me in post to Ravenspuiſe!

But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay and be secret, and myself will go. [That fear,

Ross. To horse, to horse! I urge doubts to them Will. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen, Bushy, and Bagot.

Bushy. Madam, your majesty is too much sad:

You promis'd, when you parted with the king,
To lay aside life-harming heaviness,

And entertain a cheerful disposition. [myself,

Queen. To please the king, I did; to please
I cannot do it; yet I know no cause

Why I should welcome such a guest as grief,
Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest

As my sweet Richard! Yet, again, methinks,
Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortune's womb,

Is coming towards me; and my inward soul
With nothing troubles: at something it grieves,

More than with parting from my lord the king.

Bushy. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,

Which show like grief itself, but are not so:

For sorrow's eye, glazed with blinding tears,

This land of such dear souls, this dear dear land,
 Dear for her reputation through the world,
 Is now leas'd out (I die pronouncing it)
 Like to a teneament, or pelting farm;
 England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
 Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
 Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
 With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds;
 That England, that was wont to conquer others,
 Hath made a shameful conquest of itself:
 O, would the scandal vanish with my life,
 How happy then were my ensuing death!

Enter King Richard and Queen: Aunrie, Bushy, Green, Bagot, Ross, and Willoughby.

York. The king is come: deal mildly with his youth; [more.
 For young hot colts, being mad, do rage the Queen. How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster?
K. Rich. What comfort, man? How is't with aged Gaunt? [upon!

Gaunt. O, how that name hefts my compos-
 Old Gaunt, indeed; and gaunt in being old:
 Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast;
 And who abstains from meat, that is not gaunt?
 For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;
 Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt:
 The pleasures that some fathers feed upon,
 Is my strict fast, I mean—my children's looks;
 And, therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt!
 Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave.
 Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.

K. Rich. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?

Gaunt. No, misery makes sport to mock itself:
 Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,
 I mock my name, grant king, to flatter thee.

K. Rich. Shew'st dying men flatter with those that live? [die.

Gaunt. No, no; men living, flatter those that K. Rich. Thou, now a dying, say'st—thou flatter-est me. [be.

Gaunt. Oh! no; thou diest, though I the sicker
K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee
 ill. [three ill;

Gaunt. Now, He that made me, knows I see ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill.

Thy death bed is no less than thy land,
 Wherein thou hast in reputation sick;

And thou, too careless patient as thou art,
 Commit'st thy mangled body to the cure

Of those physicians that first wounded thee:
 A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown;

Whose compass is no bigger than thy head;
 And yet, incaged in so small a verge,

The waste is no whit less than thy land;
 O, had thy grandeur, with a prophet's eye,

Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,
 From forth thy reins he would have laid thy
 shame.

Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,
 Which art possess'd now to depose thyself.

Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
 It were a shame to let this land by lease:

But, for thy world, enjoying but this land,
 Is it not more than shame to shame it so?

Landlord of England art thou now, not king:
 Thy state of law is bondslave to the law;

And thou—
K. Rich. —a lunatic lean-witted fool,

Presuming on an uncle's privilege,
 Darts with thy frozen admonition

Make pale our cheek: chasing the royal blood,
 With fury, from his native residence,

Now by my son's right royal majesty

Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,
 This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head,
 Should run thy head from thy unrevenged shoulders.

Gaunt. O, spare me not, my brother Edward's
 For that I was his father Edward's son;
 That blood already, like the pelican,
 Hast thou tapp'd out, and drunkenly carous'd:

My brother Gloucester, plain well-meaning soul,
 (Whom fair befall in heaven 'mongst happy souls!)
 May be a precedent and witness good,

That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's blood:
 Join with the present sickness that I have;

And thy unkindness be like cracked awe,
 To crop at once a two-long wither'd flower.

Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee!—
 These words hereafter thy turnments be!

Convey me to my bed, then to my grave:
 Love they to live, that love and honour have.

[Exit, borne out by his Attendants.
K. Rich. And let them die, that age and sickness
 have;

For both hast thou, and both become the grave.
York. Beseech your majesty, impute his words

To wayward sickness and age in him:
 He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear

As Harry duke of Hereford, were he here.
K. Rich. Right; your true as Hereford's love, so his:

 As theirs, so mine; and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.
North. My liege, old Gaunt commends his your majesty.

K. Rich. What says he now?
North. Nay, nothing; all is said:

His tongue is now a stringless instrument;
 Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

York. Be York the next that must be bankrupt
 Though death be poor, it ends a mortal war. [so!

K. Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth
 His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be: (he;

So much for that—Now for our Irish wars:
 We must supplant those rough rug-headed kerns;

Which live like venom, where no venom else,
 But only they, hath privilege to live.

And for these great affairs do ask some charge,
 Towards our assistance, we do seek to us

The plate, coin, revenues, and movables,
 Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess'd.

York. How long shall I be patient? Ah, how Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong? (long

Not Gloucester's death, nor Hereford's banishment, Not Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's private

wrongs,
 Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke

About his marriage, nor my own disgrace,
 Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,

Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face.—
 I am the last of noble Edward's sons,

Of whom thy father, prince of Wales, was first;
 In war, was never lion rag'd more fierce,

In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
 Than was that young and princely gentleman:

His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
 Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours:

But, when he frown'd, it was against the French,
 And not against his friends: his noble hand

Did win what he did spend, and spent not that
 Which his triumphant father's hand had won:

His hands were guilty of no kindred's blood,
 But bloody with the enemies of his kin.

O, Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
 Or else he never would compare between.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, what's the matter?

SCENE IV. — The same. A Room in the King's Castle.

Enter King Richard, Bagot, and Green; Aumerle following.

K. Rich. We did observe.—Cousin Aumerle, How far brought you high Hereford on his way? Aum. I brought high Hereford, if you call him so, Not to the next highway, and there I left him.

K. Rich. And say, what store of parting tears were shed? [wind.]

Aum. 'Faith, not by me, except the north-east Which then blew bitterly against our faces, Awak'nt the sleeping rheum; and so, by chance, Did grope our hollow parting with a tear.

K. Rich. What said our cousin, when you parted with him?

Aum. Farewell:

And, for my heart dislained that my tongue Should so profane the word, that taught me craft To counterfeit oppression of such grief, That words seem'd buried in my sorrow's grave. Marry, would the word farewell have lengthen'd hours,

And added years to his short banishment.

He should have had a volume of farewells;

But, since it would not, he had none of me.

K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin; but 'tis doubt, When time shall call him home from banishment,

Whether our kinsman come to see his friends.

Ourself, and Bushy, Bagot here, and Green,

Observe'd his courtship to the common people:—

How he did seem to dive into their hearts,

With humble and familiar courtesy;

What reverence he did throw away on slaves;

Working poor craftsmen, with the craft of smiles,

And patient underbearing of his fortune.

As 'twere, to banish their affects with him.

Off goes his bonnet to an oyster-wench;

A brace of draymen bid—deal speed him well,

And had the tribute of his supple knee.

With—Thanks, my countrymen, my loving friends;—

As were our England in reverence his.

And he our subjects' next degree in hope.

Green. Well! he's gone; and with him go these thoughts.

Now for the rebels, which stand out in Ireland!—

Expedient manage must be made, my liege;

Ere further leisure yield them further means,

For their advantage, and your highness' loss.

K. Rich. We will ourselves in person do this war.

And, for our officers—with too great a court,

And liberal largess,—are grown somewhat light,

We are enforc'd to farm our royal realm;

The revenue whereof shall furnish us

For our affairs in hand: If that come short,

Our substitutes at home shall have blank characters: [rich.]

Whereof, when they shall know what men are

They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold,

And send them after to supply our wants;

For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bushy.

Bushy, what news? [lord:]

Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick, my

Suddenly taken; and hath sent post-haste,

To entreat your majesty to visit him.

K. Rich. Where lies he?

Bushy. At Ely-house. [mind.]

K. Rich. Now put it, heaven, in his physician's

To help him to his grave immediately!

The lining of his coffers shall make coats

To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.—

Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him:
Pray God, we may make haste, and come too late! [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. — London. A Room in Ely-house.

Gaunt on a couch; the Duke of York, and others standing by him.

Gaunt. Will the king come? that I may breathe my last.

York. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your breath:

For all in vain comes counsel to his ear. [men]

Gaunt. O, but they say, the tongues of dying

Enforce attention, like deep harmony;

Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent

In vain: [in pain.]

For they breathe truth, that breathe their words

He, that no more must say, is his end more

Than they whom youth and ease have taught

To glaze: [fore:]

More are men's ends mark'd, than their lives be—

The setting sun, and music at the close.

As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last;

Writ in remembrance, more than thine long past:

Though Richard my life's counsel would not hear,

My death's sad tale may yet un deaf his ear.

York. No; it is stopp'd with other clattering sonnets.

As, praises of his state: then, there are found

Lecherious metres: to whose venom listen

The open ear of youth doth always listen:

Report of fashions in proud Italy;

Whose manners still our tardy apish nation

Limps after in base imitation.

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,

(So it be new, there's no respect how vile,)

'Tis not quickly buzz'd into his ears!

Then all too late comes counsel to be heard,

Where will doth me, my wits wit's regard.

Direct not him, whose way himself will choose;

'Tis breath thou lackest, and that breath wilt thou lose.

Gaunt. Methinks, I am a prophet new inspir'd;

And thus, expiring, do foretell of him:

His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last;

For violent fires soon burn out themselves:

Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;

He tires betimes, that spurs too late betimes;

With eager feeding, food doth choke the feeder.

Light vanity, insatiate covetousness, [land]

Consuming means, soon preys upon itself.

This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,

This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,

This other Eden, demi-paradise;

This fortress, built by nature for herself,

Against infection, and the hand of war;

This happy breed of men, this little world;

This precious stone set in the silver sea,

Which serves in it the office of a wall,

Or as a moat defensive to a house,

Against the envy of less happier lands: [land]

This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this King,

This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,

Fear'd by their breed, and famous by their birth,

Renowned for their deeds as far from home,

(For Christian service, and true chivalry,)

As is the sepulchre, in stubborn Jewry,

Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's son:

K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee.

Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to heaven,
(Our part therein we banish with yourselves.)
To keep the oath that we administer:
You never shall (so help you truth and heaven!)
Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never look upon each other's face;
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Nor. And I, to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk, so far as to mine enemy;—
By this time, had the king permitted us
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh.
As now our flesh is banish'd from this land;
Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

Nor. No, Bolingbroke; if ever I were traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life.
And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence!
But what thou art, heaven, thou, and I do know;
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue.—
Farewell, my liege:—Now no way can I stray;
Save back to England, all the world's my way.

[Exit.]

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy grieved heart; thy sad aspect
Hath from the number of his banish'd years
Pluck'd five away:—Six frozen winters spent,
Return (to Boling.) with welcome home from banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word!
Four legging winters, and four weather springs,
End in a word! Such is the breath of kings.

Genst. I thank my liege, that, in regard of me,
He shortens four years of my son's exile:
But little vantage shall I reap thereby;
For, ere the six years, that he hath to spend,
Can chance their moons, and bring their times about,

My oil-dried lamp, and time-bewasted light,
Shall be extinct with age, and endless night;
My inch of taper will be burnt and drow,
And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.

Genst. But not a minute, king, that thou canst
Shorten thy days thou canst with sullen sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow:
Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage;
Thy word is current with him for my death:

But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.
K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave;
Why art thou justice seem'd, thou then to lower?

Genst. Things sweet to taste, prove in digestion sour.

You urg'd me as a judge; but I had rather,
You would have bid me argue like a father:—
O, had it been a stranger, not my child:
To smooth his fault I should have been more
A partial slanderer sought I to avoid,
And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.

Alas, I look'd, when some of you should say,
I was too strict, to make mine own away;
But you gave leave to mine unwilling tongue,
Against my will to do myself thus wrong.

K. Rich. Cousin, farewell:—and, uncle, bid him so;

Six years we banish him, and we shall go.

[Flourish. Enter K. Richard and Truss.
Ann. Cousin, farewell: what presence must it know

From where you do remain, let paper show.

Mor. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride
As far as land will let me, by your side.

Genst. O, to what purpose dost thou board thy words,

That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?
Boling. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be profligate,
To breathe the abundant dolour of the heart.

Genst. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Genst. What is six winters? they are quickly gone.

Boling. To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten.

Genst. Call it a travel that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Boling. My heart will sigh, when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Genst. The sullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a fool, whereto thou art to set.

The precious jewel of thy home-return.

Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make,
Will but remember me, what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love.

Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages; and in the end,
Having my freedom, bound of nothing else
But that I was a journeyman to grief?

Genst. All places that the eye of heaven vint,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens:

Teach thy necessity to reason thus:
There is no virtue like necessity.

Think not, the king did banish thee:

But thou the king: Who doth the heavier sit,
Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.

Go, say—I sent thee forth to purchase honour,
And not—the king exiled thee: or suppose,
Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,
And thou art flying to a fresher climate.

Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it
To be that way thou go'st not whence thou com'st.

Suppose the singing birds, musicians;
The grass whereto thou tread'st, the presence
strew'd;

The flowers, fair ladies; and thy steps, no more
Than a delightful measure, or a dance:

For gnawing sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.

Boling. O, who can hold a fire in his hand,
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?

Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a feast?

Or wallow naked in December snow,
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?

O, no! the apprehension of the good,
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:

Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more,
Than when it bites, but lameth not the sore.

Genst. Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy way;

Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.

Boling. Then, England's ground, farewell; sweet soil, adieu;

My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet!
Wher'er I wander, none of this I can—

Though banish'd, yet a trueborn Englishman.

[Exeunt.]

That vow a long and weary pilgrimage;
 Thou let us take a ceremonious leave,
 And loving farewell, of our several friends.

Mar. The appellant in all duty greets your highness,

And craves to kiss your hand, and take his leave.
K. Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our arms.

Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right,
 So be thy fortune in this royal fight!
 Farewell, my blood; which if to-day thou shed,
 Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Boling. O, let no noble eye profane a tear
 For me, if I be gored with Mowbray's spear;
 As confident, as is the falcon's flight
 Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight —
 My loving lord [to Lord Marshal] I take my leave
 of you;

Of you, my noble cousin lord Aumerle: —
 Not sick, although I live to die with death;
 But lusty, young, and cheerily drawing breath —
 In, as at English feasts, so I regret
 The dearest last, to make the end most sweet:
 O thou, the earthly author of my blood, —

[To Gaunt.]

Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate,
 Doth with a two-fold vigour lift me up
 To reach at victory above my head, —
 Add pride unto mine armour with thy prayers;
 And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,
 That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat,
 And furnish new the name of John of Gaunt,
 Even in the lusty humour of his son.

Gaunt. Heaven in thy good cause make thee prosperous.

 Be swift like lightning in the execution;
 And let thy blows, doubly redoubled,
 Fall like amazing thunder on the casque
 Of thy adverse pernicious enemy:

Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant and live.

Boling. Mine innocency, and Saint George to thrive. (He takes his sword.)

Nor. [Rising.] However heaven, or fortune, cast my lot,

There lives, or dies, true to king Richard's throne,
 A loyal, just, and upright gentleman:
 Never did captive with a freer heart
 Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace
 His golden uncouth yoke of enchainment,
 More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
 This feast of battle with mine adversary —
 Most mighty liege, — and my companion peers, —
 Take from my mouth the wish of happy years:
 As gentle and as jocund, as to jest.

Go I to fight; Truth hath a quiet breast.

K. Rich. Farewell, my lord: securely I spy virtue with valour couched in thine eye. —

Order the trial, marshal, and begin.

[The King and the Lords return to their seats.]

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,

Receive thy lance; and God defend the right!

Boling. [Rising.] Strong as a tower in hope, I cry — amen.

Mar. Go bear this lance [to an Officer] to Thomas,
 duke of Norfolk.

1 Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby, stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself,

On pain to be found false and recreant.

To prove the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,

A traitor to his God, his king, and him,

And dares him to set forward to the fight.

2 Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,

On pain to be found false and recreant,

Both to defend himself, and to approve

Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
 To God, his sovereign, and to him, disloyal;
 Courageously, and with a free desire,
 Attending but the signal to begin.

Mar. Sound, trumpets; and set forward combatants. (A charge sounded.)

Stay, the king hath thrown his warner down.

K. Rich. Let them lay by their helmets and their spears,

And both return back to their chairs again: —
 Withdraw with us: — and let the trumpets sound,
 While we return these dukes what we decree.

(A long flourish.)

Draw near, [To the Combatants.]

And list, what with our council we have done.

For that our kingdom's earth should not be sold

With that dear blood which it hath foster'd;

And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect

Of civil wounds, ploughed up with neighbours'

swords;

And for we think the eagle-winged pride

Of sky-ascending and ambitious thoughts,

With rival-hating envy, set you on

To wake our peace, which in our country's cradle

Draws the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep:

Which so rous'd up with boisterous untun'd drums,

With harsh resounding trumpets' dreadful bray,

And grating shock of wrathful iron arms,

Night from our quiet confines fright fair peace,

And make us wade even in our kindred's blood; —

Therefore, we banish you our territories:

You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of death,

Till twice five summers have enrich'd our fields,

Shall not regret our fair dominions,

But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Boling. Your will be done: This must my comfort be. —

That sun, that warms you here, shall shine on me;

And thine his golden beams, to you here lost,

Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.

K. Rich. Norfolk, for these remains a heavier doom,

Which I with some unwillingness pronounce:

The fly-slow hours shall not de-erminate

The dateless limit of thy dear exile; —

The hopeless word of — never to return,

Breathes I against thee, upon pain of life.

Nor. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign

liege,

And all unlook'd for from your highness' mouth:

A dearer merit, not so deep a main

As to be cast forth in the common air,

Have I deserved at your highness' hand.

The language I have learn'd these forty years

My native English, now I must forego;

And now my tongue's use is to me no more,

Than an unstrung viol, or a harp:

Or like a cunning instrument caw'd up,

Or, being open, put into his hands

That knows no touch to tune the harmony:

Within my mouth you have enguird my tongue,

Doubly portcullis'd, with my teeth, and lips;

And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance

Is made my gauler to attend on me.

I am too old to fawn upon a nurse,

Too far in years to be a pupil now;

What is thy sentence then, but speechless deaf'n.

Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?

K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate;

After our sentence plaining comes too late.

Nor. Then thus I turn me from my country's light,

To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

Retiring.

But since correction lieth in those hands,
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven;
Who, when he sees the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spoor?

Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edward's seven sins, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those branches are dried by nature's course.
Some of those branches by the destinies cut:
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster,—
One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,—
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all faded.
By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah, Gaunt! his blood was thine; that bed, that womb,

That nettle, that self-mould, that fashion'd thee,
Made him a man; and though thou liv'st, and breath'st,

Yet art thou slain in him: thou dust convert
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.

Call it not patience, Gaunt, it is despair:
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee:
That which in mean men we entitle—patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.

What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is—to 'venge my Glouster's death.

Grand. Heaven's in the quarrel; for heaven's substitute,

His deputy appointed in his sight,
Hath caus'd his death: the which if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge; for I may never lift
An angry arm against his murderer. [self]

Duch. Where, then, alas! may I complain my-Gaunt. To heaven, the widow's champion and defence.

Duch. Why, then, I will. Farewell, old Gaunt.
Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold

Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight:
O, at my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast!

Or, if misfortune miss the first career,
Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming courser's back,
And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A callif recruit to my cousin Hereford! [wife,

Farewell, old Gaunt; thy sometimes brother's
With her companion grief must end her life.

Grand. Sister, farewell. I must to Coventry:
As much good may with thee, as go with me!

Duch. Yet one word more;—Grief boundeth where it falls.

Not with the empty hollowness, but weight;
I take my leave before I have begun;
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.

Commend me to my bro' her, Edmund York.
Lo, this is all:—Nay, yet depart so; so;
Though this be all, do not so quickly go;

I shall remember more. Bid him—O, what!
With all good speed at Flusby wait me.

Alack, and what shall good old York there see,
But empty lodgings and unfurnish'd walls,
Unpeopled offices, untrodden stages?

And what cheer there for welcome, but my
Therfore commend me: let him not come there.
To seek out sorrow that dwells every where:

Desolate, desolate, will I hence and die;
The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Gusford Green, near Coventry.

Lists set out, and a Throne. Herald, &c. attending.

Enter the Lord Marshal and Aumerle.

Mar. My lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford
arm'd?—

Aum. Yea, at all points; and longs to enter in.
Mar. The duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,

Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.
Aum. Why then, the champions are prepar'd and stay

For nothing but his majesty's approach.
Flourish of Trumpets. *Enter King Richard, who takes his seat on his throne; Gaunt, and several noblemen, who take their places. A trumpet is sounded, and answered by another trumpet within.
Then enter Norfolk, in armour, preceded by a Herald.*

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion
The cause of his arrival here in arms:
Ask him his name; and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In God's name, and the king's, say who thou art,
And why thou com'st, thus knightly clad in arms:
Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel:

Speak truly, on thy knighthood and thy oath;
And so defend thee, he ven, and thy valour!

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk;

Who hither come, engaged by my oath,
(Which, heaven defend a knight should violate!)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth.

To God, my king, and my succeeding issue,
Against the duke of Hereford that appeals me;
And, by the grace of God, and this my arm,
To prove him, in defending of myself,
A traitor to my God, my king, and me;
And, as I truly fight, defend me, heaven!

[He takes his seat.]

Trumpet sounds. Enter Bolingbroke, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,
Both who he is, and why he cometh hither,
Thus plated in habiliments of war;
And formally according to our law
Depose him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name! and wherefore com'st thou hither,
Before King Richard, in his royal lists? [re]

Against whom comest thou! and what's thy quarrel? Speak like a true knight, so defend thee, heaven!

Boling. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,

Am I; who ready here do stand in arms,
To prove, by heaven's grace, and my lady's valour
In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,
That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous,
To God of heaven, King Richard, and to me;
And, as I truly fight, defend me, heaven!

Mar. On pain of death, no person be so bold,
Or daring-hurly, as to touch the lists;
Except the marshal, and such officers
Appointed to direct these fair designs. [Reard,

Boling. Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's
And bow my knee before his majesty:
For Mowbray, and myself, are like two men,

Nor. I take it up; and by that sword I swear.
Which gently lay'd my knighthood on my obsequy,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree, [det,
Or chivalrous design of knightly trial:
And, when I mount, alive may I not fight,
If I be traitor, or unjustly fight!

K. Rich. What dost our cousin lay to Mowbray's charge?

It must be great, that can inherit us
So much as of a thought of ill in him. [true;—
Bohyn. Look, what I speak my life shall prove it
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand nobles.

In name of lendings for your highness' soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd employment's,
Like a false traitor, and injurious villain.
Besides I say, and will in battle prove,—
Or here, or elsewhere, to the furthest verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye,—
That all the treasons, for these eighteen years,
Complotted and contriv'd in this land, [spring,
Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and Further I say,—and further will maintain
Upon his bad life, to make all this good,—
That he did plot the duke of Gloucester's death;
Suggest his soon-believing adversaries;
And, consequently, like a traitor coward, [blood;
Stain'd out his innocent soul through streams of
Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless corners of the earth,
To me, for justice, and rough chastisement;
And, by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

K. Rich. How high a pitch his resolution runs!

Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?

Nor. O, let my sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood.
How God, and good men, hate so foul a liar.
K. Rich. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes and ears:

Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir,
(As he is but my father's brother's son.)
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Such neighbour nearness to our sacred bond
Should nothing privilege him, nor partialize
The unskipping firmness of my upright soul;
He is our subject, Mowbray, so art thou;
Free speech and fearlessness I to thee allow.

Nor. Then, Bohynbroke, as low as to thy heart,
Through the false passage of thy throat, thou
liest!

Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais,
Debarr'd I duly to his highness' soldiers;
The other part reserv'd I by consent;
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen:
Now swallow down that lie.—For Gloucester's
death,

I slew him not; but, to my own disgrace,
Neglected my sworn duty in that case—
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once did I lay in ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grieved soul;
But, ere I last receiv'd the sacrament,
I did confess it; and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and, I hope, I had it.
This is my fault: As for the rest, I had it
From the rancour of a villain,
A mercenary and most degenerate traitor:
Which in myself I boldly will defend;
And instantaneously hurl down my gage

Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom:
In haste whereof, most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day. [me;
K. Rich. Worth-killed gentlemen, be rul'd by
Let's purge this choler without letting blood:
This we prescribe, though no physician;
Deep malice makes too deep incision:
Forget, forgive; conclude, and be agreed;
Our doctors say, this is no time to bleed.—
Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk, your own son.
Gauunt. To be a make-peace shall become my age:—

Throw down, my son, the duke of Norfolk's gage K. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his.
Gauunt. When, Harry! when!
Obedience bids, I should not bid again.

K. Rich. Norfolk, throw down; we bid; there is no blot: [not;

Nor. Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame:
The one my duty owes; but my fair name,
(Despite of death, that lives upon my grave,)
To dark dishonour's use thou shalt not have.
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffled here;
Pierc'd to the soul with slander's venom'd spear;
The which no balm can cure, but his heart-blood
Which breath'd this poison.

K. Rich. Rage must be withstood:
Give me his gage:—Lords make leopards tame.

Nor. Yes, but not change their spots: take but my shame,

And I resign my gage. My dear, dear lord,
The purest treasure mortal times afford,
Is spotless reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.
A jewel in a scabbard hid up chest
Is a cold spirit in a lawyer's breast.
Mine honour is my life; both grow in one;
Take honour from me, and my life is done:
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try;
In that I live, and for that will I die.

K. Rich. Cousin, throw down your gage; do you begin. [run]

Bohyn. O, God defend my soul from such foul
Shall I seem crest fallen in my father's sight!
Or with pale beggar-fear impeach my height
Before this outcast dastard! Ere my tongue
Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrang,
Or sound so base a parle, my teeth shall tear
The slavish motive of recanting fear:
And spit it bleeding, in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's face. [Exit Gauunt]

K. Rich. We were not born to sue, but to command:

Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,
At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day;
There shall your swords and hauberts be tried;
The swelling difference of your settled hate;
Since we cannot atone you, we shall see
Justice design the victor's chivalry.—
Marshal, command our officers at arms
Be ready to direct these house alarms. [Exeunt,

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke of Lancaster's Palace.

Enter Gauunt, and Duchess of Gloucester.

Gauunt. Alas! the part I had in Gloucester's blood
Doth more torment me, than your exclamation,
To stir against the butchers of his life.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Richard, attended; John of Gaunt, and other Nobles, with him.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Launcester,
Hast thou, according to thy oath and band,
Brought hither Henry Hereford, thy bold son;
Here to make good the long-since late appeal,
When then our lecture would not let us hear,
Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray.
Gaunt. I have, my legs.
K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded
If he appeal the duke on ancient malice;
Or worthily as a good subject should,
On some known ground of treachery in him?
Gaunt. As near as I could sift him on that argu-
On some apparent danger seen in him, (scent)
Aim'd at your highness, no inveterate malice.
K. Rich. Then call them to our presence; face to face.
And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear
The accuser and the accused, freely speak:—
(Exeunt some Attendants.)

High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Re-enter Attendants, with Bolingbroke and Norfolk.

Boling. Many years of happy days befall
My gracious sovereign, my most loving here!
Nor. Each day still better earth's happiness;
Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
Add an immortal title to your crown! (us)

K. Rich. We thank you both: yet one but flatters.
As well appeareth by the cause you come;
Namely, to appeal each other of high treason.—
Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Boling. First, *(heaven be the record to my
In the derivation of a subject's love, (speech!)*
Tendering the precious safety of my prince,
And free from other number'd hate,

Come I appellant to this princely presence.—
Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well: for what I speak,
My body shall make good upon this earth,
Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.

Thou art a traitor, and a miscreant;
Too good to be so, and too bad to live;
Since, the more fair and crystal is the sky,
The uglier seems the clouds that in it fly.
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat;
And wish (so please my sovereign), ere I move,
What my tongue speaks, my right-drawn sword
may prove. (zeal)

Nor. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal:
'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us: I wain;
The blood is hot, that must be cool'd for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush'd, and nought at all to say: (me)
First, the fair reverence of your highness carls
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech;
Which else would past, until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled down his throat.
Sinking aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kin-man to my legs,
I do defy him, and I spit at him;
Call him—a slanderous coward, and a villain:
Which to maintain, I would allow him odds;
And meet him, were I led to run a-foot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable
Wherever Englishman durst set his foot.
Mean time, let this defend my loyalty,—
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie.

Boling. Pale trembling coward, there I throw my rage.

Disclaiming here the kindred of the king;
And lay aside my high blood's royalty.
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except;
If guilty dread hath left thee so much strength,
As to take up mine honour's pawn, then sleep;
By that, and all the rights of kinsblood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm.
What I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.

Confound themselves. 'Tis strange that death should sing.—

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death;
And, from the organ-pipe of frailty, sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince; for you are burn

To set a furn upon that indigest,
Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

Re enter Bigot and Attendants, who bring in King John, in a chair.

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room;

It would not out at windows, nor at doors.
There is so hot a summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust:
I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen
Upon a parchment; and against this fire
Do shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison'd,—ill fare; dead, forsook, cast off;

And none of you will bid the winter come,
To thrust his icy fingers in my marrow;
Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course
Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat the north
To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold:—I do not ask you much,

I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait,
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in my tears,

That might relieve you!

K. John. The salt in them is hot.—
Within me is a hell; and there the poison
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize
On unreprieveable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O, I am scalded with my violent motion,
And spleen of speed to see your majesty.

K. John. O cousin, thou art come to set mine eye:
The tinkle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd;
And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should sail,

Are torned to one thread, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be utter'd:
And then all this thou see'st is but a clod,
And module of confounded royalty.

Bast. The dauphin is preparing hitherward;
Where, heaven be knows, how we shall answer him.

For, in a night, the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the washes, all unwarily,
Devour'd by the unexpected flood.

[The King dies.]

Sal. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear.—

My liege! my lord!—But now a king.—now thou.
P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay
When this was now a king, and now is clay!

Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind,
To do the office for thee of revenge;
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven
As it on earth hath been thy servant still.—
Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres,

Where be your powers! Show now your mended faiths;

And instantly return with me again.
To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
Out of the weak door of our fainting land:
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought;
The dauphin rages at our very heels.

Sal. It seems, you know not then so much as we:

The cardinal Pandolph is within at rest.
Who half an hour since came from the dauphin;
And brings from him such offers of our peace
As we with honour and respect may take.
With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sinew'd to our defence.

Sal. Nay, it is in a manner done already;
For many carriages he hath despatch'd

To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the cardinal,

With whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post

To consummate this business happily.

Bast. Let it be so:—And you, my noble prince
With other princes that may best be spar'd,

Shall wait upon your father's funeral.

P. Hen. At Worcester must his body be in-
For so he will'd it. [Terr'd;]

Bast. Thither shall it then.

And happily may your sweet self put on

The lincoln state and glory of the land!

To whom, with all submission, on my knee,

I do bequeath my faithful services

And true subjection everlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our love we make.
To rest without a spot for evermore.

P. Hen. I have a kind soul, that would give you
thanks,

And knows not how to do it, but with tears.

Bast. O, let us pay the time but needful woe,
Since it hath been beforehand with our griefs.—

This England never did, (nor never shall),

Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,

But when it first did help to wound itself.

Now these her princes are come home again,
Come the three corners of the world in arms,

And we shall shock them: Nought shall make us rue,

If England to itself do rest but true. [Exeunt.]

I say again, if Lewis do win the day,
He is forsworn, if e'er those eyes of yours
Behold another day break in the east:
But even this night,—whose black contagious Already smokes about the burning crest (breath
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun,—
Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire;
Paying the fine of rated treachery,
Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,
If Lewis by your assistance win the day,
Commend me to one Hubert, with your king;
The love of him,—and this respect besides,
For that my grandire was an Englishman,—
Awakes my conscience to confess all this.
In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence
From forth the noise and rumour of the field;
Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts
In peace, and part this body and my soul
With contemplation and devout desires.

Sol. We do believe thee,—and beshrew my
But I do love the favour and the form [soul]
Of this most fair occasion, by the which
We will untread the steps of damned flight;
And, like a bated and retired flood,
Leaving our rankness and irregular course,
Stoop low within those bounds we have o'er-
And calmly run on in obedience, [look'd,
Even to our ocean, to our great king John.—
My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence;
For I do see the cruel pangs of death [flight;
Right in thine eye.—Away, my friends! New
And happy newness, that intends old right.

[Exeunt, leading off Melun]

SCENE V. — The same. The French Camp.

Enter Lewis and his Train.

Lew. The sun of heaven, methought, was loath to set:
But stay'd, and made the western welkin blush,
When the English measur'd backward their own
ground,
In faint retire: O, bravely came we off,
When with a volley of your needless shot,
After such bloody toil, we did good night;
And wound our tatter'd colours clearly up,
Last in the field, and almost lords of it!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where is my prince, the dauphin?
Lew. Here:—What news?
Mess. The count Melun is slain; the English
By his persuasion, are again fallen off: [lords,
And your supply, which you have wish'd so long,
Are cast away, and sunk, on Godwin's sands.
Lew. Ah, foul shrewd news!—Beshrew thy very heart!

I did not think to be so sad to-night.
As this hath made me.—Who was he, that said,
King John did fly, an hour or two before
The stumbling night did part our weary powers?

Mess. Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord.
Lew. Well; keep good quarter, and good care
to-night;

The day shall not be up so soon as I.

To try the fair adventure of to-morrow.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. — An open Place in the neighbourhood of Swinestead-Abbey.

Enter the Bastard and Hubert, meeting.

Hub. Who's there? speak, ho! speak quickly,
Bast. A friend.—What art thou? [or I shoot.
Hub. Of the court of England.

Bast. Whither dost thou go? [mand
Hub. What's that to thee? Why may I not de-
Of thine affairs, as well as thou of mine?

Bast. Hubert, I think.

Hub. Thou hast a perfect thought:
I will, upon all hazards, well believe Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue as
Who art thou?

Bast. Who thou wilt: as if you please,
Thou may'st defend me so much, as to think
I come one way of the Plantagenets. [night,
Hub. Unkind remembrance! thou, and eyeless
Have done me shame:—Brave soldier, pardon me
That any accent, breaking from thy tongue,
Should scape the true acquaintance of mine ear.

Bast. Come, come; sans compliment, what news abroad?

Hub. Why, here walk I, in the black brow of
To find you out.

Bast. Brief, then; and what's the news?

Hub. O, my sweet sir, news fitting to the night,
Black, fearful, comfortable, and horrible

Bast. Show me the very wound of this ill news;
I am no woman, I'll not swoon at it.

Hub. The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk:
I left him almost speechless, and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil; that you might
The better arm you to the sudden time,
Than if you had at leisure known of this.

Bast. How did he take it? who did taste to
him?

Hub. A monk, I tell you; a resolved villain,
Whose howls suddenly burst out; the king
Yet speaks, and, peradventure, may recover.

Bast. Who didst thou leave to tend his majesty?

Hub. Why, know you not? the lords are all
And brought prince Henry in their company;
At whose request the king hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his majesty. [heaven,
Bast. Withhold thine indignation, mighty
And tempt us not to bear above our power!—
I'll tell thee Hubert, half my power this night,
Passing these days, taken by the tide,
These Lincoln washes have devour'd them;
Myself, well-mounted, hardly have escap'd;
Away, before! conduct me to the king;
I doubt, he will be dead, or ere I come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. — The Orchard of Swinestead-Abbey.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

P. Hen. It is too late; the life of all his blood is touch'd corruptibly; and his pure brain (Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-house.)

Doth, by the idle comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His highness yet doth speak; and holds
That, being brought into the open air, [belief
It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell poison which usurieth him. [here.—
P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard
Doth he still rage?

[Exit Bigot.]

Pem. He is more patient
Than when you left him; even now he sung.

P. Hen. O vanity of sickness! how extremes,
In their continuance, will not feel themselves
Death, having prey'd upon the outward parts,
Leaves them insensible; and his siege is now
Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies;
Which, in their thrug and press to that last bud,

Have I not heard these slanders about me,
Wie he sey? as I have bank'd their towns?
 Have I not here the best cards for the game.
 To win this easy match play'd for a crown?
 And shall I now give o'er the yielded set?
 No, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of this work.

Leu. Outside or inside, I will not return
 Till my attempt so much be glorified
 As to my ample hope was promised.
 Before I drew this gallant head of war,
 And could these fiery spirits from the world,
 No outward conquest, and to win renown
 Even in the jaws of danger and of death.—

[Trumpet sounds.
What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us!

Enter the Bastard, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world,
 Let me have audience; I am sent to speak:—
 My holy lord of Milan, from the king
 I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
 And, as you answer, I do know the scope
 And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wilful opposite,
 And will not temper with my entreaties;
 He flatteringly, he'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fairy breath'd,
 The youth says well:—Now hear our English
 For thus his royalty doth speak in me. [king;
 He is prepar'd; and ready too, he should:
 This apish and unmanly approach,

This harness'd masque, and unadvised revel,
 This unbar'd sauciness, and boyish troops,
 The king doth smile at; and is well prepar'd
 To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
 From out the circle of his territories. [door,
 That hand, which had the strength, even at your

To cudgel you, and make you take the hatch;
 To dive, like buckets, in concealed wells;
 To crouch in litter of your siable planks;
 To lie, like pawns, lock'd up in chests and trunks;
 To hug with swine; to seek sweet safety out
 In vaults and prisons; and to thrill, and shake,
 Even at the crying of your nation's crow,

Thinking his voice an armed Englishman:—
 Shall that victorious hand be feeble here,
 That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
 No: Know, the gallant monarch is in arms;

And like an eagle o'er his airy towers,
 To souse annoyance that comes near his nest.—
 And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
 You bloody Neros, ripping up the wound
 Of your dear mother England, blush for shame:

For your own ladies, and pale-visag'd maids,
 Like Amazons, come tripping after drums;
 Their timbrels into armed gambells change,
 Their needs into lances, and their gentle hearts
 To fierce and bloody inclination. [peace;
Leu. There end thy brave, and turn thy face in

We grant, thou caust outcous'd us; fare thee well;
 We hold our time too precious to be spent
 With such a babbler.

Pand. Give me leave to speak.

Bast. No, I will speak.
Leu. We will attend to neither:—
 Strike up the drums; and let the tongue of war
 Plead for our interest, and our being here. [out;
Bast. Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry

And so shall you, being beaten: Do but start
 An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
 And even at hand a drum is ready brack'd,
 That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;

Sound but another, and another shall,
 As loud as thine, rattle the welkin's ear

And mock the deep-mouth'd thunder; for at hand
 (Not trusting to this halting legions here, Whom he hath us'd rather for sport than need,)
 Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
 A bare-ribb'd death, whose office is this day
 To least upon whole thousands of the French.

Leu. Strike up our drums, to find this dawning out.

Bast. And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not doubt. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. A field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter King John and Hubert.

K. John. How goes the day with us? O, to me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear: How fares your majesty?
K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so Lies heavy on me; O, my heart is sick! [long,

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulcon-Deuces your majesty to leave the field: [bridge,
 And send him word by me, which way you go.

K. John. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the abbey there. [ply,

Mess. Be of good comfort: for the great sup-
 That was expended by the dauphin here,
 Are week'd three nights ago on Goodwin's sands.

This news was brought to Richard but even now:
 The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

K. John. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
 And will not let me welcome this good news—
 Set on toward Swinstead: to my litter straight;
 Weakness possesses me, and I am faint. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same. Another part of the same.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, Bigot, and others.

Sal. I did not think the king so stor'd with friends.

Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the French;
 If they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,
 In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say, king John, sore sick, hath left the field.

Enter Melun, wounded, and led by Soldiers.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.
Sal. When we were happy, we had other names.

Pem. It is the count Melun.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. My, noble English, you are bought and Untried the rude eye of rebellion. [sold;
 And welcome home again unwearied faith.

Seek out king John, and fall before his feet;
 For, if the French be lords of the day,
 He means to recompense the pains you take,
 By cutting off your heads: This hath he sworn,
 And I with him, and many more with me,
 Upon the altar of Saint Edmund's-Bury:
 Even on that altar, where we swore to you
 Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?
Mel. Have I no hideous death within my view
 Returning but a quantity of life;

Which bleeds away, even as a form of was Resolveth from his figure 'neath the fire?
 What in the world should make me now deceive,
 Since I must lose the use of all deceit?
 Why should I then be false; since it is true
 That I must die here and live hence by truth?

Bas. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.
But wherefore do you droop? why look you sad?
Be great in act, as you have been in thought;
Let not the world see fear, and sad distrust,
Govern the motion of a kingly eye;
Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;
Threaten the threat'ner, and outface the brow
Of bracing horror: so shall inferior eyes,
That horror their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example, and put on
The dauntless spirit of resolution.
Away; and slake like the god of war,
When he in combat to become the field:
Show boldness and aspiring confidence.
What, shall they seek the lion in his den, [there]
And fright him there? and make him tremble
O, let it not be said!—Forge, and run
To meet displeasure further from the doors;
And grapple with him, ere he come so nigh [me].
K. John. The legate of the pope hath been with him
And I have made a happy peace with him;
And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers
Led by the Dauphin.

Bas. O inglorious league!
Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play orders, and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley, and base truce,
To arms invasive! let a heedless boy,
A cackler's silken whistle brave our fields,
And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,
Mocking the air with colours idly spread,
And find no check! Let us, my liege, to arms:
Perchance, the cardinal cannot make your peace;
Or if he do, let it at least be said,
They saw we had a purpose of defence.

K. John. Have then the ordering of this present time? [knows]
Bas. Away then, with good courage; yet, I
Our party may well meet a prouder foe. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Plain, near St. Edmund's-Bury.

Enter, in arms, Lewis, Salisbury, Melun, Pembroke, Bigot, and Soldiers.

Lew. My lord Melun, let this be copied out,
And keep it safe for our remembrance:
Return the precedent to these lords again;
That, having our fair order written down,
Both they, and we, perusing o'er these notes,
May know wherefore we took the sacrament,
And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken.
And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear
To any voluntary zeal, and usurp'd faith,
For your proceedings: yet, believe me, prince,
I am not glad that such a sore of time
Should seek a plaster by continu'd revolt,
And heal the inveterate canker of one wound,
By making many: O, it grieves my soul,
That I must draw this metal from my side
To be a widow-maker: O, and there,
Where honourable rescue, and defence,
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury:
But such is the infection of the time,
That, for the health and physic of our right,
We cannot deal but with the very head
Of every injustice and confused wrong.—
And isn't not pay, O my graved friends!
That we, the sons and children of this isle,
Were born to see so sad an hour as this:
Wherein we step after a stranger march
Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
Her enemies' ranks, (I must withdraw and weep
Upon the spot of this enforced cause),
To grace the gentry of a land remote,

And follow unacquainted colours here? [move]
What, here!—O nation, that thou could'st to
That Neptune's arms, who clippeth thee about,
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself,
And grapple thee unto a pagan shore;
Where these two Chris'tian armies might combine
The blood of man in a vein of league,
And not to spend it so uneconomically!

Lew. A noble temper dost thou show in this;
And great affections, wrestling in thy bosom,
Do make an earthquake of nobility.
O, what a noble combat hast thou fought,
Between compulsion, and a brave respect!
Let me wipe off this honourable dew,
That silverly doth progress on thy cheeks:
My heart hath melted at a lady's tears,
Being an ordinary inundation;
But this effusion of such manly drops,
This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amazed
Than had I seen the vaulty top of heaven
Figur'd quite o'er with burning meteors.
Lift up thy brow, renowned Salisbury,
And with a great heart brave away this storm:
Commend these waters to these baby eyes,
That never saw the giant world enrag'd;
Nor met with fortune other than at leas'ts,
Full warm of blood, of mirth, of gossiping.
Come, come; for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deep
Into the purse of rich prosperity,
As Lewis himself!—so, nobles, shall you all,
That knit your knees to the strength of mine.

Enter Pandolph, attended.

And even there, methinks, an angel speak:
Look, where the holy legate comes apace,
To give us warrant from the hand of heaven;
And on our scious set the name of right,
With holy breaths.

Pand. Hail, noble prince of France!
The next is this,—King John hath reconcil'd himself to Rome; his spirit is come in,
That so stand out against the holy church,
The great metropolis and see of Rome:
Therefore thy threat'ning colours now wind up,
And tame the savage spirit of wild war;
That, like a lion foster'd up at hand,
It may be gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmful than in show.

Lew. Your grace shall pardon me, I will not
I am too high-born to be property'd, [back];
To be a secondary at controul,
Or useful serving-man, and instrument,
To any sovereign state throughout the world.
Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars
Between this chafed kingdom and myself,
And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out
With that same weak wind which enkindled it.
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Accquainted me with interest to this land,
Yea, thrust this enterprise into my heart:
And come you now to tell me, John hath made His peace with Rome! What is that peace to
I, by the honour of my marriage-bed, [me]
After young Arthur, claim this land for mine;
And, now it is half conquer'd, must I back Because that John hath made his peace with Rome!

Rome! [thrice]
Am I Rome's slave! What penny hath Rome
What men provided, what munition sent,
To underprop this action! Is't not I,
That undergo this charge? who else but I,
And such as to my claim are true,
Sweat in this business, and die in this war!

Bas. Your sword is bright, sir; put it up again.
Bas. Not till I sheath it in a murderer's skin.
Hub. Stand back, Lord Salisbury; stand back,

I say.
 By heaven, I think, my sword's as sharp as yours:
 I would not have you, lord, forget yourself,
 Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;
 Least I, by marking of your rage, forget
 Your worth, your greatness, and nobility. [man]

Bas. Out, dunghill! dar'st thou brave a noble-
Hub. Not for my life: but yet I dare defend
 My innocent life against an emperor.
Bas. Thou art a murderer.

Hub. Do not prove me so;
 Yet, I am none. Whose tongue see'st speak false,
 Not truly speaks; who speaks not truly, lies.
Pem. Cut him to pieces.

Bas. Keep the peace, I say.
Bas. Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulconbridge.

Bas. Thou wert better gall the devil, Salisbury:
 If thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,
 Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,
 I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword betime;
 Or I'll so maul you and your tawny-iron,
 That you shall think the devil is come from hell.

Bas. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?
 Second a villain and a murderer!

Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.
Hub. Who killed this prince?

Hub. 'Tis not an hour since I left him well:
 I honour'd him, I lov'd him; and will weep
 My date of life out, for his sweet life's loss.

Bas. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,
 For villany is not without such rheum;
 And he, long traded in it, makes it seem
 Like rivers of remorse and innocency.
 Away, with me, all you whose souls abhor
 The uncannily savours of a slaughter-house;
 For I am stifled with this smell of sin.

Bas. Away, toward Bury, to the Dauphin there!
Pem. There, tell the king, he may inquire us out. [Exeunt Lords.]

Bas. Here's a good world!—Knew you of this fair work?

Beyond the infinite and boundless reach
 Of mercy, if thou dar'st this deed of death,
 Art thou damn'd, Hubert.

Hub. Do but hear me, sir.
Bas. Ha! I'll tell thee what: [black;
 Thou art damn'd as black—nay, nothing is so
 Thou art more deep damn'd than prince Lucifer:
 There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell
 As thou shalt be, if thou dost kill this child.

Hub. Upon my soul,—
Bas. If thou didst but consent
 To this most cruel act, do but despair,
 And, if thou want'st a cord, the smallest thread
 That ever spider twisted from her womb
 Will serve to strangle thee: a rush will be A beam to hang thee on; or, would'st thou drown
 thyself,
 Put but a little water in a spoon,
 And it shall be as all the ocean,
 Enough to stifle such a villain up.
 I do suspect thee v-ry grievously.

Hub. I'll in act, consent, or sin of thought,
 Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath
 Which was embowm'd in this beauteous clay,
 Let hell wait pains enough to torture me!
 I left him well.

Bas. Go, bear him in thine arms.—
 I am amaz'd, methinks, and lose my way
 Among the thorns and dangers of this world.—
 How easy dost thou take all England up!

From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
 The life, the right, and truth of all this realm
 Is fled to heaven; and England now is left
 To tag and scramble, and to part by the scath
 The unowed interest of proud-swelling state.
 Now, for the bare pick'd bone of miscreancy,
 Doth dogged war bristle his rusty creel,
 And snarl in the gentle eyes of peace:
 Now powers from home, and discontent at home,
 Meet in one line; and vast confusion waits
 (As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast)
 The eminent decay of wretched pomp.
 Now happy he, whose cloak and cincture can Hold out this tempest. Bear away that child,
 And follow me with speed: I'll to the king:
 A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
 And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in the Palace.
Enter King John, Pandolph with the crown, and Attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
 The crown of my glory.
Pand. Take again [Giving John the crown.
 From this my hand, as holding of the pope,
 Your sovereign greatness and authority.
K. John. Now keep your holy word: go meet the French;
 And from his holiness use all your power
 To stop their marches, 'fore we are inflam'd.
 Our discontented counties do revolt;
 Our people quarrel with obedience;
 Sweating allegiance, and the love of soul,
 To stranger alms, to foreign royalty.
 This inundation of miscreant's humour
 Rests by you only to be quaffed.
 Then pause not: for the present time's so sick,
 That present medicine must be minister'd,
 Or overthrow incurable ensues. [up,
Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempest
 Upon your stubborn usage of the pope:
 But, since you are a gentle convertite,
 My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
 And make fair weather in your blustering land.
 On this Ascension-day, remember well,
 Upon your oath of service to the pope,
 Go I to make the French lay down their arms.

[Exit.]
K. John. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet
 Say, that, before Ascension-day, at noon,
 My crown I should give off? Even so I have:
 I did suppose, it should be on constraint;
 But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

Enter the Bastard.
Bas. All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds out,
 But Dover castle: London hath receiv'd,
 Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers:
 Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
 To offer service to your enemy;
 And wild amazement hurries up and down
 The little number of your doubtful friends.
K. John. Would not my lords return to me again,
 After they heard young Arthur was alive?
Bas. They found him dead, and cast into the streets;
 An empty casket, where the jewel of life
 By some damnable hand was rob'd and ta'en away.
K. John. That villain Hubert told me he did live.

Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind:
But, taking note of thy abhorred aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villany,
Apt, haile, to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;
And thou, to be enlarded to a king,
Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord.— [made a pause,
K. John. Had'st thou but shook thy head, or
When I spake darkly what I purposed;
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face;
As had we tell my tale in express words:
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break
off.

[me:
And those thy fears might have wrought fears in
But thou didst understand me by my signs,
And didst in signs again purley with sin;
Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And, consequently, thy rude hand to act
The deed which both our tongues held vile to name.

Out of my sight, and never see me more!
My public leave me; and my state is brav'd,
Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers:
Nay, in the body of this fleecy land,
This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath,
Hostility and civil tumult reigns
Between my conscience and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies,
I'll make a peace between your soul and you.
Young Arthur is alive: This hand of mine
Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.
Within this bosom never enter'd yet
The dreadful notion of a murderous thought,
And you have slander'd nature in my form;
Which howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Dost Arthur live? O, haste thee to the peers,
Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience!
Forgive the comment that my passion made
Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind,
And foul imaginary eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
O, answer not; but to my closet bring
The angry lords, with all expedient haste:
I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.— The same. Before the Castle.

Enter Arthur, on the walls.

Arth. The wall is high: and yet I will leap
down:—
Good ground, be pitiful, and hurt me not!—
There's few, or none, do know me: if they did,
This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me quite.
I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it.
If I get down, and do not break my limbs,
I'll find a thousand shifts to get away:
As good to die, and go, as die, and stay.

[Leaps down.

O me! my uncle's spirit is in these stones:—
Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones.

[Dies.

Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at Saint-Edmund's:
It is our safety, and we must embrace [Bury;
This gentle offer of the perious time.

Pem. Who brought the letter from the cardinal?

Sal. The count Melun, a noble lord of France;

Whose private with me, of the dauphin's love,
Is much more general than these lines import.
Big. To-morrow morning let us meet him then.
Sal. Or, rather, let us set forward: for 'twill be
Two long days' journey, lords, or e'er we meet.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. Once more to-day well met, distemper'd lords!

The king, by me, requests your presence straight.
Sal. The king hath disposess'd himself of us;
We will not line his thin bastard's cloak
With our pure honours, nor attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood whither it walks
Return, and tell him so, we know the worst.

Bast. What'er you think, good words, I think,
were best.

Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners, reason
were best.

Bast. But there is little reason in your grief:
Therefore, 'twere reason you had manners now.

Pem. Sir, sir, impudence hath its privilege.
Bast. 'Tis true; to hurt his master, no man else.

Sal. This is the prison. What is he less here?
[See King Arthur.

Pem. O death, made proud with pure and princely beauty!

The earth hath not a hole to hide this deed.
Sal. Murder, as hating what himself hath done,
Doth lay it open, to urge on revenge.

Big. Or, when he don'd this beauty to a grave,
Found it too precious princely for a grave.

Sal. Sir Richard, what think you? Have you beheld,

Or have you read, or heard? or could you think?
Or do you almost think, although you see,
That you do see? could thought, without this object,

Form such another? This is the very top,
The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest,
Of murder's arms: this is the blindest shame,
The wildest savagery, the vilest strike,
That ever wall-ey'd wrath, or staring rage,
Presented to the tears of soft remorse.

Pem. All murders past do stand excus'd in this
And this so vile, and so unmatchable,
Shall give a holiness, a purity,
To the yet-unbegotten sin of times;
And prove a deadly blanch'd but a jest,
Exemplary by this heinous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody work;
The graceless action of a heavy hand,
If that it be the work of any hand.

Sal. If that it be the work of any hand!
We had a kind of light what would ensue:
It is the shameful work of Hubert's hand;
The practice and the purpose of the king:—
From whose obedience I forbid my soul,
Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life,
And breathing to his breathless excellence
The incense of a vow, a holy vow;
Never to taste the pleasures of the world,
Never to be infected with delight,
Nor conversant with ease and idleness,
Till I have set a glory to this hand,
By giving it the worship of revenge.

[works.
Pem. Big. Our souls religiously condemn thy

Enter Hubert.

Hub. Lords, I am not with haste in seeking you:
Arthur doth live; the king hath sent for you.

Sal. O, he is bold, and blazes not at death:—
Avaunt, thou hateful villain, get thee gone!

Hub. I am no villain.

Sal. Must I rob the law?

Hub. Drawing his sword,

Proc. Stay yet, lord Salisbury; I'll go with thee,
And find the inheritance of this poor child,
His little kingdom of a forced grave.
That blood, which ow'd the breadth of all this isle,
Three foot of it doth hold; had world the while!
Thou dost not he thus burn: this will break out
To all our sorrows, and ere long, I doubt,

[Exeunt Lords.]

K. John. They burn in indignation; I repent;
There is no sure foundation set in blood;
No certain life achiev'd by others' death.—

Enter a Messenger.

A fearful eye thou hast. Where is that blood,
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?
So foul a sky cleave not without a storm:
Pour down thy weather:—How goes all in France?
Mess. From France to England.—Never such a
For any foreign preparation, [power]
Was levied in the body of a land!
The copy of your speed is learn'd by them;
For, when you should be told they do prepare,
The tidings come, that they are all arriv'd.

K. John. O, where hath our intelligence been drunk? [care]
Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's
That such an army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?

Mess. My liege, her ear
Is stopp'd with dust; the first of April, died
Your noble mother: And, as I hear, my lord,
The lady Constance is a frenzy'd fool
Three days before: but this from rumour's tongue
I hilly heard; if true, or false, I know not.

K. John. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion!
O, make a league with me, till I have pleas'd
My discontented peers!—What! neither dead!
How wilt thou then walk my estate in France!
Under whose conduct came those powers of
France.

That thou for truth giv'st out, are landed here?
Mess. Under the Dauphin.

Enter the Bastard and Peter of Pomfret.

K. John. Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tidings.—Now, what says the world
To your proceedings? do not seek to stuff
My head with more ill news, for it is full.

Bast. But, if you be afraid to hear the worst,
Then let the worst, unheard, fall on your head.

K. John. Bear with me, cousin; for I was amaz'd
Under the tide: but now I breathe again
Aloft the flood; and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.

Bast. How I have sped among the clergymen,
The sums I have collected shall express.
But, as I travelled hither through the land,
I had the people strangely fantom'd:
Fussen'd with rumours, full of idle dreams;
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear:
And here's a prophet, that I brought with me
Even from the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds trailing on his heels:
'To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes,
That, ere the next Ascension-day at noon,
Your highness should deliver up your crown.

K. John. Thou like dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

Peter. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out [so]
K. John. Hubert, away with him; imprison him:
And on that day at noon, wherein, he says,
I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd:
Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must see thee.—O my gentle cousin,
[Exit Hubert, with Peter.]

Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?
Bast. The French, my lord; men's mouths are full of it:

Besides, I met lord Bigot, and lord Salisbury
[With eyes as red as new-ankil'd fire],
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, who, they say, is kill'd to-night
On your suggestion.

K. John. Gentle kinsman, go,
And thrust thyself into their companies:
I have a way to win their loves again;
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seek them out.
K. John. Nay, but make haste: the better foot
O, let me have no subject enemies. [before.—]
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion!—
Be Mercury, not feathers to thy heels;
And fly, like thought, from them to me again.

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed. [Exit.]

K. John. Spoke like a spiteful noble gentleman:
Go after him; for he, perhaps, shall need [man].
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers;
And be thou he.

Mess. With all my heart my liege. [Exit.]

K. John. My mother dead!

Re-enter Hubert.

Hub. My lord, they say, five moons were seen
to-night:

Four fixed; and the fifth did whirl about
The other four, in wondrous motion.

K. John. Five moons?

Hub. Old men, and beklams, in the streets
Do prophesy upon it dangerously:

Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths:
And when they talk of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the ear;

And he, that speaks, doth gripe the hearer's wrist;
Whilst he, that hears, makes fearful action,

With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,

The whilst he iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news;

Who, with his shears and measure in his hand
Standing on slippers (which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet),

Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattell'd and rank'd in Kent:

Another man unwarlike artificer
Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.

K. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?

Why urge'st thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had mighty cause

To wish him dead, but thou hast more to kill him.
Hub. Had more, my lord; why, did you not provoke me?

K. John. It is the curse of kings to be attended
By slaves, that have their lungs for a warrant

To break within the bloody house of life:
And, on the winking of authority,

To understand a law: to know the meaning
Of dangerous majesty, when, perchance, it frowns

More upon humour than advis'd respect.
Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

K. John. O, when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth

Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal
Witness against us to damnation!

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds,
Makers dead in time! Had'st not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd,

Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue.
So I may keep mine eyes: O, spare mine eyes;
Though to no use, but still to look on you!
Lo, by my truth, the instrument is cold,
And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.
Arth. No, in good sooth: the fire is dead with Being create for comfort, to be us'd [grief,
In underv'd extremity: See also yourself;
There is no unice in this burning owl;
The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out,
And strow'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.
Arth. And if you do, you will but make it blush.
And glow with shame of your proceedings,
Hubert:

Nay, it, perchance, will sparkle in your eyes;
And, like a dog that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his master that doth tarre him on.
All things, that you should use to do us wrong,
Deny their office: only you do lack
That mercy, which fierce fire, and iron, extends,
Creatures of note, for mercy-lacking uses. [eyes

Hub. Well, see to live: I will not touch this
For all the treasure that thine uncle owes:
Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very iron to burn them out.

Arth. O, now you look like Hubert! all this
You were disguis'd. [while

Hub. Peace: no more. Adieu:
Your uncle must not know but you are dead:
I'll fill these doped spots with false reports.
And, pretty child, sleep doubtless, and secure,
That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.

Arth. O heaven!—I thank you, Hubert.
Hub. Silence: no more: Go closely in with me.
Much danger do I undergo for thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King John, crown'd; Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords. The King takes his State.

K. John. Here once again we sit, once again
crown'd,

And look'd upon. I hope, with cheerful eyes.
Pem. This once again, but that your highness
pleas'd,

Was once superfluous: you were crown'd before,
And that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off;
The faith of men ne'er stained with revult;
Fresh expectation troubled not the land.
Weigh any long'd-for change, or better state.

Sol. Therefore, to be press'd with double
To guard a title that was rich before, [pomp,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful, and ridiculous excess.

Pem. But that your royal pleasure must be
This act is as an ancient tale new told; [doubt,
And, in the last repeating, troublesome,
Being urged at a time inexpressible.

Sol. In this, the antique and well-noted face
Of plain old form is much disfigured;
And, like a shifted wind unto a sail,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about;
Startles and frights consideration;
Makes sound opinion sick, and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashion'd robe. [well,
Pem. When workmen strive to do better than they do, confound their skill in covetousness:

And, oftentimes, excusing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse;
As patches, set upon a little breach,
Discredit more in hiding of the fault,
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.

Sol. To this effect, before you were new-crown'd, [highness
We breath'd our counsel; but it pleas'd your
To overbear it; and we are all well pleas'd;
Since all, and every part of what we would,
Doth make a stand at what your highness will.

K. John. Some reasons of this double corruption
I have possess'd you with, and think them wrong;
And more, more strong, (when lesser is my fear.)
I shall advise you with: Mean time, but ask
What you would have reform'd, that is not well;
And well shall you perceive, how willingly
I will both hear and grant you your requests.

Pem. Then I, (as one that am the tongue of these,

To bound the purposes of all their hearts,)
Both for myself and them, (but, chief of all,
Your safety, for the which myself and them
Bend their best studies,) heartily request
The enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument,—
If, what in rest you have, in right you hold,
Why then your fears, (which, as they say, attend
The steps of wrong,) should move you to mew up
Your tender kinsman, and to choke his days
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise?
That the time's enemies may not have this
To grace occasions, let it be our suit,
That you have bid us ask his liberty;
Which for our goods we do no further ask,
Than whereupon our weal, on you depending,
Counts it your weal, he have his liberty.

K. John. Let it be so; I do commit his youth to you.

Enter Hubert.

To your direction.—Hubert, what news with you?
Pem. This is the man should do the bloody
deed;

He show'd his warrant to a friend of mine:
The image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye; that close aspect of his
Does show the mood of a much-troubled breast,
And I do fearfully believe 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.

Sol. The colour of the king doth come and go,
Between his purpose and his conscience.
Like heralds 'twixt two dreadful battles set:
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.

Pem. And, when it breaks, I fear, will issue thence

The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.
K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong
hand:

Good lords, although my will to give is living,
The suit which you demand is gone and dead:
He tells us, Arthur is deceas'd to-night.

Sol. Indeed, we fear'd, his sickness was past cure. [was,

Pem. Indeed, we heard how near his death he
Before the child thus—if felt he was sick;
This must be answer'd, either here or hence.

K. John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on me?

Think you, I hear the shears of destiny?
Have I commandment on the pulse of life?
Sol. It is apparent foul play: and 'tis shame
That greatness should so falsely offer it:
So thrive in your game! and so farewell.

And kiss the lips of unacquainted change;
 And peck some matter of revolt, and wrath,
 Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.
 Methinks, I see this hurly all on foot;
 And, O, what better matter broods for you.
 Than I have nam'd!—The bastard Faulconbridge
 Is now in England, ransacking the church,
 Offending charity: If but a dozen French
 Were there in arms, they would be us a call
 To train ten thous and English to their side,
 Or, as a little snow, tumble about.
 Alas becomes a mountain. O noble Dauphin,
 Go with me to the king: 'Tis wonderful,
 What may be wrought out of their discontent:
 Now that their souls are full of offence,
 For England go; I will whet on the king.
Leo. Strong reasons make strong actions: Let us go;

If you say, ay, the king will not say, no. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Hubert and Two Attendants.

Hub. Heat me these irons hot: and, look thou
 Within the arras: when I strike my foot [stand
 Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth:
 And bind the boy, which you shall find with me,
 Fast to the chair: he heedful: hence, and watch.
I Attend. I hope, your warrant will bear out the deed.

Hub. Uncleanly scruples! Fear not you: look to't— [Exeunt Attendants.]
 Young lad, come forth; I have to say with you.

Enter Arthur.

Art. Good morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little prince.

Art. As little prince (having so great a title
 To be more prince,) as may be.—You are sad.

Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.

Art. Mercy on me!
 Methinks, nobody should be sad but I:
 Yet, I remember, when I was in France,
 Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,
 Only for wantonness. By my christendom,
 So I were out of prison, and kept sheep,
 I should be as merry as the day is long;
 And so I would be here, but that I doubt
 My uncle praiseth more harm to me:
 He is afraid of me, and I of him:
 Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son?

No, indeed, it's not: And I would, to heaven,
 I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.

Hub. If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
 He will awake my mercy, which lies dead:
 Therefore I will be sudden, and despatch. [Aside.]

Art. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale today. In sooth, I would you were a little sick; [day:
 That I might sit all night, and watch with you:
 I warrant, I love you more than you do me.

Hub. His words take possession of my bosom.

—Read here, young Arthur. [Showing a paper.]

How now, foolish rheim!

Turning despitous torture out of door!

I must be brief; less resolution drop

Out at mine eyes, in tender womanish tears.—

Can you not read it? Is it not fair writ?

Art. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect:

Most you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes!

Hub. Young boy, I must.

Art.

Hub.

And will you?

And I will.

Art. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,

I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
 (The best I had, a princess wrought it me.)

And I did never ask it you again:

And with my hand at midnight held your head;

And, like the watchful minutes to the hour,

Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time;

Saying, What lack you? and, Where lies your grief!

Or, what good love may I perform for you?

Many a poor man's son would have lain still,

And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;

But you at your sick service had a prince.

Nay, you may think, my love was crafty love,

And call it cunning; Do, an if you will:

If heaven be pleas'd that you must use me ill,

Why, then you must.—Will you put out mine

eye?

These eyes, that never did, nor never shall,

So much as frown on you? I have sworn to do it;

Hub. And with hot irons must I burn them out.

Art. Ah, none, but in this iron age, would do

The iron of itself, though heat red hot. [It!

Approaching near these eyes, would drink my

And quench his fiery indignation, [tears,

Even in the matter of mine innocence:

Nay, after that, consume away in rust.

But for consuming fire to burn mine eye.

Are you more a barbarian than hammer'd iron?

As if an angel should but come to me,

And told me, Hubert should put out mine eyes.

I would not have believ'd no tongue, but Hubert's.

Hub. Come forth. [Stamps.]

Re-enter Attendants, with cords, irons, &c.

Do as I bid you do.

Art. O, save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are

Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.

Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here. [rough!

Art. Alas, what need you be so harsh?

I will not struggle, I will stand stone-still.

For heaven's sake, Hubert, let me not be bound!

Nay, hear me, Hubert! drive these men away,

And I will sit as quiet as a lamb:

I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,

Nor look upon the iron angrily:

Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you

Whatever torment you do put me to.

Hub. Go, stand within; let me alone with him.

I Attend. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed. [Exeunt Attendants.]

Art. Alas! I then have child away my friend;

He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart.—

Let him come back, that his compassion may

Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.

Art. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.

Art. O heaven!—that there were but a mote

in yours,

A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wand'ring hair,

Any annoyance in that precious sense!

Then, feeling what small things are boisterous

there,

Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.

Hub. Is this your promise I go to, hold your tongue. [tongues

Art. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of

Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:

Let me not hold my tongue; let me not. Hubert

Thou hate and terror to prosperity,
And I will kiss thy detestable bones;
And put my eye-balls in thy vaulty brows;
And ring these fingers with thy household worms;
And stop this gap of breath with foulsome dust,
And be a curious monster like myself:
Come, grin on me; and I will think thou smil'st,
And buse thee as thy wife! Misery's love,
O, come to me!

K. Phi. O fair affliction, peace.

Const. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry:—
O that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth!
Then with a passion would I shake the world;
And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy,
Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,
Which scorns a modern invocation.

Pand. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.

Const. That art not holy to belie me so;

I am not mad: this hair I tear, is mine;
My name is Constance; I was Geoffrey's wife;

Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost:

I am not mad:—I would to heaven, I were!

For then, 'tis like I should forget myself:

O, if I could, what grief should I forget!—

Preach some philosophy to make me mad,

And thou shalt be canoniz'd, Cardinal;

For, being not mad, but sensible of grief,

My reasonable part produces reason.

How I may be deliver'd of these woes,

And teaches me to kill or hang myself:

If I were mad, I should forget my son;

Or madly think, a babe of clouts were he:

I am not mad; too well, too well I feel

The different plague of each calamity. [note]

K. Phi. Bind up those tresses: O, what love!

In the fair multitude of those her hairs!

Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,

Even to that drop ten thousand woe's friends

Do grieve themselves in woe's like grief;

Like trees, innumerable, faithful loves,

Sticking together in calamity.

Const. To England, if you will.

K. Phi. Bind up your hairs

Const. Yes, that I will; And wherefore will I do it!

I tore them from their bonds; and cried aloud,

O that these hands could so redeem my son,

As they have given these hairs their liberty!

But now I envy at their liberty,

And will again commit them to their bonds,

Because my poor child is a prisoner—

And, father Cardinal, I have heard you say,

That we shall see and know our friends in heaven:

If that be true, I shall see my boy again,

For, since the birth of Cain, the first male child,

To him that did but yesterday expire,

There was not such a gracious creature born.

But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,

And chase the native beauty from his cheek,

And he will look as hollow as a ghost:

As dim and meagre as an ague's fit;

And so he'll die; and, rising no again.

When I shall meet him in the court of heaven,

I shall not know him: therefore, never, never

Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pand. You hold too heinous a respect of grief.

Const. He talks to me, that never had a son.

K. Phi. You are as fond of grief, as of your child. [child]

Const. Grief fills the room up of my absent

Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me;

Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,

Remembers me of all his gracious parts,

Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form;

Then, have I reason to be fond of grief.

Fare you well: had you such a loss as I
I could give better comfort than you do—
I will not keep this form upon my head.

[Turning off her head-dress.

When there is such disaster in my wit.

O lord! my boy, my Arthur, my fair son!

My life, my joy, my food, my all the world!

My widow-comfort, and my sorrow's cure! Exit.

K. Phi. I fear some outrage, and I'll follow her. Exit.

Leu. There's nothing in this world can make me joy:

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,

Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man: [taste]

And bitter shame hath spoil'd the sweet world's

That it yields naught, but shame and bitterness.

Pand. Is fore the coming of a strange disease,

Even in the instant of repair and health.

The fit is strongest; evil, that takes leave,

On their departure most of all show evil:

What have you lost by losing of this day?

Leu. All days of glory, joy, and happiness.

Pand. If you had won it, certainly, you had.

No, no: when fortune means to men most good,

She looks upon them with a threatening eye.

'Tis strange to think how much King John hath

lost

In this which he accounts so clearly won

Are you not grieved, that Arthur is his prisoner?

Leu. As heartily, as he is glad he hath him.

Pand. Your mind is all as you wish us your blood.

Now hear me speak, with a prophetic spirit;

For even the breath of what I mean to speak

Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub,

Out of the path which shall directly lead

'Thy foot to England's throne; and, therefore,

mark.

John hath seiz'd Arthur: and it cannot be,

That, whilst warm life plays in that infant's veins,

The unplaced John should entertain an hour,

One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest:

A sceptre, snatch'd with an unruly hand,

Must be as boisterously maintain'd as gain'd:

And he, that stands upon a slippery place,

Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up: [fall]

That John may stand, then Arthur needs must

So be it, for it cannot him be so.

Leu. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall? [wife]

Pand. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your

May then make all you claim that Arthur did.

Leu. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green are you, and fresh in this old world!

John lays you plots; the times conspire with you:

For he, that sleeps his safety in true blood,

Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue.

This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts

Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal;

That none so small advantage shall step forth,

To check his reign, but they will cherish it.

No natural exhalation in the sky,

No scape of nature, no distemper'd day,

No common wind, no custom'd event,

But they will pluck away his natural cause,

And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,

Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,

Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John. [lift]

Leu. May be, he will not touch young Arthur's

But hold himself safe in his imprisonment.

Pand. O, sir, when he shall hear of your approach,

If that young Arthur be not gone already,

Even at that news he dies: and then the hearts

Of all his people shall revolt from him.

SCENE II. — The same. Plains near Angiers.Alarons; Excursions. Enter the Bastard, with Austria's head.

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot:
Some airy devil hovers in the sky. [there:
And pours down miscolours. Austria's head, lie
While Philip breathes.

Enter King John, Arthur, and Hubert.

K. John. Hubert, keep this boy:—Phillip, make up;
My mother is assailed in our tent,
And to'en, I fear.

Bast. My lord, I recan't her;
Her highness is in safety, fear you not:
But on my legs; for very little pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — The same.Alarons; Excursions; Retreat. Enter King John, Eleanor, Arthur, the Bastard, Hubert, and Lords.

K. John. So shall it be; your grace shall stay behind.
[To Elmore.
So strongly guarded—Cousin, look not sad:
[To Arthur.

Thy grandam loves thee; and thy uncle will
As dear be to thee as thy father was. [Grief.

Art. O, this will make my mother die with K. John. Cousin, [to the Bastard,] away for England; haste before:

And, ere our coming, see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding abbots; angels imprison'd
Set thou at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Must by this hungry now be fed upon;
Use our commission in its utmost force. [Heck.

Bast. Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me
When gold and silver beck me to come on.
I leave your highness:—Grandam, I will pray
[If ever I remember to be holy.]
For your fair safety; so I knee your hand.

Ed. Farewell, my gentle cousin.
K. John. Coz. farewell. [Exit Bastard.

Ed. Come hither, little kinsman: hark, a word.
[She takes Arthur aside.

K. John. Come hither, Hubert. O my gentle
Hubert,

We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh
There is a soul, counts thee her creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy love:
And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.
Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say,—
But I will dit it with some better time.
By heaven, Hubert, I am almost ashamed
To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your majesty.
K. John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet:

But thou shalt have: and creep time ne'er so slow,
Yet it shall come, for now to do thee good.
I had a thing to say.—But let it go:
The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gauds,
To give me audience:—If the midnight bell
Dial, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,
Sound one unto the drowsy race of night;
If this same were a church-yard where we stand,
And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs;
Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,
Had bel'd thy blood, and made it heavy thick;

[*Which, else, runs tickling up and down the veins,
Making that idle laughter, keep men's eyes,
And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,
A passion hateful to my purposes:*]
Or if that thou could'st see me without eyes,
Hear me without thine ears, and make reply
Without a tongue, using conceit alone,
Without eyes, ears, and fearful sound of words;
Then, in despite of brawling watchful day,
I would into thy bosom pour my thought:
But ah! I will not:—Yet I love thee well;
And, by my troth, I think, thou lov'st me well.

Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake Though that my death were adjunct to my suit,
By heaven, I'd do't.

K. John. Do not I know, thou would'st?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye
On your young lord: I'll tell thee what, my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way;
And, whosoever this fact of mine doth tread,
He lies before me: Dost thou understand me?
Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And I will keep him so,
That he shall not offend your majesty.

K. John. Death.

Hub. My lord?

K. John. A grave.

Hub. He shall not live.

K. John. Enough.

I could be merry now: Hubert, I love thee.
Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee:
Remember—Madam, fare you well:
I'll send these powers o'er to your majesty.

Ed. My blessing go with thee!
K. John. For England, cousin:
Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
With all true duty.—On toward Calais, ho!

[*Exeunt.*SCENE IV. — The same. The French King's Tent.Enter King Philip, Lewis, Pandolph, and Attendants.

K. Ph. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,
A whole armada of convicted sail
Is scatter'd and disjoin'd from fellowship.
Pand. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.
K. Ph. What can go well, when we have run so ill!

Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?
Arthur is'en prisoner! divers dear friends slain!
And bloody England into England gone,
O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?

Lew. What he hath won, that hath he fortified
So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example: Who hath read or heard,
Of any kindred action like to this? [His praise.

K. Ph. Well could I hear that England had
So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter Constance.

Look, who comes here! a grave unto a soul;
Holding the eternal spirit, against her grief,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath:—
I pry'thee, lady, go away with me.

Const. Lo, now! now see the issue of your peace!
K. Ph. Patience, good lady! comfort, gentle Constance!

Const. No, I defy all counsel, all redress,
But that which ends all counsel, true redress,
Death, death:—O unamiable lovely death!
Thou odiferous stench! sound rottenness!
Arise forth from the couch of lascivious night,

K. John. The king is mov'd, and answers not in this.

Const. O be remov'd from him, and answer well.
Ans. Do so, King Philip; hang no more in doubt.

Blanch. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most K. Phi. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pand. What canst thou say, but will perplex If thou stand excommunicate, and cur'd!

K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person yours.

And tell me, how you would bestow yourself:
This royal hand and mine are newly knit:
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vows;
The latest breath that gave the sound of words,
Was deep-sworn faith, peace, unity, true love,
Between our kindreds and our royal selves;
And even before this truce, but new before,
No longer than we well could wash our hands.

To clasp this royal bargain up of peace, [stand]
Heaven knows, they were besworn'd and over-
With slaughter's pencil; where revenue did paint
The fearful difference of monied kings:
And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of blood,
So newly join'd in love, so strong in both,
Unyoke this seizure, and this kind regret?
Phy fast and loose with faith! so jest with heaven,
Make such unconscionable children of ourselves,
As now again to snatch our palm from pain;
Unswear faith sworn; and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity! O holy sir,

My reverend father, let me not be so:
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order; and then we shall be bless'd
To do your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pand. All form is formless, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.

Therefore, to arms; be champion of our church!
Or let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,
A mother's curse, on her revelling son.
France, thou may'st hold a serpent by the tongue,
A cased lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting tiger milder by the tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

K. Phi. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith;
And, like a civil war, set'st oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O, let thy vow,
First made to heaven, first be to heaven perform'd;
That is, to be the champion of our church!

What since thou swor'st, is sworn against thyself,
And may not be performed by thyself:

For that, which thou hast sworn to do anims,
Is not anims when it is truly done;

And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it:

The better act of purposes mistook
Is, to mistake again; though indirect,
Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood falsehood cures; as fire cools fire.

Within the scorched veins of one new burn'd,
It is religion, that doth make vows kept;

But thou hast sworn against religion;
By what thou swor'st, against the thing thou

swor'st:

And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth
Against an oath: The truth thou art unsure

To swear, swear only not to be forsworn;
Else, what a mockery should it be to swear!

But thou dost swear only to be forsworn:
And must forsworn, to keep what thou dost swear.

Therefore, thy better vows, against thy first,
Is in thyself rebellion to thyself.

And better conquest never can'st thou make,
Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts

Against those giddy loose suggestions;
Upon which better part our prayers come in.

If thou vouchsafe them: but if not, then know
The peril of our curse's light on thee;

So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off,
But, in despair, die under their black weight.

Ans. Rebellion, flat rebellion!

Blanch. Will't not be!

Leve. Father, to arms!

Blanch. Upon thy wedding-day!
Against the blood that thou hast married!

What, shall our feast be kept with slaughter'd
men?

Shall braying trumpets and loud churchish drums—
Clamorous of hell,—be measures to our pomp?

O husband, hear me!—ah, slack, how new
Is husband to my mouth!—even I for that name,

Which till this time my tongue did ne'er pro-
Upon my knee I beg, go not to arms

Against mine uncle.

Const. O, upon my knee,
Made hard with kneeling, I do pray to thee.

Thou virtuous champion, alter not the doom
Fore-thought by heaven.

Blanch. Now shall I see thy love: What two
Be stronger with thee than the name of wife!

Const. That which upholds him that thee
honours.

O, thine honour, Lewis, thine honour!
I muse, my majesty doth seem so cold.

When such profound respects do pull you on,
Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.

K. Phi. Thou shalt not need:—England, I'll fall from thee.

Const. O fair return of banish'd majesty!

Ed. O soul revolt of French inconstancy!

K. John. France, thou shalt rue this hour with him this hour.

Blanch. Old time the clock-setter, that baid certain time.

Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue Blanch. The sun's o'ercast with blood. Fair day, adieu!

Which is the side that I must go withal?
I am with both: each army hath a hand;

And, in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirl and scatter me, and dismember me.

Husband, I cannot pray that thou may'st win;
Uncle, I needs must pray that thou may'st lose;

Father, I may not wish thy fortune true;
Grandson, I will not wish thy wealth thrive:

Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose:
Assured loss, before the match be play'd.

Leve. Lady, with me: with me thy fortune lies.

Blanch. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.

K. John. Cousin, go draw our puissance together.

Ed. France, I am burn'd up with inflamm'g wrath;
A rage, whose heat hath this condition,

That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The blood, and dearest-weld'd blood, of France.

K. Phi. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn

To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire:
Look to thyself, thou art in jeopardy.

K. John. No more than he that threatens.—To arms let's hue!

Among the high tides, in the calendar !
 Nay, rather, turn this day out of the week ;
 This day of shame, oppression, perjury :
 Or, if it must be and still, let w.ves with child
 Pray, that their burdens may not fall this day,
 Lest that their hopes prodigiously be cross'd ;
 But on this day, let semen fear no wreck ;
 No bargain break, that are not this day made :
 This day, all things begun come to an end ;
 Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change !
K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no
 To curse the fair proceedings of this day : [cause
 Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty !

Const. You have beguild me with a counter-feint, [tried,
 Resembling majesty : which, being touch'd, and
 Proves valueless : You are forsworn, forsworn ;
 You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
 But now in arms you strengthen it with yours :
 The grappling valour and rough frown of war,
 Is cold in unity and painted peace,
 And our oppression hath made up this league :—
 Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjur'd knaves !

A widow cries : he husband to me, heavens !
 Let not the hours of this ungodly day
 Wear out the day in peace ; but, ere sunset,
 Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd kings !
 Hear me, O, hear me !

Aust. Lady Constance, peace
Const. War ! war ! no peace ! peace is to me a
 O Lynceus ! O Astruc ! thou dost shame [war,
 That bloody spot : Thou wive, thou wive, thou
 Thou little valiant, great in villany ! [coward :
 Thou ever strong upon the stronger side !
 Thou fortune's champion, that dost never fight
 But when her humorous ladyship is by
 To teach thee safety ! thou art perjur'd too,
 And sooth'st up greatness. What a fool art thou,
 A ramping fool ; to brag, and stamp, and swear,
 Upon my party ! Thou cold-blooded slave,
 Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side !
 Been sworn my soldier ! bidding me depend
 Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength !
 And dost thou now fall over to my foes ?
 Thou wear a lion's hide ! dost it for shame,
 And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. O, that a man should speak those words to me ! [limbs.

Best. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.

Best. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs. [thyself.

K. John. We like not this ; thou dost forget

Enter Pandulph.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the pope.

Pand. Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven !

To thee, King John, my holy errand is.

I Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,

And from Pope Innocent the legate here,

Do, in his name, religiously demand,

Why thou against the church, our holy mother,

So wilfully dost spurn ; and, force perforce,

Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop

Of Canterbury, from that holy see !

This, in our forefathers' holy father's name,

Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthly name to interrogatories,

Can task the free breath of a sacred king !

Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name

So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous,

To charge me to an answer, as the pope.

Tell him this tale : and from the mouth of England,

Add thus much more.—That no Italian priest
 Shall title or to I in our dominions ;
 But as we under heaven are supreme head,
 So, under him, that great supremacy,
 Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
 Without the assistance of a mortal hand :
 So tell the pope : all reverence set apart,
 To him, and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this. [tend-on,

K. John. Though you, and all the kings of Christ-

Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,

Dreading the curse that money may buy out :

And, by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,

Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,

Who, in that sale, sell pardon from himself ;

Though you, and all the rest, so grossly led,

This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish ;

Yet I, alone, alone do me oppose

Against the pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then by the lawful power that I have,

Thou shalt stand curs'd, and excommunicate :

And blessed shall he be, that doth revolt

From his allegiance to an heretic :

And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,

Canoniz'd, and worship'd as a saint,

That takes away by any secret course

Thy hateful life.

Const. O, lawful let it be.

That I have room with Rome to curse a while !

Good father cardinal, cry thou, amen,

To my keen curses ; for, without my wrong,

There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pand. There's law and warrant, lady, for my curse. [right,

Const. And for mine too ; when law can do so

Let it be lawful, that law bar no wrong :

Law cannot give my child his kingdom here ;

For he, that holds his kingdom, holds the law :

Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,

How can the law forbid my tongue to curse !

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,

Let go the hand of that arch-heretic ;

And raise the power of France upon his head,

Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

Eli. Look'st thou pale, France ! do not let go thy hand. [repen.

Const. Look to that, devil ! lest that France

And, by disjoining hands, tell lose a soul

Aust. King Philip, listen to the cardinal

Best. And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs. [wrench.

Aust. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these

Because—

Best. Your breeches best may carry them.

K. John. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal !

Const. What should he say, but as the cardinal !

Leo. Bethink you, father, for the difference

Is, purchase of a heavy cross from Rome,

Or the light loss of England for a friend :

Forego the easier.

Branch. That's the curse of Rome.

Const. O Lewis, stand fast ; the devil tempts thee here.

In likeness of a new untrammell'd bride.

Branch. The lady Constance since speaks not from her faith.

But from her need.

Const. O, if thou grant my need,

Which only lives but by the death of faith,

That need must needs infer this principle,—

That faith would live again by death of need ;

O then tread down my need, and faith mounts up ;

Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down.

Some speedy messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity:—I trust we shall,
If not fill up the measure of her will,
Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlook'd-for unprepared pomp.

[Exeunt all but the Bastard — The Citizens retire from the walls.]

Best. Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!
John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part; [on:]
And France (whose armour conscience buckled
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field,
As God's own soldier.) rounded in the ear
With that same purpose-changer, that sly-devil;
That broker that still breaks the pate of faith;
That daily break-vow: he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids;
Who having no external thing to lose
But the word maid,—cheats the poor maid of that commodity.

That smooth-faced gentleman, tickling commodity, the bias of the world:
The world, who of itself is peised well,
Made to run even; upon even ground:
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this commodity,
This bias, this broker, this all-changing word,
Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd end,
From a resolv'd and honourable war,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace.—
And why rail I on this commodity?
But for because he hath no woe'd me yet:
Not that I have the power to clutch my hand,
When his fair angels would salute my palm:
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, rattleth on the rich.
Well, whilst I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say,—there is no sin, but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say,—there is no vice, but beggary:
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Guns be my lord! for I will worship thee! [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. — The same. The French King's Tent.

Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Const. Gune to be married! gone to swear a
peace!

False blood to false blood join'd! Gune to be friends! [voices]

Shall Lewis have Blunch? and Blunch those pro-
it is not so; thou hast misspoken, misheard;
Be well advis'd, tell o'er thy tale again:
It cannot be; thou dost but say, 'tis so:
I trust, I may too trust thee: for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man;
I have a king's oath to the contrary.
Thou shalt be punish'd for thus fighting me,
For I am sick, and capable of fears;
Oppress'd with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;
A widow, husbandless, subject to fears;
A woman, naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confessest, thou didst but jest,
With my vex'd spirits I cannot take a truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.

What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my soul?
What means that hand upon that breast of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rievum?
Like a proud river peering o'er his bounds?
Be these sad signs confirmers of thy words?
Then speak again; not all thy former tale.
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true, as I believe, you think them false,
That give you cause to prove my saying true.
Const. O if thou teach me to believe that sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die;
And let belief and life encounter so,
As doth the fury of two desperate men,
Which, in the very meeting, fall and die.—
Lewis marry Blunch! O, boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England! what becomes of me?
Fellow, be gone: I cannot brook thy sight:
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.

Sol. What o'er her harm have I, good lady, done,
But spoke the harm that is by others done?
Const. Which harm within itself is a heinous sin,
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.

Art. I do beseech you, madam, be content.
Const. If thou, that bid'st me be content, wert grim,

Ugly, and stand'st roars to thy mother's womb,
Full of unpleasant blots, and sightless stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,
Patch'd with foul moles, and eye-offending marks,
I would not cure, I then would be content;
For then I should not love thee; no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair; and at thy birth, dear boy,
Nature and fortune join'd to make thee great;
Of nature's gifts thou may'st with liest boast.
And with the half-blown rose: but fortune, O!
She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee;
She adulterates hourly with thy uncle John;
And with her golden hand hath pluck'd off France
To tread down fair respect of sovereignty,
And made his mistress the law to theirs.
France is a pawn to fortune, and king John;
That strumpet for me, that usurper John.—
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forever?
Even now him with words; or get thee gone,
And leave these woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to under-bear.

Sol. Pardon me, madam,
I may not go without you to the kings.

Const. Thou may'st, thou shalt, I will not go
with thee:

I will instruct my sorrows to be proud:
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stout.
To me, and to the state of my great grief,
Let kings assemble; for my grief's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up; here I and sorrow sit;
Here is my throne, but kings come how to it.

[She throws herself on the ground.]

Enter King John, King Philip, Lewis, Blunch, Elinor, Bastard, Austria, and Attendants.

K. Phi. 'Tis true, fair daughter, and this blessing
Ever in France shall be kept festival: [loud day,
To solemnize this day, the glorious sun
Shine in his course, and play the uicemist:
Turning, with splendour of his precious eye,
The meagre cloudy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course that brings this day about,
Shall never see it but a holiday.

Const. A wicked day, and not a holy day: [singing.
What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done;
That it in golden letters should be set,

Rescue these breathing lives to die in beds,
That here come ^{to the field} for the field:
Persever not, but hear us, mighty kings.

K. John. Speak on, with favour; we are bent to hear.

I Ch. That daughter there of Spain, the Lady
Is near to England. Look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin, and that lowly maid:
If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?
If zealous love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?
If low ambitious sought a match of birth,
Whom versed bound richer blood than Lady Blanch?

Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth.
Is the young Dauphin every way complete:
If not complete, O say, he is not she;
And she again wants nothing, to have want,

If want it be not, that she is not he:
He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such a she;

And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.
O, two such silver currents, when they join,

Do glorify the banks that bound them in: (one,
And two such shores to two such streams made
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To these two princes, if you marry them.)

This union shall do more than buttress can.
To our fast-closed gates: for, at this match,
With swifter spleen than powder can enforce,

The mouth of passage shall we fling wide open,
And give you entrance; but, without this match,
The sea enraged is not half so deaf,

Lions more confident, mountains and rocks
More free from motion: no, not death himself
In mortal fury half so peremptory,

As we to keep this city.

Bed. Here's a stay.
That strikes the rotten corner of death
Out of his rack! Here's a large wound, indeed,
That spits forth death, and mountains, rocks, and seas:

Talks as familiarly of roaring lions,
As mounds of thirteen do of puppy-dogs!
What canst thou hearst this lusty blood?

He speaks plain cannon, fire, and smoke, and bounces;

He gives the bastinado with his tongue;
Our ears are cudgell'd; not a word of his,
But buffets better than a fat of France:

Zounds! I was never so belump'd with words,
Since I first call'd my brother's father, dad.

Ed. Sen. Just to this conjunction, make this match;

Give with our niece a dowry large enough:
For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie
Thy now assur'd assurance to the crown,

That thy green boy shall have no sun to ripe
The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit.

I see a yielding in the looks of France; [swells
Mark, how they whisper: urge them, while their
Are capable of this submission:

Last zeal, now melted, by the windy breath
Of soft petitions, pity, and remorse,
Cool and congeal again to what it was.

I Ch. Why answer not the double majesties
This friendly treaty of our threaten'd town?

K. Ph. Speak England first, that hath been forward first

To speak on this or'y. What say you? (son,
K. John. If that the Dauphin there, thy princely
Can in this book of beauty read; I love,
Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen:
For Anjou, and fair Touraine, Maine, Poitiers,

And all that we upon this side the sea
(Except this city now by us besieg'd),
Find liable to our crown and dower;

Shall gild her bridal bed; and make her rich
In titles, honours, and promotions,
As she in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hand with any princess of the world.

K. Ph. What say'st thou, boy? I look in the lady's face.

Lew. I do, my lord, and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of myself form'd in her eye:

Which, being but the shadow of your son,
Becomes a sun, and makes your son a shadow:
I do protest, I never lov'd myself,
Till now I beheld myself.

Drawn in the flattering tale of her eye.
(Whispers with Blanch.
Haug'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow!—
And quarter'd in her heart!—he do's easy himself love's traitor: This is pity now
That hang'd, and drawn, and quarter'd, there should be,
In such a love, so vile a loot as he.

Blanch. My uncle's will, in this respect, is mine
If he see night in you, that makes him like.
That any thing he sees, which moves his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will;

Or, if you will (to speak more properly),
I will enforce it easily to my love.

Further I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love,
Than this,—that nothing do I see in you, (Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your judge,)

That I can find should merit any hate.
K. John. What say these young ones? What my you, my niece!

Blanch. That she is bound in honour still to do
What you in wisdom shall vouchsafe to say.

K. John. Speak then, prince Dauphin; can you love this lady?

Lew. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love!
For I do love her most unfekingly. [Malos,
K. John. Then I do give Volquessen, Touraine,
Poitiers, and Anjou, these five provinces,
With her to thee; and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand marks of English coin —
Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withal.

Command thy son and daughter to join hands.
K. Ph. It likes us well.—Young princes, close your hands.

Asst. And you, like too; for I am well assur'd
That I did so, when I was first assur'd.

K. Ph. Now, citizens of Angiers, open your gates,
Let in that unity which you have made;
For at Saint Mary's chapel, presently,
The rites of marriage shall be solemniz'd —
Is not the Lady Constance in this town?

I know she is not; for this match, made up,
Her presence would have interrupted much:

Where is she and her son? I tell me, who knows Lew. She is sad and passionate at your nephew's tent. [have made,
K. Ph. And, by my faith, this lenoxe that we Will give her sadness very little cure. —
Brother of England, how may we content
This widow lady? In her right we cause:
Which we, God knows, have turn'd another way,
To our own vantage.

K. John. We will heal up all,
For we'll create young Arthur duke of Bretagne,
And earl of Richmond; and this rich fair town
We'll make him lord of.—Call the lady Constance;

K. John. Up higher to the plain; where we'll set forth.

In best appointment, all our regiments.

Bast. Speed then, to take advantage of the field.

K. Phi. It shall be so:—[to Lewis] and at the other hill

Command the rest to stand.—God, and our rich!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same

Alarums and Excursions; then a Retreat. Enter a French Herald, with trumpets, to the gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers, open wide your gates.

And let young Arthur, duke of Breagne, in;
Who, by the hand of France, this day hath made
Much work for tears in many an English mother.
Whose sons lie scatter'd on the bleeding ground;
Many a widow's husband grovelling lies,
Coldly embracing the discomfort of earth;
And victory, with little loss, doth play
Upon the dancing banners of the French
Who are at hand, triumphantly display'd,
To enter conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Bretagne, England's king, and your's.

Enter an English Herald, with trumpets.

E. Her. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your bells:

King John, your king and England's, doth appoint
Commander of this hot malicious day!
Their armours, that march'd hence so silver-bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood;
There's such no plume in any English crest,
That is removed by a staff of France;
Our colours do return in those same hands
That did display them when we first march'd forth;
And, like a jolly troop of lusty men, come
Our lusty English, all with purpled hands.
Dyed in the dying slaughter of their foes:
Open your gates, and give the victors way.

Cit. Heralds, from off our towers we might be-
From first to last, the onset and retire hold,
Of both your armies; whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censur'd: [blows]
Blood hath bought blood, and blows have answer'd Strength match'd with strength, and power counter-fracted power:

Both are alike; and both alike we like. [even,
One must prove greatest: while they weigh so
We hold our town for neither; yet for both.

*Enter, at one side, King John, with his power;
Elmer, Blaunch, and the Bastard; at the other,
King Philip, Lewis, Austria, and Forces.*

K. John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?

Say, shall the current of our right run on?
Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channel, and o'erflow
With course disturb'd even thy confining shores;
Unless thou let'st his silver water keep
A peaceful progress to the ocean. [of blood,
K. Phi. England, thou hast not say'd one drop in this hot trial, more than we of France;

Rather, last more: And by this hand I swear,
That always the earth this climate overlooks,—
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
We'll put thee down, against whom these arms we
Or add a royal number to the dead; [bear,
Gracing the scroll, that tells of this war's loss,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.
Bast. Ha, majesty! how high thy glory towers,
When the red blood of kings is set on fire!

O, now doth death line his dead chaps with steel.

The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs.

And now he feeds, moulting the flesh of men,

In undetermined differences of kings.—

Why stand these royal trunks amized thus?

Cry, havoc, kings! back to the stained field,

You equal potent, fiery-kindled spirits!

Then let confusion of our part confirm [death!
The other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet advance?

K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England; who's I Cf. The king of England, whom we know the king. [right]

K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up his

K. John. In us, that are our own great duty,

And fear a session of our presence here;

Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

I Cf. A greater power than we denies all this;

And, till it be undoubted, we do lack

Our former scruple in our strong barr'd gates;

King'd of our fears; until our smart resolve'd,

Be by some certain king paid and dispos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers stout you, kings;

And stand securely on their battlements,

As in a theatre, whence they gaze and point

At your industrious scenes and acts of death.

Your royal presences be ruin'd by me;

Do like the nuptials of Jerusalem,

Be friends a while, and both conjointly bend

Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town:

By east and west let France and England mount

Their battering cannon charg'd to the mouths;

Till their soul-fearing clamours have brow'd

The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city: [down
I'd play incessantly upon these jades,

Even till unfenced desolation

Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.

That done, discover your united strengths,

And part your mingled colours once again;

Turn face to face, and bloody point to point;

Then, in a moment, fortune shall cut forth

Out of one side her happy minion;

To whom in favour she shall give the day,

And kiss him with a glorious victory.

How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?

Smacks it not something of the policy? [heads
K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above our

I like it well;—France, shall we hunt our powers,

And lay this Angiers even with the ground;

Then after fight who shall be king of it?

Bast. As it thou hast the mettle of a king,—

Being wrong'd, as we are, by this peevish town,

Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery;

As we will ours, against these snaky walls;

And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,

Why, then defy each other; and, pell-mell,

Make work upon ourselves, for heaven or hell.

K. Phi. Let it be so:—Say, where will you assault? [two

K. John. We from the west will send destruction into this city's bowels.

Bast. I from the north.

K. Phi. Our thunder from the south,

Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bast. O prudent discipline! From north to south;

Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth.

[Aside.]

I'll stir them to it:—Come, away, away!

I Cf. Hear us, great kings; vouchsafe a while to stay.

And I shall show you peace, and fair-faced leagues;
Win you this city with least stroke or wound;

Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig :

There's a good grandain. God my mother, peace!
I would, that I were low laid in my grave;
I am not worth this coil that's made for me.

Ala. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps. [or no?]

Const. Now shame upon you, who's she does,
His grandin's wrongs, and not his mother's shames.

Ala. I saw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee;
Ay, with these crystal beads heaven shall be brib'd
To do him justice, and revenge on you.

Ph. Then monstrous sin her of heaven and earth! tear it!

Const. Those monstrous in her of heaven and Call not me slanderer; thou, and thine, usurp
The dominations, royal ties, and rights, [son,
Of this oppressed boy: This is thy eldest son's
Infortunate in nothing but in thee;
Thy sins are vis'd in this poor child,
The canon of the law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.

K. John. Beklam, have done.

Const. I have but this to say,—
That he's not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her the plague
On this removed issue, plag'd for her,
And with her plague, her sin: his injury
Her injury,—the beadle to her sin;
All pound'd in the person of this child,
And all for her: A plague upon her!

Ed. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce
A will, that bars the title of thy son. [will;
Const. Ay, who doubts that? I will! a wicked
A woman's will: a canker'd grandin's will!

K. Ph. Peace, lady: pause, or be more tempe-
It ill becomes this presence, to cry aim [rule:
To those ill-tuned repetitions.—
Some trumpet summon hither to the walls
These men of Angiers; let us hear them speak,
Whose titles they admit, Arthur's or John's.

Trumpets sound. Enter Citizens upon the walls.

I Cit. Who is it, that hath warn'd us to the K. Ph. 'Tis France, for England! I walls!

K. John. England, for itself:
You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects—

K. Ph. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects.

Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.

K. John. For our advantage;—Therefore, hear us first.—

These flags of France, that are advanced here
Before the eye and prospect of your town,
Have hither march'd to your endowment:
The cannon's roar, the clash of iron walls;
And ready mounted are they, to not forth
Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:
All preparation for a bloody siege,
And merciless proceeding by these French,
Confront your city's eyes, your windows as;
And, but for our approach, those sleeping stoues,
That as a waist do girdle you about,
By the compulsion of their ordinance
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had been despatch'd, and wide havoc made
For bloody power to rush upon your peace.
But, on the sight of us, your lawful king,—
Win, painfully, with much expedient march,
Have brought a countercheck before your gates,
To save unscar'd your city's threaten'd cheeks,—

Behold, the French, arriv'd, vouchsafe a parle;
And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,
To make a shaking fever in your walls,

They shoot but calm words, fold'd up in smoke,
To make a faithless error in your ears:
Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,
And let us in, your king; whose labour'd spirits,
Forewearied in this action of swift speed,
Crave harbourage within your city walls. [hush.

K. Ph. When I have said, make answer to us
Lo, in this right hand, whose protection
Is most divinely vow'd upon the right
Of him it hold, stands young Plantagenet;
Son to the elder brother of this man,
And king o'er him, and all that he enjoys:
For this down-trodden equity, we tread

In warlike march these greaves before your town;
Being no further enemy to you,
Than the constraint of hospitable zeal!

In the relief of this oppressed child,
Religiously provokes. Be pleased then
To pay that duty, which you truly owe,

To him that owes it; namely, this young prince:
And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,
Safe in aspect, have all offense seal'd up;

Our cannon's muzzles vainly shall be spent
Against the invulnerable clouds of heaven;
And, with a blessed and unwe'd retire,

With unhack'd swords, and helmets all unbram'd,
We will bear home that lady blow again,
Which here we came to spout against your town,

And leave your children, wives, and you, in peace.
But if you faultily pass our proffer'd offer,
'Tis not the roundure of your old-fac'd walls
Can hide you from our messengers of war;

Though all these English, and their discipline,
Were harbour'd in their rule circumference.
Then tell us, shall your city call us lord,

In that behalf which we have challeng'd it?
Or shall we give the signal to our rage,
And walk in blood to our possession?

I Cit. In brief, we are the king of England's subjects:

For him, and in his right, we hold this town.

K. John. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in. [King,

I Cit. That can we not: but he that proves
To him will we prove loyal: till that time.

Have we rain'd up our axes against the world.
K. John. Dost not the crown of England prove
the king?

And, if not that, I bring you witnesses,
Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's Best, Bastards, and else [breed,—

K. John. To verify our title with their lives.
K. Ph. As many, and as well-born bloods as Best. Some has arish too [thuse,—

K. Ph. Stand in his face, to contradict his [thuse,

I Cit. Till you compound whose right is worst,
We, for the worthier, hold the right from him.

K. John. Then God forgive the sin of all those
That to their everlasting residence, [souls,
Before the dew of evenin' fall, shall flee!

In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king!
K. Ph. Amen! Amen!—Mount chivaliers! to arms! [and o'er shoes,

Best. St. George,—that swing'd the dragon,
Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door,
Teach us some fence!—Sirs, were I at home,
At your den, sirrah, [to a sin.] with your horses,
I'd set an ox-head on your lion's hide,
And make a monster of you.

And. Peace, no more.

Best. O, tremble; for you hear the lion roar.

Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength.

To make a more requital to your love

Ans. The peace of heaven is theirs, that lift their swords such a just and charitable war. [be hen]

K. Phil. Well, then, to work; our cannon shall

Against the brows of this resisting town. —

Call for our chiefest men of discipline,

To cull the plots of best advantages: —

We'll lay before this town our royal losses,

Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood,

But we will make it subject to this buy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy.

Let us advise'd you stain your swords with blood:

My lord Chatillon may from England bring

That right in peace, which here we urge in war;

And then we shall repeat each drop of blood,

That it is rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter Chatillon.

K. Phil. A wonder, lady! — Is, upon thy wish,

Our messenger Chatillon is arriv'd. —

What England says, say briefly, gentle lord.

We only pause for thee: Chatillon, speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry

siege,

And stir them up against a mightier task.

England, impatient of your just demands,

Hath put himself in arms; the adverse winds

Whose leisure I have staid, have given him time

To land his legions all as soon as I:

His marches are expedient to the town,

His forces a rout, his soldiers confident.

With him alone is come the mother-queen,

An Ate, strong him to blood and strife;

With her near niece, the lady Blanch of Spain,

With them a bastard of the king deceased:

And all the time tied humours of the land, —

Rash, moderate, fiery, voluntaries,

With ladies' faces, and fierce dragons' spleens, —

Have sold their fortunes at their native houses,

Bearing their torchlights proudly on their backs;

To make a hazard of new fortunes here.

In brief, a heavier choice of dantless spirits,

Than won the English bottoms have wait o'er,

Did never float upon the swelling tide,

To do offence and scath in Christendom.

The interruption of their church-drums

[Drums beat.]

Cuts off more circumstances: they are at hand,

To parley, or to fight; therefore, prepare

K. Phil. How much unlook'd-for is this expedition!

Ans. By how much unexpected, by so much

We must awake endeavour for defence;

For courage mounteth with occasion:

Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter King John, Elmer, Blanch, the Bastard,

Penbrooke, and Forces.

K. John. Peace be to France; if France in peace permit

Our just and liberal entrance to our own!

If not; bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven!

Whiles we, God's warlike agent, do correct

Their proud contempt that beat his peace to heaven. [turn]

K. Phil. Peace be to England; if that war

From France to England, there to live in peace!

England we love; and, for that England's sake,

With burden of our armour here we sweat;

This toil of ours should be a work of thine;

But thou from loving England art so far,

That thou hast underwrought his lawful king,

Cut off the succession of posterity,

Outfaced his ancestors, and done a rape

Upon the maid a virtue of the crown.

Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face: —

These eyes, these brows, were once dead out of his.

This little abstract doth contain that large,

Which died in Geoffrey; and the hand of time

Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.

That Geoffrey was thy elder brother born,

And this his son; England was Geoffrey's right,

And this is Geoffrey's: In the name of God,

How comes it then, that thou art call'd a king,

When living blood doth in these temples beat,

Which owe the crown that thou usurmost?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission, France.

To draw my answer from thy articles?

K. Phil. From that superfluous judge, that stirs great thoughts

In any breast of strong authority.

To look into the black and sunny of right.

That judge hath made me guardian to this boy;

Under whose warrant, I suspect thy wrong:

And, by whose help, I mean to cleanse it.

K. John. Alack, thou dost usurp authority.

K. Phil. Excuse: it is to bea usurping down.

Eli. Who is it, thou dost call usurper, France?

K. Const. Let me make answer. — My usurper was

Eli. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king;

That thou may'st be a queen, and check the world!

Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true,

As thine was to thy husband; and this boy

Liketh in feature to his father Geoffrey.

Thou thou and John in manners: being as like,

As rain to water, or devil to his dam.

My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think,

His father never was so true a begot.

It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother.

Eli. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father. [beat thee.]

Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would

Ans. Peace!

Ans. Hear the crier.

Ans. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One that will play the devil, sir, with you,

And 's may catch your wife and you alone.

You are the lure of whom the proverb goes,

Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard;

I'll smother your sin-coat, or I catch you right;

Sirrah, look to't! I faith, I will, I faith.

Blanch. O, well did he become that lion's robe,

That did disrobe the lion of that robe!

Bast. It lies as lightly on the back of him,

As great Alcides' shoes upon an ass: —

But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back;

Or lay on that, shall make your shoulders crack.

Ans. What cracker is this same, that dares our ears

With this abundance of superfluous breath?

K. Phil. Lewis, determine what we shall do straight. [peace.]

Leo. Women and fools, break off your confer-

King John, this is the very sum of all —

England, and Ireland, Angou, Touraine, Maine,

In right of Arthur do I claim of thee:

Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?

K. John. My life and soul: — I do deny thee,

France.

Arthur of Breunage, yield thee to my hand;

And, out of my dear love, I'll give thee more

Than e'er the coward hand of France can win:

Submit thee, boy.

Eli. Come to thy grandam, child.

Const. Do, child, go to it grandam, child;

Give grandam kingdom, and it grandam will.

Best. Brother, adieu: Good fortune come to
For thou wast got this way of honesty. [Exit]

[Exeunt all but the Bastard.]
A foot of honour better than I was;
But many a many foot of land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Joan a lady:—
Good den, sir Richard.—God-a-mercy, John:—
And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter:
For now-made honour doth forget men's names;
The lion's respect, and the scoldable,
For your conversation. Now your traveller,—
He and his tooth-pick at my worship's mess;
And when my knightly sword is pulled,
Why then I suck my teeth, and catch a—
My poked man of countries:—My dear sir,
[Thou, leaning on my elbow, I begin.]
I shall be soch you.—That is question now:
And then comes answer like an ABC-book:—
O, sir, says an-ner, of your best command;
At your employment; at your service, sir:—
No, sir, says question, I, sweet sir, at yours:
And so, ere answer knows what question would,
[Sewing in dialogue of compliment;
And talking of the Alps and Apennines,
The Pyrenees, and the river Po.]
It draws toward supper in conclusion so.
But this is worshipping society,
And fits the mounting spirit, like myself:
For he is but a bastard to the time.
That doth not smack of observation;
[And so am I, whether I smack, or no;]
(And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior form, outward accoutrement;
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth:
Wouldst, though I will not practise so deceive,
Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;
For I shall strew the footsteps of my rising:—
But who comes in such haste, in riding robes!
What woman paint is this? I hath seen no husband,
That will take pains to blow a horn before her!

Enter Lady Faulconbridge, and James Gurney.
O me! it is my mother:—How now, good lady!
What brings you here to court so hastily!
Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother?
Where is he?
That holds in chase mine honour up and down?
Best. My brother Robert! old sir Robert's son!
Cobrand the giant, that same mighty man!
Is it sir Robert's son, that you seek so? [Boy, Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou un-reverend Sir Robert's son: Why scourst thou at sir Robert?
He is sir Robert's son: and so art thou. [While] Best. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave a Gear. Good leave, good Philip.
Best. Philip!—sparrow!—James,
There's toys abroad; anon I'll tell thee more. [Exit Gurney.
Madam, I was not old sir Robert's son;
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon Good Friday, and ne'er broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well; Marry (to confess!)
Could he eat me! Sir Robert could not do it;
We know his handy-work:—Therefore, good mother,
To whom am I beholden for these limbs?
Sir Robert never help to make this leg.
Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too, [how art]
That for thine own gain should'st defend mine
What means this scorn, thou most unworthy kneave? [like]
Best. Knight, knight, good mother.—Be-leave
What! I am dubb'd; I have it on my shoulder.

*But, mother, I am not sir Robert's son:
I have disclaim'd sir Robert, and my land;
Legitimation name, and all is gone:*
Then, good my mother, let me know my father:
Some proper man, I hope; Who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faulcon-
bridge?

Best. As faithfully as I deny the devil. [father:
Lady F. King Richard! Good-den thou was thy
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my husband's bed:—
Heaven lay not his transgression to my charge:—
Thou art the issue of my dear offence,
Which was so strongly urg'd, per my defence.

Best. Now, by this light, were I to get again,
Madam, I would not with a better father.
Some sin do bear their privilege on earth,
And so doth yours: your fault was not your folly Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,— Solicited tribune to commanding love,—
Against whose fury and mine chafed force
The wifely lion could not wade the fight,
Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand.
He, that perforce rubs horns of their hearts,
May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father!
Who lives and dares but say, thou did'st not well
When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell.
Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin;
And they shall say, when Richard was begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin:
Who says it was, he lies; I say, 'twas not.

[Exeunt]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—France. Before the walls of Angiers.

Enter, on one side, the Archduke of Austria, and Forces; on the other, Philip, King of France, and Forces; Lewis, Constable, Arthur, and Attendants.

Lew. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.—
Arthur, that great fore-runner of thy blood,
Richard, that rob'd the lion of his heart,
And fought the holy wars in Palestine,
By this brave duke came early to his grave;
And, for rewards to his poor entry,
At our importance nothing is become.
To spread his colours, say, in thy behalf;
And to rebuke the usurpation
Of thy unnatural uncle, English John;
Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.
Arch. God shall forgive you Caesar-like death,
The rather, that you give his usurping life,
Shadowing their right under your wifery of war.
I give you welcome with a powerless hand,
But with a heart full of unshared love:
Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Lew. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?
Arch. Upon thy cheek I lay this token as kiss,
As seal to this indenture of my love;
That to my home I will no more return.
Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-inc's score,
Whose foot spurts back the ocean's running tides,
And leaps from other lands her islands,
Even all that England, lock'd in with the main,
That water-walled bulwark, will secure
And confident from foreign perils.
Even till that utmost corner of the west
Salute thee for her king: till then, fair boy,
Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Const. O, take his mother's thanks, a widow's thanks.

Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, into solitary Essex.

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy,

Come from the country to be judged by you.

K. John. Let them approach. [Exit Sheriff.]
Our aldehys, and our priories, shall pay

Re-enter Sheriff, with Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip, his bastard brother.

This expedition's charge.—What men are you?

Sheriff. Your faithful subject I, a gentleman,
Born in Northamptonshire; and old-at sea,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge;
A soldier, by the honour-giving hand
Of Count-de-lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the younger?

Essex. Most certain of one mother, mighty king,
That is well known; and, as I think, one father:
But, for the certain knowledge of that truth,
I put you o'er to heaven, and to my mother;
Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Essex. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother.

And wouldst her honour with this diffidence.

Essex. I, madam! No, I have no reason for it;
That is my brother's plea, and none of mine;
'Tis which if he can prove, 's pays me out
At least from four five hundred pound a year:
Heaven guard my mother's honour, and my land!

K. John. A good blunt fellow.—Why, being younger born,

Hath he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Essex. I know not why, except to get the land
But once he slander'd me with bastardy:

But when I be as true begot, or no,
That shall I lay upon my mother's head;

But, that I am as well begot, my liege,
(For fall the bones that took the pains for me!)
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself
If old Sir Robert did beget us both.

And were our father, and this son like him;—
O old Sir Robert, father, on my knee.

I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!

Essex. He hath a trick of Count-de-lion's face,
'Tis account of his tongue affecteth him:

Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined him
And finds them perfect Richard.—Sirrah, speak;

What does move you to claim your brother's land?

Essex. Because he hath a half-face, like my father:
With that half-face would he have all my land:

A half-faced knight five hundred pound a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much.

Essex. Well, sir, by this you cannot get my land:
Your tale must be, how he employ'd my mother.

Rob. And once despatch'd him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor.

To treat of high affairs touching that time:
'Tis the advantage of his absence took the king,

And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's;
Where how he did prevail, I shame to speak:

But truth is truth; large lengths of seas and shores
Between my father and my mother lay,

(As I have heard my father speak himself.)

When this same lusty gentleman was rot.
Upon his death-bed, he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me; and took it, on his death,
That this, my mother's son, was none of his;
And, if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate;
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him;

And, if she did play false, the fault was her's;
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands

That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother,
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,

Had of your father claim'd this son for his?

In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This calf, bred from his cow, from all the world;

In sooth, he might; then, if he were my brother's,
My brother might not claim him; nor your father,

Being none of his, refuse him. This concludes,—
My mother's son did get your father's heir;

Your father's heir must have your father's land.

Rob. Shall then my father's will be of no force,
To dispossess that child which is not his?

Essex. Of no more force to dispossess me, sir,
'Than was his will to get me, as I think.

Rob. Whether must thou rather,—be a Faulconbridge and like my brother, to enjoy thy land;

Or the reputed son of Count-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence, and no land beside?

Essex. Madam, as if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, Sir Robert has, like him;

And if my legs were two such riding-roads,
My arms such cool-skins stuff'd; my face so thin,

'Tis in mine ear I durst not stick a rose, (you see!)
Least men should say, Look, where three-farthings

And, to his shape, were heir to all this land,
'Would I might never stir from off this place,

I'd give it every foot to have this face;
I would not be Sir Rob in any case.

Essex. I like thee well. What thou forsake thy for-bequest thy land to him, and follow me!

I am a soldier, and now bound to France.

Essex. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my chance:

Your face hath got five hundred pounds a year;
Yet sell your face for five pence, and 'tis dear.

Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

Essex. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.

Essex. Our country manners give our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name?

Essex. Philip, my liege; so is my name begun;
Philip, good old Sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name whose form thou bearest:

Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more great;
Arise, Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Essex. Brother, by the mother's side, give me your
My father gave me honour, yours gave land:—
Now blessed be the hour, by night or day,

When I was got, Sir Robert was away.

Essex. The very apt of Plantagenet!—
I am thy grandfather, Richard: call me so.

Essex. Madam, by chance, but not by truth:
What though?

Something about, a little from the right,
In at the window, or else o'er the lutch;

Who dares not stir by day, must walk by night;
And have to have, however men do catch:

Near or far off, well woe is still well shut;
And I am I, however I was begot.

K. John. Go, Faulconbridge; now hast thou thy
A landless knight makes thee a landed squire.—
Come, madam, and come, Richard; we must speed
For France, for France; for it is more than need.

Rosse. Ay, on the front.
Ses. Why, then, God's soldier be he!
 Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
 I would not wish them to a fairer death:
 And so his knell is knoll'd.
Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
 And that I'll spend for him.
Ses. He's worth no more;
 They say, he parted well, and paid his score:
 So, God be with him!—Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter Macduff, with Macbeth's head on a pole.
Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: Behold, where stands
 The usurper's cursed head: the time is free:
 I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
 That speak my salutation in their minds:
 Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—
 Hail, king of Scotland!

All. King of Scotland, hail!
[Flourish.]
Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time
 Before we reckon with your several lives,
 And make us even with you. My themes and kins-
 men,
 Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
 In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
 Which would be planted near with the time,—
 As calling home our exil'd friends abroad,
 That feed the sours of wretched tyranny;
 Producing forth the cruel ministers
 Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen;
 Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
 Took off her life.—This, and what useful else
 That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
 We will perform in measure, time, and place:
 So thanks to all at once, and to each one,
 Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

KING JOHN.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

SCENE, — sometimes in England, and sometimes in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — Northampton. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, Salisbury, and others, with Chatillon.

King John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us?

Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of
 In my behaviour, to the majesty. [France,]
 The narrow'd under of England here
Ed. A strange beginning!—How now'd majesty!
K. John. Silence, good mother; hear the embassy. [Half]
Chat. Philip of France, in right and true be-
 Of thy deceased brother Geoffrey's son,
 Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim
 To this fair island, and the territories;
 To Ire and Poitiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine:
 Desiring thee to lay aside the sword;
 When ways usurpingly these several titles;
 And put the same into young Arthur's hand.
 Thy nephew and right royal sovereign.
K. John. What follows, if we disallow of this?
Chat. The proud control of fierce and bloody war
 To enforce these rights so forcibly withheld.
K. John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood.
 Controlment for controlment: so answer France.
Chat. Then take my king's denance from me.
 The furthest hint of my embassy. [Exit.]
K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in
 peace:
 Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;
 For ere thou canst report I will be there.
 The thunder of my cannon shall be heard:
 So, hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath,
 And sullen presage of your own decay.—
 An honourable conduct let him have:—
 Pembroke, look to't: Farewell, Chatillon.
[Exeunt Chatillon and Pembroke]
Ed. What now, my son? I have I not ever said,
 How that ambitious Constance would not cease,
 Till she had knell'd France, and all the world,
 Upon the right and party of her son?
 This might have been prevented, and made whole,
 With very easy arguments of love;
 Which now the manage of two kingdoms must
 With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.
K. John. Our strong possession, and our right for us. [Your right;]
Ed. Your strong possession, much more than
 Or else it must go wrong with you, and me:
 So much my conscience whispers in your ear,
 Which none but heaven, and you, and I, shall hear.

Macduff. Turn, hell-hound, turn!
Macbeth.—Of all men else I have avoided thee:
 But get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd
 With blood of thine already.
Macduff. I have no words;
 My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain
 Than terms can give thee out!

MACBETH, Act V., Scene vii.

I care not if thou dost for me as much.
I pull in resolution; and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend,
That lies like truth: *Fear not, till Birnam wood
Do come to Dunsinane*:—and now a wood
Comes toward Dunsinane.—Arm, arm, and out!
If this, which he avouches, does appear,
There is our flying hence, nor tarrying here.
I 'gin to be a-weary of the sun, [done.—
And wish the estate of the world were now un-
Ring the alarm bell:—Blow wind, come wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back.
[Exit.

SCENE VI.—The same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with drums and colours, Malcolm, old Siward, Macduff, &c., and their Army, with baggage.

Mal. Now, near enough: your leavy screens throw down.
And show like these you are. You, worthy uncle, Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son, Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff, and we, Shall take upon us what else remains to do, According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night.
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight. [full breath,
Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.
[Exit. Alarums continued.

SCENE VII.—The same. Another part of the Plain.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly, [be.
But, hear-like, I must fight the course.—What's That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young Siward.

Young Siw. What is thy name?
Macb. 'Tis he afraid to hear it.
Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a lot-
Th'an any is in hell. [ter name
Macb. My name's Macbeth.
Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce
More hateful to mine ear. [a title
Macb. No, nor more fearful.
Yo. Siw. Thou hast usurped tyrant; with my I'll prove the lie thou speak'st. [sword
[They fight, and young Siward is slain.
Macb. 'Thou wast born of woman:—
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born.
[Exit.

Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macd. 'That way the noise is:—Tyrant, show thy face:
If thou be'st slain, and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hild to bear their staves; either thou, Macbeth,
Or else my sword, with an unbatter'd edge,
I sheathe in again undeeded. There thou should'st fly this great clutter, or of greatest note [be;
Seems bruied. Let me find him, fortune!
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarums.

Enter Malcolm and old Siward.

Siw. Thus way, my lord;—the castle's gently render'd:
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost i' self professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle
[Exit. Alarums

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and
die
On mine own sword? while I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn.
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee;
But get thee back, my soul is too much chag'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words,
My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.

Macb. Thou hast labour'd
As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed:
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel, whom thou'st ill thought serv'd,
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accurs'd be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man!
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope—I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze of the time.
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole; and underneath,
Here may you see the tyrant.

Macb. I'll not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
And to be hated with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last: Before my body
I throw my warlike shield—Lay on, Macduff;
And damn'd be him that first cries, Hold, enough!
[Exit, fighting.

Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with drum and colours, Malcolm, old Siward, Ross, Lennox, Angus, Cathness, Menteth, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would, the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.

Siw. Some must go off; and yet, by these I see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.
Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's
He only liv'd but still he was a man: [dies:—
'The which no soldier had his prowess counter'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siw. Thou he is dead!
Ross. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before I

S. re.

Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,
Thou liest liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch?
Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine
Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-faced?
Ser. The English fires, on please you.
Macb. Take thy face hence.—Seyton! I am sick at heart.

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will cheer me ever, or diseat me now.
I have liv'd long enough: my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses not loud, but deep, mouth-honour, breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, but dare
not.

Seyton!

Enter Seyton.Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?
Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported. (knock'd.)

Macb. I'll fight, till from my bones my flesh be Giv'n me my armour.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.
Send out more horses, skirr the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear.—Give me mine armour.

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-cunning fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that:
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd;
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow;
Raze out the written troubles of the brain;
And, with some sweet oblivious antidote,
Cleave the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff,
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.
Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff:—
Sey on, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from me:
Come, sir, despatch:—If thou could'st, doctor, cast
The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say.—
What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug,
Would scour these English hence?—Hearest thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord: your royal preparation
Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.
I will not be afraid of death and haue,
Till Burnan forest come to Dunsinane. [Exit.]
Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,
Proft again should hardly draw me here. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. — Country near Dunsinane: A Wood in view.

Enter, with drum and colours, Malcolm, old Siward, and his Son, Macduff, Menteth, Catnesnes, Angus, Lennox, Ross, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand,
That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.Son. What wood is this before us?Mal. The wood of Burnan.Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough,

And bear't before him; thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us.

Son.

It shall be done.

Son. We learn no other, but the confident tyrant Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before't.

Mal.

'Tis his main hope:

For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and less have given him the revolt;
And none serve with him but constrained things,
Whose hearts are absent too.

Macb.

Let our just censures

Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

Son. The time approaches,
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have, and what we owe.
Thought's speculative times insure hopes relate;
But certain issue strokes must arbitrate:
Towards which, advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE V. — Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, Macbeth, Seyton, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out the banners on the outward walls:

The cry is still, They come: Our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie,
Till famine, and the ague, eat them up. (noise)
Were they but fort'd with those that should be,
We might have met them dar'ful, beard to beard,
And beat them backward home. What is that noise?

[A cry within, of women.]

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.
Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of tears:
The time has been, my senses would have scan'd
To hear a night-shriek; and my fall of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't. I have supp'd full with horrors;
Droneness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.—Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a world.
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to say thy tongue: say story quickly.

Mess. Gracious, my lord,

I shall report that which I say I saw,

But know not how to do it.

Macb.

Well, say, sir.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
I look toward Burnan, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move.

Macb.

Liar, and slave!

[Striking him.]

Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not so;
Within this three mile may you see it coming;
I say, a moving grove.

Macb.

If thou speak'st false,

Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive.

Till I issueuing thee: if thy speech be sooth

Gen. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature! to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching.—In this slumry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gen. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may, to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gen. Neither to you, nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gen. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually: 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gen. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look how she rubs her hands.

Gen. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands; I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Think, she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One: Two: Why, then, 'tis time to do't:—Hell is murky!—Fye, my lord, fye! a soldier, and afeard! What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him!

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife: Where is she now?—What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—No more o'that, my lord, no more o'that; you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gen. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gen. I would not have such a heart in my bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gen. 'Pray God, it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: Yet I have known those which walked in their sleep, who have died fully in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown; look not so pale.—I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out of his grave.

Doct. Even so!

Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand: What's done, cannot be undone: To bed, to bed, to bed. (Exit Lady Macbeth.)

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gen. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: Unnatural

Do breed unnatural troubles: Infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets. More needs she the divine, than the physician.—God, God, forgive us all! Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her.—So, good night: My mind she has mated, and anaest'd my sight: I think, but dare not speak.

Gen. Good night, good doctor (Exit)

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with drum and colours, Menteith, Catlines, Angus, Lennox, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, let on by Malcolm.

His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenues burn in them: for their dear causes Would, to the bleeding, and the grim alarm, Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood Shall we meet them; that way are they coming.

Cath. Who knows, if Dunsinane be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son, And many thorough youths, that even now Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Cath. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies: Some say he a mad; others, that lesser hate him, Do call it valiant fury: but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause Within the belt of rule.

Ang. How does he feel His secret murder sticking on his hands: Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach, Those he commands, move only in command, Nothing in love: now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame His pester'd senses to recoil, and start, When all that is within him does condemn Itself for bringing there?

Cath. Well, march we on, To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd: Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal: And with him pour we, in our country's purge, Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs, To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds Make we our march towards Birnam.

(Exeunt marching.)

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all;

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane, [quint] I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Mal- Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know All mortal consequences pronounce me thus:

Fear not, Macbeth; no man, that's born of woman, Shall ever have power on thee. Then fly, false thanes, And mingle with the English excursions: 'Tis the mind I away by, and the heart I leave, Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loach, Where gins't thou that goose look!

Serv. There is ten thousand—
Macb. Gesse, v. illun t

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things 'at
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth,
I pray you?

Doct. Ay, sir: there are a crew of wretched
That stay his cure: their malady convinces
The great assay of art; but, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given in his hand,
They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor.
[Exit Doctor.]

Macd. What's the disease he means?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the evil.
A most miraculous work in this good king:
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows: but strangely-visitèd people,
All swoll'n and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy;
And sandy blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Ross.

Macd. See, who comes here!

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him not.

Macd. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now: Good God, betimes re-
The means that make us strangers!

Ross. Sir, Ansen.
Macd. Stands Scotland where it did!

Ross. Alas, poor country;
Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot
Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where nothing,
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Where sighs, and groans, and shrieks that rend
The air,
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems
A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd, for who; and good men's Lives expare before the flowers in their cups,
Dying, or ere they sicken.

Macd. O, relation,
Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal. What is the newest grief?
Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the
Each minute teems a new one.

Macd. How does my wife?

Ross. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Ross. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Ross. No; they were all at peace, when I did Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: How goes it?

Ross. When I came hither to transport the
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot:
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be it their comfort,
We are coming thither: gracious England hath
Lent us good Siward, and ten thousand men;
An older, and a better soldier, than
That Christendom gives out.

Ross. 'Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words,
That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief,
Due to some single breast?

Ross. No mind, that's honest,
But in it shares some woe; though the main part
Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,

Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound,
That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Humph! I guess at it.

Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife, and babes,

Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven—
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;
Give sorrow words: the grief that does not speak,
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break.

Macd. My children too?

Ross. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from them!

Mal. My wife kill'd too?

Ross. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted:
Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty ones!
Did you say, all?—O, hell-kite!—All!

What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop!

Mal. Despate it like a man.

Ross. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man:

I cannot but remember such things were,
[on,
That were most precious to me.—Did heaven look
And would not take their part! Sinful Macduff,
They were all struck for thee! naught that I am,
No; for their own demerits, but for mine, [now I Fell slaughter on their souls: Heaven rest them!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword: let grief

Convert to anger: blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine eyes,

And braggart with my tongue!—But gentle
Cut short all intermission; front to front,
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland, and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tale goes manly.

Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave: Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above [may;
Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you
The night is long, that never finds the day.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Duninane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walk'd?

Y

New widows howl; new orphans cry; new sorrows
Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out
Like syllable of doleful.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wail;
What know, believe; and, what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so, perchance.
This tyrant, whose latest name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest; you have lov'd him
well;

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young, but
You may deserve of him through me; and wisdom
To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb,
To appease an angry God.

Mal. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil,
In an imperial charge. But 'crave your pardon;
That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpire:
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul would wear the brows of Yet grace must still look so. [Graces.]

Mal. I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts,

Why in that rawness left you wife, and child,
(These precious motives, these strong knots of Without leave-taking!—I pray you, [Love,]
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours, but mine own safeties:—You may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Mal. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness days not clock thee; wear thou thy Thy title is after'd.—Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think, our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think, withal,
There would be hands uplifed in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer
Of goodly thousands: But, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before;
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Mal. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know
All the particulars of woe graced.
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state
Express him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confus'd harn.

Mal. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell, can come a devil more damn'd
In evils, to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name: But there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'erbear,
That did oppose my will: Better Macbeth,
Than such a one to reign.

Mal. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny: it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,

And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink.

We have willing dames enough; there cannot be
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so lucid.

Mal. With this there grows,
In my most ill-compas'd affection, such
A sinfulness avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Deare his jewels, and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make him hunger more; that I should for Quarrels unjust against the good, and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Mal. This avarice
Sticks deeper; grows with more pernicious root
Than summer-seeding lust; and it hath been
The sword of our sunn' kings: Yet do not fear;
Scotland hath fountains to fill up your well,
Of your mere own: All these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: The king becoming
As justice, verity, temperance, stabilities,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, for justice,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting in many ways. Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord in a bell,
Dispense the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Mal. O Scotland! Scotland!
Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Mal. Fit to govern!
No, not to live.—O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again?
Since that the first issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accur'd,
And does blaspheme his breed?—Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king; the queen that bore
O'er upon her knees than on her feet, [then,
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well!
These evils, thou repeat'st upon thyself,
Have bann'd me from Scotland.—O, my breast,
Thy hope ends here!

Mal. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these traits hath sought to win me
Into his power; and modest wisdom pleases me
From over-credulous haste: But God above
Deal between thee and me: for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unswear mine own declaration: here swear
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was forsown;
Scarcely have covet'd what was mine own:
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The Devil to his fellow; and delight
No less in truth, than life; my first false speaking
Was this upon myself: What I am truly,
Is thine, and my poor country's, to command:
Winther, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
All ready at a point, was setting forth:
Now we'll together: And the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel! Why are you silent?

Enter Lenox.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air wheroun they ride:
And damn'd all those that trust them—I did hear
The galloping of horse. Who was't came by?

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you
Macduff's head to England.

Macb. Fled to England?

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread ex-pectation. The flighty purpose never is o'ertook,
Unless the deed go with it. From this moment,
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now,
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:

I'll seize upon Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o' the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool.
But no more sight!—Where are these gentlemen?
Come, bring me where they are. (Exit Lenox.)

SCENE II.—Fife. A Room in Macduff's Castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Ross.

L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?

Rosse. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none.
His flight was madness! When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.

Rosse. You know not,
Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear.

L. Macd. Window! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,

His mansion, and his titles, in a place
From whence himself does fly! He loves us not;
He wants the natural touch: for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear, and nothing is the love;
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Rosse. My dearest One,

I pray you, school yourself. But, for your husband,
He is subtle, wise, judicious, and best knows
The hideous'ness of his occasion. I dare not speak much further:

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear;
But stand upon a wild and violent sea,
Each way, and move.—I take my leave of you:
But not be long but I'll be here again: 'ward
Tillings at the worst will cease, or else climb up
To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Benedict upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I say longer,
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort:
I take my leave at once. (Exit Rosse.)

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead;
And what will you do now? How will you live?

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.
L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net,
The falcon, nor the gun.

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead; how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. 'Thou speak'st with all thy wit; a d
With wit enough for thee. (Yet 'faith,

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so!

L. Macd. Every one that does so, is a traitor, and must be hanged.

Son. And must they all be hanged that swear

L. Macd. Every one. (And lie!

Son. Who must hang them?

L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools: for there are liars and swearers enough to beat the honest men, and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey!

But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler! how thou talkest!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known.

'Tis in your state of honour I am perfect.
I doubt, some danger does approach you nearly:
If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;
To do worse to you, were fell cruelty, (You!)
Which is too rich your person. Heaven preserve
I dare abide no longer. (Exit Messenger.)

L. Macd. Whither should I fly?

I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world; where, to do harm,
Is often laudable; to do good, sometime,
Accounted dangerous folly: Why then, alas!
Do I put up that womanly defence, (Faces?)
To say, I have done no harm!—What are these Enter Murderers.

Mer. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope, in no place, so unsanctified,
Where such as thou may'st find him.

Mer. He's a traitor.

Son. Thou ly'st, thou shag-eard villain.

Mer. What, you egg? (Stabbing him.)
Young fry of treachery!

Son. He has kill'd me, mother.

Run away, I pray you. (Drs.)
(Exit Lady Macduff, crying murder, and persecuted by the murderers.)

SCENE III.—England. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and Weep our sad bosoms empty. (Others)

Macd. Let us rather

Hold fast the mortal sword; and, like good men, Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom: Each new morn.

Make the cruel thick and slab:
Add thereto a taker's chauldron.
For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire, burn; and cauldron, bubble.
2 Witch. And it with a baboon's blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter Hecate, and the other three Witches.
Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains;
And every one shall share i' the gains;
And now about the cauldron sing,
Lake elves and faeries in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

SONG.

*Black spirits and white,
Red spirits and grey;
Mingle, mingle, mingle,
That the mangle may.*

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes:—
Open, locks, whoever knocks.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and mid-
What is't you do? [Night haunts!]

All. A deed without a name.
Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess [How'er you come to know it] answer me:
Though you untie the winds, and let them fight Against the churches; though the yesty waves
Confound and swallow navigation up; [down];
Though bladed corn be lodged, and trees blown
Though castles topple on their warders' heads;
Though palaces, and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure
Of nature's germans tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken, answer me
To what I ask you.

1 Witch. Speak.
2 Witch. Demand.
3 Witch. We'll answer.
1 Witch. Say, if thou'dst rather hear it from
Or from our masters! [our mouths,
Macb. Call them, let me see them.
1 Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten
Her nine farrow; grease, that's sweaten
From the murderer's gibbet throw
Into the flame.

All. Come, high or low;
Thyself. and office, deftly show.
Thunder. An Apparition of an armed Head rises.
Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power—
1 Witch. He knows thy thought;
Hear his speech, but say thou nought.
App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! beware
Macduff;
Beware the thane of Fife.—Dismal me:—
Enough. [Descends.]
Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution,
thanks;
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright:—But one word
more:—
1 Witch. He will not be commanded:—Here's another,
More potent than the first.

Thunder. An Apparition of a bloody Child rises.
App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—
Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.
App. Be bloody, bold,
And resolute; laugh to scorn the power of man,
For none of woman born shall harm Macbeth.
[Descends.]
Macb. Then live, Macduff. What need I fear of thee?
But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live,
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.—What is this,
Thunder. An Apparition of a Child crowned, with a Tree in his hand, rises.
That rises like the issue of a king;
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty?
All. I listen, but speak not.
App. Be lion-mettled, proud; and take no care
Who chafes, who frets, or who complains sore:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. [Descends.]
Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bodements!
Rebellious heart, rise never, till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time, and mortal outcome.—Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing.—Tell me (if your art
Can tell so much), shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom? I seek to know no more.
All. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know—
Why sinks that cauldron! and what noise is this!
[Howlings.]
1 Witch. Show!
2 Witch. Show!
3 Witch. Show!
All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.
Eight Kings appear, and pass over the Stage in order; the last with a Glass in his hand; Banquo following.
Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo;
—down!
Thy crown does sear mine eye-balls.—And thy hair,
Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first:—
A third is like the former:—Fill by him!
Why do you show me this?—A fourth!—Start,
eyes!
What! will the line stretch out to the crack of
doom!
Another yet!—A seventh!—I'll see no more;
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass,
Which shows me many more; and some I see,
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry:
Horrible sight!—Ay, now, I see, 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his.—What, is this so?
1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so:—But why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come, sister, cheer we up his spirits,
And harden his ear to our delights;
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antique round:
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.
[Music. The Witches dance, and vanish.] Macb. Where are they? Gone!—Let this penicious hour
Stand eye-secured in the calendar!—
Come in, without there!

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep: my strange and self-abuse
Is the initiate fear, that wants hard use:—
We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Heath. Thunder.

Enter Hecate, meeting the three Witches.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecate? you look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are,
Saucy, and over-bold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth,
In riddles, and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to hear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done,
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful, and wrathful; who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me if the morning; thither he
Will come to know his deserts.
Your vengeances, and your spells, provide,
Your charms, and every thing beside:
I am for the air; this night I'll spend
Unto a dismal fatal end.
Great business must be wrought ere noon:
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound;
I'll catch it ere it come to ground:
And that, as ill'd by magic slights,
Shall raise such artificial sprites,
As, by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his confusion:
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear:
And you all know, security
Is mortal's chiefest enemy.

Song. [Within.] Come away, come away, &c.

Hark, I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit.]
1 Witch. Come, let's make haste: she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Forest. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Lenox, and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret further: only, I say,
Things have been strangely borne; the gracious
Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth:—marry, he was dead:—
And the right-valiant Banquo walked too late:
Whom you may say, if it please you, Fleance kill'd,
For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbain,
To kill their gracious father!—damned fact!
How it did grieve Macbeth!—did he not straight,
In pious rage, the two desquaints tear,
That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep:
Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;
For 'twould have murder'd any heart alive,
To hear the men deny it. So that, I say,
He has borne all things well: and I do think,
That, had he Duncan's sons under his key,
(As, an't please heaven, he shall not,) they should find
What 'twere to kill a father:—no should Fleance.

But, peace!—for from broad wars, and 'cause
he fill'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear,
Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
Lives in the English court; and is receiv'd
Of the most pious Edward with such grace,
That the malevolence of fortune no'ing
Takes from his high respect: Thither Macduff
Is gone to pray the holy king, on his aid
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Siward:
That, by the help of these (with Him above
To ratify the work), we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights;
Free from our feasts and fasts, bloody knives;
Do faithful homage, and receive free honours,
All which we pine for now. And this report Hath so exasperate the king, that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?
Lord. He did: and with an absolute, Sir, not I.
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hush; as who should say, You'll rue the time
That clogs me with this answer.

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution, to hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fry to the court of England, and unfold
His message ere he come; that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country.
Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. My prayers with him! [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A dark Cave. In the middle, a Cauldron boiling. Thunder.

Enter the three Witches.

- 1 Witch.* Thrice the brinded cat mew'd.
- 2 Witch.* Thrice; and once the hedge-pig whin'd
- 3 Witch.* Harper cries:—"Tis time, 'tis time.
- 1 Witch.* Round about the cauldron go;
In the poison'd entrails throw.
Toad, that under cold stones,
Days and nights but thirty-one
Swelter'd venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first! 't the charmed pot!
- All.* Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire, burn; and cauldron, bubble
- 2 Witch.* Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake:
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and owl's wing.
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.
- All.* Double, double toil and trouble,
Fire, burn; and cauldron, bubble.
- 3 Witch.* Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witches' mummy; maw, and gulf,
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark;
Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark;
Liver of blaspheming Jew;
Gall of goat, and slips of yew,
Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse;
Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lip;
Finger of birth-strangled babe,
Ditch deliver'd by a drab,

No teeth for the present.—Get thee gone; to-morrow
We'll hear, ourselves again. [Exit Murderer.]

Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer; the feast is sold,
'Tis not as often vouch'd, while 'tis a making,
'Tis given with welcome: To feed, were best at home;—

From thence, the sauce to meat is ceremony,
Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrancer!—
Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

Len. May it please your highness sit?
[The Ghost of Banquo rises, and sits in Macbeth's place.]

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd.

Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present;
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for mischance!

Rosse. His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon his promise. Please it your
To grace us with your royal company! [highness Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here's a place reserv'd, sir.

Macb. Where?
Len. Here, my lord. What is't that moves your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. Whom, my good lord?
Macb. Thou canst not say, I did it: never shake
Thy gory locks at me.

Rosse. Gentlemen, rise: his highness is not well.
Lady M. Sit, worthy friends:—my lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth: 'pry you, keep
The fit is momentary: upon a thought
He will again be well; if much you note him,
You shall offend him, and extend his passion;
Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man?

Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O proper stuff!
This is the very painting of your fear:
This is the air-drawn dagger; which, you said,
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws and starts, (Impassions to true fear) would well become
A woman's story, at a winter's fire,
Author'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done,
You look but on a stool.

Macb. Pry the, see there! I behold! I look! I lo!
—how say you?

Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.
If charnel-houses, and our graves, must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost disappears]

Lady M. What! quite unmann'd in folly?
Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fye, for shame!
Macb. Blood hath been shed, ere now, i'th' olden time,
For human statute purg'd the gentle weal:
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear; the times have been,
That, when the brains were out the man would
And there an end; but now, they rise again, (die,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools. This is more strange Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget:—
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;

I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all!

Then I'll sit down:—Give me some wine, fill full:
I drink to the general joy of the whole table,
Ghosts rise.

And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.
Macb. Avaunt! and quit my sight! Let the earth ingulf thee!

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other:
Only it spouts the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger,
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble; or, be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I inhabit thee, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
[Ghost disappears.]

Unreal mockery, hence!—Why, so;—being gone,
I am a man again.—Pry you, sit still.
Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke
The good meeting,
With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome as like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder? You make me
Even in the disposition that I owe, (strange,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural rub of your cheeks,
When mine are blanched with fear.

Rosse. What night's, my lord?
Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;
Question enrages him: at once, good night:—
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good night, and better health
Attend his majesty!
Lady M. A kind good night to all!
[Exeunt Lords and Attendants.]

Macb. It will have blood; they say, blood will have blood: [Speak]
Stones have been known to move, and trees to Augurs, and underusual relations, have (forth
By magot-pies, and choughs, and rooks, brought
The secret of man of blood.—What is the night?
Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which. [Person]
Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies us
At our great bidding?
Edy M. Did you send to him, sir?
Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will seek:
There's not a one of them, but in his house
I keep a servant too'd. I will to-morrow
(Betimes I will), unto the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to
know,
By the worst means, the worst: for mine own
All causes shall give way; I am in blood
Stept in so far, that should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go'er:
Strange things I have in hand, this will to hand;
Which must be acted ere they may be wad'd.
Lady M. You lack the season of all natures,— sleep.

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is not without content;
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my lord? why do you keep alone,
Of sorrows' funnies your companions making?
Using those thoughts, which should indeed have died.

With them they think on? Things without re-
Should be without regard: what's done, is done.
Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it;
She'll close, and be herself; whilst our poor malice
Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let [suffer.

The frame of things disjoint, both the worlds
Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams,
That shake us nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life's first fever, he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst; nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing
Can touch him further!

Lady M. Come in;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and we'll pray, be you.
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we Must love our honours in these flattering streams;
And make our faces wizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.
Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife!
Thou know'st, that Banquo and his Fiancee live.

Lady M. But in their nature's copy's not serene.
Macb. There's comfort yet; they are assassinate;
Then be thou jocund: Ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd foud; ere, to black Hecate's summons,

The shard-borne beetle, with his drowsy hums,
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be
A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done?
Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck.

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling night,
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day;
And, with thy bloody and invisible hand,
Cancel, and tear to pieces, that great bond
Which keeps me pale!—Light thickens; and the Males wing to the rocky wood: [crow

Good things of day begin to drop and drowse:
While night's black agents to their prey do rouse.
Thou marvell'st at my words; but hold thee still:
Thou'lt find, ere long, we will make us ring themselves by ill.

So, pry thee, go with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. A Park or Lawn, with Gates leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.

1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?
3 Mur. Macbeth.
2 Mur. He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers

Our officers, and what we have to do,
To the direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us,
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day:

Now spare the late traveller's amice,
To gain the timely inn; and near approach
The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Hark! I hear horses.
1 Mur. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!
2 Mur. Then it is he; the rest

That are within the note of expectation,
Already are i'the court.

1 Mur. His horses go about.
3 Mur. Almost a mile; but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Enter Banquo and Fiancee, a Servant with a torch preceding them.

2 Mur. A light, a light! 'Tis he.
3 Mur. Stand to't!
1 Mur. It will be rain to night.

1 Mur. Let it come down
[Assaults Banquo,
Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fiancee; fly, fly
Thou may'st revenge.—O slave! [fly,
[Des. Fiancee and Servant escape.

3 Mur. Who did strike out the light?
1 Mur. Was't not the way?
3 Mur. There's but one down; the son is fled.
2 Mur. We have lost best half of our affair.

1 Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room of State in the Palace. A Banquet prepared.

Enter Macbeth, Lady Macbeth, Ross, Lenox, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees, sit down:
And last, the hearty welcome.—[sit first
Lords. Thanks to your majesty.

1 Macb. Ourself will mingle with society,
And play the humble host.
Our hostess keeps her state; but, in best time,
We will require her welcome. [friends;
Lady M. pronounce it for me, sir, to all our
For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Enter First Murderer, to the door.
Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts'
thanks—

Both sides are even. Here I'll sit i'the midst;
Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink a measure
The table round.—There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Macb. 'Tis better thee without, than he within.
Is he despatch'd? [thou.
Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for Macb. Thou art the best o'the cut-throats; yet he's good.

That did the like for Fiancee: if thou didst it,
Thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir,
Fiancee is 'scape'd.

Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect;

Whole as the marble, founded as the rock;
As broad, and general, as the casing air;
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in,
To sneaky doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe!

Mur. Ay, my good lord, safe in earth on his back,
With twenty frenched gashes on his head:
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that!—
There the grown serpent bore; the worm, that's fled,
Hath nature that in time will vent him breed.

Han. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time,
Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the better,
I must become a borrower of the night,
For a dark hour, or train.

Macb. Fail not our feast.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear, our bloody cousins are bestow'd
In England, and in Ireland; not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention: But of that to-morrow;
When, therewithal, we shall have cause of state,
Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: Adieu.

Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?

Ban. Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon us.

Macb. I wish your horses swift, and sure of
And so I do commend you to their backs.
Farewell — [Exit Banquo.]
Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night; to make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourselves
Till supper-time alone: while then, God be with you.

[Exeunt Lady Macbeth, Lords, Ladies, &c.]
Sirrah, a word: Attend these men our pleasure!

Attend. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us. — [Exit Attend.]

To be thus, is no king;

But to be safely thus: — Our tears in Banquo
Stick deep; and in his royalty of nature [daree]
Reigns that, which would be fear'd: 'Tis much he

And, to that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
To act in safety. There is none, but he

Whom being I do fear: and, under him,
My genius is rebuk'd; as, it is said,
Mark Antony's was by Caesar. He chid the sisters,
When first they put the name of king upon me,
And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like,

They hail'd him father to a line of kings:
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe.

'Thence to be wretch'd with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. If it be so,
For Banquo's sake have I filed my mind;

For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
But rancorous in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine a eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man.

To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
Rather than so, come, fate, into the hall,
And champion me to the utterance! — Who's

there? —

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit Attendant.]

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1 Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now
Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know,

That it was he, in the times past, which held you
So under fortune; which, you thought, had been
Our innocent self: this I made good to you
In our last conference; pass'd in probation with you, [instruments:]

How you were borne in hand; how crown'd; the Win wrought with them; and all things else, that
To half a soul, and to a nation craz'd, [might]
Say, thus did Banquo.

1 Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so; and went further, which as now
Is a point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature,

That you can let this go? Are you so gospell'd,
To pray for this good man, and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave,
And beggar'd yours for ever?

1 Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels,
curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are cleag'd
All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Dinquires the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The house-keeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which heaven in nature
Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive Particular addition from the hill
That writes them all aince; and so of men.

Now, if you have a slot in the tie,
And not in the word rank of manhood, say it
And I will put that business in your bosom,
Whose execution takes your enemy off;
Grapple you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege
Whom the vile blows and bulletts of the world
Hate so much, that I am reckless what
I do, to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another.
So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you
Know, Banquo was your enemy.

2 Mur. True, my lord.
Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance every minute of it is being thrust: I trace, Against my heart at life: And though I could
With bare faced power sweep him from my sight,
And bid my will avouch it; yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whom loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
Whom I myself struck down: and thence it is,
That I to your assistance do make love;
Masking the business from the common eye,
For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Through our love —

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most,

I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
Acquaint you with the perfect ay of the time,
The moment on't; for 't must be done to night,
And something from the palace; a ways thought,
That I require a clearness: And with him,
(To leave no rubs nor botches in the work),
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Reserve yourselves apart;
I'll come to you anon.

2 Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight; abide within.
It is concluded: — Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — The same. Another Room.

Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo come from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king I would attend him

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will.

[Exit.]

And his rash'd stain look'd like a breach in nature
For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers

Sleep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers
Unhappily breach'd with gore: Who could refrain,

That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage, to make his love known!

Lady M. Help us hence, ho!

Mord. Look to the lady.

Mal. Why do we hold our tongues,
That must may claim this argument for ours?

Dona. What should be spoken here.

Where our fate, hid within an auger-hole,
May rush, and seize us? Let's away; our tears
Are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow on

The foot of motion.

Ban.

Look to the lady:—

[Lady Macbeth is carried out.]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet.

And question it as next bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples strike us:

In the great hand of God I stand; and, thence,
Against the unyielding pretence I fight
Of treacherous malice.

Marb. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet i'the hall together.

All.

[Exeunt all but Mal. and Don.]

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:

To show an unfeil sorrow, is an office
Which the false man does easy: I'll to England.

Dona. To Ireland, I: our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There's dangers in men's smiles: the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot,

Has not yet lighted; and our safest way

Is, to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse;

And let us not be dainty of leave-taking;

But shift away: There's warrant in that theft

Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. — Without the Castle.

Enter Ross and an old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember
well:

Within the volume of which time, I have seen
Hours drearful, and things strange: but this more

Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross.

Ah, good father,

Thou see'st, the heavens, as troubled with man's
not,

Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock, 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp:

Is it night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth intomb,

When living light should kiss it?

Old M. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the dead that's done. On Tuesday last,

A falcon, tow'ring in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at, and killed.

Ross. And Duncan's horses, (a thing most strange and certain.)

Home-stead and swift, the minions of their race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls flung out,

Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would make War with mankind.

Old M. 'Tis said, they eat each other.
Ross. They did so: to th' amazement of mine eyes (dull:—

That look'd upon't. Here comes the good Mac-

Enter Macduff.

How goes the world sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?
Ross. Is't known, who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Ross. Alas, the day!
What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn'd:
Malcolm, and Donalbain, the king's two sons,

Are a'flie away and fled; which puts upon them
Suspicion of the deed.

Ross. 'Gainst nature still:

Thriftless ambition, that will ruin up
Thine own life's means!—Then, 'tis most like,
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd; and gone to Scour,
To be invest-ed.

Ross. Where is Duncan's body?
Macd. Carried to Colmekill:

The sacred storehouse of his predecessors,
And guardian of their bones.

Ross. Will you to Scour?
Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither.
Macd. Well, may you see things well done there:—adieu!

Least our old robes sit easier than our new!

Ross. Father, farewell!

Old M. God's benison go with you; and with That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. — Fife. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou hast it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis,
all,

As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear,
Thou play'st most foully for't: yet it was said,

It should not stand in th' posterity;
But that myself should be the root, and father

Of many kings. If there come truth from them,
(As upon thee, Macbeth, thy speeches shine,) Why, by the verities on these made good,

May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But, hush; no more.

Smart sounded. Enter Macbeth, as King; Lady Macbeth, as Queen; Lennox, Ross, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,

And all-times unbecoming

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your highnesses
Command upon me: to the which, my duties

Are with a most obedient bow
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice (ours.)

(Which still hath been both grave and prosper-in this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow, Is't far you ride?)

ing the key. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who's there, I the name of Belzebub? Here's a turner, that hang'd himself on the expectation of plenty: Come in time; have napkins enough about you: here you'll sweat for't. [Knocking.] Knock, knock: Who's there, I the other devil's name? Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven; O, come in, equivocator. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither, for stealing out of a French hose: Come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knocking.] Knock, knock: Never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon! I pray you, remember the porter. [Opens the gate.]

Enter Macduff and Lenox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, That you did he so late?

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things, [provokes]

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?
Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance: Therefore, much drunk may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and d'sheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him. [sings]

Macd. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.
Port. That it did, sir, I the very throat of me: But I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?
Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Enter Macbeth.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir!

Macb. Good-morrow, both!

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthy Thane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him;

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him.
Macd. I know, this is a joyful trouble to you; But yet 'tis ours.

Macb. The labour we delight in, physics pains.
This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call,

For 'tis my limited service. [Exit Macduff.]

Len. Goes the king

From hence to-day?

Macb. He does:—he did appoint it so.

Len. The night has been unruly: Where we lay, Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say, Loud'ning heard i' the air; strange screams of death;

And prophesying, with accents terrible, Of dire combustion, and confus'd events. [bird New hatch'd to 'the woeful time. The obscure Clamour'd the living night; some say, the earth Was feverish, and did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel A fellow to it.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue, nor heart

Cannot conceive, nor name these!

Macb. Len. What's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his masterpiece!

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life of the building.

Macb. Whin' is't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your

With a new Gorgon:—Do not bid me speak;

See, and then speak yourselves.—Awake!

awake!— [Enter Macbeth and Lenox.]

Ring the alarm-bell!—Murder! and treason!

Banquo, and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!

Strike off his downy sleep, death's counterfeit,

And look on death itself!—Up, up, and see

The great doom's image!—Malcolm! Banquo!

Arise from your graves!—up, and walk like spirits

To countenance this horror! [Bell rings]

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. What's the business

That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley

The sleepers of the house? speak, speak,—

Macd. O, gentle lady,

'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:

The repetition, in a woman's ear,

Would murder as it fell.—O Banquo! Banquo!

Enter Banquo.

Our royal master's murder'd;

Lady M. Woe, alas!

What, in our house?

Ban. 'Tis cruel, any where.—

Dear Puff, I pray thee contradict thyself,

And say, it is not so.

Re-enter Macbeth and Lenox.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,

I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,

There's nothing serious in mortality;

All is but toys: renown, and grace, is dead;

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees

Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know it:

The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood

Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. O, by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, and done't;

Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood,

So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found

Upon their pillows:

They star'd, and were distract'd; no man's life

Was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,

That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amazed, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:

The expedition of my violent love

Outran the pauser reason.—Here lay Duncan,

His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;

Is this a dagger which I see before me? (To the handle toward his hand) Come, let me clutch it. I have thee not, and yet I see thee still. Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible To feeling as to sight? or art thou but A dagger of the mind; a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain? I see thee yet, in form as palpable As that which now I draw.

Thou natural'st me the way that I was going; And such an instrument I was to use. Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses, Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still, And on thy blade, and dudgeon, gouts of blood, Which was not so before.—There's no such thing: It is the bloody business, which informs Thus to mine eyes.—Now o'er the one half world Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse The curtain'd sleep; now witchcraft celebrates Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder, Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf, (pace, Whom howl'd his whelp, thus with his stolidity With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his denixt Moves like a ghost.—Thou sure and firm-set Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear Thy very sinews prize of my where-about, And take the present horror from the time, Which now suits with it.—While I threat, he lives: Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

[A bell rings.]

I go, and it is done; the hell invites me. Hear it not, Duncan: for it is a knell That summons thee to heaven, or to hell. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold: What hath quenched them, hath given me fire:—Hark!—Peace!

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal hellman. Which gives the stern'st good night. He is about: The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms (it: Do mock their charge with snore: I have drugg'd their punnets.

That death and nature do contend about them, Whether they live or die.

Macb. (Within) Who's there?—what ho!

Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd, And 'tis not done:—the attempt, and not the deed, Confounds us:—Hark!—I had their daggers ready,

He could not miss them.—Had he not resembled My father as he slept, I had done't.—My husband!

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. I have done the deed:—Dilist thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream, and the bat cry. Didst not you speak? [crickets cry.]

Macb. When?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. As I descended?

Lady M. Ay.

Macb. Hark!—

Who lies i' the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. This is a sorry sight.

[Looking on his hands.]

Lady M. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in his sleep, and one cried, murder!

That they did wake each other I stood and heard

But they did say their prayers, and address'd them Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two kils'd together.

Macb. One cried, God bless us! and Amen, the other;

As they ha' seen me, with these hangman's hands, Lamenting their fear. I could not say, Amen, When they did say, God bless us.

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply. Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce I had most need of blessing, and amen (amen) Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought, I heard a voice cry, Sleep no more!

Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep; Sleep, that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care, The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath, Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course, Chief nourisher in life's feast.

Lady M. What do you mean? Macb. Still it cried, Sleep no more! to all the house:

Glamis hath murder'd sleep; and therefore Candor Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no more!

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,

You do unbend your noble strength, to think So brain-sickly of things:—Go, get some water, And wash this filthy witness from your hand.—Why did you bring these daggers from their place? They must lie there: Go, carry them; and smear The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more: I am afraid to think what I have done;

Look on't again, I dare not.

Lady M. Ifirm of purpose! Give me the daggers: The sleeping, and the dead, Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood, That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed, I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal, For it must seem their guilt.

Macb. [Exit—Knocking within.] Whence is that knocking? How is't with me, when every noise appals me? What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes!

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather The multitudinous seas incarnadine, (their Making the green—our red.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame (knocking) To wear a heart so white. [Knock.] I hear a more knocking: Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us, And show us to be watchers:—Be not lost So purely in your thoughts.

At the south entry:—retire we to our chamber: A little water clears us of this deed: How easy is it then? Your constancy Hath left you unattended.—[Knocking.] Hark!

Macb. To know my deed,—'twere best not know myself.

Wake Duncan with thy knocking! Ay, 'would thou couldst!

[Knock.] [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter a Porter. [Knocking within.]

Porter. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turn-

Macb. If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly: If the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch,
With his surcease, success; that but this blow
Might be the he-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,—
We'd jump the life to come.—But in these cases,
We still have judgment here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which being taught, return
To plague the inventor: This even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer bar the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking off:
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind.—I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself,
And falls on the other.—How now, what news?

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. He has almost supp'd. Why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not, he has?
Macb. We will proceed no further in this business.

He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since?
And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid
To be the same in thine own act and valour,
As thou art in desire? Would'st thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem;
Letting I dare not wait upon I would,
Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb. Prithee, peace:
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more, is none.

Lady M. What beast was it then,
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place,
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now

Does unmake you. I have given suck; and know
How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me:
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from its boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn, as you
Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail,—
Lady M. We fail!
But screw your courage to the sticking place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep,
(Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey
Boundly have deliver'd him, his chamberlains

Will I with wine and wassel so convince,
That memory, the warbler of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only: When in swinish sleep
Their drenched nature lies, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers; who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quest?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only!
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be received,
When we have mark'd with blood these sleepy twain
Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have done't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
Away, and mock the time with fair show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. [Exit Macb.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. Court within the Castle.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, and a Servant with a torch before them.

Ban. How goes the night, boy? [Clock.
Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the Ban. And she goes down at this terrible hour.

Fle. I take't, 'tis later, sir.
Ban. Hold, take my sword.—I here's a husbandry in heaven,

Their candles are all out.—Take these that too.
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep:—Mercurial powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts, that nature
Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword;—

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a torch.

Who's there?

Macb. A friend. [a-bed.]

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's
He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your officers:
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepared,
Our will became the servant to defer;
Which else should free have wrought

Ban. All's well.
I dream'd last night of the three weird sisters:
To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
Would spend it in some words upon that business if you would grant the time. [ness.]

Ban. At your kind'st leisure.
Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent,—[this]
I shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none,
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My own free franchise, and allegiance clear,
I shall be content'd.

Macb. Good repose, the while!
Ban. Thanks, sir; the like to you!

[Exit Banquo.]
Macb. Go, bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready.

She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.
[Exit Macbeth.]

Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Inverness. A Room in Macbeth's Castle.

Enter Lady Macbeth, reading a letter.

Lady M. They met me in the day of success;
and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves—air, into which they vanished. Whiles
I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me, Thane of Cawdor; by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with trait, king that shall be! This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness; that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be
What thou art promised:—Yet do I fear thy nature;
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness;
To catch the nearest way: Thou wouldst be Art not without ambition; but without great;
The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly,

That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win: thou'dst have,
great Glamis,

That which craves, Thou dost must do, if thou have it:
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Thou wishest should be undone. Hie thee hither,
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear;
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.—What is your willings?

Enter an Attendant.

Atten. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it:
Is not thy master with him? I wish, were't so.
Would he inform'd of preparation. [Coming:]

Atten. So, please you, it is true; our thane is One of my fellows had the speed of him;
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would wake up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending.
He brings great news. The raven himself is hoarse,

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here;
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-ful
Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood;
Step up to the accents and pismire to remorse;
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fall purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering minis-
Wherever in your ruthless substances [ters]
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick night,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell!
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes;
Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark
To cry, Hold! hold!—Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!

Enter Macbeth.

Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!
The letters have transported me beyond

This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?

Macb. To-morrow,—as he purposes.

Lady M. O, never Shall you that morrow see!

Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men
May read strange matters;—To beguile the time
Look like the time; hear we come in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,

But be the serpent under it. He that's coming Must be provided for: and you shall put
This night's great business into my dispatch;
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look up clear.
To alter favour ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The same. Before the Castle.

Haillboys. Servants of Macbeth attending.

Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo, Lennox, Macduff, Ross, Angus, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimble and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his lord's mansion, that the heaven's breath
Smells wooingly here: no jutting, freezing, buttress,
Nor croupe of vantage, but the bird hath made His pendant bed, and procreant cradle: Where they
Most breed and lust, I have observ'd the air
Is delicate.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Dun. See, see! our honour'd hostess
The love that follows us, sometime in our trouble
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you
How you shall bid God yield us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service
In every point twice done, and then done double
Were poor and single business, to contend
Against three honours deep and broad, wherewith
Your majesty loads our house: For those of old
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the thane of Cawdor?
We could'nd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor; but he rides well;
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp him
To his home before us: Fair and noble musters,
We are your guests to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,

To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand:
Conduct me to mine host; we love him highly,
And shall continue our gracious towards him.
By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The same. A Room in the Castle

Haillboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sower, and doors Servants with dishes and service. Then enter Macbeth.

Nothing afeard of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale,
Came just with post; and every one did hear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent,
To give thee, from our royal master, thanks;
To herald thee into his sight, not pay thee.

Rosse. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me, from him, call thee thane of Cawdor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!
For it is thine.

Ban. What, can the devil speak true?
Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives; Why do you
Ll borrow'd robes? (dress me)

Ang. Who was the thane, lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was Cousin'd with Norway; or did line the rebel
With hidden help and vantage; or that with both
He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;
But treasons capital, countless, and prov'd,
Have overthrow'n him.

Macb. Glamis, and thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind.—Thanks for your pains.—
Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. That, trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange;
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest trifles, to betray us
In deepest consequences.
Cousins, a word. I pray you.

Macb. Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentlemen.—
This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good.—If ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawdor:
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings:
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man, that function
Is smother'd in surmise; and nothing is,
But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.
Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance
May crown me
Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him
Like our strange garments; cleave not to their
But with the end of use.

Macb. Come what come may:
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour;—my dull brain was wrought
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains

Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king—
Think upon what hath chanc'd; and, at some time,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then, enough. Come, friends.

(Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.—Fores. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain,
Lenox, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
These in commission yet returned?

Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
With one that saw him die: who did report,
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons;
Implo'r'd your highness' pardon; and set forth
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him, like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art,
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.—O worsted cousin!

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Rosse, and Angus.
The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me: 'Thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. 'Would thou hadst less de-serv'd

That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties: and our duties
Are to your throne and state, children, and ver-vants:

Which do but what they should, by doing every Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of grownness.—Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me unfold thee,
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm; whom we name hereafter
The prince of Cumberland: which honour never
Not unaccompanied, invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers.—From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for
you:

I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!
Macb. The prince of Cumberland!—That is a step,

On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap.
(Aside.)

For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires!
Let not light see my black and deep desires:
The eye wink at the hand! yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

(Exit.)
Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so vaunt;
And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him.

Dum. So well thy words become thee, as thy words become me. — Go, get him sur-
They smack of honour both: — Go, get him sur-
[Exit Soldier, attended.]

Enter Rosse.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy thane of Rosse.

Len. What haste looks through his eyes? So should he look.

That seems to speak things strange.

Rosse. Gial save the king!

Dum. Whence came'st thou, worthy thane?

Rosse. From Fife, great king,

Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky,

And fan our people cold

Norway himself, with terrible numbers,

Assisted by that most disloyal traitor

The thane of Cawdor, 'gainst a dismal conflict:

Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,

Confronted him with self-comparisons;

Past against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,

Curst him his invader spurs: And, to conclude,

The victory fell on us: — Great happiness!

Dum. That now

Swens, the Norways' king, craves composition;

Nor would we deign him burial of his men,

Till he disbursed, as Saint Colmes' inch,

Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dum. No more that thane of Cawdor shall deceive

Our bosom interest: — Go, pronounce hi' death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Rosse. I'll see it done.

Dum. What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won. [Exit Rosse.]

SCENE III. — A Heath. Thunder.

Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

2 Witch. Killing swine.

3 Witch. Sister, where thou?

1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap,
And mounch'd 'an' mounch'd, and mounch'd: —

Greet me, quoth I:

Around thee, witch! the rump-fed ronyon cries

Her husband's in Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger:

But in a sieve I'll thither sail,

And, like a rat without a tail,

I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

1 Witch. Thou art kind.

3 Witch. And I another.

1 Witch. I myself have all the other,

And the very ports they blow,

All the quarters that they know

I' the shipman's card.

I will drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall neither night nor day,

Hang upon his pent-house lid;

He shall live a man forbid:

Weary sev'n's nights, nine times nine

Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:

Though his bark cannot be lost,

Yet it shall be tempest-tost:

Look what I have.

2 Witch. Show me, show me.

1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,

Wreck'd as homeward he did come. [Dram within.]

3 Witch. A drum, a drum;

Macbeth doth come.

All. The world's extent, hand in hand,

Posters of the sea and land.

Thus do go about, about:
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine.
Peace! — the charm's wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
Ban. How far is't call'd to Forest? — What are
So wither'd, and so wild in their attire:
That look not like the inhabitants o' the earth,
And yet are on't? — Live you? or are you aught
That man may question? You seem to understand
By each at once her choppy finger lying,
Upon her skinny lips: — You should be women,
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can: — What are you?

1 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Glamis!

2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Cawdor!

3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king
hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start; and seem to Things that do sound so fair? — I' the name of
Are ye fantastical, or that indeed [truth,

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace, and great prediction

Of noble having, and of royal hope,

That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak not,

If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say, which grain will grow, and which will not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor fear,

Your favours, nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!

2 Witch. Hail!

3 Witch. Hail!

1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be
So all hail, Macbeth and Banquo! [Woman:]

1 Witch. Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me
more:

By Sinel's death, I know, I am thane of Glamis;

But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives;

A prosperous gentleman; and, to be king,

Stands not within the prospect of belief,

No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence

You owe this strange intelligence, or why

Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge
you. [Witches vanish]

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd?

Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind. — Would they had stay'd!

Ban. Were such things here, as we do speak

Or have we eaten of the insane root, [about]

That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. And thane of Cawdor too; went it not so?

Ban. To the self-same tune, and words. Who's here?

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Rosse. The king hath happily received, Macbeth,

The news of thy success; and when he reads

Thy personal venture in the rebel's fight,

His wonders and his praises do contend,

Which shall be thine, or his: Silenced with that

In viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day,

He finds thee in the stout Norwegian ranks,

First Witch.—All hail, Macbeth ! hail to thee, thane of Glamis !
Second Witch.—All hail, Macbeth ! hail to thee, thane of Cawdor !
Third Witch.—All hail, Macbeth ! that shalt be king hereafter.

MACBETH, Act I., Scene iii.
333

Duke. With all my heart, I'll gossip at this feast.
(Exeunt Duke, Abbeas, Egwen, Courtzean, Merchant, Angelo, and Attendants.)
Dro. S. Master, shall I fetch your stuff from shipboard? (embarke'd!)
Ant. E. Dronno, what stuff of mine hast thou Dro. S. Your goods that lay at host, sir, in the Centaur. (Dronno:)
Ant. S. He speaks to me;—I am your master, Come, go with us; we'll look to that anon.
 Embrace thy brother there, rejoice with him.
(Exeunt Antipholus S. and E., Adr. and Lac.)
Dro. S. There is a fat friend at your master's house,

That kitchen'd me for you to-day at dinner;
 She now shall be my sister, not my wife.
Dro. E. Methinks, you are my glass, and not my brother:
 I see, by you, I am a sweet-faced youth.
 Will you walk in to see their gossiping?
Dro. S. Not I, sir: you are my elder.
Dro. E. That's a question: how shall we try it?
Dro. S. We will draw cuts for the senior: till then, lead thou first.
Dro. E. Nay then, thus:
 We came into the world like brother and brother:
 And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another. (Exeunt.)

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An open Place. Thunder and Lightning.

Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again?
 In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
 2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
 When the battle's lost and won:
 3 Witch. That will be ere set of sun.
 1 Witch. Where the place?
 2 Witch. Upon the heath:
 3 Witch. There we go to meet Macbeth.
 1 Witch. I come, Grynmalin.
All. Paddock calls:—Anon.—
 Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
 Hover through the fog and filthy air.

(Witches vanish.)

SCENE II.—A camp near Forres. Alarm within.

Enter King Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Lenox, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Duc. What bloody man is that? He can report, As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant, Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought 'Gainst my captivity:—Hail, brave friend! Say to the king the knowledge of the deed, As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtfully it stood: As two spent swimmers, that do cling together, And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald (Worthy to be a rebel; for, to that, The multiplying villanies of nature Do swarm upon him), from the western isles Of Kernes and Gallowglasses is supplied; And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling, Show'd like a rebel's whore: But all's too weak: For brave Macbeth, (well he deserves that name), Dismaying fortune, with his brandish'd steel, Which smok'd with bloody execution,

Like valour's minion, Carved out his passage, till he faced the slave; And he'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him, Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chops, And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Duc. O, valiant cousin! worthy gentleman! Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection, Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break; So from that spring, whence comest thou, seem'd to come,

Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark: No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd, Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heels:

But the Norwegian lord, surveying vantage, With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men, Begun a fresh assault.

Duc. Dismay'd not this Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Sold. Yes; As sparrows, eagles; or the hare, the lion. If I say sooth, I must report they were As cannons overcharged with double cracks; So they Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe: Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds, Or memorize another Golgotha, I cannot tell: But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

You say, he dined at home; the goldsmith here denies that saying: Sirrah, what say you?

Dro. E. Sir, he dined with her there, at the Porcupine.

Cour. He did; and from my finger snatch'd that

Ant. E. 'Tis true, my lego, this ring I had of her.

Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey here?

Cour. As sure, my liege, as I do see your grace.

Duke. Why, this is strange!—Go call the abbess.

I think, you are all mated, or stark mad. [hither:]

[Exit an Attendant.]

Ege. Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me speak a harp, I see a friend will save my life, [word, And pay the sum that may deliver me.

Duke. Speak freely, Syracusan, what thou wilt.

Ege. Is not your name, sir, called Antipholus?

And is not that your bondman Dromio? [sir,

Dro. E. Within this hour, I was his bondman,

But he, I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords:

Now I am Dromio, and his man, unhoud.

Ege. I am sure, you both of you remember me.

Dro. E. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you;

For lately we were bound, as you are now.

You are not Pinch's patient, are you, sir?

Ege. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.

Ant. E. I never saw you in my life, till now.

Ege. Oh! grief hath changed me, since you saw me last;

And careful hours, with Time's deformed hand,

Have written strange defeatures in my face:

But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?

Ant. E. Neither. Dromio, nor thou?

Ege. Dro. E. No, trust me, sir, nor I.

Ege. I am sure, thou dost.

Dro. E. Ay, sir? but I am sure, I do not; and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.

Ege. Not know my voice? O, time's extremity!

Hast thou so crack'd and splitt'd my poor tongue

In seven short years, that here my only son

Knows not my feeble key of unkind cares?

Though now this grained face of mine be hid

In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,

And all the conduits of my blood froze up;

Yet hath my night of life some memory,

My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left,

My dull deaf ears a little use to hear:

All these old witnesses (I cannot err),

Tell me, thou art my son Antipholus.

Ant. E. I never saw my father in my life.

Ege. But seven years since, in Syracuse, hoy,

Thou know'st, we parted; but, perhaps, my son,

Thou shan'st to acknowledge me in misery.

Ant. E. The duke, and all that know me in the

Can witness with me that it is not so; [city,

I ne'er saw Syracuse in my life.

Duke. I tell thee, Syracusan, twenty years

Have I been patron to Antipholus.

During which time he ne'er saw Syracuse:

I see, thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the Abbess, with Antipholus Syracusan, and Dromio Syracusan.

Abb. Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd! [All father to see him.

Ant. E. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.

Duke. One of these men is genius to the other;

And so of these: Which is the natural man,

And which the spirit? Who decipher them?

Dro. S. I, sir, am Dromio; command him away.

Dro. E. I, sir, am Dromio; pray let me stay.

Ant. S. Aegon, art thou not? or else his ghost?

Dro. S. O, my old master, who hath bound him here?

Abb. Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds,

And gain a husband by his liberty:—

Speak, old Aegon, if thou be'st the man

That had'st a wife once called Æmilia.

That bore thee at a burden two fair sons:

O, if thou be'st the same Aegon, speak.

And speak unto the same Æmilia!

Ege. If I dream not, thou art Æmilia;

If thou art she, tell me, where is that son

That floated with thee on the fatal raft?

Abb. By men of Epidamnus, he, and I,

And the twin Dromio, all were taken up:

But, by and by, rude fishermen of Corinth

By force took Dromio and my son from them,

And me they left with those of Epidamnus:

What then became of them, I cannot tell;

I, to this fortune that you see me in.

Duke. Why, here begins his morning story right:

These two Antipholus's, these two so like,

And these two Dromios, one in semblance,—

Besides her urging of her wreck at sea,—

These are the parents to these children,

Which accidentally are met together.

Antipholus, thou can'st from Corinth first.

Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.

Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which. [loud.]

Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most gracious

Dro. E. And I with him.

Ant. E. Brought to this town by that most famous warrior

Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle.

Ant. S. Which of you two did dine with me to-day?

Ant. S. I, gentle mistress

Ant. E. And are you not my husband?

Ant. E. No, I say nay to that.

Ant. S. And so do I, yet did she call me so;

And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here,

Did call me brother:—What I told you then,

I hope, I shall have leisure to make good;

If this be not a dream I see and hear.

Ant. S. That is the chain, which you had of me.

Ant. E. I think it be, sir; I deny it not.

Ant. S. And you, sir, for this chain arrested me

Ant. E. I think I did, sir; I deny it not.

Ant. S. I sent you money, sir, to be your bail,

By Dromio; but I think he brought it not.

Dro. E. No, none by me.

Ant. S. This purse of ducats I receiv'd from you,

And Dromio my man did bring them me:

I see, we still did meet each other's man,

And I was 't'en for him, and he for me,

And thereupon these Errors are arise.

Ant. E. These ducats pawn I for my father

here.

Duke. It shall not need, thy father hath his life.

Cour. Sir, I must have that diamond from you.

Ant. E. There, take it; and much thanks for my good cheer.

Abb. Renowned duke, vouchsafe to take the pains

To go with us into the abbey here,

And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes:—

And all that are assembled in this place.

That by this sympathized one day's error

Have suffered wrong, go, keep us company,

And we shall make full satisfaction.

Twenty-five years have I but gone in travail

Of you, my sons; nor, till this present hour,

My heavy burdens are deliver'd:—

The duke, my husband, and my children both,

And you the calendars of their nativity,

Go to a group's feast, and go with us;

After so long grief, such nativity!

Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady ; it cannot be, that she hath done these wrongs.

Adr. May it please your grace, Antipholus, my husband,—

Whom I made lord of me and all I had,
At your important letters,—this ill day
A most outrageous fit of madness took him ;
That desperately he hurried through the street,
(With him his bondman, all as mad as he,) doing displeasure to the citizens

By rushing in their houses, bearing thence Kings, jewels, any thing his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,
While to take order for the wrongs I went,
That he and there his fury had committed
Amen, I wot not by what strong escape.
He broke from those that had the guard of him ;
And, with his mad attendant and himself,
Each one with ireful passion, with drawn swords,
Me, us again, and, madly bent on us,
Chased us away ; till, raising of more aid,
We came again to bind them : then they fled
Into this abbey, whither we pursued them ;
And here the abbess shuts the gate on us,
And will not suffer us to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth, that we may bear him hence.
Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.

Duke. Long since, thy husband serv'd me in my
And I to thee engag'd a prince's word, [wars ;
When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.—
Go, some of you, knock at the abbey-gate,
And bid the lady abbess come to me ;
I will determine this, before I stir.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O mistress, mistress, shift and save your-
My master and his man are both broke loose, [self
Beset the maids a-row, and bound the doctor, Whose beard they have singed off with brands of
And ever as it blaz'd, they threw on him [fire ;
Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair :
My master preaches patience to him, while
His man with scissors nicks him like a fool ;
And sure, unless you send some present help,
Between them they will kill the conjurer.

Adr. Peace, fool, thy master and his man are here ;
And that is false thou dost report to us.

Serv. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true :
I have not breath'd almost, since I did see it.
He cries for you, and vows, if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you.

[Cry within.

Hark, hark, I hear him, mistress ; fly, begone.

Duke. Come, stand by me, fear nothing : Guard with halberds.

Adr. Alas, it is my husband ! Witness you,
That he is borne about invisible :
Even now we hous'd him in the abbey here ;
And now he's there, past thought of human reason.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Ephesus.

Ant. E. Justice, most gracious duke : oh, grant me justice !

Even for the service that long since I did thee,
When I bestird thee in the wars and took Deep scars to save thy life ; even for the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice.

Ege. Unless the fear of death did make me dote,
I see my son Antipholus, and Dromio. [there.

Ant. E. Justice, sweet prince, against that woman
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife ;
That hath stain'd and dishonor'd me,
Even in the strength and height of injury !

Beyond imagination in the wrong.

That she this day hath shameless thrown on me.
Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.

Ant. E. This day, great duke, she shut the doors upon me.

While she with harlots feasted in my house. [so I

Duke. A grievous fault : Say, woman, did'st thou Adr. No, my good lord ;—myself, he, and my as er,

To-day did dine together : So befal my soul,

As this is false he burdens me withal !

Lac. Ne'er may I wink on day, nor sleep on night,
But she tells to your highness simple truth.

Ans. O perjur'd woman ! They are both forsworn.
In this the madman justly chargeth them.

Ant. E. My liege, I am advis'd what I say ;

Neither disturb'd with the effect of wine,
Nor heady rush, provoked with raging ire,

Albeit, my wrongs might make me wiser mad.

This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner :
That goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,

Could witness it, for he was with me then ;

Who parted with me to go fetch a chain,

Promising to bring it to the Porcupine.

Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,

I went to seek him : In the street I met him ;

And in his company that gentleman.

There did this perjur'd goldsmith swear me down,
That I this day of him receiv'd the chain,

Which, God he knows, I saw not : for the which,
He did arrest me with an officer.

I did obey ; and sent my peasant home

For certain ducats : he with none return'd.

Then fairly I bespoke the officer,

To go in person with me to my house.

By the way we met

My wife, her sister, and a rabble more
Of vile confederates ; along with them [villain ;

They brought one Pinch : a hungry, lean-faced

A mere anatomy, a mountebank,

A thread-bare juggler, and a fortune-teller ;

A needy, hollow-wy'd, sharp-looking wretch,

A living dead man : this pernicious slave,

Fore-oath, took on him as a conjurer :

And gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,

And with no face, as 'twere, out-facing me,

Cries out, I was possess'd : then altogether

They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence ;

And in a dark and dankish vault at home

There left me and my man, both bound together,

Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder,

I gain'd my freedom, and immediately

Ran hither to your grace ; whom I beseech

To give me ample satisfaction

For these deep shames, and great indignities.

Ans. My lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him :
That he dined not at home, but was lock'd out.

Duke. But had he such a chain of thee, or no ?

Ans. He had, my lord ; and when he ran in here,
These people saw the chain about his neck.

Mer. Besides, I will be sworn, these ears of mine
Heard you confess, you had the chain of him ;

After you first forswore it on the mart,
And thereupon I drew my sword on you ;

And then you fled into this abbey here,
From whence, I think, you are come by miracle.

Ant. E. I never came within these abbey walls,
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me ;

I never saw the chain, so help me heaven !
And this is false, you burden me withal.

Duke. What an intricate impeach is this !

I think, you all have drunk of Circo's cup.
If here you hous'd him, here he would have been :
If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly :—

Mer. Speak softly: yonder, as I think, he walks.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Syracuse.

Ant. 'Tis so: and that's if chain about his neck, which he forswore, most monks rosy, to have. Good sir, draw near to me. I'll speak to him.—
Sigurd Antipholus, I wonder much

*That you would put me to this shame and trouble;
And not without some scandal to yourself;
With circumstance and oaths, so to deny*

*This chain, which now you wear so openly:
Besides the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You have done wrong to this my honest friend;
Who, bet for staying on our controversy,
Had honest suit, and put to sea to-day:*

This chain you had of me, can you deny it?

Ant. S. I think, I had; I never did deny it.

Mer. Yes, that you did, sir; and forswore it too.

Ant. S. Who heard me to deny it, or forswear it?

Mer. These ears of mine, thou knowest, did hear thee:

Eye on thee, watch! 'tis pity that thou liv'st

To walk where any honest men resort.

*Ant. S. Thou art a villain to impeach me thus:
I'll prove mine honour and mine honesty
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand.*

Mer. I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.

[They draw]

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtezan, and others.

Adr. Hold, hurt him not, for God's sake; he is mad!

Some get within him, take his sword away:

Bind Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

Dro. S. Run, master, run; for God's sake, take a house.

This is some priory;—In, or we are spoil'd.

[Exeunt Ant. S. and Dro. S. to the Priory.]

Enter the Abbess.

Abb. Be quiet, people; Wherefore throng you hither?

Adr. To fetch my poor distracted husband hence:

Let us come in, that we may bind him fast,

And bear him home for his recovery.

Ans. I know, he was not in his perfect wits.

Mer. I am sorry now, that I did draw on him.

Abb. How long hath this possession held the man?

Adr. This week he hath been heavy, sour, and ill,
And much, much different from the man he was;
But, till this afternoon, his passion
Ne'er brake into extremity of rage.

Abb. Hath he not lost much wealth by wreck Buried some dear friend? Hath not else his eye
Stray'd his affection in unlawful love?
A sin prevailing once in youthful men,
Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing,
Whence these sorrows is he subject to?

Adr. To none of these, except it be the last;
Namely, some love, that drew him off from home.

Abb. You should for that have reprehended him.

Adr. Why, so I did.

Abb. Ay, but not rough enough.

Adr. As roughly, as my modesty would let me.

Abb. H-ply, in private.

And in assemblies too.

Adr. Ay, but not enough.

Adr. It was the duty of our conference

Ja had, he slept not for my urging it;

At board, he fed not for my urging it;

Alone, it was the subject of my theme;

In company, I often glanced it;

Said and I told him it was vile and bad.

Abb. And thereof came it, that the man was
The venom clainour of a jealous woman. [read:
Pissen more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.

*It seems, his sleeps were hinder'd by thy railing:
And therefore comes it, that his head is light:
Thou say'st, his meat was sauc'd with thy up-
Unquiet meals make ill digestions. [brailings:
Thence the raging fire of fever bred;
And what's a fever but a fit of madness?*

Thou say'st, his sports were hinder'd by thy brawls:

*Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue,
But moody and dull melancholy,
(Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair;)
And, at her heels, a huge infectious troop
Of pale d'stemperatures, and foes to life!*

*In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest:
To be disturb'd, would mnd or man, or beast:
The consequence is then, thy jealous fits
Have scar'd thy husband from the use of wits.*

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,
When he demean'd himself rough, rude and wildly.—

*Why bear you these rebukes, and answer not?
Adr.* She did but ray me to my own proof.—
Good people, enter, and lay hold on him.

Abb. No, not a creature enters in my house.
Adr. Then, let your servants bring my husband forth.

Abb. Neither; he took this place for sanctuary,
And it shall privilege him from your hands,
Till I have brought him to his wits again,
Or lose my labour in assaying it.

Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,
Diet his sickness, for it is my office;
And will have no attorney but myself;
And therefore let me have him home with me.

Abb. Be patient: for I will not let him stir,
Till I have used the approved means I have,
With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers
To make of him a formal man again:
It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,
A charitable duty of my order;

*Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.
Adr.* I will not hence, and leave my husband
And ill it doth besseem your holiness, [here;
To separate the husband and the wife.

Abb. Be quiet, and depart, thou shalt not have
him.

*[Exit Abbess.]
Luc.* Complain unto the duke of this injury.
Adr. Come, go: I will fall prostrate at his feet,
And never rise until my ears and prayers
Have won his grace to come in person hither,
And take perforce my husband from the abbess.

Mer. By this, I think, the dial points at five:
Anon, I am sure, the duke himself in person
Comes this way to the melancholy vale:
The place of death and sorry excoation,
Behind the ditches of the abbey here.

Ans. Upon what cause?
Mer. To see a reverend Syracusan merchant,
Who put unluckily into this bay
Against the laws and statutes of this town, beheaded publicly for his offence. [death.

Ans. See, where they come: we will behold his Luc. Kneel to the duke, before he pass the abbey.

Enter Duke attended; Egeon, bare-headed; with the Headman and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publicly.
If any friend will pay the sum for him,
He shall not die, so much we tender him.

Adr. Jus ice, most sacred duke, against the abbess!

Ant. E. Peace, doting wizard, peace; I am not mad.

Adr. O. that thou wert not, poor distressed soul!

Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your customs? this companion with the saffron face [merrily] Revel and feast it at my house to-day, Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut, And I denied to enter in my house?

Adr. O husband, God doth know, you did'n't at home,

Where 'would you had remain'd until this time, Free from these slanders, and this open shame!

Ant. E. I did'n't at home! Thou villain, what say'st thou? [home.]

Dro. E. Sir, worth to say, you did not dine at

Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up, and I shut out!

Dro. E. Perdy, your doors were lock'd, and you shut out.

Ant. E. And did not she herself revile me there?

Ant. E. Sais fable, she herself revild you there.

Ant. E. Did not her kitchen maid rail, taunt, and scurr me!

Dro. E. Caries, she did; the kitchen-vestal

Ant. E. And did I not in rage depart from thence?

Dro. E. In verity, you did;—my bones bear witness,

That since have felt the vigor of his rage.

Adr. Is't good to smite him in these contraries?

Puck. It is no shame; the fellow finds his vein, And, yielding to him, humours well his frenzy.

Ant. E. Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me!

Adr. Alas! I sent you money to redeem you, By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.

Dro. E. Money by me! heart and good-will you might,

But, surely, master, not a rag of money.

Ant. E. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?

Adr. He came to me, and I deliver'd it.

Luc. And I am witness with her, that she did.

Dro. E. God and the rope-maker, hear me witness! I was sent for no ling but a rope!

Puck. Mistress, both man and master is possessed!

I know it by their pale and deadly looks;

They must be bound, and laid in some dark room,

Ant. E. Say, wherefore must thou lock us forth to-day,

And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?

Adr. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.

Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv'd no gold;

But I confess, sir, that we were lock'd out.

Adr. Unsembling villain, thou speak'st false in lock.

Ant. E. Unsembling harlot, thou art false in all;

And art confederate with a damned pack,

To make a luscious subject scorn of me;

But with those nails I'll pick out these false eyes,

That would behold me in this shameful sport.

[Puck and his Assistant bind Ant. E. and Dro. E.]

Adr. O. bind him, bind him, let him not come near me.

Puck. More company;—the fiend is strong within him.

Luc. Ah me, poor man! how pale and wan he

Ant. E. What wilt you murder me! Thou gilder, thou,

I am thy prisoner: wilt thou suffer them to make a rescue?

Off. Masters, let him go:

He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.

Puck. Go, bind this man for he is true, so too.

Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer?

Hast thou delight to see a wretched man

Do outrage and displeasure to himself?

Off. He is my prisoner; if I let him go,

The debt he owes, will be requir'd of me.

Adr. I will discharge thee, ere I go from thee:

Bear me forthwith unto his creditor,

And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay it.

Good master doctor, see him safe convey'd

Home to my house.—O most unhappy day!

Ant. E. O most unhappy strumpet!

Dro. E. Master, I am here enter'd in bond for

Ant. E. Out on thee, villain; wherefore dost thou mad me?

Dro. E. Will you be bound for nothing? I be mad,

Good master; cry, the devil—

Luc. God help, poor soul, how idly do they talk!

Adr. Go bear him hence.—Sister, go you with me.

[Exeunt Pinch and Assistants, with Ant. E. and Dro. E.]

Say now, whose suit is he arrested at?

Off. One Angelo, a goldsmith; do you know

Adr. I know the man: What is the sum he

Off. Two hundred ducats.

Adr. Say, how grows it due?

Off. Due for a chain, your husband had of him.

Adr. He did bespeak a chain for me, but had it not.

Cour. When as your husband, all in rage, to-day

Came to my house, and took away my ring,

(The ring I saw upon his finger now),

Straight after, did I meet him with a chain.

Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it:—

Come, geow, bring me where the goldsmith is,

I long to know the truth herself at large.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse, with his rapier drawn; and Dromio of Syracuse.

Luc. God, for thy merry! they are loose again.

Adr. And abuse with naked swords; let's call more help.

To have them bound again.

Off. Away, they'll kill me.

[Exeunt Officer, Adr. and Luc.]

Ant. S. I long, these witches are afraid of swords.

Dro. S. Sir, that would be your wife, now ran from you.

Ant. S. Come to the Centaur: fetch our stuff from thence:

I long that we were safe and sound abroad.

Dro. S. Faith, say here this night, they will surely do us no harm; you saw, they speak us fair, give us gold: methinks, they are such a gentle nation, that but for the mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn witch.

Ant. S. I will not stay to-night for all the town; Therefore away, to get our stuff on board.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter Merchant and Angelo.

Ang. I am sorry, sir, that I have hinder'd you;

But, I protest, he had the chain of me,

Though most dishonestly he hath deny'd it.

Mer. How is the man esteem'd here in the city?

Ang. Of very reverent reputation, sir.

Of credit infinite, highly belov'd,

Second to none that lives here in the city;

His word will bear my word at any time.

there any ship puts forth to-night! may we be gone!

Dro. S. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since, that the bark Expedition put forth to-night; and then were you hindered by the sergeant, to tarry for the hoy, Delay: Here are the angels that you sent for, to deliver you.

Ant. S. The fellow is distract, and so am I; And here we wander in illusions; Some blessed power deliver us from hence Enter a Courtezan.

Cour. Well met, well met, master Antipholus. I see, sir, you have found the goldsmith now: Is that the chain, you promis'd me to-day!

Ant. S. Satan, avoid! I charge thee tempt me not!

Dro. S. Master, is this mistress Satan?

Ant. S. It is the devil.

Dro. S. Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam; and here she comes in the habit of a light wench; and thereof comes, that the wenches say, God damn me, that's as much as to say, God make me a light wench. It is written, they appear to men like angels of light: light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; ergo, light wenches will burn; Come not near her.

Cour. Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir.

Will you go with me? We'll mend our dinner. Dro. S. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat, or bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. S. Why, Dromio?

Dro. S. Marry, he must have a long spoon, that most eat with the devil.

Ant. S. And then, I send! what tell'st thou me of supping?

Thou art, as you are all, a succorless: I conjure thee to leave me, and be gone.

Cour. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner.

Or, for my diamond, the chain you promis'd; And I'll be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Dro. S. Some devils ask but the parings of one's nail.

A rash, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin, A nut, a cherry-stone; but she, more covetous, Would have a chain.

Master, be woe; an' if you give it her, The devil will shake her chain, and fright us with it.

Cour. I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain;

I hope, you do not mean to cheat me so.

Ant. S. Away, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go.

Dro. S. Fly, fly, says the peacock: Mistress, that you know.

Exeunt Ant. S. and Dro. S.

Cour. Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is dead, Else would he never so demean himself:

A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats, And for the same he promis'd me a chain;

Both one, and other, he denies me now, The reason that I gather he is mad;

(Besides this present instance of his rage,) Is a mad tale, he told to day at dinner,

Of his own doors being shut against his entrance. Belike, his wife, acquainted with his fits,

On purpose shut the doors against his way. My way is now, to his home to his house,

And tell his wife, that, being lunatic, He rush'd into my house, and took perforce

My ring away: This course I fittest choose; My forty ducats is too much to lose. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. — The same.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, and an Officer

Ant. E. Fear me not, man, I will not break away:

I'll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for.

My wife is in a wayward mood to-day;

And will not lightly trust the messenger,

That I should be attach'd in Ephesus:

I tell you, 'twill sound harshly in her ears.—

Enter Dromio of Ephesus, with a rope's end.

Here comes my man; I think, he brings the money.

How now, sir! I have you that I sent you for?

Dro. E. Here's that, I warrant you, will pay

Ant. E. But where's the money? [them all.]

Dro. E. Why, sir, I gave the money for the rope.

Ant. E. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a

Dro. E. I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at the rate.

Ant. E. To what end did I bid thee buy this?

Dro. E. To a rope's end, sir; and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. E. And to that end, sir, I will welcome you.

Off. Good sir, be patient.

Dro. E. Nay, 'tis for me to be patient; I am in adversity.

Off. Good now, hold thy tongue.

Dro. E. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.

Ant. E. Thou whorson, senseless villain!

Dro. E. I would I were senseless, sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Ant. E. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.

Dro. E. I am an ass, indeed; you may prove it by my long ears. I have served him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service, but blows:

when I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warm, he cools me with beating; I am wak'd with it, when I sleep; raised with it, when I sit; driven out of doors with it, when I go from home; welcom'd home with it, when I return;

may, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar went her brat: and, I think, when he hath lamed me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, and the Courtezan, with Pinch, and others.

Ant. E. Come, go along; my wife is coming yonder.

Dro. E. Mistress, rapace hanc, respect your end; or rather the prophecy, like the parrot, Be-ware the rope's end.

Ant. E. Wilt thou still talk? [Heals him.]

Cour. How say you now? I am not your husband!

Adr. His civility confirms no less.— [mad.] Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer;

Establish him in his true sense again, And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas, how fiery and how stung he looks!

Cour. Mark, how he trembles in his ecstasy!

Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.

Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your

Pinch. I charge thee, Satan, ho! within thee To yield possession to my holy prayers,

And to thy state of darkness bid thee straight; I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven.

That's covered o'er with Turkish tapestry,
There is a purse of ducats; let her send it;
Tell her, I am arrested in the street,
And that shall heal me; his thee, slave; be gone.
On, officer, to prison till it come.
[Exeunt Merchant, Angelo, Officer, and Aut. E.]
Dro. S. To Adriana! that is where we din'd;
Where Dowsabel did claim me for her husband:
She is too big, I hope, for me to compass.
Thither I must, although against my will,
For servants must their masters' minds fulfil.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. — The same.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ah, Luciana, did he tempt thee so?
Might'st thou perceive anxiously in his eye
That he did plead in earnest, yea or no?
Look'd he or red, or pale; or sad, or merrily?
What observation mad'st thou in this case,
Of his heart's meteors tilting in his face?
Luc. First, he denied you had in him no right.
Adr. He meant, he did me none; the more my sister's. [here.]
Luc. Then swore he, that he was a stranger
Adr. And true he swore, though yet forsworn
Luc. Then pleaded I for you. [the were.]
Adr. And what said he?
Luc. That love I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me. [love?]
Adr. With what persuasion did he tempt thy Luc. With words, that in an honest suit might move.

First, he did praise my beauty; then, my speech.

Adr. Did'st speak him fair?

Luc. Have patience, I beseech.

Adr. I cannot, nor I will not, hold me still;
My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his
He is deformed, crooked, old, and sore. [will.]
Ill-faced, worse-bodied, shapeless every where:
Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind;
Stigmatical in making, worse in mind.

Luc. Who would be jealous then of such a one?
No evil lost is wail'd when it is gone.

Adr. Ah! but I think him better than I say.

And yet would herein others' eyes were
worse:

Far from her nest the lapwing cries away;
My heart prays for him, though my tongue
do curse.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Here, go; the deak, the purse; sweet now, make haste.

Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?

Dro. S. By running fast.

Luc. Where is thy master, Dromio, is he well?

Dro. S. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than hell.

A devil in an everlasting garment hath him,
One, whose hard heart is button'd up with steel;
A fend, a fairy, pitiless and rough;

A wolf, my, worse, a fellow all in buff;
A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermauds

The passages of alleys, creeks, and narrow lands;
A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry foot well; [to hell.]

One that, before the judgment, carries poor souls
adr. Why, man, what is the matter?

Dro. S. I do not know the matter; he is 'rested on the case. [suits.]

Adr. What, is he arrested? tell me, at whose

Dro. S. I know not at whose suit he is arrested, well;

But he's in a suit of buff, which 'rested him,
that can I tell:

Will you send him, mistress, redemption the money in the deak?

Adr. Go fetch it, sister.—This I wonder at.

[Exit Luciana]

That he, unknown to me, should be in debt:—
Tell me, was he arrested on a band?

Dro. S. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing;
A chain, a chain: do you not hear it ring?

Adr. What, the chain?

Dro. S. No, no, the bell: 'tis time, that I were
It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one. [hear.]

Adr. The hours come back; that did I never

Dro. S. O yes. If any hour meet a sergeant, a'turns back for very fear.

Adr. As if time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason!

Dro. S. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth, to season. [ay.]
Nay, he's a thief too: Have you not heard men that time comes stealing on by night and day?

If he be in debt, and theft, and a sergeant in the way, [day?]
Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a

Enter Luciana.

Adr. Go, Dromio; there's the money, bear it
straight;

And bring thy master home immediately.—
Come, sister; I am press'd down with conceit:
Conceit, my comfort, and my injury. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. — The same.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ant. S. There's not a man I meet, but doth salute me

As if I were their well-acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.

Some tender money to me, some invite me;
Some offer me thanks for kindnesses;

Some offer me commodities to buy;
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop,

And show'd me silks that he had bought for me,
And, therewithal, took measure of my body.

Sure, these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, here's the gold you sent me for;
What, have you got the picture of Old Adam new apparelled?

Ant. S. What gold is this? What Adam dost thou mean?

Dro. S. Not that Adam, that kept the paradise, but that Adam, that keeps the prison: he that gives in the calf's-skin that was killed for the prophag; he that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.

Ant. S. I understand thee not.

Dro. S. No? why, 'tis a plain case: he that went like a base-viol, in a case of leather; the man, sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives them a fob, and 'rests them; he, sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durance; he that sets up his rest to do more experts with his mace, than a morris-pike.

Ant. S. What! thou mean'st an officer?

Dro. S. Ay, sir, the servant of the band; he,
that brings any man to answer it, that breaks his band; one that thinks a man always going to bed, and says, God give you good rest!

Ant. S. Well sir, there rest in your foulery is Go home with it, and please your wife withal;

And soon at supper-time I'll visit you.
And then receive my money for the chain.

Ant. S. I pray you, sir, receive the money now,
For fear you ne'er see chain, nor money more.
Ans. You are a merry man, sir; fare you well. [Exit.]

Ant. S. What I should think of this, I cannot
But this I think, there's no man is so vain, [tell;
That would refuse so fair an offer'd chain.
I see, a man here needs not live by shifts,
When in the streets he meets such golden gifts.
I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay;
If any ship put out, then straight away. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — The same.

Enter a Merchant, Angelo, and an Officer.

Mer. You know, since Pentecost the sum is due,
And since I have not much importun'd you:
Nur now I had not, but that I am bound
To Persuade, and want guilders for my voyage:
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or I'll attach you by this officer.

Ans. Even just the sum, that I do owe to you,
Is growing to me by Antipholus:
And, in the instant that I met with you,
He had of me a chain; at five o'clock,
I shall receive the money for the same:
Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house,
I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, and Dromio of Ephesus.

Off. That labour may you save; see where he comes. [Thou]

Ant. E. While I go to the goldsmith's house, go
And buy a rope's end; that will I bestow
Among my wife and her confederates,
For locking me out of my doors by day.—
But soft, I see the goldsmith:—get thee gone;
Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

Dro. E. I buy a thousand pound a year! I buy a rope! [Exit Dromio.]

Ant. E. A man is well help up, that trusts to
I promised your presence, and the chain; [you.
But neither chain, nor goldsmith, came to me.
Belike, you thought our love would last too long,
If it were chain'd together; and therefore came
not.

Ans. Saving your merry humour, here's the note,
How much your chain weighs to the utmost
carat;

The fineness of the gold, and chafeous fashion;
Which doth amount to three odd ducats more:
Than I stand debited to this gentleman:

I pray you, see him presently discharged,
For he is bound to sea, and stays but for it.

Ant. E. I am not furnish'd with the present money;

Besides I have some business in the town:
Good signior, take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the chain, and bid my wife
Rebuke the sum on the receipt thereof;

Perchance, I will be there as soon as you. [Self.]

Ans. Then you will bring the chain to her your-Ant. E. No; bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.

Ans. Well, sir, I will: Have you the chain about you?

Ant. E. An if I have not, sir, I hope you have;
Or else you may return without your money.

Ans. Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain;

Both wind and tide stays for this gentleman,
And I, to blame, have held him here too long.

Ant. E. Good lord, you use this dalliance to excuse

Your breach of promise to the Porcupine:
I should have chid you for not bringing it.

But, like a shrew, you first begin to brawl.
Mer. The hour steals on; I pray you, sir, despatch.

Ans. You hear, how he importunes me; the chain—your money.

Ant. E. Why, give it to my wife, and fetch Come, come, you know, I gave it you even
now;

Either send the chain, or send me by some token.
Ant. E. Fye! now you run this humour out of breath: [it.

Come, where's the chain? I pray you, let me see
Mer. My business cannot brook this dalliance:

Good sir, say, what you'll answer me, or no;
If not, I'll leave him to the officer. [You.]

Ant. E. I answer you! What should I answer Ans. The money, that you owe me for the chain.

Ant. E. I owe you none, till I receive the chain.
Ans. You know, I gave it you half an hour since. [much to say so.]

Ant. E. You gave me none; you wrong me
Ans. You wrong me more, sir, in denying it:
Consider how it stands upon my credit.

Mer. Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.
Off. I do; and charge you in the duke's name to obey me.

Ans. This touches me in reputation:—
Either consent to pay this sum for me,
Or I attach you by this officer.

Ant. E. Consent to pay thee that I never had!
Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar'st.

Ans. Here is thy fee; arrest him, officer:—
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparently.

Off. I do arrest you, sir; you hear the suit.
Ant. E. I do obey thee, till I give thee bail:—
But, sirrah, you shall pay this sport as dear
As all the metal in your shop will answer.

Ans. Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, there is a bark of Epidamnus,
That stays but till her owner comes aboard,
And then, sir, bears away: our freightage, sir,
I have convey'd aboard; and I have bought
The oil, the balsamum, and aqua-vive.

The ship is in her trim: the merry wind
Blows fair from land; they stay for noxal at all,
But for their owner, master, and yourself.

Ant. E. How now! a noddian! Why thou poorish sleep.

What ship of Epidamnus stays for me?
Dro. S. A ship you sent me to, to hire waffage.

Ant. E. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope;

And told thee to what purpose, and what end.
Dro. S. You sent me, sir, for a rope's-end as You sent me to the bay, sir, for a bark. [Mum.]

Ant. E. I will debate this matter at more leisure.

And teach your ears to listen with more heed.
To Adriana, villain, he thee straight:
Give her this key, and tell her, in the desk

Sm. syren, for thyself, and I will dote :

Spread o'er the silver waves thy golden hairs,
And as a bed I'll take thee, and there lie ;

And, in that glorious supposition, think
He gains by death, that hath such means to die :—

Lac. love, being light, be drowned if she sink !
Lac. What, are you mad, that you do reason

so ? [know.]
Ant. S. Not mad, but mated ; how, I do not

Lac. It is a fault that springeth from your eye.
Ant. S. For gazing on your beams, fair sun, being by

Lac. Gaze where you should, and that will clear your sight. [on night]

Ant. S. As good to wink, sweet love, as look

Lac. Why call you me love ? call my sister so Ant. S. Thy sister's sister.

Lac. That's my sister.
Ant. S. No ;

It is thyself, mine own self's better part ;
Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer

heart ;
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim,
My sin, cur'st the heaven, and my heaven's claim.

Lac. All this my sister is, or else should be.
Ant. S. Call thyself sister, sweet, for I aim

thee :
Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life ;
Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife :

Give me thy hand.
Lac. O, soft, sir, hold you still ;
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will.

[Exit Lac.]
Enter from the house of Antipholus of Ephesus, Dromio of Syracuse.

Ant. S. Why, how now, Dromio, where run'st thou so fast ?

Dro. S. Do you know me, sir ? am I Dromio ?
am I your man ? am I myself ?

Ant. S. Thou art Dromio ; thou art my man ;
thou art thyself.

Dro. S. I am an ass ; I am a woman's man, and heakles myself.

Ant. S. What woman's man ? and how heakles
thyself ?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman ; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.

Ant. S. What claim lays she to thee ?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse ; and she would have me as a beast :

not that, I being a beast, she would have me ; but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.

Ant. S. What is she ?

Dro. S. A very reverend body ; ay, such a one as a man may not speak of, without he say, sir, reverence : I have but lean luck in the match,

and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

Ant. S. How dost thou mean, a fat marriage ?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and all grease ; and I know not what use to put her to, but to make a lamp of her, and run from her by her own light. I warrant her rage, and the tallow in them, will burn a Poland winter : if she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer the whole world.

Ant. S. What complexion is she off ?
Dro. S. Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept. For why ? She sweats—a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.

Ant. S. That's a fault that water will mend.
Dro. S. No, sir, 'tis in grain ; Noah's flood could not do it.

Ant. S. What's her name ?

Dro. S. Nell, sir ;—but her name and three quarters, that is an ell and three quarters, will not measure her from hip to hip

Ant. S. Then she bears some breadth ?

Dro. S. No longer from head to foot, than from hip to hip : she is spherical, like a globe ; I could find out countries in her.

Ant. S. In what part of her body stands Ireland ?

Dro. S. Murry, sir, in her buttocks ; I found it out by the boss.

Ant. S. Where Scotland ?
Dro. S. I found it by the barrenness ; hard, is the palm of the hand.

Ant. S. Where France ?

Dro. S. In her forehead ; armed and reverted, making war against her hair.

Ant. S. Where England ?
Dro. S. I looked for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them ; but I guess it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that ran between France and it.

Ant. S. Where Spain ?

Dro. S. Faith, I saw it not ; but I felt it, hot in her breath.

Ant. S. Where America, the Indies ?
Dro. S. O, sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain ;

who sent whole armadas of carracks to be ballast at her nose.

Ant. S. Where stood Belgium, the Netherlands ?
Dro. S. O, sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me ;

called me Dromio ; swore I was aureous to her ;

told me what privy marks I had about me,—as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck,

the great wart on my left arm,—that I, amazed, ran from her as a witch ; and, I think, if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel, she had transformed me to a curtail-dog, and made me turn 'tis wheel.

Ant. S. Go, hie thee presently, post to the road ;

And if the wind blow any way from shore,
I will not harbour in this town to-night.

If any bark put forth, come to the mart,
Where I will walk, till thou return to me.

If every one know us, and we know none,
'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.

Dro. S. As from a bear a man would run for life,

So fly I from her that would be my wife. [Exit.]
Ant. S. There's none but witches do insult

here ;
And therefore 'tis high time that I were hence.

She, that doth call me husband, even my woul
Dox for a wife abhor ; but her fair sister,

Purses'd with such a gentle sovereign grace,
Of such enchanting presence and discourse,

Hath almost made me traitor to myself ;
But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,

I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Master Antipholus ?
Ant. S. Ay, that's my name.

Ang. I know it well, sir. Lo, here is the chain ;
I thought to have met you at the Porcupine ;

The chain unlash'd made me stay thus long.
Ant. S. What is your will that I shall do with this ? [it for you.]

Ang. What please yourself, sir ; I have made
Ant. S. Made it for me, sir ! I bespoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have :

- Ant. E.* Do you hear, you minion?—you'll let us in, I hope!
- Luce.* I thought to have ask'd you.
- Dro. S.* And you said, no.
- Dro. E.* So, come, help; well struck;—there was blow for blow.
- Ant. E.* Thou baggage, let me in.
- Luce.* Can you tell for whose sake?
- Dro. E.* Master, knock the door hard.
- Luce.* Let him knock till it aches.
- Ant. E.* You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down. (in the town)
- Luce.* What needs all that, and a pair of stocks (within)? Who is that at the door, that keeps all this noise? (unruly boys)
- Dro. S.* By my troth, your town is troubled with
- Ant. E.* Are you there, wife? You might have come before. (the door)
- Ant. E.* Your wife, sir, kneave! go, get you from
- Dro. E.* If you went in pain, master, this knave would go sore.
- Ant. E.* Here is neither cheer, sir, nor welcome; we would fain have either.
- Ant. E.* In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.
- Dro. E.* They stand at the door, master; bid them welcome hither.
- Ant. E.* There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in.
- Dro. E.* You would say so, master, if your garments were thin. (in the cold)
- Your cake here is warm within; you stand here it would make a man mad as a buck, to be so bought and sold. (the gate)
- Ant. E.* Go, fetch me something; I'll break up
- Dro. S.* Break any breaking here, and I'll break your knave's pate.
- Dro. E.* A man may break a word with you, sir; And words are but wind; (behind)
- And break it in your face, so he break it not
- Dro. S.* It seems thou wastest breaking. Out upon thee, hind!
- Dro. E.* Here's too much, out upon thee! I pray thee, let me in.
- Dro. S.* Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin. (crow)
- Ant. E.* Well, I'll break in; go borrow me a
- Dro. E.* A crow without a feather; master, mean you so? (feather)
- For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a fin
- If a crow help us in, surrah, we'll pluck a crow together (crow)
- Ant. E.* Go, get thee gone; fetch me an iron
- Ant. E.* Have patience, sir; O, let it not be so; Herein you war against your reputation, And draw within the compass of suspect The unviolated honour of your wife.
- Once this.—Your long experience of her wisdom, Her sober virtue, years, and modesty, Plead on her part some cause to you unknown; And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse Why at this time the doors are made against you. Be rul'd by me; depart in patience. And let us to the Theatre all to dinner: And, about evening, come yourself alone, To know the reason of this strange restraint. If by strong hand you offer to break in, Now in the stirring passage of the day, A vulgar comment will be made on it; And that supposed by the common rout Against your yet unquell'd estimation. That may with foul intrusion enter in, And dwell upon your grave when you are dead: For slander lives upon succession; For ever hous'd, where it once gets possession.
- Ant. E.* You have prevail'd; I will depart in quiet.
- And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry. I know a wench of excellent discourse,— Pretty and witty; wild, and yet too gentle;— There will we dine: this woman that I mean, My wife (but, I protest, without desert) Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal; To her will we to dinner.—Get you home. And fetch the chain: by this, I know, 'tis made: Bring it, I pray you, to the Porcupine; For there's the house; that chain will I bestow (Be it for nothing but to spite my wife). Upon mine hostess there: good sir, make haste: Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me, I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll dislike me.
- Ant. E.* I'll meet you at that place, some hour hence.
- Ant. E.* Do so; this jest shall cost me some expense. (Exeunt.)

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Luciana and Antipholus of Syracuse.

- Luc.* And may it be that you have quite forgot A husband's office? Shall, Antipholus, hate, Even in the spring of love, thy love-springs rut? Shall love, in building, grow so ruinous? If you did wed my sister for her wealth, I then, for her wealth's sake, use her with more kindness: Or, if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth; Muffle your false love with some show of blindness:— Let not my sister read it in your eye; Be not thy tongue thy own shame's orator; Look sweet, speak fair, become dissimulation; Apparel vice like virtue's harlotage; Bear a fair presence, though your heart be tainted; Teach sin the carriage of a holy saint; Be secret-false. What need she be acquainted? What simple thief brags of his own attain? 'Tis double wrong, to trust with your bed, And let her read it in thy looks at board; Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed; Ill deeds are doubled with an evil word. Alas, poor women! make us but believe, Being compact of credit, they love us not. Though others have the arm, show us the sleeve; We in your motion turn, and you may move us. Then, gentle brother, get you in again; Comfort your sister, cheer her, call her wife; 'Tis holy sport to be a little vain. (sings)
- When the sweet breath of flattery conquers Ant. S. Sweet mistress (what your name is else, I know not, Nor by what wonder you do hit on mine) Less, in your knowledge and your grace, you show not. (disturb)
- Than our earth's wonder; more than earth Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak; Lay open to my earthly gross conceit, Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak, The folded meaning of your words' deceit. Against my soul's pure truth why labour you, To make it wander in an unknown field? Are you a god? I would you create me new! Transform me then, and to your power I'll But if that I am I, then well I know, (yield) Your weeping sister is no wit of mine, Nor to her bed no homage do I owe; Far more, far more, to you do I decline. O train me not, sweet nymphet, with thy mate, To drown me in thy sister's flood of tears;

To counterfeit thus grossly with your slave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my mood!
Be it my wrong, you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:
Thou art an elm, my husband, I, a vine;
Whose weakness, married to thy stronger state,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If aught possess thee from me, it is druse,
Upstart ivy, brier, or sile moss:
Who, all for want of pruning, with intrusion
Infect thy sap, and live on thy confusion.

Ant. S. To me she speaks; she moves me for her theme:

What, was I married to her in my dream?
Or sleep I now, and think I hear all this?
What error drives our eyes and ears amiss?
Until I know this sure uncertainty,

[dinner.
Lac. Dromio, go bid the servants spread for Dro. S. O, for my beads! I curse me for a sinner.
This is the fairy land:—O, spite of spites!—
We talk with goblins, owls, and elfish sprites;
If we obey them not, this will ensue, [blue
They'll suck our breath, or pinch us black and

Dro. S. No, I am an ape.*

Lac. If thou art chang'd to aught, 'tis to an ass.

Dro. S. 'Tis true; she rides me, and I long for grass.

'Tis so, I am an ass; else it could never be,
But I should know her as well as she knows me.

*Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a fool,
To put the finger in the eye and weep.*

*Whist man, and master, latch my woes to scorn.—
Come, sir, to dinner: Dromio, keep the gate:—*

*Husband, I'll dine above with you to-day,
And shrieve you of a thousand idle pranks:*

*Sirrah, if any ask you for your master,
Say, he dines forth, and let no creature enter.—*

Come, sister:—Dromio, play the porter well.

*Ant. S. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
Sleeping or waking? mad, or well advis'd?*

Known unto these, and to myself disguis'd!
I'll say as they say, and persevere so,

And in this mist at all adventures go.

Dro. S. Master, shall I be porter at the gate?

Adr. Ay; and let none enter, lest I break your gate.

Lac. Come, come, Antipholus, we dine too late.
[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter A. Antipholus of Ephesus, Dromio of Ephesus, Angelo, and Balthazar.

Ant. E. Good signior Angelo, you must excuse us all.

*My wife is shrewish, when I keep not hours;
Say, that I linger'd with you at your shop,*

*To see the making of her carcanet,
And that to-morrow you will bring it home.*

*But here's a villain, that would fawn me down
He met me on the mart; and that I beat him,*

And charg'd him with a thousand marks in gold;

*And that I did deny my wife and house:—
Thou drunkard, thou, what didst thou mean by
this?*

Dro. E. Say what you will, sir, but I know what I know: [to show:

That you beat me at the mart, I have your hand gave were ink,

from the house I owe? [door*

Dro. S. The porter for this time, sir, and my name is Dromio.

Dro. E. O villain, thou hast stolen both mine office and my name;

The one he'er got me credit, the other mickle blame.

*If thou had'st been Dromio to-day in my place,
'Thou would'st have chang'd thy face for a unnie,*

or thy name for an ass.

Lace. [Within] What a coil is there! Dromio, who are those at the gate?

Dro. E. Let my master in, Lace.

*Lace. Faith no; he comes too late;
And so tell your master.*

*Dro. E. O Lord, I must laugh:—
Have at you with a proverb.—Shall I set in my* staff?

*Lace. Have at you with another: that's—
When I can you tell?*

 Or I will beat this method in your nose as a.
 Dco. S. Scance, call you it so you would leave beating. I had rather have it a head, as you use these blows long, I must get a scone for my head, and inuence it too; or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. Be, I pray sir, why am I beaten?

Ant. S. Dost thou not know?

Dco. S. Nothing, sir; but that I am beaten.

Ant. S. Shall I tell you why?

Dco. S. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for, they say, every why hath a wherefore.

Ant. S. Why, first,—for flogging me; and then,
 wherefore.

For urging it the second time to me.

Dco. S. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season?

When, in the why, and the wherefore, is neither rhyme nor reason?

Well, sir, I thank you.

Ant. S. Think me sir? for what?

Dco. S. Marry, sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.

Ant. S. I'll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But, say, sir, is it dinnertime? I have.

Dco. S. No, sir; I think, the meat wants that

Ant. S. In good time, sir, what's that?

Dco. S. Basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry.

Dco. S. If it be, sir, I pray you eat some of it.

Ant. S. Your reason?

Dco. S. Lest it make you choleric, and purchase me another dry basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time;
 There's a time for all things.

Dco. S. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

Ant. S. By what rule, sir?

Dco. S. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of father Time himself.

Ant. S. Let's hear it.

Dco. S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair, that grows bald by nature.

Ant. S. May he not do it by dye and recovery?

Dco. S. Yea, to pay a fine for a peruke, and recover the lost hair of another man.

Ant. S. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being as it is, so plentiful an excrement?

Dco. S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts; and what he has scattered men in hair, he hath given them in wit.

Ant. S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

Dco. S. Not a man of those, but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

Ant. S. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.

Dco. S. The planner dealer, the sopper lost;
 Yet he loath it in a kind of jollity.

Ant. S. For what reason?

Dco. S. For two; and sound ones too.

Ant. S. Nay, not sound, I pray you.

Dco. S. Sure ones thou.

Ant. S. Nay, not sure, in a thing false.

Dco. S. Certain ones thou.

Ant. S. Name them.

Dco. S. The one, to save the money that he spends in tarry; the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porridge.

Ant. S. You would all this time have proved,
 there is no time for all things.

Dco. S. Marry, and did, sir; namely, no time to recover hair lost by nature.

Ant. S. But your reason was not substantial,
 why there is no time to recover.

Dco. S. Thus I mend it: Time himself is bald, and therefore, to the world's end, will have bald followers.

Ant. S. I knew, 'twould be a bald conclusion:
 But soft! who waxes so yonder?

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange, and frown:

Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspects,
 I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.

The time was once, when thou ungr'd would'st
 That never words were music to thine ear,

That never object pleasing in thine eye,
 That never touch well-come to thy hand,

That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,
 Unless I spake, look'd, touch'd, or car'd to thee.

How comes it now, my husband, oh, how comes it,
 That thou art then estranged from thyself?

Thyself I call it, being a range to me
 That undividable, incorporate,

Am better than thy dear self's better part.
 Ah, do not tear away thyself from me;

For know, my love, as easy may'st thou fall
 A drop of water in the breaking gulph,

And take unmingled thence that drop again,
 Without addition, or diminishing.

As take from me thyself, and not me too.
 How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,

Should'st thou but hear I were hypocritical?
 And that this body, consecrate to thee,

By Ruffian lust should be contaminate?
 Would'st thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,

And hurl the name of husband in my face,
 And tear the stain'd skin off my harlot brow,

And from my false hand cut the wedding ring,
 And break it with a deep-divorcing vow?

I know thou canst; and therefore, see, thou do it.
 I am possess'd with an adulterate blot;

My blood is mingled with the crime of lust.
 For, if we two be one, and thou play false,

I do digest the poison of thy flesh,
 Being strumpeted by thy contagion.

Keep then fair league and truce with thy true bed;
 I live dis-join'd, thou, undishonour'd.

Ant. S. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know you
 In Ephesus I am but two hours old.

As strange unto your town, as to your talk;
 When, every word by all my wit being scan'd

Went wit in all one word to understand.
 Luc. Pse, brother! how the world is chang'd

with you:
 When were you wont to use my sister thus?

She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.
 Ant. S. By Dromio?

Dco. S. By me! [him,—

Adr. By thee; and this thou didst return, thus
 That he did buffet thee, and, in his blows

Denied my house for his, no for his wife.
 Ant. S. Did you converse, sir, with this gentle-

woman?
 What is the course and drift of your compact?

Dco. S. I, sir! I never saw her till this time.

Ant. S. Villain, thou liest; for even her very Dada thou deliver to me on the mart.

Dco. S. I never spake with her in all my life.

Ant. S. How can she thus then call us by our names, unless it be by inspiration?

Adr. How ill agrees it with your gravity,

Lac. Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe.
There's nothing, situate under heaven's eye,
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:
The herds, the fishes, and the winged fowls,
Are their masters' subject, and at their controls:
Men, more divine, the masters of all these.
Lords of the wide world, and wild wat'ry seas,
Instructed with intellectual sense and souls,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls:
Are masters to their females and their lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.

Adr. This servitude makes you to keep unweid.

Lac. No, this, but troubles of the marriage-bed.

Adr. But, were you wedded, you would bear some away.

Lac. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.

Adr. How if your husband start some other where?

Lac. Till he come home again, I would forbear.

Adr. Patience, unaw'd, no marvel though she pause.

They can be neek, that have no other care.
A wretched soul, bruia'd with adversity,
We had be quiet, when we hear it cry:
But were we burden'd with like weight of pain,
As much, or more, we should ourselves complain:
So thou, that hast no unkind mate to grieve thee,
With unright helplessness wouldst relieve me:
But, if thou live to see like right hereof,
This foul-heg'd patience in thee will be left.

Lac. Well, I will marry one day but to try;

Here comes your man, now is your husband sigh.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

Adr. Say, is your tardy master now at hand?

Dro. E. Nay, he is at two houses with me, and that my two ears can witness.

Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him? know'st thou his mind?

Dro. E. Ay, ay, he told his mind upon mine ear;

Bestrew his hand, I scarce could understand it.

Lac. Spoke he so doubtfully, thou couldest not feel his meaning?

Dro. E. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too well feel his blows; and withal so doubtfully, that I could scarce understand them.

Adr. But say, I prythee, is he coming home?

Dro. E. He hath great care to please his wife.

Adr. How's that, thou villain? (mad)

Dro. E. I mean not cuckold-mad; but, sure, he's stark mad:

When I desired him to come home to dinner,

He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold:

'Tis dinner time, quoth I: My gold, quoth he:

Your meat doth burn, quoth I: My gold, quoth he:

Will you come home? quoth I: My gold, quoth he:

Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain?

The pay, quoth I, is burn'd: My gold, quoth he:

My mistress, sir, quoth I: Hang up thy mistress;

I know not thy mistress; out on thy mistress!

Lac. Quoth who?

Dro. E. Quoth my master:

I know, quoth he, no house, no wife, no mistress;

So that my errand, due unto my tongue,

I thank him. I have home upon my shoulders;

For, in conclusion, he did beat me there. (home.)

Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him

Dro. E. Go back again, and he now beaten home?

For Gal's sake send some other messenger.

Adr. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.

Dro. E. And he will bless that cross with other

Beaten you I shall have a holy head. (beating.)

Adr. Hence, prating peasant; fetch thy master home.

Dro. E. Am I so round with you, as you wit me?

That like a football you do spurn me thus?

You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me further:

If I last in this service, you must cause me in leather.

Lac. Fye, how impatience low'reth in your face!

Adr. His company must do his manners grace,

Whilst I sit home starv'd for a merry look.

Hath homely men the all-time beauty took?

From my poor cheek? then he hath wasted it;

Are my discourses dull? barren my wit?

If voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd,

Unkindness blunts it, more than marble hard.

Do their gay vestment's his affection bait?

That's not my fault, he's master of my state:

What ruins are in me, that can be found

By him not ruin'd? then is he the ground

Of my defeasures; My decayed fair

A sunny look of his would soon repair:

But, too turnly deer, he breaks the pale,

And feeds from home; poor I am but his stale.

Lac. Self-harming jealousy!—fye, beat it hence.

Adr. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs die:

I know his eye doth hunge otherwhere; (pence.)

Or else, what lets it but he would be here?

Sister, you know, he promis'd me a chain—

Would that alone, alone he would detain,

So he would keep fair quarter with his bed!

I see, the jewel best enamell'd,

Will lose his beauty; and though gold 'twixt still,

That others use, yet often touching will

Wear gold; and so no man that hath a name,

But falsehood and corruption doth it shame.

Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,

I'll weep what's left away, and weeping die.

Lac. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ant. S. The gold, I gave to Dromio, is laid up

Safe at the Centaur; and the heedful slave

Is wander'd forth, in care to seek me out.

By computation, and mine host's report,

I could not speak with Dromio, since at first

I sent him from the mart: See, here he comes.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

How now, sir? is your merry humour alter'd?

As you love strokes, so jest with me again:

You know no Centaur? you receiv'd no gold?

Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?

My home was at the Phoenix? Wait thou mad,

That thus so needily thou didst answer me!

Dro. S. What answer, sir? when spake I such a word?

Ant. S. Even now, even here, not half an hour

Dro. S. I did not see you since you sent me hence.

Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.

Ant. S. Villain, thou didst deny the gold's receipt;

And took'st me of a mistress, and a dinner;

For which, I hope, thou felt'st I was displeas'd.

Dro. S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein.

What means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.

Ant. S. Yea, dost thou jeer, and dost me in the teeth?

Think'st thou, I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.

[Beating him.]

Dro. S. Hold, sir, for God's sake: now your jest is earnest:

Upon what bargain do you give it me?

Ant. S. Because that I familiarly sometimes

Do use you for my fool and chat with you

SCENE II. — A public Place.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Syracuse, and a Merchant.

Mer. Therefore, give out, you are of Ephelnum, I set that your goods too soon be confiscate. This very day, a Syracuse merchant is apprehended for arrival here; And, not being able to buy out his life, According to the statute of the town, Dies ere the weary sun set in the west. There is your money that I had to keep.

Ant. S. Go, hear it to the Centaur, where we hunt.

And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee. Within this hour it will be dinner-time: Till that, I'll view the manners of the town, Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings, And then return, and sleep within mine inn; For with long travel I am stiff and weary. Get thee away.

Dro. S. Many a man would take you at your word And go indeed, having so good a mess. [Exit Dro. S.]

Ant. S. A trusty villain, sir; that very oft, When I am dull with care and melancholy, lightens my humour with his merry jests. What will you walk with me about the town, And then go to my inn, and dine with me?

Mer. I am invited, sir, to certain merchants, Of whom I hope to make much benefit; I leave your pardon. Sun. At five o'clock, Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mart, And afterwards convert you till bed-time; My present business calls me from you now.

Ant. S. Farwell till then; I will go lose myself, And wander up and down, to view the city.

Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own content. [Exit Merchant.]

Ant. S. He that commends me to mine own commendments me to the thing I cannot get. I sent, I to the world am like a drop of water, That in the ocean seeks another drop; Who, failing there to find his fellow forth, Unseen, unsought, confounds himself. So I, to find a mother, and a brother, In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

Here comes the almanac of my true date. — What now? How chance, thou art return'd so soon? [late]

Dro. E. Return'd so soon! rather approach'd too. The caput burns, the pig falls from the spit; The clock has strucken twelve upon the bell, My mistress made it one upon my cheek:

She is so hot, because the meat is cold; The meat is cold, because you come not home; You come not home, because you have no stomach; You have no stomach, having broke your fast; But we, that know what 'tis to fast and pray, Are penitent for your default to-day. [pray]

Ant. S. Stop in your wind, sir; tell me this, I Where have you left the money that I gave you?

Dro. E. O, sixpence, that I had of Wednesday last,

To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper; — The saddler had it, sir, I kept it not.

Ant. S. I am not in a sportive humour now; Tell me, and daily not, where is the money? We being strangers here, how dur'st thou trust so great a charge from thine own custody?

Dro. E. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner: [From my mistress' come to you in post;

If I return, I shall be post indeed;

For she will score your fault upon my pate. Methinks, your maw, like mine, should be your clock,

And strike you home without a messenger.

Ant. S. Come, Dromio, come, these jests are out of season;

Reserve them till a merrier hour than this:

Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

Dro. E. To me, sir? why you gave no gold to me.

Ant. S. Come on, sir, kneave; have done your foolishness.

And tell me, how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.

Dro. E. My charge was but to fetch you from the mart

Home to your house, the Phoenix, sir, to dinner; My mistress, and her sister, stay for you.

Ant. S. Now, as I am a Christian, answer me;

In what safe place you have bestow'd my money;

Or I shall break that merry scound of yours;

That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd:

Where is the thousand marks thou hast of me?

Dro. E. I have some marks of yours upon my pate,

Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders,

But not a thousand marks between you both: —

If I should pay your worship those again,

Perchance, you will no bear them patiently.

Ant. S. Thy mistress' marks! what mistress, slave, hast thou? [Phoenix]

Dro. E. Your worship's wife, my mistress at the

She that doth fast, till you come home to dinner,

And prays, that you will give her home to dinner.

Ant. S. What wilt thou do to me thus unto my face?

Being forbid? There, take you that, sir, knave.

Dro. E. What mean you, sir, for God's sake, hold your hands;

Nay, an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.

Ant. S. Upon my life, by some device or other,

The villain is o'er-raught of all my money.

They say, this town is full of cozenage;

As nimble jugglers, that deceive the eye,

Dark-working sorcerers, that change the mind,

Soul-killing witches, that deform the body;

Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks,

And many such like liberties of sin:

If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner.

I'll to the Centaur, to go seek this slave;

I greatly fear, my money is not safe. [Exit]

ACT II.

SCENE I. — A public Place.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Neither my husband, nor the slave return'd,

That in such haste I sent to seek his master!

Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.

Luc. Perhaps, some merchant hath invited him,

And from the mart he is somewhere gone to dinner.

Good sister, let us dine, and never fret:

A man is master of his liberty:

Time is their master; and, when they see time,

They'll go, or come: If so, be patient, sister.

Adr. Why should their liberty than ours be more?

Luc. Because their business still lies out o' door.

Adr. Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill.

Luc. O, know, he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There's none, but Antipholus, will be briddled so.

To admit no traffic to our adverse towns:
Nay, more,

If any, born at Ephesus, be seen
At any Syracusan marts and fairs,
Again, if any Syracusan born,
Come to the bay of Ephesus, he dies,
His goods confiscate to the duke's dispose;
Unless a thousand marks be levied,
To quit the penalty, and to ransom him.
Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred marks to die.
Therefore, by law thou art condemn'd to die.

Ege. Yet this my comfort; when your words
are done,

My woes end likewise with the evening sun.

Duke. Well, Syracusan, say, in brief, the cause
Why thou departedst from thy native home;
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.

Ege. A heavier task could not have been im-
Thou I to speak my griefs unspeakable: 'spos'd.
Yet, that the world may witness, that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,
I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.
In Syracuse was I born; and wed
Unto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me too, had not our hap been bad.
With her I liv'd in joy; our wealth increas'd,
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamnium, till my factor's death,
And his great care of goods at random left
Drew me from kind embracements of my spouse:

From whence my absence was not six months old,
Before herself (almost at fainting, under
The pleasing punishment that women bear)
Had made provision for her following me,
And soon, and safe, arrived where I was.
There she had not been long, but she became
A joyful mother of two goodly sons;
And, which was strange, the one so like the other,
As could not be distinguish'd but by names.
That very hour, and in the self-same inn,
A poor mean woman was delivered
Of such a burden, male twins, both alike:

Those, for their parents were exceeding poor,
I bought, and brought up to attend my sons.
My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,
Made daily motions for our home return,
Unwilling I agreed: alas! too soon.

We came aboard:
A league from Epidamnium had we sail'd,
Before the always wind-obeying deep
Gave any tragick instance of our harm;
But danger did we not retain much hope:
For whilst obscured light the heavens did grant
Did but convey unto our fearful minds
A doubtful warrant of immediate death:
Which, though myself would gladly have em-
Yet the incessant weeping of my wife, (broc'd,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
As I pitious plannings of the pretty babes,
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Forc'd me to seek delays for them and me.
And thus it was,—for other means was none.—
The sailors sought for safety by our boat,
And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us:
My wife, more careful for the latter-born,
Had fasten'd him unto a small spare mast,
Such as sea-faring men provide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilst I had been like breafid of the other.

The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Firing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd,
Fasten'd ourselves at either end the mast;
And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
Were carried towards Corinth, as we thought

At length the sun, eazing upon the earth,
Dispers'd those vapours that offended us;

And, by the benefit of his wish'd light,
The seas wax'd calm, and we discovered
Two ships from far making main to us,
Of Corinth that, of Epidamnus this:
But ere they came,—O, let me say no more!
Gather the sequel by that went before.

Duke. Nay, forward, old man, do not break off
For we may pity, though not pardon thee. [to Ege. O, had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily term'd them merciless to us!

For, ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues
We were encounter'd by a mighty ruck;
Which being violently borne upon,
Our helpful ship was splited in the midst,
So that, in this unjust divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike
What to delight in, what to sorrow for.

Her part, poor soul; seeming as burdened
With lesser weight, but not with lesser we,
Was carried with more speed before the wind;
And in our sight they were taken up
By fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length another ship had seiz'd on us;
And, knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave helpful welcome to their shipwreck'd guests;
And would have left the fishers of their prey,
Had not their bark been very slow of sail,
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.—

Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss;
That by misfortune was my life prolong'd,
I've told sad stories of my own mishap.

Duke. And, for the sake of them thou sorrowest
for,

Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath befall'n of them, and thee, till now.

Ege. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother; and importun'd me,
That his attendant, (for his case was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name.)
Might bear him company in the quest of him:
Whom whilst I labour'd of a love to see,
I hazarded the loss of whom I loved.
Five summers have I spent in furthest Greece,
Roaming ocean through the bounds of Asia,
And, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus:
Hopeless to find, yet loath to leave unsought,
Or that, or any place that harbours men.
But here must end, the story of my life;
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travels warrant me they live.

Duke. hapless Egeon, whom the fates have mark'd

To bear the extremity of dire mishap!
Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
Against my crown, my oath, my dignity,
Which princes, would they, may not disdain,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee.
But, though thou art adjudg'd to the death,
And passed sentence may not be recall'd,
But to our honour's great disparagement.
Yet will I favour thee in what I can:
Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day,
To seek thy help by beneficial help:
I'll tell the friends thou hast in Ephesus:
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum.
And live; if not, then thou art doom'd to die:—
Guelter, take him to thy custody.

Good. I will, my lord.
Ege. Hopeless, and helpless, doth Egeon wend
But to procrastinate his lifeless end.

[Exeunt.]

Quit presently the chapel: or resolve you
For more amazement: If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed: descend,
And take you by the hand; but then you'll think (Which I protest against, I am assisted
By wicked powers.

Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear: for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.

Paul. It is requir'd.
You do awake your faith: Then, all stand still;
Or th' we, that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.

Leon. Proceed;
No fox shall stir.

Paul. Music; awake her: strike.—

[Music.—
'Tis time; descend; be stone no more: approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come;
I'll fill your grave up: stir: up, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you.—You perceive, she stirs:

[Hermione comes down from the pedestal.
Start not: her actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Until you see her die again: for then
You kill her double: Nay, present your hand:
When she was young, you woo'd her; now, in
Is she become the suitor. [Age.

Leon. O, she's warm! [Embracing her.
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.

Paul. She embraces him.

Com. She hangs about his neck;
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.

Paul. Ay, and make't manifest where she has
Or how stol'n from the dead! [Live!

Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale; but it appears, she lives.
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while.—
Please you to interpose, fair madam; kneel,

And pray your mother's blessing.—Turn, good
Our Perdita is found. [Only;

[Presenting Perdita, who kneels to Hermione.
Her. You gods, look down,

And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head!—Te! me, mine own,
Where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd?
how found

Thy father's court! for thou shalt hear, that I,— Knowing by Paulina, that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being,—have preserv'd
Myself, to see the issue.

Paul. There's time enough for that;
Lest they desire, upon this push to trouble
Your joys with like relation.—Go together,
You precious winners all: your exultation
Partake to every one. I, an old turtle,
Will wing me to some wither'd bough; and there
My mate, that's never to be found again,
Lament till I am lost.

Leon. O peace, Paulina;
Thou should'st a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine, a wife; this is a match, [mine;
And made between's by vows. Thou hast found
But how, is to be question'd; for I saw her,
As I thought, dead; and have, in vain, said many
A prayer upon her grave: I'll not seek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honourable husband:—Come, Camillo,
And take her by the hand: whose worth and
Is richly noted; and here justified [honesty,
By us, a pair of kings.—Let's from this place.—
What?—Look upon my brother:—both your pardons.

That e'er I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion.—This your son-in-law,
And son unto the king (whom heavens directing),
Is throught-plight to your daughter.—Good Paulina,
Lead us from hence; where we may leisurely
Each one demand, and answer to his part Perform'd in this wide gap of time, since first
We were discever'd: Hastily lead away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE.—Ephesus.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Hall in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Aegeon, Gaoler, Officers, and other
Attendants.

Duke. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall,

And, by the doom of death, end woes and all.

Duke. Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more;

I am not partial, to infringe our laws:

The enmity and discord, which of late

Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your duke

To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,—

Who, wanting guilders to redeem their lives,

Have sealed his rigorous statutes with their bloods,—

Excludes all pity from our threatening looks.

For, since the mortal and intestine jars

'Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,

It hath in solemn synods been decreed,

Both by the Syracusans and ourselves,

then the two kings called my father, brother; and then the prince, my brother, and the princess, my sister, called my father, father; and so we wept; and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

Shew. We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clo. Ay; or else 'twere hard luck; being in so preposterous estate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince, my master.

Shew. Prythee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince, thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shew. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clo. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let bores and franklins say it, I'll swear it.

Shew. How if it be false, son?

Clo. If it be so false, a true gentleman may swear it, in the behalf of his friend:—And I'll swear to the prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know, thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk; but I'll swear it: and I would, and wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove so, sir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: If I do not wonder, how thou dar'st venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not.—Hark! the kings and the princess, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us: we'll be thy good masters. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in Paulina's House.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Florizel, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina, Lords, and Attendants.

Leontes. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort I have had of thee!

Paul. What, sovereign sir, I did not well. All my services,

You have paid home; but that you have vouchsaf'd

With your crown'd brother, and these your heirs of your kin-dom, my poor house to visit; it is a surplus of your grace, which never My life may last to answer.

Leontes. O, Paulina, We honour you with trouble; But we came To see the statue of our queen: your gallery Have we pass'd through, not without much coin in many singularities; but we saw not [Exit] That which my daughter came to look upon, The statue of her mother.

Paul. As she liv'd peerless, So her dead likeness, I do well believe, Excels whatever yet you look'd upon. Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely, apart; But here it is: prepare To see the life as lively mock'd, as ever [well.] Still sleep mock'd death: behold; and say, 'tis [Paulina withdraws a curtain, and discovers a statue.] Like thy silence, it the more shows off Your wonder: But yet speak;—first, you my Comes it not something near?

Leontes. Her natural posture!—Chide me, dear stone; that I may say, indeed, Thou art Hermione: or, rather, thou art she,

In thy not chiding; for she was as tender, As infancy, and grace.—But yet, Paulina, Hermione was not so much wrinkled; nothing So aged, as this seems.

Paul. O, not by much. So much the more our carver's excellence; Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes As she liv'd now.

Leontes. As now she might have done, So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. O, thus she stood, Even with such life of majesty [warm life, As now it coldly stands], when first I woo'd her. I am ashamed: Does not the stone rebuke me, For being more stone than it?—O, royal piece, There's magic in thy majesty: which has My evils conjur'd to remembrance; and From thy admiring daughter took the spirits, Standing like stone with thee!

Per. And give me leave; And do not say, 'tis superstition, that I kneel, and then implore her blessing.—Lady, Dear queen, that ended when I but began, Give me that hand of yours, to kiss.

Paul. O, patience: The statue is but newly fix'd, the colour's Not dry.

Cem. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on: Which sixteen winters cannot blow away, So many summers, dry: scarce any joy Did ever so long live; no sorrow, But kill'd itself much sooner.

Paul. Dear my brother, Let him, that was the cause of this, have power To take off as much grief from you, as he Will piece up in himself.

Paul. Indeed, my lord, If I had thought, the sight of my poor image Would thus have wrought you, [for the stone as I'd not have show'd it.] [noise.]

Leontes. Do not draw the curtain.

Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't; lest you May think anon, it moves.

Leontes. Let her be. I would I were dead, but that, a god hinks, already—

What was he, that did make it?—See, my lord, Would you not deem, it breath'd? and that those

Did verily bear blood! [voice]

Paul. Masterly done! The very life seems warm upon her lip.

Leontes. The fixture of her eye has motion in't, As we are mock'd with art.

Paul. I'll draw the curtain, Her lord's almost so far transported, that He'll think anon, it lives.

Leontes. O sweet Paulina, Make me to think so twenty years together; No settled senses of the world can match The pleasure of that madness. Let's alone

Paul. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd I could afflict you further.

Leontes. Do, Paulina: For this affliction has a taste as sweet As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks, There is an air comes from her: What fine chisel Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me, For I will kiss her.

Paul. Good, my lord, forbear; The roddiness upon her lip is wet; You'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own With oily painting: Shall I draw the curtain?

Leontes. No, not these twenty years.

Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker on.

Paul. Either I will.

their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they loved, as they had heard of a world renowned, or one destroyed: A notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if the importance were joy, or sorrow; but in the extremity of the one, it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a gentleman, that, happily, knows more: The news, Rozzer?

2 Gent. Nothing but bonfires: The oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Here comes the lady Paulina's steward; he can deliver you more.—How goes it now, sir? This news, which is called true, is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion: Has the king found his heir?

3 Gent. Most true; if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance, that, which you hear, you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of queen Hermione:—her jewel about the neck of it:—the letters of Antigonus, found with it, which they know to be his character:—the majesty of the creature, in resemblance of the mother:—the affection of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding,—and many other evidences, proclaim her, with all certainty, to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

2 Gent. No.

3 Gent. Then have you lost a sight, which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another: so, and in such manner, that it seemed, sorrow wept to take leave of them; for their joy waded in tears. There was cutting up of eyes, holding up of hands; with countenances of such distraction, that they were to be known by garment, not by favour. Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter; as if that joy were now become a law, cries, O, thy mother, thy mother! then asks Hermione forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries his daughter, with clipping her; now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by, like a weather-bitten condur of many kings' reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which bames report to follow it, and undoes description to do it.

2 Gent. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

3 Gent. Like an old tale still; which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep, and not an ear open: He was torn to pieces with a bear: this avouches the shepherd's son; who has not only his innocence (which seems much) to justify him, but a handkerchief and rings of his that Paulina knew.

1 Gent. What became of his bark, and his followers?

3 Gent. Wrecked, the same instant of their master's death; and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments, which aided to express the child, were even then lost, when it was found. But, O, the noble combat, that 'twixt joy and sorrow, was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband; another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled: She lifted the princess from the earth; and so looks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing.

1 Gent. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes; for by such was it acted.

3 Gent. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes (count the witer, though not the fish), was, when at the relation of the queen's death, with the manner how she came to it (bravely confessed, and lamented by the king), how attentiveness wounded his daughter: till, from one sign of colour to another, she did, with an alas! I would fain say, blood tears; for, I am sure, my heart wept blood. Who was most marble there, changed colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen it, the woe had been universal.

1 Gent. Are they returned to the court?

3 Gent. No: the princess hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina,—a piece many years in doing, and now newly performed by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano: who, had he himself eternity, and could put breath into his work, would beguile nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione, that, they say, one would speak to her, and stand in hope of answer; thither, with all greediness of affection, are they gone; and there they intend to sup.

2 Gent. I thought, she had some great matter there in hand; for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoicing?

1 Gent. Who would be thence, that has the benefit of access? every wink of an eye, some new grace will be born: our absence makes us unthrift y to our knowledge. Let's along.

Enter Gentlemen.

Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the Prince; told him, I heard them talk of a fardel, and I know not what; but he, at that time, overfond of the shepherd's daughter (so he then took her to be), who began to be much sea-sick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 'tis all one to me; for had I been the finder out of this secret, it would not have rebuked among my other discredit.

Enter Shepherd and Clown.

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.

Shep. Come, boy: I am past more children, but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born.

Clw. You are well met, sir: You denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born: See you these clothes? I say, you are then not, and think me still no gentleman born: you were best say, these robes are not gentlemen born. Give me the lie; do, and try whether I am not now a gentleman born.

Aut. I know you are now, sir, a gentleman born.

Clw. Ay, and have been so any time these four hours.

Shep. And so have I, boy.

Clw. So you have:—but I was a gentleman born before my father: for the king's son took me by the hand, and called me, brother; and

For she did print your royal father off.
Conceiving you: Were I but twenty-one,
Your father's image is so lit in you,
His very air, that I should call you brother.
As I did him; and speak of something, wilfully
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome!
And your fair princess, goddess!—O, alas!
I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth
Might thus have stood, begetting wonder, as
You, gracious couple, do! and then I lost
(All mine own folly) the society.
Amity too, of your brave father; whom,
'Though bearing misery, I desire my life
Once more to look upon.

Flo. By his command
Have I here touched Sicilia: and from him
Give you all greetings, that a king, at friend,
Can send his brother; and, but infirmity
(Which waits upon worn times,) has something
His wish'd ability, he had himself [seiz'd]
The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his Mensur'd to look upon you; whom he loves
(He lude me say so,) more than all the sceptres.
And those that bear them, living.

Leon. O, my brother,
(Good gentleman!) the wrongs I have done thee
Afresh within me; and these thy offices, [sir]
So rarely kind, are as interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness!—Welcome hither,
As is the spring to the earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this paragon to the fearful usage
(At least, ungentle,) of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man, not worth her pains; much less
The adventure of her person?

Flo. Good, my lord,
She came from Libya.

Leon. Where the warlike Smalus,
That noble honour'd lord, is fear'd, and lov'd?
Flo. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose quarter
His tears proclaim'd his parting with her: thence (A prosperous south-wind friendly,) we have cross'd.

To execute the charge my father gave me,
For visiting your highness: My best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety
Here, where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air, whilst you
Do cleanse here! You have a holy father,
A graceful gentleman; against whose person,
So sacred as it is, I have done sin:
For which the heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd,
(As he from heaven merits it,) with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Night I a son and daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you!

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir,
That which I shall report, will bear no credit.
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself by me:
Desires you to attend his son; who has (His duty and duty both cast off),
Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with
A shepherd's daughter.

Leon. Where's Bohemia? speak.
Lord. Here in the city; I now came from him:
I speak amazedly; and it becomes
My marvel, and my message. To your court

Whiles he was hast'ning. (In the chase, it seems.
Of this fair couple,) meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and
Her brother, leaving both their country quitted
With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me;
Whom honour, and whose honesty, till now,
Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay'to to his charge;
He's with the king your father.

Leon. Who? Camillo?
Lord. Camillo, sir; I spake with him: who now
Has these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth;
Forewear themselves as often as they speak;
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.

Per. O, my poor father!—
The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married!
Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first:—
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?

Flo. She is,

Leon. When once she is my wife.
Leon. That once, I see, by your good father's Will come on very slowly. I am sorry, [speak]
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking.
Where you were fitted in duty: and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear, look up:
Though fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us, with my father; power no jot
Hath she to change our love.—Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you w'd no more to time
Than I do now: with thought of such affections
Step forth mine advocate; at your request
My father will grant precious things, as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious
Which he counts but a trifle. [mistress]
Paul. Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a month
'Fore your queen died, she was more worth such
Than what you look on now. [gazes]

Leon. I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made.—But your petition
[To Florisel].

Is yet unanswered: I will to your father;
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires,
I am a friend to them, and you; upon which errand
I now go toward him; therefore follow me.
And mark what way I make: Come, good my lord.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Autolyous and a Gentleman.

Aut. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this revelion?

Gent. I was by at the opening of the fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the matter how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazement, we were all commanded out of the chamber;
only this, notwithstanding I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of it.
Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business:—
But the changes I perceived in the king, and Camillo, were very notes of admiration; they seemed almost, with staring on one another, to bear the cases of their eyes: there was speech in

Destroy'd the sweet'st companion, that e'er man
Bred his hopes out of.

Paul. True, too true, my lord,
If, one by one, you wedded all the world,
Or, from the all that are, took something good,
To make a perfect woman; she, you kill'd.
Would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. Kill'd!
She! I kill'd! I did so: but thou strik'st me
Sorely, to say I did; it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue, as in my thought: Now, good Say so but seldom.

Cleo. No! at all, good lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things that would

Have done the time more benefit, and grac'd
Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those,
Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so,
You pity not the state, nor the remembrance
Of his most sovereign death; consider little,
What dangers, by his highness' fall of issue,
May drop upon his kingdom, and devour
Uncertain lookers on. What were more holy,
Than to rejoice, the former queen as well!
What holier, than,—for loyalty's repair,
For present comfort and for future good,—
To bless the bed of majesty again
With a sweet fellow to it!

Paul. There is none worthy Respecting her that's gone. Besides, the gods
Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes:
For has not the divine Apollo said,
Let's see the temour of his oracle,
That king Leontes shall not have an heir,
Till his lost child be found? I which, that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our human reason,
As my Antigonius to break his grave.
And come again to me; who, on my life,
Dul perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel,
My lord should to the heavens be contrary,
Oppose against their wills.—Care not for issue;

[To Leontes.]
The crowns will shud an heir: Great Alexander
Left his to the world's end; so his successor
Was like to be the best.

Leon. Good Paulina,—
Who hast the memory of Hermione,
I know, in honour,—O, that ever I
Had squar'd me to thy counsel!—then, even now,
I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes;
Have taken treasure from her lips,—

Paul. And left them
More rich for what they yielded

Leon. 'Thou speak'st truth.
No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one
worse.

And better us'd, would make her sainted spirit
Again possess her corpse; and, on this stage,
(Where we offenders now appear,) soul-vexed,
Begin, And why to me?

Paul. Had she such power,
She had just cause.

Leon. She had; and would incense me
To murder her I married.

Paul. I should so:
Where the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark
Her eyes; and tell me, for what dull part in't
You chose her: then I'd shriek, that even your ears
Should rift to hear me; and the words that follow'd
Should be, Remember mine!

Leon. Stars, very stars,
And all eyes else dead coals!—fear thou no wife,
I'll have no wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free knee?
Leon. Never, Paulina: so he bless'd my spirit!
Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his Cleo. You tempt him over-much. [Exit.
Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione as his her picture,
Affrunt his eye.

Cleo. Good madam,—
Paul. I have done.
Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, sir,
No remedy, but you will; give me the office
To choose you a queen; she shall not be so young
As was your former; but she shall be such,
As walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should take
To see her in your arms. [Joy

Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidd'st us.
Paul. That
Shall be, when your first queen's again in breath;
Never till then.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. One that gives out himself prince Florisel, Son of Polixenes, with his princess, (she
The fairest I have yet beheld,) desires access
To your high presence.

Leon. What with him? he comes not
Like to his father's greatness: his approach,
So out of circumstance, and sudden, tells us,
'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need, and accident. What train?

Gent. But few,
And those but mean.

Leon. His princess, say you, with him?
Gent. Ay, the most peerless piece of earth, I
The e'er the sun shone bright on. [Think,
Paul. O Hermione,

As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better, gone; so must thy grave
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you yourself
Have said, and writ so, (but your writing now
Is colder than that theme,) She had not born,
Nor was not to be equal'd;—thus your verse
Flour'd with her beauty once; 'tis surely ebb'd,
To say you have seen a better.

Gent. Pardon, madam:
The one I have almost forgot; (your pardon.)
The other, when she has obtain'd your eye,
Will have your tongue too. This is such a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quicken the zeal
Of all professors else; make proselytes
Of who she but had follow.

Paul. How? not women?
Gent. Women will love her, that she is a woman,
More worth than any man; men, that she is
The rarest of all women.

Leon. Go, Cleomenes;
Yourself, assisted with your honour'd friends,
Bring them to our embracement.—Still 'tis strange,
(Excuse Cleomenes, Lords, and Gentlemen.)
He thus should steal upon us.

Paul. Had our prince,
(Jewel of children,) seen this hour, he had pair'd
Well with this lord; there was not full a month
Between their births.

Leon. 'Pr'ythee, no more; thou know'st
He died to me again, when talk'd off: sure,
When I shall see this gentleman, the speeches
Will bring me to consider that, which may Unfurnish me of reason.—They are come.—

Re-enter Cleomenes, with Florisel, Perdita, and Attendants.

Your mother was most true to wedlock, prince;

Aut. A lie; you are rough and hairy: Let me have no more; it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie; but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel; therefore they do not give us the lie.

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a courtier. See'st thou not the air of the court in these unfolding? hath not my gait in it, the measure of the court? I receive not thy new court-adour from me; I respect not I on thy business court-outlets! Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toze from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier cap-a-pee; and one that will either push on or pluck back thy business there: whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king.

Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, an't like you.

Clo. Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant; say you have none.

Shep. None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock, nor hen.

Aut. How blest'd are we, that are not simple men!

Yet nature might have made me as these are, Therefore I'll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical: a great man, I'll warrant; I know, by the picking out's teeth.

Aut. The fardel there! what's it the fardel? Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel, and box, which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him.

Aut. Agr, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace: he is gone abroad a new ship to purge melancholy, and air himself: For, if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know, the king is full of grief.

Shep. So 'tis said, sir; about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him fly; the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so, sir?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hammer: which though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-eater, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say, he shall be stoned; but that death is too soft for him, say I: Draw out throne into a sheep-cote! all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.

Clo. Has the old man e'er a son, sir, do you hear, an't like you, sir?

Aut. He has a son, who shall he flayed alive; then, mounted over with honey, set on the head of a wren's nest: then stand, till he be three-quarters and a dram dead: then recovered again with aqua-vita, or some other hot infusion; then, raw as he is, and in the hottest day pronunciation proclaims, shall he be set against a brick-wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him; where he is to behold him with flies blown to death. But what talk we of these traitorly rasbals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their offences being so capital! Tell me, (for you seem to be honest plain men,) what you have to the king: being something gently considered, I'll bring you where he is abroad, tender your person to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and, if it be in man, besides the king, to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority; close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold: show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado: Remember stoned and flayed alive.

Shep. An't please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I'll make it as much more; and leave this young man in pawn, till I bring it you.

Aut. I have done what I promised.

Shep. Ay, sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety.—Are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, sir: but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be layed out of it.

Aut. O, that's the case of the shepherd's son:—Hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort: we must to the king, and show our strange sights: he must know, 'tis none of your daughter, nor my sister; we are gowse else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does, when the business is performed; and remain, as he says, your pawn, till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before toward the sea-side; go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge, and follow you.

Clo. We are blessed in this man, as I may say, even blest'd.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids us: he was provident to do us good. (Exeunt Shepherd and Clown.)

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see, fortune would not suffer me; she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion; gold, and a means to do the prince my master good; which, who knows how that may turn back to my advancement! I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him: if he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title, and what shame else belongs to't: To him will I present them, there may be matter in it. (Exit.)

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of Leontes.

Enter Leontes, Cleomenes, Dion, Paulina, and others.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd

A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make, Which you have not redeem'd; indeed, paid down More penitence, than those trespassers: At the last, Do, as the heavens have done; forget your evil: With them, forgive yourself.

Leontes. Whilst I remember Her, and her virtues, I cannot forget My blemishes in them; and so will think Of the wrong I did myself: which was so much, That heinous it hath made my kingdom; and Enter Autolycus.

Aut. Ha, ha! What a fool honesty is! and trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery; not a counterfeit stone, not a riband, glove, pomander, brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tye, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pick from fasting; they throng who should buy first; as if my trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer; by which means, I saw whose purse was best in picture; and, what I saw, to my good use, I remembered. My clown, (who wants but something to be a reasonable man,) grew so in love with the wenches' song, that he would not stir his petitions, till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me, that all their other senses stuck in ears; you might have pinched a placket, it was senseless; 'twas nothing, to get a couple of a purse; I would have filed keys off, that hung in chains; no hearing, no feeling, but my sir's song, and admiring the nothing of it. So that, in this time of lethargy, I picked and cut most of their festival purses; and had not the old man come in with a whoop against his daughter and the king's son, and scured my choughs from the chaff, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

(Cam., Flo and Per. come forward)

Cam. Nay, but my letters by this means being there

So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'll procure from king

Leontes

Cam. Shall satisfy your father.

Per. Happy be you!

All, that you speak, shows fair.

Cam. Who have we here?—
(Singing Autolycus.)

We'll make an instrument of this: omit

Nothing, may give us aid.

Aut. If they have overheard me now,—why hanging.

Cam. How now, good fellow? why shakest thou so?

Aut. Fear not, man; here's no harm intended thee.

Cam. Why, be so still; here's nobody will steal that from thee: Yet, for the outside of thy poverty, we must make an exchange: therefore, discuss thee instantly, (thou must think, there's necessity in't,) and change garments with this gentleman: 'Tis though the pennyworth, on his side, be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir:—I know ye well enough.

Cam. Nay, prythee, despatch: the gentleman is half bayed already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, sir?—I smell the trick of it.

Flo. Despatch, I prythee

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest; but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.—

(Flo and Autol. exchange garments.)

Fortunate mistress,—let my prophecy come home to you!—you must retire yourself into some covert: take your sweetheart's lute, and pluck it o'er your tawny; muffle your face; demure you; and as you can, dislike the truth of your own seeming; that you may, (for I do fear eyes over you,) to shipboard get undescured.

Per. I see, the play so lies, That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy.—

Have you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my father, He would not call me son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have No hat:—Come lady, come.—Farewell my friend.

Aut. Adieu, sir.

Flo. O Perdita, what have we twain forgot? Pray you, a word.

Cam. What I do next, shall be, to tell the king
(Aside.)

Of this escape, and whether they are bound; Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail, To force him after; in whose company I shall review Sicilia; for whose sight I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!—
Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better.

(Exeunt Florizel, Perdita, and Camillo.)

Aut. I understand the business, I hear it: To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse; a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see, this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot? what a boot is here, with this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do any thing ex tempore. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father, with his clug at his heels: If I thought it were not a piece of honesty to acquaint the king whither, I would do't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it; and therein am I constant to my profession.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Aside, aside; here is more matter for a hot brain: Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Cl. See, see; what a man you are now! there is no other way, but to tell the king she's a changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. But hear me.

Cl. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to then.

Cl. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king; and, so, your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found with her; those secret things, all but what she has with her: This being done, let the law go whistle; I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word, yes, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law.

Cl. Indeed, brother-in-law was the furthest of you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know not how much an ounce.

Aut. Very wisely, puppies!

Shep. Well; let us to the king; there is that in this fardel will make him scratch his beard.

Cl. I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Cl. Prythee heartily be at palace.

Aut. Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance:—Let me pocket up my pedlar's excrement.—(Takes of his false beard.)

How now, rusticks! whether are you bound?

Shep. To the palace, as it like your worship.

Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known, discover.

Cl. We are but plain fellows, sir.

Cam. Egen he, my lord.
Per. How often have I told you, 'twould be thus!
How often said, my dignity would last
But till 'twere known?

Flo. It cannot fail, but by
The violation of my faith; and then
Let nature crush the sides o' the earth together,
And mar the seed within! Lift up thy looks:
From my succession wipe me, father! I Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advised.
Flo. I am; and by my fancy: if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason:
If not, my sense, better pleas'd with madness,
Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate, sir.
Flo. So call it; but it does fulfil my vow:
I needs must think it honest. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may
Be thereto glean'd; for all the sun sees or
The close earth wields, or the profound seas hide
In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair below'd: Therefore, I pray you,
As you have e'er been my father's honour'd friend,
When he shall miss me, (as, in faith, I mean not
To see him any more), cast your good counsels
Upon his pass-on; Let myself and fortune,
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And so deliver.—I am put to sea
With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And, most opportune to our need, I have
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold Shall no less benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O, my lord,
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark, Perdita.—[Takes her aside.]
I'll hear you by and by. [To Camillo.]

Cam. He's irremovable, Resolv'd for flight: Now were I happy, if
His going I could frame to serve my turn:
Save him from danger, do him love and honour;
Purchase the gilt again of dear Sicilia.
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious business, that
I leave out ceremony. [Going.]

Cam. Sir, I think,
You have heard of my poor services, i'th' love
That I have borne your father!

Flo. Very nobly
Have you deserv'd: it is my father's music.
To speak your deed; not little of his care
To have them recompens'd as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the king;
And, through him, what is nearest to him, which is
Your gracious self; embrace both my direction,
(If your more penderous and settled project
May suffer alteration,) on mine honour
I'll point you where you shall have such receiving
As shall become your highness; where you may Enjoy your mistress; (from the whom, I see,
There's no disjunction to be made, but by,
As heaven forbid! your ruin:) marry her;
And (with my best endeavours, in your silence.)
Your discontenting father strive to qualify,
And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo,
May this, almost a miracle, be done?
That I may call thee something more than man,
And, after that, trust to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on
A place, whereto you'll go?

Flo. Not any yet:
But as the unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do: so we profess,
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies
Of every wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to me:
This follows,—if you will not chance your purpose,
But undergo this flight:—Make for Sicilia;
And there present yourself, and your fair princess,
(For so, I see, she must be,) 'fore Leon ce;
She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your bed. Methinks I see
Leontes, opening his free arms, and weeping
His welcome forth: asks thee, the son forgiveness,
As 'twere i'th' father's person: kisses the hands
Of your fresh princess: o'er and o'er divides him
'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness; the one
He chides to hell, and bids the other grow,
Faster than thought, or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him?

Cam. Sent by the king, your father,
To greet him, and to give him comfort. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you, as from your father, shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you
down:

The which shall point you forth at every sitting.
What you must say: that he shall not perceive,
But that you have your father's blessing there,
And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you:
There is some sap in this.

Cam. A course more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves
To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores; most certain,

To miseries enough: no hope to help you:
But, as you shake off one, to take another:
Nothing so certain as your auditors: who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you'll be loath to be: Besides, you know,
Prosperity's the very bond of love:
Whose fresh complexion and whose heart together
Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true:
I think, affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.

Cam. Yes, say you so?
There shall not, at your father's house, these seven
Be born another such. My good Camillo, [Goes,

Flo. My good Camillo,
She is as forward of her breeding, as i'th' rear of birth.

Cam. I cannot say, 'tis pity
She lacks instructions; for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, sir, for this:
I'll blush you thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita,—
But, O, the thorns we stand upon!—Camillo,— Preserver of my father, now of me:
The medicine of our house:—how shall we do
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's son;
Nor shall appear in Sicily—

Cam. My lord,
Fear none of this: I think, you know, my fortunes
Do all lie there: it shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed, as if
The scene you play, were mine. For instance, sir,
That you may know you shall not want.—[One word.] [They talk aside,

But now deliver'd.—O hear me breathe my life
Before this ancient sin, who, it should seem,
Hath sometime liv'd: I take thy hand; this hand,
As soft as dove's down, and as white as it;
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow,
That's hoisted by the northern blasts twice o'er.

Pol. What follows this?
How prettily the young avain seems to wash
The hand, was fair before!—I have put you out:—
But, to your protestation; let me hear
What you profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to't.

Pol. And 'tis my neighbour too!

Flo. And he and more
Than he, and men: the earth, the heavens, and a l:
That,—were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest you'h
That ever made eye swerve; had force, and knowledge,

More than was ever man's,—I would not prize
them.

Without her love: for her, employ them all;
Commend them, and condemn them, to her service,
Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd.

Com. This shows a sound affection.

Step. But, my daughter,
Say you the like to him!

I cannot speak
So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The parity of his.

Step. Take hands, a bargain:—
And, friends unknown, you shall hear witness to't:
I give my daughter to him, and will make
Her portion equal his.

Flo. O, that must be
The virtue of your daughter: one being dead,
I shall have no more than you can dream of yet;
Enough then for your wonder: But, come on,
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Step. Come, your hand:—
And, daughter, yours.

Pol. Swain, awhile, beseech you;
Have you a father?

Flo. I have: But what of him?

Pol. Knows he of this?

Flo. He neither does, nor shall.

Pol. Methinks, a father
In, at the nuptial of his son, a guest
That best becomes the table. Pray you, once more;
Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? is he not a stupid [hear]
With age, and altering rheums? Can he speak?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bedrid? and again does no' hing,
But what he did being childish?

Flo. No, good sir;
He has his health, and ampler strength, indeed,
Than most have of his age.

Pol. By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unjust: He, son, my son,
Should choose himself a wife; but as good reason,
The father, (all whose joy is no' hing else
But fair posterity,) should hold some counsel
In such a business.

Flo. I yield all this;
But, for some other reasons, my grave sir,
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He shall not.
Fro. Prythee, let him.
Flo. No, he must not.

Step. Let him, my son; he shall not need to
At knowing of thy choice. [Grieve]

Flo. Come, come, he must not:—
Mark our contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir,
Whom son I dare not call: thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd: Thou a scepter's heir,
That thus affect'st a sheep hook!—Thou old traitor,
I am sorry, that, by hanging thee, I can but Shorten thy life one week.—And thou, fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft; who, of force, must know
The nuptial fool thou cop'st with:—

Step. O, my heart!
Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briars, and made

More honestly than thy state.—For thee, fond boy,—
If I may ever know, thou dost but rich,
That thou no more shalt see this knack, (as never
I meant thou shalt,) we'll bar thee from succession:
Not hold thee of our blood, no not our kin.
Far than Deucalion off:—Mark thou my words;
Follow us to the court.—Thou churl, for this time,
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it.—And you, enchantment.—

Worthy enough a herdsman: yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee,—if ever henceforth, then
These rural laiches to his entrance open.
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee,
As thou art tender to't. [Exit.]

Per. Even here undone!
I was not much afraid: for once, or twice,
I was about to speak: and tell him plainly.
The self same sun, that shines upon his court,
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but
Looks on alike.—Will'st please you, sir, be gone!

I told you, what would come of this: 'Beseech you,
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine,—
Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch further,
But milk my eyes, and weep.

Com. Why, how now, father?
Speak, ere thou diest.

Step. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know.—O, sir,
[To Florisel]

You have undone a man of fortune threefold, that thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed by father died,
To lie close by his honest bones: but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no priest shovels in dust.—O cursewore ch!
[To Perdita]

That knew'st this was the prince, and would'st adventure

To mingle faith with him—Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I desire. [Exit.]

Flo. Why look you so upon me
I am but sorry, not afraid: deliver'd,
But nothing alter'd. What I was, I am;
More so, ending on, for plucking back; not follow-
My leach unwillingly.

Com. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper: at this time
He will allow no speech,—which, I do guess,
You do not purpose to him;—and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:
Till, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it.
I think, Camillo

*Eng. lads, or / see your lasses cry :
Come, lay, &c.*

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me; but being enthralld as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain ribbands and gloves.

Mop. I was promised them against the feast; but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promised you more than that, or there be horns.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promised you: nay he, he has paid you more; which will shame you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among maids? will they wear their p'ackets where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time, when you are going to bed, or kiln-hole, to whistle off these secrets; but you must be tit-tattle before all our guests? 'Tis well they are whispering: Clamour your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done. Come, you promised me a tawdry lace, and a pair of sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee, how I was cozened by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And, indeed, sir, there are cozeners abroad! therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Aut. I hope so, sir; for I have about me many parcels of change.

Clo. What lust here? ballads!

Mop. Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad in print, a-life; for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune. How a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burden; and how she longed to eat adders' heads, and tucks carboudoed.

Clo. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true; and but a month old.

Dor. Bless me from marrying a usurer!

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to't, one mistress Teleporter; and five or six honest wives that were present: Why should I carry lies abroad?

Clo. Pray you now, buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by: And let's first see more ballads: we'll buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another ballad. Of a fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the four-ore of April, for y thousand fathom above wa'er, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought, she was a woman and was turned into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that loved her: The ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, thank you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it; and witnesses, more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too: Another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad; but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why, this is a passing merry one; and goes to the tune of Two maids wooing a man: there's scarce a maid westward, but she sings it; 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it; if thou'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear: 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune out a month ago.

Aut. I can hear my part; you must know, 'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

SONG.

A. Get you hence, for I must go:
Were it fits not you to know.
D. Whether? M. O, whether? D. Whether?

M. If become thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell:
D. Me too, let me go thither.

M. Or thou wilt to the orange, or will:
D. If to either, thou dost ill.

A. Neither. D. What, neither? A. Neither.

D. Thou hast sworn my love to be:

M. Thou hast sworn it more to me:

Then, whether go'st thou, whether?

Clo. We'll have this song out anon by ourselves. My father and the gentlemen are in sad talk, and we'll not trouble them: Come, bring away thy pack after me. Wenches, I'll buy for you both:—Fadler, let's have the first choice.—Follow me, girls.

Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em. [Aside.]

*Will you buy any tape,
Or lace for your caps,
My dainty duck, my dear-a?—
Any silk, any thread,
Any toys for your head,
Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
Come to the pedlar;
Mow's a woe'er,
That doth utter all men's wear a.*

[Enter Clown, Autolycus, Dorcus, and Mopsa.]

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Master, there is three shepherds, three neat-herds, three swine-herds, that have made themselves all men of hair: they call themselves milk-mens; and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufy of gambols, because they are not in't; but they themselves are o'the mind, (if it be not too rough for some, that know little but bowling,) it will please plentifully.

Serv. Away! we'll none on't; here has been too much humely foolery already:—I know, sir, we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh us: Pray, let's see these four threes of herdsmen.

Serv. One three of them, by their own report, sir, hath danced before the king; and was the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foot and a half by the squire.

Serv. Leave your prating: since these good men are pleased, let them come in: but quickly now.

Serv. Why, they stay at door, sir. [Exit.]

Re-enter Servant, with Twelve Rustics, habited like Satyrs. They dance, and then exeunt.

Pol. O, father, you'll know more of that hereafter.—

Is it not too far gone?—'Tis time to part them:—He's simple, and tells much. [Aside.]—How now, fair shepherd!

Your heart is full of something, that does take Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was And handed love, as you do, I was wont (mum, To load my she with knucks: I would have rank'd

The pedlar's silken treasury, and have pour'd it To her acceptance; you have let him go, And nothing marted with him: If your lass Interpretation should abuse; and call this, Your lack of love, or bounty; you were straited For a reply, at least, if you make a care Of happy holding her.

Fla. Old sir, I know She prizes not such trifles as these are: The girl's, she looks from me, are peck'd and lock'd Up in my heart; which I have given already,

Per. The dabble in earth to set one slip of them:
No more than, were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say, 'twere well; and only therefore

Desire to breed by me.—Here's flowers for you;
Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;
The marigold, that goes to bed with the sun,
And with him rises weeping; these are flowers
Of middle summer, and I think, they are given
To men of middle age: You are very welcome.

Com. I should leave grazing, where I of your
And only live by gazing. [Clock,

Per. Out, alas!
You'd be so lean, that blasts of January
Would blow you through and through.—Now, my fairest friend,

I would, I had some flowers o'the spring, that might Become your time of day; and yours, and yours;
That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing.—O Proserpina,
For the flowers now, that, frightened, thou let'st fall
From Dis's wagon! daffodils,
That come before the swallow darses, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets, dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strength, a malady
Most incident to maids; hold oxlips, and
The crown imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one! O, these I lack,
To make you garlands of; and, my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er.

Per. What? I like a corse?
Per. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on;
Not like a corse; or if,—not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine arms. Come, take your Methinks, I play as I have seen them do [flowers;
In Whiteun's pastorals: sure, this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Per. What you do,
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'd have you do it ever: when you sing;
I'd have you buy and sell so; as give alms;
Pray so; and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too: When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o'the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that: move still, still so, and own
No other function: Each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.

Per. O Doricles,
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood, which fairly peeps through it
Do plainly give you out an unskilful shepherd;
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You wou'd me the false way.

Per. I think, you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't.—But, come; our dance, I pray;
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Per. I'll swear for 'em
Per. This is the prettiest low-burnt wax, that ever Ran on the greenward; nothing she does or seems,
But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Com. He tells her something,
That makes her blood look out: Good sooth, she is
The queen of curds and cream.

Per. Come on, strike up
Per. Mopsa must be your mistress: marry, gar-
To mend her kissing with. [Clock,

Mop. Now, in good time!
Per. Not a word, a word; we stand upon our manners.—

Come, strike up. [Music.

[Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

Pol. Pray, good shepherd, wait [daughter]
Fair swain is this, which dances with your

Serv. They call him Doricles; and he boasts
To have a worthy feeding; but I have it [himself]
Upon his own report, and I believe it;

He looks like sooth: He says he loves my daughter,
I think so too: for never gaz'd the moon

Upon the water, as he'll stand, and read,
As 'twere, my daughter's eyes: and, to be plain,

I think, there is not half a kiss to choose,
Who loves another best.

Pol. She dances feintly.
Serv. So she does any thing; though I report it.

That should be silent: if young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that

Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master, if you did but hear the pedlar at the door, you would never dance again after a labor and pipe; no, the haggie could not move you: he sings several tunes, faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads, and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

Per. He could never come better: he shall come in: I love a ballad but even too well; if it be distasteful matter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs, for men, or women, of all sizes; no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves: he has the prettiest love songs for maids;
so without bawdry, which is strange: with such delicate hurdlens of ditties and sad songs: jump her and thump her; and where some stretch-mouth'd rascal would, as it were, mean mischief, and break a foul gap into the matter, he makes the maid to answer, Whoop, do me no harm, good men; puts him off, slights him, with Whoop, do me no harm, good men.

Per. This is a brave fellow.
Per. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow. Has he any unbraided wares?

Serv. He hath ribands of all the colours in the rainbow; points, more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross; inkles, caddises, cambricks, lawns; why, he sings them over, 'as they were gods or goddesses; you would think, a snook were a she-sheep: he so chants to the sleeve-hand, and the work about the square out.

Per. Pr'ythee, bring him in; and let him approach singing.

Per. Forewarn him, that he use no scurrilous words in his tunes

Per. You have of these pedlars, that have more in 'em than you'd think, saier.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

Autolycus. As white as driven snow;
Cyprus, black as c'er was crow;
Gloves, as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces, and for noses;
Buckle for calves, neck lace for anker,
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Golden quoifs, and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins, and poking-sticks of steel,
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come, lay of me, come; come buy, come buy min; if you had but looked big, and spit at him, he'd have run.

Aud. I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter; I am false of heart that way; and that he knew, I warrant him.

Clow. How do you now?

Aud. Sweet sir, much better than I was; I can stand, and walk; I even will take my leave of you, and puce softly towards my kinsman's.

Clow. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aud. No, good-faced sir; no, sweet sir.

Clow. Then fare thee well; I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing.

Aud. Pray you, sweet sir! — [Exit Clown.] Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice. I'll be with you at your sheep shearing too: If I make not this cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unrolled, and my name put in the book of virtue!

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,

And merrily hent the stile-a:

A merry heart o'er all the day,

Yours and tires in a mile-a. [Exit.]

SCENE III. — The same. A Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter Florizel and Perdita.

Flo. These your unusual weeds to each part of life of you

Do give a life to no shepherdess; but Flora, Peering in April's front. This your sheep-shearing is as a meeting of the petty gods, And you the queen out.

Per. Sir, my gracious lord, To chide at your extremes, it not becomes me; O, pardon that I name them: your high self, The gracious mark o' the land, you have obscur'd With a swain's wearing; and me, poor lowly maid, Most goddess-like prank'd up: But that our feasts In every mess have folly, and the feeders Digest it with a custom, I should blush To see you so attired; sworn, I think, To show myself a glass.

Flo. I bless the time, When my good falcon made her flight across a Thy father's ground.

Per. Now Jove afford you cause! To me, the difference forces dread, your greatness, Hath not been used to fear. Even now I tremble To think, your father, by some accident, Should pass this way, as you did: O, the fates! How would he look, to see his work, so noble, Vilely bound up? What would he say? Or how Should I, in these my borrow'd haunts, behold The sternness of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves, Humbling their deities to love have taken The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter became a bull, and belov'd; the green Neptune a ram, and belov'd; and the fire-rob'd god, Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain, As I seem now: Their transformations Were never for a piece of beauty rarer: Nor is a way so chaste: since my desires Run not before mine honour; nor my lusts Burn hotter than my faith.

Per. O but, dear sir, Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power o' the king; Our of these two must be necessities, [purpose, Which then will speak; that you must change this Or I my life.

Flo. Then dearest Perdita, With these forc'd thoughts, I pry thee darken not

The mirth o' the feast: Or I'll be thine, my fair, Or not my father's; for I cannot be Mine own, nor any thing to any, if I be not thine: to this I am most constant, Though destiny say, no. Be merry, gentle, Strangle such thoughts as these, with any thing That you behold the while. Your guests are coming:

Lift up your countenance; as it were the day Of celebration of that nuptial, which We two have sworn shall come.

Per. O lady fortune, Stand you auspicious!

Enter Shepherd, with Polixenes and Camillo disguised: Clown, Mopsa, Dorcas, and others.

Flo. See your guests approach: Address yourself to entertain them sprightly, And let's be red with mirth. [Upon

Shep. Fye, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, This day, she was both panter, butler, cook: Both dame and servant: welcom'd all: serv'd all: Would sing her song, and dance her turn; now here,

At upper end o' the table, now, i' the middle: On his shoulder; and his: her face o' fire With labour; and the thing, she took to quench it, She would to each one up: You are retir'd, As if you were a feasted one, and not The hostess of the meeting: Pray you, bid These unknown friends to us welcome: for it is A way to make us better friends, more known. Come, quench your blushes; and present yourself That which you are, mistress o' the feast: Come out, And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing, As your good duck shall prosper.

Per. Welcome, sir! [To Pol.] It is my father's will, I should take on me The hostess-ship o' the day:—You're welcome sir! [To Camillo.] Give me those flowers there, Dorcas.—Reverend sirs, For you there's rosemary, and rue; these keep Seeming, and savour, all the winter long: Grace, and remembrance, be to you both, And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. (A fair one are you,) well you fit our ages With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,—Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers o' the season,

Are our carnations, and streak'd gillyflowers. Which some call nature's bastards: of that kind Our rustic garden's barren; and I care not To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden, Do you neglect them?

Per. For I have heard it said, There is an art, which, in their piousness, shares With great creating nature.

Pol. Say, there be; Yet nature is made better by no mean, But nature makes that mean: so, o'er that art, Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we A gentler asset to the wildest stock; [marry And make conceive a bark of baser kind By hnd of nobler race: This is an art Which does mend nature,—change it rather: but The art itself is nature.

Per. So it is. Pol. Then make your garden rich in gilliflowers, And do not call them bastards

Cam. Sir, it is three days since I saw the prince; what his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown; but I have, merrily, noted, he is of late much retired from court; and is less frequent to his princely exercises, than formerly he hath appeared.

Put. I have considered so much, Camillo; and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service, which look upon his removal: from whom I have this intelligence; That he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate.

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more, than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Put. That's likewise part of my intelligence. But, I fear the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place: where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity I think it not unwise to get the cause of my son's retreat thither. Prythee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Put. My best Camillo! — we must disguise ourselves.

SCENE II. — The same. A Road near the Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

When daffodils begin to peer,—

With, hey! the daisies over the dale,—

Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;

For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,—

With, hey! the sweet birds, O, how they sing!

Daisies at thy pugging touch on eye;

For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark, that terra-lirra chants,—

With, hey! with, hey! the thrush and the jay,—

Are summer songs for me and my aunts,

While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served prince Florisel, and, in my time, wore three-pile; but now I am out of service:

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear!

The pale moon shines by night.

And when I wander here and there,

I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,

And bear the some when budget;

Then my account I will soon give,

And so the clocks enough it.

My traffic is sheeps; when the kite builds, look to tender linen. My father named me Autolycus; who, being as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles: With dice, and drab, I purchased this caparison; and my revenue is the silly cheat: Gallows, and knock, are too powerful on the highway; Beating, and hanging, are terrors to me; for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it. — A prize! a prize!

Enter Clown.

Clow. Let me see:—Every seven wether—tuds; every tod yelds—pound and odd shilling: fifteen hundred shorn,—what comes the wool to!

Art. If the springs hold, the cock's mune.

[Aside.]

Clow. I cannot do't without counters.—Let me see; what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice—What will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty maseys for the shearers: three-man soumen all, and very good coos; but they are most of them meane and base; but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have safron, to colour the warden pies; mace,—daisies,—none; that's out of my note: nutmeyns, seven; a race, or two, of ginger; but that I may bea;—four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins of the sun.

Aut. O, that ever I was born!

[Groveling on the ground.]

Clow. Pthe name of me,—

Aut. O, help me, help me! pluck bot off these rage, and then, death, death!

Clow. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rage to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O, sir, the lownessness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received; which are mighty ones, and millions.

Clow. Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta'en from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clow. What, by a horse-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A foot-man, sweet sir, a foot-man.

Clow. Indeed, he should be a foot-man, by the garments he hath left with thee; if this be a horseman's coat, it hath seen very ill service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee: come, lend me thy hand.

[Helping him up.]

Aut. O! good sir, tenderly, oh!

Clow. Alas, poor soul!

Aut. O, good sir, softly, good sir; I fear, sir, my shoulder blade is out.

Clow. How now! I cannot stand!

Aut. Softly, dear sir; [picks his pocket] good sir, softly: you ha' done me a charitable office.

Clow. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir; no, I beseech you, sir: I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going; I shall there have money, or any thing I want: Offer me no money, I pray you; that kills my heart.

Clow. What manner of fellow was he that robbed you?

Aut. A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with trol-wy dames: I knew him once a servant of the prince; I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

Clow. His vices, you would say; there's no virtue whipped out of the court: they cherish it, to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say, sir. I know this man well: he hath been since an ape-bearer; then a process-server, a ballad; then he compassed a nation of the prodigal son, and married a tinker's wife within a mile whereto my land and living lies; and, having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clow. Out upon him! Prig, for my life, prig: he haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true, sir; he, sir, he; that's the rogue, that put me into this apparel.

Clow. Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bute-

Paulina.—Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me. On mine own accord I'll off,
But first I'll do my errand.

WINTER'S TALE. ACT III.. SCENE III.

313

browzing on ivy. Giv' luck, an't he thy will! what have we here! [Taking up the Child.] Mercy on'a, a barme; a very pretty barme! A boy, or a child, I wonder! A pretty one; a very pretty one: Sure, some scape; though I am not bookish, yet I can read writing gentleman in the scape. This has been some star-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-work; they were warmer that got this, than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity; yet I'll tarry till my son come; he hallooed but even now. Whoa, ho ho!

Enter Clown.

Clo. Hillos, loa!

Shep. What, art so near? If thou'lt see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither. What ailest thou man?

Clo. I have seen two such sights, by sea, and by land;—but I am not to say, it is a sea, for it is now the sky; betwixt the firmament and it, you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Shep. Why, boy, how is it?

Clo. I would, you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but that's not to the point! O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls! sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em: now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast; and anon swallowed with rest and froth, as you'd thrust a cork into a horsehead. And then for the land service.—To see how the bear tore out his shoulder bone; how he cried to me for help, and said, his name was Antigonus, a nobleman:—But to make an end of the ship:—to see how the sea spaw-dragged it:—but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them;—and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea, or weather.

Shep. Name of mercy, when was this, boy?

Clo. Now, now: I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman; he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by to have helped the old man!

Clo. I would you had been by the ship side, to have helped her; there your charity would have lacked footing. [Aside.]

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself; thou met'st with things dying, I with things new born. Here's a sight for thee; look thee, a bearing-cloth for a squire's child! look thee here! take up, take up, boy; open't. So let's see; it was told me, I should be rich by the furies; this is some changing,—open't! What's within, boy?

Clo. You're a noble old man; if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold! all gold!

Shep. This is fairy gold, boy, and 'twill prove as up with it, keep it close; home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy, and to be so still, requires nothing but secrecy.—Let my sheep go;—come, good boy, the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your findings: I'll guess if the bear be gone from the gentleman and how much he hath eaten: they are never cures, but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, I'll bury it.

Shep. That's a good deed: If thou may'st discern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clo. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy; and we'll do good deeds on't. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

Enter Time, as Chorus.

Time. I.—that please some, try all; both joy and terror,

Of good and bad; that make, and unfold error,—
Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings. Impute it not a crime,
To me, or my swift passage, that I skale
O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untied
Of that wide gap; since it is in my power
To overthrow law, and in one self-born hour
To plant and o'erwhelm custom: Let me pass
The same I am, ere ancient order was,
Or what is now received: I witness to
The times that brought them in: so shall I do
To the freshest things now reigning; and make
The glistering of this present, as my tale stale
Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing,
I turn my glass; and give my scene such growing,
As you had slept between. Leontes leaving
The effects of his fond jealousies; so grieving,
That he shuts up himself; imagine me,
Gentle spectators, that I now may be
In far Bohemia; and remember well,
I mentioned a son o' the king's, which Florizel
I now name to you; and with speed so pace
To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equal with wondering: What of her ensues,
I list not prophecy; but let Time's news
Be known, when 'tis brought forth:—a shepherd's daughter.

And what to her adheres, which follows after,
Is the argument of time: Of this allow,
If ever you have spent time worse ere now;
If never yet, that Time himself doth say,
He wastes earnestly, you never may. [Exit.]

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in the Palace of Polixenes.

Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 'tis a sickness, denying thee anything; a death, to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years, since I saw my country; though I have, for the most part, been hired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me: to whose feeling sorrows I might be some ally, or I o'erween to think so; which is another spur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lovest me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services, by leaving me now: the need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made; better not to have had thee, than thus to want thee: thou, having made me business, which none, without thee, can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done: which if I have not enough considered, (as too much I cannot,) to be more thankful to thee, shall be my study, and my profit therein: the heaping friendships. Of that frail country Sicilia, prithee speak no more; whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'st him, and reconciled king, my brother: whose loss of his most precious queen, and children, are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the prince Florizel my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them, when they have approved their virtues.

That thou betray'st Polixenes, 'twas nothing;
 That did but show thee, of a fool, inconstant,
 And damnable ungrateful; nor was't much.
 Thou would'st have poisoned good Camillo's ho-
 To have him kill a king; poor trespasser. [sings.
 More monstrous standing by: whereof I reckon
 The casting forth to crows thy baby daughter,
 To be or none, or little; though a devil
 Would have shed water out of fire, ere don't:
 Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death
 Of the young prince; whose honourable thoughts
 [Thoughts high for one so tender,] cleft the heart
 That could conceive, a gross and foolish sire
 Blenish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no,
 Laid to thy answer: But the lust,—O, lords,
 When I have said, cry, woe!—the queen, the queen, [reance for't
 The sweetest, dearest, creature's dead; and ven-
 Not dropp'd down yet.

1 Lord. The higher powers forbid!
Paul. I say, she's dead: I'll swear't: if word,
 nor oath,

Prevail not, go and see: if you can bring
 Thacture, or lustre, in her lip, let eye
 Heat outwardly, break within, I'll serve you
 As I would do the gods.—But, O thou tyrant!
 Do not repent these things; for they are heavier
 Than all thy woes can stir; therefore betake thee
 To nothing but despair. A thousand knees
 Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
 Upon a barren mountain, and still winter
 In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
 To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on, go on:
 Thou canst not speak too much; I have deserv'd
 All tongues to talk thy bitterest.

1 Lord. Say no more;
 How'er the business goes, you have made fault
 I'the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for't;
 All faults I make, when I shall come to know
 them,

I do repent: Alas, I have show'd too much
 The rashness of a woman: he is touch'd [help.
 To the noble heart.—What's gone, and what's past
 Should be past grief: Do not receive affliction
 At my petition, I beseech you; rather
 Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
 Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege,
 Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman:
 The love I bore your queen,—no, fool, again!
 I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children;
 I'll not remember you of my own lord,
 Who is lost too: Take your patience to you,
 And I'll say nothing.

Leon. Thou didst speak but well,
 When thou saidst the truth: which I receive much better Than to be pitied of thee. Pr'ythee, bring me
 To the dead bodies of my queen, and son:
 One grave shall be for both; upon them shall
 The causes of their death appear, unto
 Our shame perpetual: Once a day I'll visit
 The chapel where they lie; and tears, shed there, Shall be my recreation: So long as Nature will bear up with this exercise,
 So long I daily vow to use it. Come,
 And lead me to these sorrows. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Bohemia. A desert Country near the Sea.

Enter Antigonus, with the Child, and a Mariner.

Ant. Thou art perfect then, our ship hath touch'd
 The shores of Bohemia? [up on
Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear

We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
 And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,
 The heavens with that we have in hand are angry.
 And frown upon us. [aboard.]

Ant. Their sacred wills be done!—Go, get
 Look to thy bark; I'll not be long, before
 I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste; and go not Too far i'the land: 'tis like to be loud weather:
 Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
 Of prey, that keep upon't.

Ant. Go thou away:

I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart

To be so rid o'the business. [Exit.

Ant. Come, poor babe:—
 I have heard, (but not believ'd,) the spirits of the dead

May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother
 Appear'd to me last night; for ne'er was dream
 So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
 Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
 I never saw a vessel of like sorrow.

So fill'd, and so becoming: in pure white robes,
 Like very sanctity, she did approach
 My cabin where I lay: thrice bow'd before me;
 And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
 Became two spous s: the fury spent, anon
 Did this break from her: Good Antigonus,
 Since fate, against thy better disposition,
 Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
 Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
 Places remote enough are in Bohemia,

There weep, and leave it crying; and, for the babe

Is counted lost for ever. Perdita,

Pr'ythee call't: for this ungentle business,

Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shall see

Thy wife Paulina more:—and so, with shrieks,

She melted into air. Affrighted much,

I did in time collect myself; and thought

This was so, and no slumber. Dreams are toys

Yet, for this once, yea, superstitiously,

I will be squar'd by this. I do believe,

Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that

Apollo would, this being indeed the issue

Of King Polixenes, it should here be laid,

Either for life, or death, upon the earth

Of its right father. Blossom, speed thee well!

[Laying down the Child

There lie; and there thy character: there thou,

[Laying down a bundle,

Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee

pretty, [wretch,

And still rest thine.—The storm begins.—Poor

That, for thy mother's fault, art thus expos'd

To loss, and what may follow!—Weep I cannot,

But my heart bleeds; and most accur'd am I,

To be by oath enjoin'd to this.—Farewell!

The day frowns alone and more—thou art like to

A lullaby too rough: I never saw

The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamor!—

Well may I get aboard!—This is the chance:

I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a Bear.

Enter an old Shepherd.

Shep. I would, there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty; or that youth would sleep out the rest: for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wronging the ancients, stealing, fighting—Hark you, now!
 Would any but these boild brains of nineteen, and two-and-twenty, hunt this weather? They have scared aw / two of my best sheep; which,
 I fear, the wolv' will murther and, then the murther;
 if any where, have them, 'tis by the son and Leon. You will not own it.

Her. More than mistress of,
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes,
(With whom I am accus'd,) I do confess
I lov'd him, as in honour he requir'd;
With such a kind of love, as might become
A lady like me; with a love, even such,
So, and no other, as yourself commanded:
Which not to have done, I think, had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude. [spoke.]

To you, and toward your friend; whose love had Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes; though it be dish'd
For me to try how: all I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And, why he left your court, the gods themselves,
Wotting no more than I, are ignorant.

Leon. You knew of his departure, as you know
What he has undertaken to do in his absence.
Her. Sir,

You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

Leon. Your actions are my dreams: [shame.]
You had a bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it:—As you were past all (Those of your fact are so,) so past all truth:
Which to deny, concerns more than avails:
For as

Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it, (which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee, than it,) so thou
Shalt feel our justice; in whose easiest passage,
Look for no less than death.

Her. Sir, spare your threats;
The bug, which you would fright me with, I seek.
To me can life be no commodity:
The crown and comfort of my life, your favour,
I do give lost; for I do feel it gone,
But know not how it went: My second joy,
And first-fruits of my body, from his presence,
I am barr'd, like one infectious: My third comfort,
Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast.

The innocent milk in its most innocent mouth,
Haled out to murder: Myself on every post
Proclaim'd a strumpet; with immodest hatred,
The child-bed privilege denied, which lunks
To women of all fashion:—Lastly, hurried
Here to this place, i' the open air, before
I have got strength of limit. Now, my liege,
Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
That I should fear to die! Therefore, proceed
But yet hear this; mistake me not;—No! life,
I prize it not a straw:—but for mine honour,
(Which I would free,) if I shall be condemn'd
Upon surmises; all proofs sleeping else,
But what your jealousies awake; I tell you
'Tis rigour, and not law.—Your honours all,
I do refer me to the oracle?

Apoll'o be my judge.
1 Lord. This your request
Is altogether just: therefore, bring forth,
And in Apoll'o's name, his oracle.

[Exeunt certain Officers.]
Her. The emperor of Russia was my father:
O, that he were alive, and here beholding
His daughter's trial! that he did but see
The flatness of my misery; yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge!

Re-enter Officers, with Cleomenes and Dion.

Off. You here shall swear upon this sword of justice,

That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have brought
Been both at Delphos; and from thence have
This seal'd-up oracle, by the hand delivered
Of great Apoll'o's priest; and that, since then
You have not dar'd to break the holy seal.
Nor read the secrets in't.

Cleo. Dion. All this we swear.
Leon. Break up the seals, and read.
Off. [Reads.] Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, his innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall live without an heir, if that, which is lost, be not found.

Lords. Now blessed be the great Apoll'o!
Her. [Prise I]
Leon. Hast thou read truth?
Off. Ay, my lord: even so
As it is here set down.

Leon. There is no truth at all i' the oracle:
The sessions shall proceed; this is mere falsehood.

Enter a Servant, hastily.
Serv. My lord the king, the king!
Leon. What is the business?
Serv. O, sir, I shall be hated to report it:
The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed, is gone.

Leon. How! gone?
Serv. Is dead.
Leon. Apoll'o's angry; and the heavens themselves
Do strike at my injustice. [Hermione faints.] How Paul. This news is mortal to the queen:—Look
And see what death is doing. [down.]

Leon. Take her hence:
Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover—
I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion:—
Beseech you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life—Apoll'o pardon
[Exeunt Paulina and Ladies, with Herm.]
My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle!—
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes;
New woo my queen; recall the good Camillo;
Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy:
For, being transported by my jealousies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose Camillo for the minister, to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo turn'd
My swift command, though I with death, and with Reward, did threaten and encourage him.
Not doing it, and being done; he, most humane,
And fill'd with honour, to my kindly guest
Unclasp'd my practice; quit his fortunes here.
Which you knew great; and to the certain hazard
Of all uncertainties himself commended,
No richer than his honour:—How he glisters
Through my rust! and how his piety
Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter Paulina.
Paul. Woe the while
O, cut my lace; lest my heart, cracking it,
Break too!

1 Lord. What fit is this, good lady? [me!]
Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for What wheels! first what! What flaying! boiling,
In leads, or oils! what old, or newer torture
Must I receive: whose every word deserves
To taste of my worst! Thy tyranny
Together working with thy jealousies—
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of mine!—O, think, what they have done,
And then run mad, indeed; stark mad! for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.

Ant. I will, my lord.
Leon. Mark, and perform it: (seest thou?) for
 Of any point in't shall not only be (the fall
 Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongu'd wife;
 Whom, for this time, we pardon. We enjoin thee,
 As thou art liegeman to us, that thou carry
 This female bastard hence: and that thou bear it
 To some remote and desert place, quite out
 Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it,
 Without more merry to its own protection,
 And favour of the climate. As by strange fortune
 I came to us, I do in justice charge thee,—
 On thy soul's peril, and thy body's torture,—
 That thou commend it straitly to some place,
 Where chance may nurse, or end it: Take it up.
Ant. I swear to do that, though a present death
 Had been more merciful.—Come on, poor babe:
 Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens.
 To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears, they say,
 Casting their savageness aside, have done
 Like offices of pity.—Sir, be prosperous
 In more than this dead doth require! and blessing,
 Against this cruelty, fight on thy side,
 Poor thing, condemn'd to loss!

[Exit, with the Child.
No, I'll not rear

Leon. Another's issue.
I Altes. Please your highness, pursue,
 From those you sent to the oracle, are come
 An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion,
 Being well arriv'd from Delphus, are both landed:
 Hasting to the court.

I Lord. So please you, sir, their speed
 Hath been beyond account.

Leon. Twenty-three days
 They have been absent: 'Tis good speed, foretells
 The great Apollo suddenly will have
 The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords;
 Summon a solemn court, that we may arraign
 Our most dishonour'd lady: for, as she hath Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have
 A just and open trial. While she lives,
 My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me;
 And think upon my bidding. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. A Street in some Town.
Enter Cleomenes and Dion.

Cleo. The climate's delicate; the air most sweet:
 Fertile the soil; the temple much surpassing
 The common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report,
 For most it caught me, the celestial habits,
 (Methinks, I so should term them,) and the reverence

Of the grave venerers. O, the sacrifice!
 How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
 It was the offering!

Cleo. But of all, the burst
 And the ear deafening voice of the oracle,
 Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense,
 That I was nothing.

Dion. If the event of the journey
 Prove as successful to the queen—O, he's so fit—
 As it hath been to us, rare, pleasant, speedy,
 'The time is worth the use on't.

Cleo. Great Apollo,
 Turn all to the best! These proclamations,
 So forcible, fall upon Hermione.

I little like
Dion. The violent carriage of it

Will clear, or end, the business: When the oracle,
 (Thus by Apollo's great divine seal'd up,)
 Shall the contents discover, something rare.
 Even then will rush to knowledge.—Go,—fresh horses;
 And gracious be the issue! [Exit.

SCENE II.—The same. A Court of Justice.

Leontes, Lords, and Officers, appear properly seated

Leon. This sessions (to our great grief, we pronounce,)
 Even pushes 'gainst our heart: The party tried,
 The daughter of a king; our wife; and one
 Of us too much belov'd—Let us be clear'd
 Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
 Proceed in justice; which shall have due course,
 Even to the guilt, or the purgation.—
 Produce the prisoner.

Off. It is his highness' pleasure, that the queen
 Appear in person here in court.—Silence!

[Hermione is brought in, guarded; Paulina and Ladies attending.]

Leon. Read the indictment.
Off. Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes,
 King of Sicilia, thou art here accus'd and arraign'd
 Of high treason in committing adultery with Polixenes, king of Bohemia; and conspiring with Cammillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better success, to fly away by night.

Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradicts my accusation; and
 The testimony on my part, no other
 But what comes from myself; it shall scarce boot
 To say, Not Guilty; mine integrity, (the
 Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
 Be so receiv'd. But thus,—If powers divine
 Behold our human actions (as they do),
 I doubt not then, but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
 Tremble at patience.—You, my lord, best know

(Who least will seem to do so,) my past life
 Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
 As I am now unhappy; which is more
 Than history can pattern, though devis'd,
 And play'd, to take spectators: For behold me.—
 A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
 A moiety of the throne, a great king's daughter
 The mother to a hopeful prince,—here standing,
 To prate and talk for life, and honour 'fore
 Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it,
 As I weigh grief, which I would spare: for honour
 'Tis a derivative from me to mine.

And only that I stand for, I appeal
 To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
 Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
 How merited to be so; since he came,
 With what encounter so uncourteous
 I have strand'd, to appear thus: if one jot beyond
 The bound of honour; or, in act, or will,
 That way inclining; haven'd be the hearer's
 Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
 Cry, Eye upon my grave!

Leon. I ne'er heard yet,
 That any of these bolder views wanted
 Less impudence to gamsy what they did,
 Than to perform it first.

Her. That's true enough;
 Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.

Commit me, for committing honour,) trust it,
He shall not rule me.

Ant. Lo you now; you hear!
When she will take the rein, I let her run;
But she'll not stumble.

Paul. Good my liege, I come,—
And, I beseech you, hear me, who profess
Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
Your most obedient servant; yet that dare less appear so, in comforting your evils,
Than such as at me seek yours:—I say, I come
From your good queen.

Leon. Good queen!
Paul. Good queen, my lord, good queen: I say,
good queen;

And would by combat make her good, so were I
A man, the worst about you.

Leon. Force her hence.
Paul. Let him, that makes but trifles of his eyes,
First hand me; on mine own accord, I'll off;
But, first, I'll do my errand.—The good queen,
For she is good, hath brought you forth a daughter
Here 'tis; commend it to your blessing. [Exit.]

[Laying down the Child.]
Leon. Out!

A unkind witch! Hence with her, out o' door:
A most intelligencing dwarf!

Paul. Not so:
I am as ignorant in that, as you
In so entailing me: and no less honest
Than you are mad, which is enough, I'll warrant,
As this world goes, to pass for honest.

Leon. Traitors!
Will you not push her out? Give her the bastard—Thou, doctord, [to Antigonus.] thou art womantir'd, unworshipp'd.

By thy dame Parlet here.—Take up the bastard;
'Take't up, I say; give't to thy crone.

Paul. For ever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the princess, by that forced baseness
Which he has put upon't!

Leon. He dreads his wife.
Paul. So, I would, you did; thou t'wore past all You'd call your children yours. [Exit.]

Leon. A nest of traitors!
Ant. I am none, by this good light.

Paul. Nor I; nor any,
But one, that's here; and that's himself: for he
The sacred honour of himself, his queen's,
His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander.
Whose sting is sharper than the sword's: and will
(For, as the case now stands, it is a curse) [Exit.]
He cannot be compell'd to't;) once remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten,
Aw'er ask, or stone, was sound.

Leon. A callat,
Of boundless tongue; who late hath beat her husband.

And now has a me!—This brat is none of mine;
It is the issue of Polixenes:
Hence with it; and, together with the dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul. It is yours;
And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worst.—Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father: eye, nose, lip,
The trick of his frown, his forehead; nay, the valley,
The pretty dimples of his chin, and cheek; his
The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger:—
And thou, good goddess nature, which hast made
So like to him that got it, if thou hast [Exit.]
The ordering of the mind too, amongst all colours

No yellow in't; lest she suspect, as he does,
Her children not her husband's!

Leon. A graven hag!
And, lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not stay her tongue.

Ant. Hang all the husbands
That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself
Hardly one subject.

Leon. Once more, take her hence.
Paul. A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.

Leon. I'll have thee burn'd.
Paul. I care not;
It is an heretic, that makes the fire,
Not she, which burns in't. I'll not call you tyrant;
But this most cruel usage of your queen
(Not able to produce more accusation [scavours
Than your own weak-hing'd fancy.] something
Of tyranny, and will ignore make you,
Yet, scandalous to the world.)

Leon. On your alliance,
Out of the chamber with her. Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life! she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her.

Paul. I pray you, do not push me; I'll be gone.
Look to your babe, my lord; 'tis yours: Jove send her [hands!]

A better guiding spirit!—What need these
You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.

[Exit.]
So, as:—Farewe! we are gone. [Exit.]
Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set out thy wife to this.—
My child! away with't!—even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o'er't, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire;
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up
straight:

Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,
(And by good testimony,) or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine: if thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire;
For thou set'st it on thy wife.

Ant. I did not, sir:
'These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.

1 Lord. We can, as my royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.

Leon. You are liars all. [Credit!]
1 Lord. 'Beseech your highness, give us better
We have always truly serv'd you; and beseech
So to esteem of us: And on our knees we beg,
(As recompense of our dear services.) [Pause]
Exit, and to come, that you do choose this par-
Which, being so barbarous, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul issue: We all kneel.

Leon. I am a feather for each wind that blows:—
Shall I live on, to see this base and kneel
And call me father! Better burn it now,
Than curse it then. But, be it; let it live:
It shall not wither.—You, sir, come you hither;

[To Antigonus.]
You, that have been so tenderly officious
With lady Margery, your mistress, there,
To save this bastard's life: for 'tis a bastard,
So sure as this beard's grey,—what will you ad-
To save this brat's life! [Venture]

Ant. Any thing, my lord.
That my ability may undergo,
And nobleness impose: at least, thus much:
I'll pawn the little blood which I have left,
To save the innocent: any thing possible.

Leon. It shall be possible: Swear by this sword
Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Re-enter Attendant, with the Keeper.

You know me, do you not?

Kep. For a worthy lady,
And one whom much I honour.

Paul. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the queen.

Kep. I may not, madam: to the contrary
I have express commandment.

Paul. Here's mio,
To lock up honesty and honour from
The access of gentle visitors!—Is it lawful,
Pray you, to see her women I say of them?
Emilia!

Kep. So please you, madam, to put Apart these your attendants, I shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now, call her.

Withdraw yourselves. [Exeunt Attend.]

Kep. And, madam,

I must be present at your conference.

Paul. Well, be it so, prythee. [Exit Keeper.]
Here's such ado to make no stain a stain,
As passes colouring.

Re-enter Keeper, with Emilia.

Dear gentlewoman, how fares our gracious lady?
Emil. As well as one so great, and so forlorn.
May hold together: on her frights, and griefs,
(Which never tender lady hath borne greater.)
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

Paul. A boy?

Emil. A daughter; and a goodly babe,
Lusty, and like to live: the queen receives
Much comfort in't: says, My poor pr-soner,
I am innocent as you.

Paul. I dare be sworn:—
These dangerous unseemly lumes o'er the king! be-shew them!

He must be told on't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best; I'll take't upon me:
If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister;
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The trumpet any more:—Pray you, Emilia,
Commend my best obedience to the queen;
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll shew't the king, and undertake to be
Her advocate to th' lordest: we do not know
How he may when at the sight o' the child;
The silence often of pure innocence,
Persuades, when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy madam,
Your honour, and your goodness, is so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue; there is no lady living,
So meet for this great errand: Please your lady,
To visit the next room, I'll presently [ship]
Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer;
While, but to day, hammer'd of this design;
But durst not tempt a minister of honour,
Least she should be denied.

Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have: If wit flow from it,
As business from my bosom, let it not be doubted
I shall do good.

Emil. Now be you blest for it!
I'll to the queen: Please you, come something nearer. [babe]

Kep. Madam, if please the queen to send the
I know not what I shall incur, to pass it, having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, sir;
The child was prisoner to the womb; and is,
By law and process of great nature, thence Free'd and enfranchis'd: not a party to

Nor guilty of, the anger of the king;
If any be, the trespass of the queen
Kep. I do believe it.

Paul. Do not you fear: upon
Mine honour, I will stand 'twixt you and danger.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and other Attendants.

Leon. Nor night nor day, no rest: It is but weakness

To bear the matter thus: mere weakness, if
The cause were not in being;—part o' the cause,
She, the adulteress; for the harlot king
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank
And level of my brain, plot-proof: but she
Can hook to me: Say, that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again.—Who's there?

1. Attend. My lord! [Advancing.]

Leon. How does the boy?

1. Attend. He took good rest to-night;

'Tis hop'd, his sickness is discharg'd.

Leon. To see,

His nobleness!
Conceiving the dishonour of his mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply;
Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on't in himself;
Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep,
And downright languish'd.—Leave me solely:—go,
See how he fares. [Exit Attend.]—fy, fy, no thought of him;

The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me: in himself too mighty:
And in his parties, his alliance,—let him be,
Until a time may serve: for present vengeance,
Take it on her: Camillo and Polixenes
Laugh at me; make their posture at my sorrow,
'They should not laugh, if I could reach them; not
Shall she, within my power.

Enter Paulina, with a Child.

1. Lord. You must not enter.
Paul. Nay, rather, good my lord, be second to Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas, [use:]
'Than the queen's life! a gracious innocent soul;
More free, than he is jealous.

Ant. That's enough.
1. Attend. Madam, he hath not slept to-night; commanded

None should come at him.

Paul. Not so hot, good sir;
I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you,—
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heavings, such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking: I
Do come with words as medicinal as true;
Honest, as either; to purge him of that humour,
That presses him from sleep.

Leon. What arise there, ho?
Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference,
About some gumps for your highness.

Leon. How?—
Away with that sordacious lady: Antigonus,
I charg'd her, that she should not come about
I knew, she would. [use:]

Ant. I told her so, my lord,
On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leon. What, canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonesty, he can: in this [Unless he take the course that you have done]

Which I'll not call a creature of thy plane,
Lost barbarism, making me the precedent,
Should a like language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinction leave out
Betwixt the prince and beggar!—I have said,
She's an adulteress; I have said, with whom;
More, she's a traitor; and Camillo is
A scelerate with her; and one that knows
What she should shame to know herself,
But with her most vile principal, that she's
A hed-swerver, even as bad as those
That vulgar give bold titles; ay, and privy
To this their late escape.

Her. No, by my life,
Privy to none of this: How will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus have publish'd me! Gentle my lord,
You scarce can right me thoroughly then, to say
You did mistake.

Leon. No, no; if I mistake
In those foundations which I build upon,
The center is not big enough to bear
A school-boy's top.—A way with her to prison:
He, who shall speak for her, is afar off guilty,
But that he speaks.

Her. There's some ill planet reigns
I must be patient, till the heavens look
With an aspect more favourable.—Good my lords,
I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are; the want of which vain dew,
Perfume, shall dry your pity: but I have
That honourable grief lock'd here, which burns Worse than tears drawn: 'Beseech you all, my lords

With thoughts as qualified as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me;—and so
The king's will be perform'd!

Leon.

Shall I be heard?

[To the Guards.]

Her. Who is't, that goes with me!—'Beseech your highness,

My women may be with me; for, you see,
My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools;
There is no cause: when you shall know, your mistress

Has deserv'd prison; then abound in tears,
As I come out: this action, I now go on,
Is for my better grace.—Adieu, my lord;
I never wish'd to see you sorry; now,
I trust, I shall.—My women, come; you have leave.

Leon.

Go, do our bidding; hence.
[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.]

1 Lord. 'Beseech your highness, call the queen
again.

Ant. Be certain what you do, sir: lest your justice violence; in the which three great ones
Yourself, your queen, your son.

1 Lord. For her, my lord,—
I dare my life lay down, and will do't, sir,
Please you to accept it, that the queen is spotless
In the eyes of heaven, and to you; I mean,
In this which you accuse her.

Ant. If it prove
Such otherwise, I'll keep my stables where
I lodge my wife; I'll go in couples with her;
Than when I feel, and see her, no further trust
For every inch of woman in the world. [Her]
Ay, every dram of woman's flesh, is false,
If she be.

Leon. Hold your peace.

1 Lord. Good my lord,—

Ant. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves:
You are abus'd; and by some pattering, vain,
That will be damn'd for't; would I knew the vill would land damn him: Be she honour'd, I'd,

I have three daughters; the eldest is eleven;
'The second, and the third, nine, and some five;
If this prove true, they'll pay for't: by mine honour.

I'll geld them all: fourteen they shall not see,
To bring false generations: they are co-heirs;
And I had rather gild myself, than they Should not produce fair issue.

Leon. Cense; no more.
You smell this business with a sense as cold
As is a dead man's nose: I see't, and feel't,
As you feel doing thus; and see withal
The instruments that feign.

Ant. If it be so,
We need no grave to bury honesty;
There's not a grain of it, the face to sweeten
Of the whole duny earth.

Leon. What! lack I credit?
1 Lord. I had rather you did look, than I, my
lord,

Upon this ground: and more it would content me
To have her honour true, than your suspicion;
Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leon. Why, what need we Commune with you of this? but rather follow
Our forceful instigation! Our prerogative
Calls not your counsels; but our natural goodness
Imparts this: which—if you (or stupified,
Or seeming so in skill,) cannot, or will not,
Relish as truth, like us; inform yourselves.
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The loss, the gain, the ordering on't, is all Properly ours.

Ant. And I wish, my liege,
You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
Without more overture.

Leon. How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight,
Added to their familiarity,
(Which was no guess as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation,
But only seeing, all other circumstances
Made up to the deed,) doth push on this proceed-
Yet, for a greater consideration, [ing]
(For, in an act of this importance, 'twere
Most piteous to be wild,) I have dispatch'd it post
To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
Cleonomen and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff'd sufficiency: Now, from the oracle
They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had,
Shall stop, or spur me. Have I done well?

1 Lord. Well done, my lord.

Leon. Though I am satisfied, and need no more Than what I know, yet shall the oracle
Give rest to the minds of others; such as he,
Whose ignorant credulity will not. [Good]
Come up to the truth: So have we thought it
From our free person she should be conn'd;
Lest that the treachery of the two, fed hence,
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us;
We are to speak in public; for this business
Will raise us all.

Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. The outer Room of a Prison.

Enter Paulina and Attendants.

Paul. The keeper of the prison,—call to him;
[Exit an Attendant]
Let him have knowledge who I am.—Good lady
No court as Europe is too good for thee.
What diet dost thou as prison!—Now, good sir

Your followers I will whisper to the business :
And wilt by twos, and threes, at several posterns,
Tear them o' the city : For myself, I'll put
My fortunes to your service, which are here
By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain ;
For, by the honour of my parents, I
Have utter'd truth : which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by ; nor shall you be safer
Than one condemn'd by the king's own mouth, thereon

His execution sworn.

Pol. I do believe thee ;
I saw his heart in his face. Give me thy hand ;
Be pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine : My ships are ready, and
My people dill expect my hence departure
Two days ago — Thus jealous
In for a precious creature : as she's rare,
Must it be great ; and, as his person's mighty
Must it be violent : and as he does conceive
He is dishonour'd by a man which ever Profess'd to him, why, his revenges must
In that he made more bitter. Fear o'erwhelms me :
Goad expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing
Of his ill-ta'en suspicion ! Come, Camillo ;
I will respect thee as a father ; if Thou bearst my life off hence : Let us avoid.

Cam. It is in mine authority, to command
The keys of all the posterns : Please your highness
To take the urgent hour : come, sir, away.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. — The same.

Enter Hermione, Mamillius, and Ladies.

Her. Take the boy to you : he so troubles me,
Tis past enduring.

1 Lady. Come, my gracious lord.

Shall I be your play-fellow ?

Mam. No, I'll none of you.

1 Lady. Why, my sweet lord ?

Mam. You'll kiss me hard ; and speak to me as I were a baby still — I love you better. [if]

2 Lady. And why so, my good lord ?

Mam. Not for because
Your brows are blacker ! yet black brows, they say,
Become some women best ; so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semi-circle,
Or half moon made with a pen.

2 Lady. Who taught you this !
Mam. I learn'd it out of women's faces. — Pray
What colour are your eye-brows ? [now]

1 Lady. Blue, my lord.

Mam. Nay, that's a mock : I have seen a lady's nose
That has been blue, but not her eye-brows.

2 Lady. Hark ye !
The queen, your mother, rounds space : we shall Present our services to a fine new prince,
One of these days ; and then you'd wanton with us,
If we would have you.

1 Lady. She is spread of late
Into a gaudy bawl : Good time encounter her !

Her. What wisdom stars amongst you ? Come,
sir, now

I am for your again : Pray you, sit by us,

And tell 's a tale.

Mam. Merry, or sad, shall't be ?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A and ale's best for winter :
I have one of spirits and goblets.

Her. Let's have that, sir.
Come on, sit down : — Come on, and do your best
To fright me with your sprites : you're powerful

Mam. There was a nun, — [at it]

Her. Nay, come, sit down ; then on.

Mam. Dwelt by a church-yard ; — I will tell it softly ;

You crickets shall not hear it.

Her. Come on then,

And give't me in mine ear.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and others.

Leon. Was he met there ? his train ? Camillo
with him ?

1 Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them ;
Saw I nien scour so on their way : I ey'd them
Even to their ships.

Leon. How blest am I
In my just censure ! in my true opinion ! —
Alack, for lesser knowledge ! — How accur'd,
In being so blest ! — There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd, and one may drink ; depart,
And yet partake no venom ; for his knowledge
Is not infected : but if one present
The abhor'd ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drank, he cracks his gorge, his sides,
With violent hefts : — I have drank, and seen the spider.

Camillo was his help in this, his pander : —
There is a plot against my life, my crown ;
All's true that is mistrusted : — That false villain,
Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him :
He has discover'd my design, and I
Remain a pinch'd thing ; yea, a very trick
For them to play at will : — How came the posterns
So easily open ?

1 Lord. By his great authority ;
Which often hath no less prevail'd than so,
On your command

Leon. I know't too well. —
Give me the boy ; I am glad you did not nurse
him :

Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this ? sport ?

Leon. Bear the boy hence, he shall not come about her :

Away with him : — and let her sport herself
With that she's big with : for 'tis Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.

Her. But I'd say, he had not,
And, I'll be sworn, you would believe my saying,
How'er you lean to the nayward.

Leon. You, my lords,
Look on her, mark her well : he but about
To say, she is a goodly lady, and
The justice of your hearts will thereto add,
'Tis pity, she's not honest, honourable :

Praise her but for this her without-door firm,
(Which, on my faith, deserves high speech,) and a right

The shrew, the hum, or ha ; these petty brands,
That calumny doth use : — O, I am out,
That in my does ; for calumny will wear
Virtue itself : — these shrews, these hums, and ha's,
When you have said, she's goodly, come between,
Ere you can say she's honest : But be it known :
From him that has most cause to grieve it should She's an adulteress. [Exit]

Her. Should a villain say so,
The most replenish'd villain in the world,
He were as much more villain : you, my lord,
Do but mistake.

Leon. You have mistook my lady,
Polixenes for Leontes : O thou thing

Which should undo more doing: Ay, and thou,
His cupbearer,—whom I from meener form
Have benched and rear'd to worship; who may'st

Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven—
How I am galled,—might'st bespice a cup, [you],
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam. Sir, my lord,
I could do this; and that with no rash potion,
But with a ling'ring dram, that should not work Maliciously like poison: But I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
I have lov'd thee,——

Leon. Make't thy question, and go rot!
Dost think, I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation? sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets,
Which to preserve, in sleep; which being spotted,
Is gauds, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps?
Give scandal to the blood of the prince my son,
Who, I do think is mine, and love as mine;
Without ripe moving to't?—Would I do this?
Could man so blench?

Cam. I must believe you, sir;
I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your highness
Will take again your queen, as yours at first;
Even for your son's sake; and, thereby, for sealing
The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down:
I'll give up blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen: I am his cupbearer;
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.

Leon. This is all:
I'll, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Dost not, thou split'st thine own.

Cam. I'll do't, my lord.
Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd.
[Exit.]

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes: and my ground to do't
Is the obedience to a master; one,
Who, in rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his, so too—I do this deed,
Promotion follows: If I could find example
Of thousands, that had struck anointed kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't: but since Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment, bears not Let villainy itself forswear't. I must [one],
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy star, reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.

Pol. This is strange! methinks,
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak I—
Good-day 'Camillo.

Cam. Hail most royal sir!

Pol. What is the news? the court?

Cam. None rare, my lord.
Pol. The king hath on him such a countenance
As he had lost some province, and a region,
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary compliment; when he,
Winking his eyes to the contrary, and falling
A lip of much contempt, speeds from me; and

So leaves me, to consider what is breeding.

That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.

Pol. How! dare not I do not. Do you know and dare not?

Be intelligent to me? 'Tis thereabouts;
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must;
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexion are to me a mirror,
Which shows me mine chang'd too, for I must be A party in this alteration, finding Myself thus alter'd with it.

Cam. There is a sickness
Which puts some of us in distemper; but I cannot name the disease; and it is caught
Of you that yet are well.

Pol. How I caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the bassick: [better
I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the
By my regard, but kill'd none so. Camillo,——
As you are certainly a gentleman; thereto
Clerk-like, experienced, which no less advises
Our gen'ry, than our parents' noble names,
In whose success we are gen'le.—I beseech you,
If you know aught which does believe my know-
Thereto be inform'd, imprison it not [ledge
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I may not answer.
Pol. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well!
I must be answer'd!—Dost thou hear, Camillo,
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man, [least
Which honour does acknowledge,——whereof the
Is not this suit of mine,—that thou declare
What incidency thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near;
Which way to be prevented, if so be;
If not, how best to bear it.

Cam. Sir, I'll tell you;
Since I am charg'd in honour, and by him
That I think honourable: Therefore, mark my counsel;
Which must be even as swiftly follow'd, as
I mean to utter it; or both yourself and me
Cry, lost, and so good-night.

Pol. On, good Camillo.
Cam. I am appointed him to murder you.
Pol. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the king.
Pol. For what?
Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he
As he had seen't or been an instrument [swears,
To vice you to't,—that you have touch'd his queen Forbiddenly.

Pol. O, then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly; as my name
Be yok'd with his, that do but set the best!
Turn then my freest reputation to
A savour, that may strike the duldest nostril
Where I arrive; and my approach be sham'd.
Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection
That e'er was heard, or read!

Cam. Swear his thought over
By each particular star in heaven, and
By all their influences, you may as well
Forth the sea for to obey the moon,
As or, by oath, renounce, or counsel, shake
The fabric of his folly; whose fawning ion
Is plid upon his faith, and will continue
The standing of his body.

Pol. How should this grow!
Cam. I know not; but, I am sure, 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown, than question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,——
That lies enclosed in this trunk, which you Shall bear along in pawn'd—away to-night.

latch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd
 ooe. [Exeunt Polixenes, Hermione,
and Attendants.]

Go play, boy, play!—thy mother plays, and I
 Play too; but so distract'd a part, whose issue
 Will him me to my grave; contempt and clamour
 Will be my knell.—Go play, boy, play:—There have been.

Or I am much deceiv'd, cuckolds ere now;
 And many a man there is, even at this present,
 Now, while I speak this, holds his wife by the arm,
 That little thinks she has been sluic'd in his absence.

And his pond fish'd by his next neighbour, by Sir Smile, his neighbour; nay, there's comfort in't, Whiles other men have gates; and those gates
 open'd,

As mine, against their will: Should all despair,
 That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind
 Would hang themselves: Physic for't there is none;
 It is a bawly plague, that will strike
 Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful, think it.
 From east, west, north, and south: Be it concluded,
 No barricado for a belly: know it;
 It will let in and out the enemy;

With bag and baggage; many a thousand of us
 Have the disease, and feel't not.—How now boy?
Man. I am like you, they say.

Leon. Why, that's some comfort.—
 What! Camillo there?

Cam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. Go play, Maunilius; thou'rt an honest man. [Exit Maunilius.]

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.
Cam. You had much ado to make his anchor
 hold:

When you cast out, it still came home.

Leon. Didst note it?
Cam. He would not stay at your petitions; made
 His business more material.

Leon. Didst perceive it?
 They're here with me already; whispering, roundabout a so-forth: 'Tis far gone, [ling.]
 When I shall get it lost.—How came't, Camillo,
 That he did stay?

Cam. At the good queen's entreaty Leon. At the queen's, he's; good, should be pertinent!

But so it is, it is not. Was this taken
 By any understanding pate but thine?
 For thy conceit is seeking, will draw in
 More than the common blocks:—Not noted, is't,
 Of the finer natures? by some several,
 Of head-pieces extraordinary! lower nesses,
 Pertinence are in this business perbird: say.

Cam. Business, my lord! I think, most under-Bohemia stays here longer. [stand]

Leon. Ha?
Cam. Stays here longer.

Leon. Ay, but why?
Cam. To satisfy your highness and the entreaties
 Of our most gracious mistress.

Leon. Satisfy
 The entreaties of your mistress!—satisfy!—
 Let that suffice: I have trusted thee, Camillo,
 With all the nearest to my heart, as well
 My chamber-council: whereon, great-like, thou
 Hast cleav'd my bosom; I from thee departed
 Thy penitent reform'd: but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
 In that which seems so.

Cam. Be it forlaid, my lord!

Leon. To bide upon't:—Thou art not honest; or,
 If thou wilt not that way, thou art a coward;
 Which boxes honesty behind, res. raising

From course requir'd: Or else thou must be
 A servant, grafted in my serious trust. [counted]
 And therein negligent: or else a fool.
 That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake
 And tak'st it all for jest. [drawn.]

Cam. My gracious lord,
 I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful;
 In every one of these no man is free.
 But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
 Amongst the infinite diseases of the world,
 Sometimes puts forth: In your affairs, my lord,
 It ever I were wilful-neer head,
 It was my folly: if indiscreetly
 I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
 Not weighting well the end; if ever fearful
 To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
 Whereof the execution did cry out
 Against the non performance, 'twas a fear
 Which oft affects the wisest: these, my lord,
 Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty
 Is never free of. But, beseech your grace,
 Be plainer with me: let me know my trespass
 By its own visage: if I then deny it,
 'Tis none of mine.

Leon. Have not you seen, Camillo,
(But that's past doubt: you have; or your eye-glass
 Is thicker than a cuckoo's horn;) or heard,
(For to a vision so apparent, rumour
 Cannot be mute,) or the next, (for cogitation
 Resides not in that man, that does not think it,)
 My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess,

(Or else he impudently negative,
 To have our eyes nor ears, nor thought,) then say,
 My wife's a holiday-maker; deserves a name
 As rank as any flax-wench, that puts to
 Before her troth-plight: say it, and justify it.

Cam. I would not be a slander-by, to hear
 My sovereign mistress clouded so, without
 My present vexation taken: Show my heart,
 You never spoke what did become you less Than this; which to reiterate, were as
 As deep as that, though true.

Leon. Is whispering nothing?
 Is leaning cheek to cheek? Is meeting noses?
 Kissing with inside lip? Is cupping the cheek
 Of laughter with a sigh? (a note infallible
 Of breaking honesty:) horsing foot on foot?
 Skulking in corners? watching clocks more swift?
 Hours, minutes! noon, midnight? and all eyes blind

With the pin and web, but theirs, theirs only,
 That would unseen be wicked? is this no sin?
 Why, then the world, and all that's in't, is nothing;
 The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing;
 My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these things
 in't if this be nothing.

Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd
 Of this diseased opinion, and delusions;
 For 'tis most dangerous.

Leon. Say it be; 'tis true.

Cam. No, no, my lord.

Leon. It is; you lie, you lie:
 I say, thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
 Produce thee a gross knot, a mindless slave;
 Or else a hovering temporizer, that
 Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil, Inclining to them both: Were my wife's liver infected to her life, she would not live
 'Till running of one gase.

Cam. Who does infect her?
Leon. Why he, that wears her like her maid,
 About his neck, Bohemia: Who—if I (being)
 Had servants true about me: that have eyes
 To see alike mine honour as their profits,
 Their own particular interests, they would do that

Was innocency for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, no, nor dream'd it
That any did: Had we pursu'd that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd
heaven
Boldly, Not Guilty; by the impression clear'd, Hereditary ours.

Her. By this we gather,
You have tripp'd since.

Pol. O my most sacred lady,
Temptations have since then been born to us; for
In those unfeild days was my wife a girl;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes,
Of my young play-fellow.

Her. Grace to boot!
Of this make no conclusion; lest you say,
Your queen and I are devils: Yet, go on;
The offences we have made you do, we'll answer;
If you first sin'd with us, and flint with us,
You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd not
With any but with us.

Leon. Is he won yet?

Her. He'll stay, my lord.

Leon. At my request, he would not.
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

Her. Never!

Leon. Never, but once.

Her. What! have I twice said well? when was't before?

I prythee, tell me: Cram us with praise, and make us (longueless,
As fat as tansie things: One good deed, dying
Slaughters a thousand, waiting upon that.

Our praises are our wages: You may rile us,
With one soft kiss, a thousand furlongs, ere
With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal:—
My last good word, to entreat his stay;
What was my first? It was an elder sister,
Or I mistake you: O, would her name were Grace!
But once before I spoke to the purpose: When?
Nay, let me hav't; I long.

Leon. Why, that was when Three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to death.

Ere I could make thee open thy white hand,
And clap thyself my love; then didst thou utter,
I am yours for ever.

Her. It is Grace, indeed.—
Why, to you now I have spoke to the purpose twice;

The one for ever earn'd a royal husband;
The other, far some while a friend.

[Giving her hand to Polixenes.]

Leon. Too hot, too hot: [Aside.]
To mingle friendship far, is mingling bloods.
I have tramor corus on me;—my heart dances;
But not for joy,—not joy: This entertainment
May a free face put on; derive a liberty
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,
And well become the agent: it may. I grant:
But to be paddling palms, and pinching fingers,
As now they are; and making practis'd smiles,
As in a looking-glass;—and then to sigh, as 'twere
The mort o' the deer; O, that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my brows.—Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?

Mam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. I flocks?
Why, that's my bawcock. What, hast snatched thy nose?

They say, it's a copy out of mine. Come, captain.
We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, captain:
And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,

Are all call'd neat.—Still virginalling

[Observing Polixenes and Hermione.]
Upon his palm!—How now, you wanton calf!
Art thou my calf!

Mam. Yes, if you will, my lord.
Leon. Thou want'st a rough push, and the smooth that I have,

To be full like me:—yet, they say we are Almost as like as eggs; women say so,
That will say any thing: But were they false
As o'er-died blacks, as wind, as waters; false
As dice are to be waid, by one that fixes
No bourn 'twixt his said mine; yet were it true
To say this boy were like me.—Come, air page,
Look on me with your welkin eye: Sweet villain!
Most dear'st! my collop!—Can thy dam?—may't
Affection! thy intention stabs the centre: [be I
Thou dost make possible, things not so held,
Communicat'st with dreams;—(How can this be!)
With what's unreal thou coactive art,
And follow'st nothing: Then, 'tis very credent,
Thou may'st co-join with something; and thou dost.

[And that beyond commission; and I find it.]
Add that to the infection of my brains,
And hardening of my brows.

Pol. What means Sicilia?

Her. He something seems unsettled.

Pol. How, my lord?

What cheer! how is't with you, best brother?

Her. You look,

As if you held a brow of much distraction:

Are you mov'd, my lord?

Leon. No, in good earnest,—
How sometimes nature will betray its folly,
Its tenderness, and make itself a passion
To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines
Of my boy's face, methoughts, I did recall
Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbredch'd,
In my green velvet coat: my dagger muzzled,
Lest it should bite its master, and so prove,
As ornaments oft do, too dangerous.
How like, methought, I then was to this kern,
This quash, this gentleman—Mine honest friend,
Will you take eggs for money?

Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight.

Leon. You will! why, happy man be his dole!

—My brother,

Are you so fond of your young prince as we
Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home, sir.
He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter:
Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;
My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all:
He makes a July's day short as December:
And, with his varying chulidness, cures in me
Thoughts that would thick my blood.

Leon. So stands this squire
Off'd with me: We two will walk, my lord.
And leave you to your graver steps.—Hermione,
How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's wel-
Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap: [come;
Next to thyself, and my young rover, he's Apparent to my heart.

Her. If you would seek us,
We are yours! 't the garden: Shall's attend you
there?

Leon. To your own tents dispose you: you'll be
Be you beneath the sky:—I am aching now,
Though you perceive me not how I give line.
Go to, go to!

[Aside.]
Observing Polixenes and Hermione.
How she holds up the neb, the bill to him!
And arms her with the boldness of a wife
To her allowing husband! Gone already;

ACT I.

SCENE I.— Sicilia. An Antechamber in Leontes' Palace.Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia, and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the king of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Whom our entertainment shall shame us, we will be justified in our loves: for, indeed,—

Cam. Beseech you,—

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge; we cannot with such magnificence as is so rare—I know not what to say.—We will give you sleepy drinks: that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear, for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhood; and there rooted betwixt them such an affection, which cannot chide us but branch now. Since their more mature dignities, and royal necessities, made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been royally attended, with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies; that they have seemed to be together, though absent; shook hands, as over a vast; and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think, there is not in the world either malice, or matter, to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young prince Mamillius: that is a gentleman of the greatest promise, that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: It is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh; they that went on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life, to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die!

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son, they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room of State in the Palace.Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Hermione, Mamillius, Camillo, and Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the wat'ry star have been The shepherd's note, since we have left our throne Without a burden: time as long again Would he fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks; And yet we should, for perpetuity, Go hence in debt: And therefore, like a cipher, Yet standing in rich place, I multiply, With one we thank you, many thousands more That go before it.

Leont. Stay your thanks awhile;

And pay them when you part.

Pol.

Sir, that's to-morrow.

I am question'd by my fears, of what my chance.

Or breed upon our absence: That may blow No miening winds at home, to make us say, This is put forth too truly! Besides, I have stay'd To tire your royalty.

Leont. We are tougher, brother Than you can put us to't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leont. One seven-night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to-morrow. We'll part the time between's then; and in that I'll no gain-saying.

Pol. Press me not, 'beseech you so; There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world.

So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now, Were there necessity in your request, although I were needful I denied it. My affairs

'Tis even draw me homeward: that to hinder, Were, in your love, a whip to me; my stay, To you a charge, and trouble: to save both, Farewell, our brother.

Leont. I'm out-tied, our queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace, until

You had drawn oaths from him, not to stay. You, Charge him too coldly: Tell him, you are sure, All in Bohemia's well: this is satisfaction. The by-gone day proclaim'd: say this to him, He's beat from his best ward.

Leont. Well said, Hermione.

Her. To tell, he longs to see his son, were strong: But let him say so then, and let him go: But let him swear so, and he shall not stay, We'll thrack him hence with distaffs— Yet of your royal presence [to Polixenes] I'll adventure

The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia You take my lord, I'll give him my commission, To let him there a month, behind the great Prefix'd for his parting: yet, good deed, Leontes, I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind What lady else her lord.—You'll stay!

Pol. Nay, but you will?

Her. Verily! I may not verily.

You put me off with limber vows: But I, Though you would seek to unsphere the stars with oaths,

Should yet say, Sir, no going. Verily,

You shall not go: a lady's verily is

As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?

Force me to keep you as a prisoner,

Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees. When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?

My prisoner? or my guest? by your dread verily, One of them you shall be.

Pol. Your guest then, madam; To be your prisoner, should import offending; Which is for me less easy to commit,

I than you to punish.

Her. Not your greater then,

But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you Of my lord's tricks, and yours, when you were boys; You were pretty lordlings then.

Pol. We were, fair queen. Two lads, that thought there was no more behind, But such a day to-morrow as to-day, And to be buy eternal.

Her. Was not my lord the verier war o' the twof?

Pol. We were as twain'd lambs, that did frisk i' the sun,

And bleat the one at the o'er: What we chang'd

Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is chang'd, as she had never been.
Pat. Nay, I will win my wager better yet;
And show more signs of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Re-enter Katharina, with Bianca and Widow.
See, where she comes; and brings your forward
wives

As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.—
Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not;
Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.

[Katharina pulls off her cap, and throws it down.]
Wid. Lord, let me never have a cause to sigh,
Till I be brought to such a silly pass!

Bian. Fye! what a foolish duty call you this!
Luc. I would, your duty were as foolish too:
The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca, (time)

Hath cost me an hundred crowns since supper-time. The more fool you, for laying on my duty.

Pat. Katharine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong wenches,

What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.
Wid. Come, come, you're mocking; we will have no telling.

Pat. Come on, I say; and first begin with her.
Wid. She shall not.

Pat. I say, she shall;—and first begin with her.
Kath. Fye, fye! unknit that threatening unkind
brow;

And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor:
It hits thy beauty, as frosts hit the meads;

Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake fair
And in no house is meet or suitable. (sides)

A woman's word, is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;

And, while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip, or touch one drop of it.

Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance: commits his body
To painful labour, both by sea and land;

To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
While thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;

And craves no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, fair looks, and true obedience.—
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband:

And when she's froward, peevish, sullen, sour,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she, but a foul contending rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?—

I am ashamed, that women are so simple
To offer war, where they should kneel for peace,
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway.

When they are bound to serve, love, and obey,
Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toil, and trouble in the world?

But that our soft conditions, and our hearts,
Should well agree with our external parts!
Come, come, you froward and unable worms!

My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart as great; my reason, haply, more,
To bandy word for word, and frown for frown:

But now, I see our lances are but straws;
Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare.—

That seeming to be most, which we least are.
Then tap your stomachs, for it is no hurt;

And place your hands below your husband's foot:
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready, may it do him ease.

Pat. Why, there's a wench!—Come on, and kiss me, Kate. (kiss)

Luc. Well, go thy ways, old lad: for thou shalt win. 'Tis a good hearing, when children are toward. (toward)

Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are frow-
ard. (froward)

Pat. Come, Kate, we'll to bed:—
We three are married, but you two are sped.

'Twas I won the wager, though you hit the white;
[To Lucutio.]

And, being a winner, God give you good night!
[Exeunt Petruccio and Kath.]

Hor. Now go thy ways, thou hast tam'd a curst shrew.

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Lucentio's House.

A banquet set out. Enter Baptista, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, Bianca, Petruchio, Katharina, Hortensio, and Widow Trauco, Biandello, Grumio, and others, attending.

Luc. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree;
And time is so, when raging war is done,
To smile at escapades and perils overblown.—
My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome.
While I with self-same kindness welcome thine:—
Brother Petruchio,—sister Katharina,—
And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,—
Feast with the best, and welcome to my house;
My banquet is to close our stomachs up,
After our great good cheer: Pray you sit down;
For now we sit to chat as well as eat.

Pet. Nothing but sit and eat, and eat and eat!
Bap. Paina affords this kindness, son Petruchio.
Pet. Paina affords nothing but what is kind.
Hor. For both our sakes I would that word were true.

Pet. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.
Wid. Then never trust me if I be afraid.
Pet. You are sensible, and yet you miss my sense; I mean, Hortensio is afraid of you.

Wid. He that is giddy, thinks the world turns round.

Kath. Mistress, how mean you that I

Wid. 'Thus I conceive by him. [That I]

Pet. Conceive by me!—How likes Hortensio

Hor. My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.

Pet. Very well minded: Knew him for that, good widow.

Kath. He that is giddy, thinks the world turns round:—

I pray you tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,

Measures your husband's sorrow by his woe;

And now you know my meaning.

Kath. A very mean meaning.

Wid. Right, I mean you.

Kath. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.

Pet. To her, Kate!

Hor. To her, widow!

Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her

Hor. That's my office. [Down.]

Pet. Spoke like an officer:—Ha! to thee, lad.

Bap. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks!

Gre. Believe me, sir, they butt together well.

Bap. Head, and butt? as busy-witted body.

Woe may your head and butt were head and horn.

Vin. Ay, mistress bridle, hath that awaken'd you?

Bap. Ay, but not frightened me; therefore I'll sleep again. [Hugon.]

Pet. Nay, that you shall not; since you have

Have at you for a better jest or two.

Bap. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my bush,

And then pursue me as you draw your bow:—

You are welcome all.

[Enter Bianca, Katharina, and Widow.

Pet. She hath prevented me—Here, signior Trauco.

This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not,

Therefore, a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tra. O, sir, Lucentio slipp'd me like his greyhound,

Which runs himself, and catches for his master.

Pet. A good swift simile, but something curriish.

Tra. The well, sir, that you hunted for yourself;

The thought, your deer does hold you at a bay.

Bap. O ho, Petruchio, Trauco hits you now.

Luc. I thank thee for that girl, good Trauco.

Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?

Pet. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess;

And, as the jest did glance away from me,

The ten in one it main'd you two outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio,

I think thou hast the worst shrew of all.

Pet. Well, I say—no; and therefore, for need's

Let's each one send unto his wife:

And he, whose wife is most obedient

To come at first when he doth send for her,

Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hor. Content:—What is the wager?

Luc. Twenty crowns.

Pet. Twenty crowns!

I'll venture so much on my hawk, or hound,

But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Pet. Content.

Hor. Who shall begin?

Luc. That will I. Go,

Biandello, bid your mistress come to me.

Bian. I go. [Exit.

Bap. Son, I will be your half, Bianca comes.

Luc. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enter Biandello.

How now! what news?

Bian. Sir, my mistress sends you word

That she is busy, and she cannot come:

Pet. How! she is busy, and she cannot come!

Is that an answer?

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too:

Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Hor. I hope, better.

Hor. Sirrah, Biandello, go, and entreat my wife

To come to me forthwith. [Exit Biandello.

Pet. O, ho! entreat her!

Nay, then she must needs come.

Hor. I am afraid, sir,

Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Re-enter Biandello.

Now, where's my wife? [Hand;

Bian. She says, you have some goodly jest in

She will not come; she bids you come to her.

Pet. Worse and worse? she will not come! O

Intolerable, not to be endur'd! [Vile,

Sirrah, Grumio, go to your mistress;

Say I command her come to me. [Exit Grumio.

Hor. I know her answer.

Pet. What?

Hor. She will not come.

Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Katharina.

Bap. Now, by my holidays, here comes Katharina!

Kath. What is your will, sir, that you sent for

Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?

Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.

Pet. Go, fetch them hither; if they deny to come, [Shouts;

Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husband,

I say, and bring them hither straightway. [Exit Katharina.

Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder,

Hor. And so it is; I wonder what it bodes

Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet

An awful rule, and right supremacy; [Life,

And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy.

Bap. Now fair befall thee, good Petruchio!

The wager thou hast won; and I will add

Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns!

that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

Pro. Thou liest; his father is come from Pisa, and here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father?

Pro. Ay, sir; so his mother says, if I may believe her.

Pro. Why, how now, gentleman! (To Vincentio.) Why, this is fast knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Pro. Lay hands on the villain: I believe, 'a might be chosen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter Biondello.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together; God send 'em good shipping!—But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio? now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

Vin. Come hither, crack-hemp.

[Seeing Biondello.]

Bion. I hope, I may choose, sir.

Vin. Come hither, you rogue; What, have you forgot me?

Bion. Forgot you? no sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain, dost thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old, worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir; see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. It's no indeed! [Beats Biondello.]

Bion. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me.

Pro. Help, son! help, signior Baptista!

[Exit, from the windows.]

Pro. Prythee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this contrivance. [They retire.]

Re-enter Pedant below; Baptista, Tranio, and Servants.

Trs. Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I, sir? say, what are you, sir?—O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatain hat!—O, I am undone! I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Trs. How now! what's the matter?

Pro. What, is the man lunatic?

Trs. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman: Why, sir, what concerns it you, if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father! O villain! he is a sail-maker in Bergamo.

Pro. You mistake, sir; you mistake, sir; Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name! as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is—Tranio.

Pro. Away, away, mad man! his name is Lucentio; and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, signior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio! O, he hath murdered his master!—Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name:—O, my son, my son!—tell me, thou villain, where is my son, Lucentio?

Trs. Call forth an officer: [Enter one with an Officer.] carry this mad knave to the gaol:—Father, Baptista, I charge you see, that he be forth-coming.

Vin. Carry me to the gaol!

Gre. Stay, officer: he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talk not, signior Grumio; I say he shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, signior Baptista, lest you be come-catched in this business; I dare swear, this is the right Vincentio.

Pro. Swear, if thou dar'st.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Trs. Then thou wert best say, that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard; to the gaol with him.

Vin. Thus strangers may be hated and abused.—O monstrous villain!

Re-enter Biondello, with Lucentio and Bianca.

Bion. O we are spoiled, and—Yonder he is; deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Luc. Pardon, sweet father. [Kneeling.]

Vin. Lives my sweetest son!

[Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant run out.]

Bion. Pardon, dear father. [Kneeling.]

Bap. How hast thou offended?

Where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio,

Right son unto the right Vincentio;

That have by marriage made thy daughter mine.

While counterfeit supposes bear'd thine eyes.

Grr. Here's packing, with a witness, to deceive us all!

Vin. Where is that damned villain, Tranio,

That fed and brav'd me in this matter so?

Bap. Why, tell me is not this my Cambio?

Bion. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's

Maid me exchange my state with 'Tranio, [kne] While he did bear my countenance in the town;

And happily I have arriv'd at last

Unto the wished haven of my bliss:—

What 'Tranio did, myself enforced him to;

Then pardon him sweet father, for my sake.

Vin. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the gaol.

Bap. But do you hear, sir? [To Lucentio.]

Have you married my daughter without asking my good-will?

Vin. Fear not, Baptista; we will content you,

But I will in, to be revenged for this villany!

[Exit.]

Bap. And I, to sound the depth of this knavery.

[Exit.]

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. [Exeunt Luc. and Bion.]

Gre. My cake is dough: But I'll in among the rest;

Out of hope of all,—but my share of the feast. [Exit.]

Petruchio and Katharina, advance.

Kath. Husband, let's follow to see the end of this

Pro. First kiss me, Kate, and we will. [Exit.]

Kath. What, in the midst of the street?

Pro. What, art thou ashamed of me?

Kath. No, sir; God forbid:—but ashamed to kiss.

Pro. Why, then let's house again:—Come, sirrah, let's away.

Kath. Nay, I will give thee a kiss: now pray thee, love, stay.

Pro. Is not this well?—Come, my sweet Kate;

Better once than never, for never too late. [Exeunt.]

Bian. I cannot tarry: I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit; and so may you, sir; and so adieu, sir. My master hath appointed me to go to St. Luke's, to bid the priest be ready to come again at you come with your appendix. [Exit.]
 Luc. I may, and will, if she be so contented: She will be pleas'd, then wherefore should I doubt? Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about her; it shall go hard, if Cambio go without her. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—A public Road.

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, and Hortensio.

Pet. Come on, n'God's name; once more toward our father's.

Good Lord, how bright and goodly shines the moon!
 Kath. The moon! the sun; it is not moonlight now.

Pet. I say, it is the moon that shines so bright.
 Kath. I know, it is the sun that shines so bright.

Pet. Now, by my mother's sun, and that's myself, it shall be moon, or star, or what I list.

Or ere I journey to your father's house:—Go on, and fetch our horses back again.—

Evermore cross'd, and cross'd: nothing but cross'd!
 Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go.

Kath. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far, and be it moon, or sun, or what you please:

And if you please to call it a rash candle, henceforth I vow it shall be so for me.

Pet. I say, it is the moon.
 Kath. I know it is.

Pet. Nay, then, you lie: it is the blessed sun.
 Kath. Then, God be blessed, it is the blessed sun;

But sun it is not, when you say it is not; And the moon changes even as your mind.

What you will have it call'd, even that it is; And so it shall be so, for Katharine.

Hor. Petruchio, go thy way; the field is won.
 Pet. Well, forward, forward: thus the bowl should run.

And not unluckily against the win.—But soft; what company is coming here?

Enter Vincentio, in a travelling dress.

Good morrow, gentle mistress: Where away?—[To Vincentio.]

Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too, Hast thou beheld a fresher gentleman?

Such war of white and red within her cheeks! What stars do sparkle heaven with such beauty,

As those two eyes become that heavenly face?—Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee:—

Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.
 Hor. A will make the man used, to make a woman of him.

Kath. You're budding virgin, fair, and fresh, and Whither away; or where is thy shade? [Sweet.]

Happy the parents of so fair a child; Happier the man, whom favourable stars

Alas thee for his lovely bed-fellow! [Mad:]
 Pet. Why, hush now, Kate! I hope thou art not

This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd, And not a maiden, as thou say'st he is.

Kath. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes, That have been so bedazzled with the sun,

That every thing I look on seemeth green: Now I perceive thou art a reverend father;

Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.
 Pet. O, good old grandure: and, withal, make known

Which way thou'rt ravell'd: if along with us, We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vin. Fair sir,—and you my merry mistress— That with your strange encounter much amaz'd me; call'd— Vincentio my dwelling—

And braid I am to Padua; there to visit A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Pet. What is his name?
 Vin. Lucentio, gentle.

Pet. Happily met! the happier for thy son. And now by law, as well as reverend age,

I may entitle thee—my loving father; The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman.

Thy son by this hath married: Wonder not; N't be not griev'd; she is of good esteem,

Hath dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth; Besides, so qualified as may become

The spouse of any noble gentleman. Let me embrace with old Vincentio:

And wander we to see thy honest son, Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.

Vin. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure, Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest

Upon the company you overtake?
 Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth; her of; For our first merriment hath made true:—[Enter Petruchio, Katharina, and Vincentio.]

Hor. Well, Petruchio, this hath put me in heart. Have to my widow; and if she be forward,

Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be unwind. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Padua. Before Lucentio's House.

Enter on one side Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca; Gramio walking on the other side.

Bian. Softly and swiftly, sir; for the priest is ready.

Luc. I fry, Biondello: but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us.

Bian. Nay, faith, I'll see the church of your back; and then come back to my master as soon as I can.

[Exit Lucentio, Bianca, and Biondello.]
 Gre. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, Vincentio, and Attendants.

Pet. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house; My father's bears more toward the market place; Thither must I, and here I leave you, sir. [Exit.]

Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you I think, I shall command your welcome here, And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward.

[Knocks.]
 Gre. They're busy within, you were best knock louder.

Enter Podest above, at a window.

Pet. What's he, that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

Vin. Is signor Lucentio within, sir?

Pet. He's within, sir, but not to be spoken withal.

Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?

Pet. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself; he shall need none, so long as I live.

Pet. Nay, I told you, your son was beloved in Padua.—Do you hear, sir?—to leave frivolous circumstances.—I pray you, tell signor Lucentio

Pet. Hortense, say thou wilt see the tailor paid. [Aside.]

Go take a house; begone, and say no more.
Hor. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow. Take no unkindness of his hasty words. [Rush away, I say; commend me to thy master.]

[Exit Tailor.]
Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's

Even in these honest, mean habiliments;
 Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor:
 For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich;
 And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
 So honour peeps in the meanest habit.
 What, is the jay more precious than the lark,
 Because his feathers are more beautiful?
 Or is the adder better than the eel,
 Because his pointed skin contents the eye?
 O, no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse
 For this poor furniture, and mean array.
 If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me:
 And therefore, frolic; we will hence forthwith,
 To feast and sport us at thy father's house.—
 Go, call my men, and let us straight to him;
 And bring our horses unto Long-lane end,
 There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.—
 Let's see; I think, 'tis now some seven o'clock,
 And well we may come there by dinner-time.

*Kat. I dare assure you, sir, 'tis almost two,
 And 'twill be supper-time, ere you come there.*

*Pet. It shall be seven, ere I go to horse:
 Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do,
 You are still crossing it.—Sirra, let's alone:
 I will not go to-day; and ere I do,
 It shall be what o'clock I say it is.*

Hor. Why, so! this gallant will command the sun. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Padua. Before Baptista's House.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant dressed like Vincentio.

Tra. Sir, this is the house; Please it you, that I call!

*Ped. Ay, what else? and, but I be deceived,
 Signior Baptista may remember me,
 Near twenty years ago, in Genoa, where
 We were lodgers at the Pegasus.*

Tra. And hold your own, in any case, with such Austerity as 'longeth to a father.

Enter Biondello.

*Ped. I warrant you: But, sir, here comes your Twere good, he were school'd! [boy;
 Tra. Fear you not him. Sirrah, Biondello,
 Now do your duty thoroughly, I advise you;
 Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.*

Bon. 'Tis I fear not me.

*Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?
 Bon. I told him that your father was at Venice;
 And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.*

Tra. 'Tisn't a tall fellow; hold thee that to drink.

Here comes Baptista:—set your countenance, sir.

Enter Baptista and Lucentio.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met:—
 Sir, [to the Pedant.]

This is the gentleman I told you of:
 I pray you, stand good father to me now,
 Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Ped. Soft, sir!

Sir, by your leave, having come to Padua
 To gather some debts, my son Lucentio

Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
 Of love between your daughter and himself:
 And—for the good report I hear of you,
 And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
 And she to him,—to stay him not too long.
 I am content, in a good father's care, [like
 To have him match'd; and,—if you pleas'd to
 No worse than I, sir,—upon some agreement,
 Me shall you find most ready and most willing
 With one consent to have her so bestowed;
 For curious I cannot be with you,
 Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

*Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say;—
 Your planness, and your shortness, please me
 Right true it is, your son Lucentio here [well,
 Doth love my daughter, and she loveth him,
 Or both dissemble deeply their affection:
 And, therefore, if you say no more than this,
 That like a father you will deal with him,
 And pass my daughter a sufficient dower,
 'Tis much as fully made, and all is done:
 Your son shall have my daughter with consent.*

*Tra. I thank you, sir. Where then do you know
 We be affit; and such assurance 'a'is, [best,
 As shall with either party agreement stand?
 Bap. Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you know,
 Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants:
 Besides, old Gratiano is hear'ning still;
 And, happily, we might be interrupted.*

*Tra. Then at my lodging, as it like you, sir:
 There doth my father lie; and there, this night,
 We'll pass the business privately and well:
 Send for your daughter by your servant here,
 My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently.*

The worst is this,—that, at so slender warning,
 You're like to have a thin and slenderittance.
*Bap. It likes me well:—Cambio, here you come,
 And bid Bianca make her ready straight;
 And, if you will, tell what hath happened:—
 Lucentio's father is arrived in Padua,
 And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.*

*Luc. I pray the gods she may, with all my heart!
 Tra. Daily not with the gods, but get thee gone:
 Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way?
 Welcome! one mess is like to be your cheer;
 Come, sir, we'll better it in Pisa.*

Bap. [Exeunt Tranio, Pedant, and Baptista.]

Bion. Cambio.— What say'st thou, Biondello?
*Bion. You saw my master wink and laugh upon
 you!*

*Luc. Biondello, what of that?
 Bion. 'Faith nothing; but he has left me here behind, to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens.*

*Luc. I pray thee, moralize them.
 Bion. Then thus. Baptista is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son.*

*Luc. And what of him?
 Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.*

*Luc. And then?—
 Bion. The old priest at St. Luke's church is at your command at all hours.*

*Luc. And what of all this?
 Bion. I cannot tell; except they are buzzed about a counterfeit assurance: 'Take you assurance of her, cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum: to the church; take the priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest witnesses.'*

If this be not that you look for, I have no more to
 But, bid Bianca farewell for ever and a day. [Exit
 Biondello.]

Luc. Hear'st thou, Biondello?

That triumph thus upon my misery!
Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio, with a dish of meat; and Hortensio.

Pet. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all
Hill. Mistress, what cheer? [amort]

Kath. 'Faith, as cold as can be.
Pet. Pluck up thy spirits, look cheerfully upon
Here, love; thou see'st how diligent I am, [true
To dress thy meat myself, and bring it thee:

I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.
What, not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it not:

And all my pains I sorted to no proof:—
Here, take away this dish. [Sets the dish on a table.

Kath. 'Pray you, let it stand.
Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks;
And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.

Kath. I thank you, sir.
Hor. Signior Petruchio, fy! you are to blame!
Come, mistress Kate, I'll bear your company.

Pet. Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st me.— [Aside.

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!
Kate, eat up now:—And now my honey love,
Will we return unto thy father's house;

And revel it as bravely as the best,
With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and things;
With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery,

With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery.
What hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy leisure,
To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments.

Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gown—What news with you, sir?
Hab. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pet. Why, this was mended on a porringer;
A velvet dish:—fy, fy! 'tis lewd and filthy;
Why, 'tis a corkle, or a walnutshell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a ludy's cap;

Away with it, come, let me have a bigger.
Kath. I'll have no bigger: this doth fit the time,
And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one
And not till then. [To us,

Hor. That will not be in haste. [Aside.
Kath. Why, sir, I trust, I may have leave to speak;
And speak I will; I am no child, no hulse:

Your letters have enur'd me say my mind;
And, if you cannot, best you stop your ears
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart;

Or else my heart, concealing it, will break;
And rather than it shall, I will be free
Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.

Pet. Why, thou say'st true; it is a peltrey cap,
A cusard-ciffin, a hubble, a silken pie:
I love thee well, as that thou lik'st it not.

Kath. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap;
And it I will have, or I will have none.

Pet. Thy gown? why, ay:—Come, tailor, let us see't.

O mercy, God! what masking stuff is here!
What's that? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon;
What's up and down, ear'd like an apple-tart?

Here's sun, and nip, and cut, and slash, and slash,
Like to a censer in a barber's shop:—
Why, what, o' devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?

Hor. I see, she's like to have neither cap nor gown. [Aside.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion, and the time.

Pet. Marry, and did; but if you be remember'd,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.

Go, hop me over every keasel house,
For you shall hop without my custom, sir:
I'll none of it; hence, make your best of it.

Kath. I never saw a better fashion'd gown,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:

Belike, you mean to make a puppet of me.
Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of
thee.

Tai. She says, your worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou
Thou thimble,

[Thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter,
naul,

Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter cricket thou:—
Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread!

Away, thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant;
Or I shall so be-mote thee with thy yard.

As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st:
I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown.

Tai. Your worship is deceived: the gown is Just as my master had direction: [noise

Grumio gave order how it should be done.
Gru. I gave him no order, I gave him the stuff.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be made?
Gru. Marry, sir, with needle and thread.

Tai. But did you not request to have it cut?
Gru. 'Thou hast faced many things.

Tai. I have.
Gru. Faced not me: thou hast braved many men; brave not me: I will neither be faced nor braved: I say unto thee,—I bid thy master cut out the gown; but I did not bid him cut it to pieces: crye, thou liest.

Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.

Pet. Read it.
Gru. 'The note lies in his throat, if he say I said so.

Tai. Imprints, a loose-bodied gown:
Gru. Master, if ever I saw loose-bodied gown, saw me in the skirts of it, and sent me to death with a bottom of brewa thread: I said, a gown.

Pet. Proceed.
Tai. With a small compassed cape:

Gru. I compass the cape.
Tai. With a trunk sleeve:—

Gru. I compass two sleeves.
Tai. 'The sleeves curiously rad

Pet. Ay, there's the villany.
Gru. Error i' the bill, sir; error i' the bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again: and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be arr'd in a thimble.

Tai. This is true, that I say: an' had thee in place where, thou should'st know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy note-yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercy, Grumio! thou be'st shall have no odds.

Pet. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.
Gru. You are i' the right, sir: 'tis for my mistress.

Pet. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.
Gru. Villain, not for thy life: Take up my mistress's gown for thy master's use!

Pet. Why, sir, what's your conceit in that?
Gru. O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for:

Take up my mistress's gown to his master's use!
O, fy, fy, fy!

Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow—
Never to woo her more; but do forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have foolishly flatter'd her withal.

Tra. And here I take the like unwelcome oath, Ne'er to marry with her though she would entreat.

Eye on her! see, how heavily she doth court him.
Hor. 'Would, all the world, but he, had quite
forsworn!

For me,—that I may surely keep mine oath,
I will be married to a wealthy widow
Ere three days pass; which hath as long lov'd me.
As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard:
And so farewell, signior Lucentio!—
Kindness in woman, not their besetuous looks,
Shall win my love; and so I take my leave,
In resolution as I swore before.

(Exit Hortensio.—Lucentio and Bianca advance.)

Tra. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace
As 'longeth to a lover's blessed case!
Nay, I have ta'en you tapping, gentle love;
And have forsworn you with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest; But have you both for-sworn me!

Tra. Mistress, we have.
Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.

Tra. Faith, he'll have a lusty widow now,
That shall be woe'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joy!
Tra. Ay, and he'll tame her.

Bian. He says so, Tranio.
Tra. Faith, he is gone unto the taming-school.

Bian. The taming-school! what, is there such a place!

Tra. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the master;
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,—
To tame a shrew, and charm her chattering tongue.

Enter Biondello, running.

Bian. O master, master, I have watch'd so long
That I'm dog-weary; but at last I spied
An ancient anchor coming down the hill,
Will serve the turn.

Tra. What is he, Biondello?
Bian. Master, a mercatante, or a pedant,
I know not what; but formal in apparel,
In gait and countenance surely like a father.

Luc. And what of him, Tranio?
Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
I'll make him glad to see you, Vincentio;
And give assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio.

Take in your love, and then let me alone.
(Exit Lucentio and Bianca.)

Enter a Pedant.

Prd. God save you, sir!
Tra. And you, sir! you are welcome.
Travel you far on, or are you at the furthest?

Prd. Sir, at the furthest for a week or two;
But then up further; and as far as Rome;
And so to Tripoly, if God lend me life.

Tra. What countryman, I pray? Of Mantua.
Prd. Of Mantua, sir!—marry, God forbid!
And come to Padua, careless of your life!

Prd. My life, sir! how, I pray! for that goes hard.

Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua; know you not the cause?
Your ships are staid at Venice; and the duke
(For private quarrel) 'twixt your duke and him,
Hath banish'd us, proclaim'd it openly:

'Tis marvel; but that you're but newly come
You might have heard it ere so proclaim'd about.

Prd. Alas! sir, it is worse for me than so;
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Tra. Well, sir, to do you courtesy,
This will I do, and this will I advise you:
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Prd. Ay, sir, in Pisa have I often been:
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens.

Tra. Among them, know you one Vincentio?

Prd. I know him not, but I have heard of him;
A merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tra. He is my father, sir; and, sooth to say,
In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.

Bian. As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one. [Aside.]

Tra. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake:

And think it not the worst of all your fortunes,
That you are like to sir Vincentio.

His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd:—

Look, that you take upon you as you should;
You understand me, sir;—so shall you stay;

'Till you have done your business in the city:
If this be courtesy, sir, accept of it.

Prd. O, sir, I do; and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.

Tra. Then go with me to make the matter good.
This, by the way, I let you understand:—

My father is here look'd for every day,
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage.

'Twixt me and one Baptista's daughter here:
In all these circumstances I'll instruct you:

Go with me, sir, to clothe you as becomes you.
(Exit.)

SCENE III.—A Room in Petruchio's House.

Enter Katharina and Grumio.

Grw. No, no; forsooth, I dare not, for my life.

Kath. The more my wrump, the more my spite Wint, did he marry me to furnish me! (appears:

Beggars, that come unto my father's door,
Upon entreaty, have a present alms;

If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But I,—who never knew how to entreat,—

Am starv'd for meat, siddy for lack of sleep;
With outst kept waking, and with hawling fed:

And that which spites me more than all these
He does it under name of perfect love; (weeps,

As who should say,—if I should sleep, or eat,
'Twere deadly sickness, or else present death.—

I pr'ythee go, and get me some repeat:
I cure not what, so it be wholesome food.

Grw. What say you to a neat's foot?

Kath. 'Tis passing good; I pr'ythee let me have

Grw. I fear, it is too choleric a meat:— [It.
How say you to a fat tripe, finely broil'd?

Kath. I like it well; good Grumio, fetch it me.

Grw. I cannot tell; I fear, 'tis choleric.

What say you to a piece of beef, and mustard?

Kath. A dish that I do love to feed upon.

Grw. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.

Kath. Why, then the beef, and let the mustard
rest.

Grw. Nay, then I will not; you shall have the
Or else you get no beef of Grumio. (mustard.

Kath. Then both, or one, or any thing thou wilt.

Grw. Why, then the mustard without the beef.

Kath. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave. (Beats him.)

That feed'st me with the very name of meat:
Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you,

You laggar-headed and unpolish'd grooms!
What, no attendance? no regard? no duty?—
Where is the fish-knave I sent before?

Gro. Here, sir; as foolish as I was before.
Pet. You peasant swain! you whoreson malt-house drudge!

Did I not bid thee meet me in the park,
And bring along these rascal knaves with thee?

Gro. Na, baner! the coat, sir, was not fully made,
And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink'd i' the heel:
There was no link to colour Peter's hat. (ing:
And Walter's dagger was not come from sheath:
The's were none fine, but Adam, Ralph, and Gregory;

The rest were racted, old, and beggarly;
Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet you.

Pet. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in.—
(Exeunt some of the Servants.)
Where is the life that late I led— (Sings.)
Where are those— Sit down, Kate, and welcome.
Soul, soul, soul, soul!

Re-enter Servants with supper.

Why, when, I say!—Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry (When)

Off with my boots, you rogues, you villains!
It was the frier of orders grey, (Sings.)
As he forth walked on his way:—

Out, out, you rascal, you! pluck my furs awry:
Take that, and mend the plucking of the other—
(Strikes him.)

Be merry, Kate:—Some water here; what, ho!
Where's my spumel Trolius!—Sirrah, get you
hence.

And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither:
(Exit Servant.)
One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with—

Where are my slippers!—Shall I have some water? (A basin is presented to him.)
Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily:—
(Servant lets the ewer fall.)

You whoreson villain! will you let it fall?
(Strikes him.)

Kath. Patience, I pray you; 'twas a fault unwilling.

Pet. A whoreson, beetle-headed, flap-eared knave!
Come, Kate, sit down; and know you have a stomach.

Will you give thanks, sweet Kate; or else shall
What is this? mutton? (I)—

1 Serv. Ay. Who brought it? L

Pet. 'Tis burnt; and so is all the meat:
What dogs are these?—Where is the roasting cook?
How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,
And serve it thus to me that love it no!

There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all:
(Throws the meat, &c., about the stage.)

You headless, jolt-heads, and unwhipped slaves!
What do you grumble? I'll be with you straight.

Kath. I pray you, husband, be not so discontent:
The meat was well, if you were so contented.

Pet. I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and dried;
And I expressly am forbid to touch it. (away;
For it engenders cholier, pletheth anger;
And better 'twere that both of us did fast.—
Sauce, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric!—
These feed it with such over-roasted flesh.
Be patient; to-morrow it shall be mended.
And, for this night, will I fast for company.—
Come, we'll bring thee to thy bridal chamber.
(Exeunt Petruchio, Katharina, and Curtis.)

Nath. (Advancing) Peter, dost ever see the Peter. He kills her in her own humour. (like!)

Re-enter Curtis.

Gro. Where is he!
Curt. In her chamber,
Making a sermon of continency to her: (soul.
And rails, and swears, and raves; that she, poor
Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak;
And sits as one new-risen from a dream.
Away, away! for he is coming hither. (Exeunt

Re-enter Petruchio.

Pet. Thus have I politely begun my reign,
And 'tis my hope to end successfully:
My falcon now is sharp, and posture empty:
And, till she stoop, she must not be full-gorg'd,
For then she never looks upon her lure.
And her way I have to man my husband,
To make her come, and know her keeper's call,
That is, to watch her as we watch these kites,
That bate, and beat, and will not be obedient.
She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat:
Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall not.
As with the meat, some undeserved fault
I'll find about the making of the bed:

And here I'll fing the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the coverlet, another way the sheets—
Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend.

That all is done in reverend care of her;
And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night:
And, if she chance to nod, I'll rail and bawl,
And with the clamour keep her still awake.
This is a way to kill a wife with kindness;
And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humour:—

He that knows better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak; 'tis charity to shew. (Exit

SCENE II.—Padua. Before Baptista's House.

Enter Tranio and Hortensio.

Tr. Is't possible, friend Licio, that Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?

I tell you, sir, she hears me fair in hand.
Hor. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said,
Stand by, and mark the manner of my teaching.
(They stand aside.)

Enter Bianca and Lucentio.

Luc. Now, mistress, profit you in what you read?
Bian. Wilt, master, read you? I first resolve me.

Luc. I read that I profess, the art to love. (that.) Bian. And may you prove, sir, master of your art!

Luc. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart. (They retire.)

Hor. Quick proceedings, marry! Now, tell me,
I pray,

Yon that durst swear that your mistress Bianca
Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio.

Tr. O desperate love! unconstant woman!
I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful. (kind:—)

Hor. Mistake no more: I am not Licio,
Nor a musician, as I seem to be;

But one that scorn to live in this discourse,
For such a one as leaves a gentleman,
And makes a fool of such a cushion.

Know, sir, that I am call'd—Hortensio.

Tr. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection for Bianca;

And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness,
I will with you.—If you be so contented,— Forwear Bianca, and her love for ever.

Hor. See, how they kiss and court!—Signior
Lucentio,

Hep. Neighbours and friends, though bride and bridegroom wants.
For to supply the place at the table,
You know there wants no junkets at the feast;—
Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's place;
And let Bianca take her sister's room.
Tra. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it?
Bap. She shall, Lucentio.—Come gentlemen, let's go. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Petruchio's Country House.

Enter Grumio.

Gr. Phe, fe, on all tired jades! on all mad masters! and all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten! was ever man soayed I was ever man so weary! I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now, were not I a little pet, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my bowels, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me:—But, I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself; for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold. Hollo, hollo! Curtal!

Enter Curtis.

Curt. Who is that, calls so coldly?
Gr. A piece of ice: If thou doubt it, thou may'st slide from my shoulder to my heel, with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis.
Curt. Is my master and his wife coming, Grumio?
Gr. O, my, Curtis, ay: and therefore fire, fire; cast on no water.
Curt. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported?
Gr. She was, good Curtis, before this frost: but, thou know'st, winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tamed my old master, and my new mistress, and myself, follow Curtis.
Curt. Away, you three inch fool! I am no beast.
Gr. Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot; and so long am I, at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our mistress, whose hand (she being now at hand,) thou shalt mean feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office?
Curt. I prythee, good Grumio, tell me, How goes the world?
Gr. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and, therefore, fire: Do thy duty, and have thy duty; for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.
Curt. There's a fire ready; And, therefore, good Grumio, the news?
Gr. Why, Jack boy! ho boy! and as much news as thou wilt.
Curt. Come, you are so full of cony-catching:—
Gr. Why, therefore, fire; for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewed, cobwebs swept; the serving men in their new lutan, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the jacks fair within, the jills fair without, the carpet laid, and every thing in order?
Curt. All ready; And, therefore, I pray thee, news?
Gr. First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mine rascals out.
Curt. How!

Gr. Out of their saddles into the dirt: And thereby hangs a tale.

Curt. Let's ha't, good Grumio.Gr. Lend thine ear.Curt. Here.Gr. There.

[Striking him.]

Curt. 'Tis no to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

Gr. And therefore 'tis called, a sensible tale; and this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beseech listening. Now I begin: Ingrania, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress:—

Curt. Both on one horse?Gr. What's that to thee?Curt. Why, a horse

Gr. Tell thou the tale:—But hadst thou not crossed me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou shouldst have heard, in how many a place: how she was bemolled; how he left her with the horse upon her; how he beat me because her horse stumbled; how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore; how she prayed—that never pray'd before; how I cried: how the horses ran away; how her bride was burst; how I lost my crupper; with many things of worthy memory; which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave.

Curt. By thus reckoning, he is more shrew than she.

Gr. Ay; and that, thou and the proudest of you all shall find, when he comes home. But what talk I of this?—call for Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarop, and the rest; let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of indifferent knit: let them curtsy with their left legs; and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horse-tail, till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curt. They are.Gr. Call them forth.Curt. Do you hear, ho! you must meet my master, to countenance my mistress.Gr. Why, she hath a face of her own.Curt. Who knows not that?Gr. Thou, it seems; that callst for company to countenance her.Curt. I call them forth to credit her.Gr. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.Enter several Servants.Nath. Welcome home, Grumio.Phil. How now, Grumio?Joe. What, Grumio?Nich. Fellow Grumio!Nath. How now, old lad?

Gr. Welcome, you:—how now, you, —what, you;—follow, you, —and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companion, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nath. All things is ready: How near is our master?

Gr. Even at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not,—Cook's passion, silence!—I hear my master.

Enter Petruchio and Katharina.

Pat. Where be these knaves! What, no man at door,

To hold my stirrup, nor to take my horse!

Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip!

All Serv. Here, here, sir; here, sir.Pat. Here, sir! here, sir! here, sir! here, sir!

Could I repair what she will wear in me,
As I can change these poor accoutrements,
I were well for Kate, and better for myself.
But what a fool am I, to chat with you,
When I should bid good-morrow to my bride,
And seal the little with a lovely kiss!

[Exeunt Petruchio, Grumio, and Biancetto.]

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire:
We will persuade him, be it possible,
To put on better ere he go to church.

Bep. I'll after him, and see the event of this.
[Exit.]

Tra. But, sir, to her love concerneth us to add
Her father's liking: Which to bring to pass,
As I before imparted to your worship,
I am to get a man,—what'er he be,
It skills not much; we'll fit him to our turn.—
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa;
And make assurance, here in Padua,
Of greater sum than I have promised.
So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolmaster
Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly,
I were good, methinks, to steal our marriage;
Which once perform'd, let all the world say—no,
I'll keep mine own, despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,
And watch our vantage in this business:
We'll over-reach the greyhound, Grumio,
The narrow pyrrus father, Nicko, &c.
The quaint malicious Lucio;
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.—

Re-enter Grumio.

Sir, Grumio! came you from the church?

Gre. As willingly as e'er I came from school.

Tra. And is the bride and bridegroom coming home?

Gre. A bridegroom, say you? 'tis a groom, indeed.

A groomlike groom, and that the girl shall find.

Tra. Curstest than she? why, 'tis impossible.

Gre. Why he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.

Tra. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

Gre. 'Tis she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him.

I'll tell you, Mr. Lucentio; When the priest

Should ask—if Katharine should be his wife,

Ay, by gods-sweat, quoth he; and swore so loud

That, all amazed, the priest let fall the book:

And, as he stoop'd again to take it up,

The mad-brain'd bridegroom took him such a cuff

That down fell priest and book and book and priest;

Now take them up, quoth he, if any list.

Tra. What said the wench, when he arose again?

Gre. Trembled and shook; for why, he stamp'd!

and swore,

As if the vicar meant to oxen him.

But after many ceremonies done,

He calls for wine:—A health, quoth he; as if

He had been abroad, carrying to his 'nails

After a storm:—Quaff! off the marriage-dish,

And throw the sops all in the sexton's face;

Having no other reason,—

But that his beard grew thin and hungerily.

And seem'd to ask him sops as he was drinking.

This done, he took the bride about the neck;

And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous smack,

That, at the parting, all the church did echo.

I, seeing this, came thence for very shame;

And after me, I know, the rout is coming:

Such a mad marriage never was before;

Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play. [Mus.]

Enter Petruchio, Katharine, Bianca, Baptista, Hortensio, Grumio, and Trivia.

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains:

I know, you think to dine with me to-day,
And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer;

But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is't possible, you will away to-night?

Pet. I must away to-day, before night come:—
Make it no wonder; if you knew my business,

You would entreat me rather go than stay.
And, honest company, I thank you all.

That have believ'd me give away myself
To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife;

Dine with my father, drink a health to me;
For I must hence, and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be. Let me entreat you.

Gre. It cannot be. Let me entreat you.

Kath. I am content. Are you content to stay?

Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay;
But yet not say, entreat me how you can.

Kath. Now, if you love me, stay.

Pet. Grumio, my horses.

Gre. Ay, sir, they be ready; the oats leave us on the horses.

Kath. Nay, then,
Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day;

No, nor to-morrow, nor till I please myself.
The door is open, sir, there lies your way.

You may be joking, whiles your boots are green,
For me, I'll not be gone, till I please myself:

'Tis like, you'll prove a jolly surly groom,
That take it on you at the first as roundly.

Pet. O Kate, content thee; prythee be not sugry.

Kath. I will be angry: What hast thou to do!—
Father, be quiet: he shall say my leisure.

Gre. Ay, marry, sir: now it begins to work.

Kath. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal din!
I see, a woman may be made a fool, [Enter—

if she had not a spirit to resist.

Pet. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command:—

O obey the bride, you that attend on her:
Go to the feast, revel and dinner.

Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,
Be mad and merry—or go musing yourselves;

But for my honey Kate, she must win me.
Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret

I will be master of what is mine own:
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,

My household-stuff, my field, my barn,
My horse, my ox, my ass, my any thing;

And here she stands, touch her wherever dare;
I'll bring my notion on the proudhead her.

That staps my way in Padua.—Grumio,
Draw forth thy weapon, we're meet with thieves;

Because thy mistress, if thou be a man,—
Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not touch thee,

I'll buckler thee against a million. [Kate—

[Exeunt Petruchio, Katharine, and Grumio.]

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones.

Gre. Went they not quietly, I should die with laughing.

Tra. Of all mad matches, never was the like!

Luc. Mistress, what's your opinion of your master? [Enter—

Bian. 'Tis that, being mad herself, she's madly
Gre. I warrant him, Petruchio is Kate's

Petruchio.—Come, where be these gallants? who's at home?
Baptista.—You are welcome, sir.

TAMING OF THE SHREW. Act III., Scene II.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books.

And help to dress your sister's chamber up;
You know, to-morrow is the wedding-day.

Bian. Farewell, sweet masters, both; I must be gone. (Exeunt Bianca and Servant.)

Lac. 'Fith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay. (Exit.)

Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pedant; Methinks, he looks as though he were in love.— Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble, To cast thy wand'ring eyes on every stale, Seize thee, that last: if once I find thee ranging, Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. (Exit.)

SCENE II.—The same. Before Baptista's House.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katharina, Bianca, Lucentio, and Attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, [to Tranio] this is the 'pointed day

That Katharine and Petruchio should be married, And yet we hear not of our son-in-law: What will be said? what mockery will it be, To want the bridegroom, when the priest attends To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage? What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?

Kath. No shame but mine: I must, forsooth, be forc'd

To give my hand, oppos'd against my heart, Unto a mid-brain rudest, full of spleen; Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leisure. I told you, he was a frantic fool, Having his bitter jests in blunt behaviour:

And, to be noted for a merry man, He'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of marriage, Make friends, invite, yes, and proclaim the banns; Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd. Now must the world point at poor Katherine, And say,—Lo, there is mad Petruchio's wife,

If it could please him come and marry her.

Tra. Patience, good Katharine, and Baptista Upon my life, Petruchio means but well. [To]; Whatever fortune stays him from his word: Though he be blunt I know him passing wise; Though he be merry, yet willst thou he's honest.

Kath. 'Would Katherine had never seen him though!

(Exit weeping, followed by Bianca, and others.)

Bap. Go, girl; I cannot blame thee now for such an injury would vex a saint. [Weep; Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter Biandello.

Bian. Master, master! news, old news, and such news as is never heard of!

Bap. Is it new and old too! how may that be?

Bian. Why, is it not news, to hear of Petruchio's coming?

Bap. Is he come?

Bian. Why, no, sir.

Bap. What then?

Bian. He is coming.

Bap. When will he be here? (There.)

Bian. When he stands where I am, and sees you Tra. But, say, what:—To thine old news.

Bian. Why, Petruchio is coming, in a new hat, and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches, thrice turn'd; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, once buckled, another hood; an old rusty sword ta'en out of the town armory, with a broken hilt, and shapeless; with two broken points: His horse hipped with an old moth's saddle, the stirrups of no kindred: besides, possessed with the glanders, and like to mope in the chine; troubled with the lampas, infected with the fashions, full of wind-galls, sped with sparrows, railed with the yellows, past cure of the fever, stark spoiled with the staggers, begun with the ho's; sway'd in the back, and shoulder-shotten; ne'er legged before, and with a half checked bat, and a head-stall of sheep's leather; which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots: one girt six times pieced, and a woman's crupper of velvet, which hath two letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and here and there pieced with packthread.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bian. O, sir, his lackey, for all the world caparisoned like the horse: with a lichen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartered with a red and blue list; an old hat, and The humour of forty fancies prick'd in't for a feather: a mous'er, a very monster in apparel; and not like a Christian footboy, or a gentleman's lackey.

Tra. 'Tis some odd humour pricks him to this business:—

Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparel'd.

Bap. I am glad he is come, howso'er he comes.

Bian. Why, sir, he comes not.

Bap. Didst thou not say, he comes?

Bian. Who? that Petruchio comes?

Bap. Ay, that Petruchio comes.

Bian. No, sir; I say, his horse comes with him on his back.

Bap. Why, that's all one.

Bian. Nay, by Saint Juny, I hold you a penny, A horse and a man is more than one, and yet not many.

Enter Petruchio and Gremio.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who is it

Bap. You are welcome, sir. (Home.)

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not so well apparel'd

As I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better I should rush in thus.

But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride?

How does my father?—Gentles, methinks you

frown:

And wherefore gaze this graciously company?

As if they saw some wondrous monument,

Some comet, or unusual prodigy?

Bap. Why, sir, you know, this is your wedding-

First were we sad, fearing you would not come.

Now sadder, that you come so unprovided.

Fie! doff this habit, shame to your estate,

An eye-sore to our solemn festival.

Tra. And tell us, what occasion of import

Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,

And sent you hither so unlike yourself?

Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear:

Suffice it, I am come to keep my word,

Though in some part enforced to digress;

Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse

As you shall well be satisfied withal!

But, where is Kate? I stay too long from her!

The morning wears, 'tis time we were at church.

Tra. See not your bride in these unreverent robes;

Go to my chamber, put on clothes of mine.

Pet. Not I, believe me; thus I'll visit her.

Bap. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

Pet. Good woe, even thus; therefore have done with words;

To me she's married, not unto my clothes:

And, if I die to-morrow, this is hers.
If whilst I live, she will be only mine.
Tra. That, only, came well in.—Sir, list to me,
I am my father's heir, and only son:
If I may have your daughter to my wife,
I'll leave her houses three or four as good,
Within rich Pisa's walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua;
Besides two thousand ducats by the year,
Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure.—
What, have I pinch'd you, Signior Gremio?

Gre. Two thousand ducats by the year, of land!
My land amounts not to so much in all;
That she shall have; besides an argosy?
That now is lying in Marsellies' road:—
What, have I chok'd you with an argosy?

Tra. Gremio, 'tis known my father hath no less Than three great argosies; besides two gallies,
And twelve light galleys: these I will assure her,
And twice as much, what'er thou offer'st next.

Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all, I have no more;
And she can have no more than all I have;—
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.

Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from all the
By your firm promise; Gremio is out-vied. [world,
Bap. I must confess, your offer is the best;
And, let your father make her this assurance,
She is your own; else, you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where's her dower?

Tra. That's but a caviil; he is old, I young.
Gre. And may not young men die, as well as old?

Bap. Well, gentlemen,
I am thus resolv'd:—On Sunday next you know,
My daughter Katharine is to be married:
Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
Be bride to you, if you make this assurance;
If not, to Signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thank you both.

Gre. Adieu, good neighbour.—Now I fear thee
not;

Sirrah, young gamester, your father were a fool
To give thee all, and, in his waning age,
Set foot under thy table: Tut! a toy!
An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy. [Exit.

Tra. A vengeance on your crafty wither'd hide!
Yet I have faced it with a card of ten.
'Tis in my head to do my master good:—
I see no reason, but suppose'd Lucentio
Must get a father, call'd—suppos'd Vincentio;
And that's a wonder: fathers, commonly,
Do get their children; but, in this case of wooing,
A child shall get a sure, if I fail not of my running [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in Baptista's House.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Luc. Piddler, forbear; you grow too forward,
Have you no soon forgot the entertainment [sir:
Her sister Katharine welcome you withal!

Hor. But, wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony:
Then give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in music we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Luc. Preposterous! that never read so far
To know the cause why music was ordain'd!
Was it not to refresh the mind of man,
After his studies, or his usual pain?
Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And, while I pause, serve in your harmony.

Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.

Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me double
To strive for that which resteth in thy choice:

I am no breeching scholar in the schools;
I'll not be tied to hours, nor 'pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself.
And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down:—
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles;
His lecture will be done, ere you have tun'd.

Hor. You'll leave his lecture when I am in tune!
[To Bianca—] Hortensio retires.

Luc. That will be never;—tune your instrument. Where left we last? [ment.

Luc. Here, madam:—
Hic ibat Simois; hic est Sigea tellus,

Bian. Construe them.
Luc. Hic ibat, as I told you before—Simois, I am Lucentio,—hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa,

—Sigea tellus, disguised thus to get your love:—
Hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing,—Priami, is my man 'Traio,—regia, bearing my port,—cæsa senis, that we might beguile the old pedantum.

Hor. Madam, my instrument's in tune.
[Returning.

Bian. Let's hear:— [Hortensio plays.
O fie! the treble jars.

Luc. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.

Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it: Hic ibat Simois, I know you not; hic est Sigea tellus,
I trust you not:—Hic steterat Priami, take heed
he hear us not:—regia, presume not;—cæsa senis, despair not.

Hor. Madam, 'tis now in tune.
Luc. All hat the base.

Hor. The base is right: 'tis the base knave that How fiery and forward our pedant is!
[Jars.
Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love:
Pedascule, I'll watch you better yet.

Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.

Luc. Mistrust it not; for, sure, Æscides
Was Ajax, call'd so from his grandfather.

Bian. I must believe my master, else, I promise you,

I should be arguing still upon that doubt:
But let it rest.—Now, Licio, to you:—
Good masters, take it not unkindly, pray,
That I have been thus pleasant with you both.

Hor. You may go walk, [to Lucentio] and give me leave awhile;

My lessons make no music in three parts.
Luc. Are you so formal, sir? well, I must wait,
And watch withal; for, but I be deceiv'd,
Our fine musician groweth amorous. [Aside

Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument
To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of art,

To teach you gamut in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, plenary, and effectual,
Than hath been taught by any of my trade:
And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.

Bian. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.

Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.

Bian. [Reads] Gamut I am the ground of all
A re, to plead Hortensio's passion;
accord,

B mi, Bianca, take him for thy lord,

C faut, that loves with all affection;
D sol re, one ridd, two notes have I;

E la mi, show pity, or I die;

Call you this—gamut? I say I like it not:
Oud l'esquis please me best: I am not so nice,
To change the rules for odd seven times.

Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.

Kath. It is my fashion, when I see a crab.

Pet. Why, here's no crab; and therefore look Kath. There is, there is. [not sour.]

Pet. Then show it me.

Kath. Had I a glass, I would.

Pet. What, you mean my face?

Kath. Well am'd of such a young one.

Pri. Now, by Saint George, I am too young for Kath. Yet you are withered. [you.]

Pet. 'Tis with cares.

Kath. I care not.

Pet. Nay, hear you, Kate: in sooth, you 'scape

Kath. I chafe you, if I tarry; let me go. [not so.]

Pet. No, not a whit: I find you passing gentle.

"I was told me, you were rough, and coy, and

And now I find report a very liar; [stullen,

For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous; [flowers:]

But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time

'Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look askance,

Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will;

Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;

But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,

With gentle conference, soft and affable.

Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?

O slanderous world! Kate, like the hazel-hug,

Is straight, and slender; and as brown in hue,

As hazel-nuts, and sweeter than the kernels;

O, let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.

Kath. Good-fellow, whom thou keep'st command.

Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove,

As Kate this chamber with her princely gait?

O, be thou Dian, and let her be Kate;

And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportful.

Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech?

Pet. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.

Kath. A witty mother! witless else her son.

Pet. Am I not wise?

Kath. Yes; keep you warm.

Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katharine, in thy

And therefore, setting all this chit aside, [bed:]

Thus in plain terms;—Your father hath consented

That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed on;

And, will you, nil you, I will marry you.

Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;

For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,

(Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,) [bed:]

'Thou must be married to no man but me;

For I am he, am born to tame you Kate;

And bring you from a wild cat to a Kate

Comformable, as other household Kates.

Here comes your father; never make denial,

I must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter Baptista, Gremio, and Tranio.

Bap. Now,

Signior Petruccio! How speed you with

My daughter?

Pet. How, but well, sir! how, but well!

It were impossible, I should speed any.

Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine? in your dunnis? [you.]

Kath. Call you me, daughter? now I promise

You have show'd a tender fatherly regard,

To wish me wed to one half tunate;

A mad cap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,

That thinks with odds to force the matter out.

Pet. Father, 'tis thus,—yourself and all the world,

That talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her;

If she be curst, it is for policy;

For she's not inward, but modest as the dove;

She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;

For patience she will owe a second Grisel;

And Roman Lucrece for her chastity;

And to conclude,—we have 'greed so well o-

That upon Sunday is the wedding-day. [reth

Kath. I'll see these hanz'd on Sunday first.

Gre. Hark, Petruccio! she says, she'll see these hanz'd first. [night our part!]

Tra. Is this your speeding? nay, then, good

Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for myself;

If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?

'Tis bargain'd 'twixt us twain, being alone,

That she shall still be curst in company.

I tell you, 'tis incredible to believe

How much she loves me: O, the kindest Kate!

She hung about my neck; and kiss on kiss

She shed so fast, protesting oath on oath,

That in a twink she won me to her love.

O, you are novices! 'tis a world to see,

How tame, when men and women are alone.

A momecuck wretch can make the curtest shrew.—

Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice,

To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding-day:—

Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;

I will be sure, my Katharine shall be fine.

Bap. I know not what to say; but give me your hands.

God send you joy, Petruccio! 'tis a match.

Gre. Tra, Amen, say we; we will be witnesses.

Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu.

I will to Venice, Sunday comes apace:—

We will have rings, and things, and fine array;

And kiss me Kate, we will be married 'Sunday.

[Exeunt Petruccio and Katharine, severally.]

Gre. Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly!

Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's part,

And venture madly on a desperate mart.

Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you;

'Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.

Bap. The gain I seek is—quiet in the match.

Gre. No doubt, but he hath got a quiet catch.

But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter:—

Now is the day we long have looked for;

I am your neighbour, and was suitor first.

Tra. And I am one, that love Bianca more 'Than words can witness, or your thoughts can

guess.

Gre. Youngling! thou canst not love so dear as I.

Tra. Grey-beard! thy love doth freeze.

Gre. But thine doth fry.

Skipper, stand back; 'tis age that nourisheth.

Tra. But youth, in ladies' eyes, that flourisheth.

Bap. Content you, gentlemen; I'll compound

this strife:

'Tis deeds must win the prize: and he, of both,

That can assure my daughter greatest dower,

Shall have Bianca's love.—

Say, Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?

Gre. First, as you know, my house within the city is richly furnished with plate and gold;

Bianca, and cowers, to love her dainty hands;

My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry;

In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my crowns;

In cyprus chests my arras, counterpoints,

Costly apparel, tents and canopies,

Fine linen, Turkey cushions hanz'd with pearl,

Valance of Venice gold in needle-work,

Power and brass, and all things that belong

To house, or housekeeping: then, at my farm,

I have a hundred milch-kine to the pair,

Sixscore fat oxen standing in my stalls,

And all things answerable to this portion.

Myself am struck in years, I must confess;

I know him well: for you are very welcome, sir.—
Take you [to Hor.] the lute, and you [to Luc.] the set of books.
You shall go see your pupils presently.
Holla, within!

Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead [with.]
These gentlemen to my daughters: and tell them
These are their tutors: bid them use them well.
[Exit Servant, with Hor. suso, Lucentio, and Biondello.]

We will go walk a little in the orchard,
And then to dinner: You are passing welcome.
And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

*Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste.
And every day I cannot come to woo.*

You know my father well: and in him, me,
Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,
Which I have better'd rather than decreas'd:
Then tell me,—if I get your daughter's love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

*Bap. After my death, the one-half of my lands:
And, in possession, twenty thousand crowns.*

*Pet. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of Her widowhood,—he it that she survive me,—
In all my lands and leases whatsoever:*

Let specialties be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.
*Bap. Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd,
This is,—her love; for that is all in all.*

*Pet. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,
I am as desperate as the proud-minded;
And where two ravens first meet together,
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury:*

Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yields to me.

*Bap. For I am rash, and woo not like a babe [speed!]
Well may'st thou woo, and happy be thy
But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.*

*Pet. Ay, to the proof; as nounsouns are for winds,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.*

Re-enter Hortensio, with his head broken.

Bap. How now, my friend! why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good nu-sician?

*Hor. I think, she'll sooner prove a soldier;
Iron may hold with her but never lutes.* [Lute.]

*Bap. Why, then thou canst not break her to the lute. Why, say, for she hath broke the lute to me.
I did but tell her, she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering;
When, with a most impatient devilish spirit,*

*Frets, call you these? quoth she: 'I'll fume with them;
And with that word, she struck me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way;
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a pillory, looking through the lute;*

*While she did call me,—rascal fiddler,
And—twanging Jack; with twenty such vile
As she had studied to misuse me so.* [Ternus.]

*Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench;
I have her ten times more than e'er I did:
O, how I long to have some chat with her!*

Bap. Well, go with me, and be not so disconfited:

Proceed in practice with my younger daughter;
She's apt to learn, and thankful for good turns.—
Signior Petruchio, will you go with me;
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

*Pet. I pray you do; I will attend her here.—
[Exit Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, and Hortensio.]*

And woo her with some spirit when she comes.
Say, that she rail; Why, then I'll tell her plain.
She sings as sweetly as a nightingale:
Say, that she frown: I'll say she looks as clear
As morning roses newly wash'd with dew:
Say, she be mute, and will not speak a word;
Then I'll commend her volubility,
And say—she uttereth piercing eloquence:
If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a week;
If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day [ried:—
When I shall ask the hanna, and when he mar-
But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter Katharina.

Good-morrow, Kate; for that's your name, 'hear.
Kath. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing.

They call me—Katharine, that do talk of me.

Pet. You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate.

And bony Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;
But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom,
Kate of Kate-lane, my super dainty Kate,
For dainties are all Kates; and therefore, Kate,
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation:
Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every town,
Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty scouted,
[Yet not so deeply as to thee belov'd,]
Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.

Kath. Mov'd! in good time: let him that mov'd you hither.

Remove you hence: I knew you a first,
You were a moveable.

Pet. Why, what's a moveable?

Kath. A joint-stool.

Pet. Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.

Kath. Women are made to hear, and so are you.

Pet. Women are made to hear, and so are you.

Kath. No such jade, sir, as you, if me you mean.

*Pet. Alas, good Kate! I will not burden thee:
For, knowing thee to be but young and light,—*

*Kath. Too light for such a swain as you to catch;
And yet as heavy as my weight should be.*

Pet. Should be! I should huz

Kath. Well ta'en, and like a buzzard.

Pet. O, slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?

Kath. Ay, for a turtle; as he takes a buzzard.

Pet. Come, come, you wasp; I'faith, you are too angry.

Kath. If he waspish, heet beware my sting.

Pet. My remedy is then, to pluck it out.

Kath. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.

Pet. Who knows not where a wasp doth vent in his tail. [his sting!]

Kath. In his tongue.

Pet. Whose tongue?

Kath. Yours, if you talk of tails; and so farewell.

*Pet. What, with my tongue in your tail? say,
Good Kate; I am a gentleman.* [come again,

Kath. That I'll try.

[Striking him.]

Pet. I swear I'll cuff you, if you strike again.

Kath. So may you lose your arms:

If you strike me, you are no gentleman;

And if no gentleman, why, then no arms.

Pet. A herald, Kate! I put me in thy books.

Kath. What is your crest? a cuckoo? I!

Pet. A combslike cock, so Kate will be my hen.

Kath. No cock of mine, you crow too like a cuckoo.

Until the eldest sister first be wed:

The younger then is free, and not before.

Tra. If it be as, sir, that you are 'he man
Must stand as all, and me among the rest;
As if you break the ice, and do this feat,—
Achieve the elder, not the younger free
For our access,—whose hap shall be to have her,
Will not so graceless be, to be ingrate.

Hor. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive;
And since you do profess to be a suitor,
To whom as we do, gratify this gentleman,
To whom we all rest generally beholden.

Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack: in sign whereof,
Please ye we may contrive this afternoon,
And quaff carouses to our mistress' health;
And do as adversaries do in law,—
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.

Grem. Bon. O excellent notion! Fellows, let's beguise.

Hor. The notion's good indeed, and be it so;—
Petruchio, I shall be your ben venuto. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in Baptista's House.

Enter Katharina and Bianca.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong yourself.

To make a bondmaid and a slave of me:
That I disdain; but for these other gawds,
Unbind my hands, I'll pull them off myself,
Yea, all my raiment, to my petitioner;
Or, what you will command me, will I do,
So well I know my duty to my elders.

Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell Whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.

Bian. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive,
I never yet beheld that special face

Which I could fancy more than any other.

Kath. Minion, thou liest; 't is not Hortensio!

Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear,
I'll plead for you myself, but you shall have him.

Kath. O then, be like, you fancy riches more;
You will have Gremio to keep you fair.

Bian. Is it for him you do envy me so?

Nay, then you jest; and now I well perceive,
You have but jested with me all this while:

I prythee, sister Kate, outie my hands.
Kata. If that be jest, then all the rest was so.

[Strikes her.]

Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this molestie!

Bianca, stand aside;—poor girl! she weeps:—
Go ply thy needle; meads not with her.

For shame, thou hiding of a devilish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her that did never wrong
thee!

When did she cross thee with a bitter word?

Kath. Her silence frowns me, and I'll be reveng'd.
[Exit after Bianca.]

Bap. What, in my sight?—Bianca, get thee in.
[Exit Bianca.]

Kath. Will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see,
She is your treasure, she must have a husband.
I must dance bare foot on her wedding day,
And for your love to her, lead apes in hell.
Talk not to me; I will go sit and weep,
Till I can find occasion of revenge.

[Exit Katharina.]

Bap. Was ever gentleman thus griev'd as I?
But who comes here?

Enter Gremio, with Lucentio in the habit of a mean man; Petruchio, with Hortensio, as a musician; and Tranio, with Biondello bearing a lute and books.

Grem. Good-morrow, neighbour Baptista.

Bap. Good-morrow, neighbour Gremio: God save you, gentlemen!

Pet. And you, good sir! Pray, have you not a Cell'd Katharina, fair, and virtuous? [daughters]

Bap. I have a daughter, sir, call'd Katharina.

Grem. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.

Pet. You wrong me, Signior Gremio; give me
I am a gentleman of Verona, sir. [leave.]

That,—hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
Her affability, and bashful modesty,

Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,—
Am bold to show myself a forward guest

Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report which I so oft have heard.

And, for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine.

[Presenting Hortensio.]

Canning in music and the mathematics,
To instruct her fully in these sciences,

Whereof, I know, she is not ignorant:
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong;

His name is Licio, born in Mantua. [make:]

Bap. You're welcome, sir; and be for your good
But for my daughter Katharina,—I know,

She is not for your turn, the more my grief.

Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her:
Or else you like not of my company.

Bap. Mistake me not, I speak but as I find.
Whence are you, sir? what may I call your name?

Pet. Petruchio is my name: Antonio's son,
A man well known throughout all Italy. [make:]

Bap. I know him well; you are welcome for his Grem. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray.

Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too:
Because I you are unreluctant forward.

Pet. O, pardon me, Signior Gremio; I would fain be doing. [wooing:]

Grem. I doubt it not, sir; but you will curse your Neighbour, this as a gift very grateful, I am sure of it. To express the like kindness myself, that have been more kindly beholden to you than any,

I freely give unto you this young scholar, [presenting Lucentio] that hath been long studying at Rheims; as cunning in Greek, Latin, and other languages, as the other in music and mathematics;

his name is Camilio; pray, accept his service.

Bap. A thousand thanks, Signior Gremio; welcome, good Camilio.—But, gentle sir, [to Tranio] methinks, you walk like a stranger; May I be so bold to know the cause of your coming?

Tra. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own;
That, being a stranger in this city here,

Do make myself a suitor to your daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair, and virtuous.

Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preference of the eldest sister:

This liberty is all that I request—
That upon knowledge of my parentage,

I may have welcome amongst the rest that woo,
And free access and favour as the rest.

And, toward the education of your daughters,
I here bestow a simple instrument.

And this small packet of Greek and Latin books;
If you accept them, then their worth is great.

Bap. Lucentio is your name? of whence, I pray?

Tra. Of Pisa, sir; son to Vincentio.

Bap. A mighty man of Pisa: by report

Well seen in music, to instruct Bianca:
That so I may by this device, at least,
Have leave and leisure to make love to her,
And, unsuspected, court her by herself.

Enter Grumio; with him Lucentio disguised, with books under his arm.

Gra. Here's no knavery! See; to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together! Master, master, look about you: Who goes there? ha!

Her. Peace, Grumio: 'tis the rival of my love:
—Petruchio, stand by a while.

Gra. A proper strapping, and an amorous!

(They retire.)

Gra. O, very well: I have perused the note
Hark you, sir: I'll have them very fairly bound:
All books of love, see that at any hand;
And see you read no other lectures to her:
You understand me:—Over and beside Signior Baptista's liberality,
I'll read it with a larger.—Take your papers too,
And let me have them very well perfum'd;
For she is sweeter than perfume itself:
To whom they go. What will you read to her?

Luc. What'er I read to her, I'll plead for you,
As for my patron (stand you so assur'd),
As firmly as yourself were still in place:

Yes, and (perhaps) with more successful words
Than you, unless you were a scholar, sir.

Gra. O this learning! what a thing it is!
Gra. O this woodcock! what an ass it is!

Pet. Peace, sirrah.
Her. Grumio, mum!—God save you, Signior Grumio!

Gra. And you're well met, Signior Hortensio.
Trow you,

Whither I am going?—To Baptista Minola.
I promise'd to inquire carefully
About a schoolmaster for fair Bianca:
And, by good fortune, I have lighted well
On this young man; for learning, and behaviour,
Fit for her turn; well read in poetry
And other books,—good ones, I warrant you.

Her. 'Tis well: and I have met a gentleman,
Hath promise'd me to help me to another,
A fine musician to instruct our mistress;
So shall I no whit be behind in duty
To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gra. Belov'd of me,—and that my deeds shall
Gra. And that his bags shall prove. (Aside.)

Her. Grumio, 'tis no time to vent our love;
Listen to me, and if you speak me fair,
I'll tell you news indifferent good for either.
Here is a gentleman, whom by chance I met,
Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Will undertake to woo curst Katharine;
Yes, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gra. So sad, so done, is well:—
Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

Pet. I know she is an irksome brawling scold;
If that be all, trassers, I bear no harm.

Gra. No, say'st thou so, friend? What country?

Pet. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son:
My father dead, my fortune lives for me;
And I do hope good days, and long, to see.

Gra. O, sir, such a life, with such a wife, were strange:

But if you have a stomach, to't o' God's name:
You shall have me assisting you in all
But, will you woo this wild cat?

Pet. Will I live!
Gra. Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.

Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent?

Think you, a little din can daunt mine ears;
Have I not in my time heard lions roar?
Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,
Rage like an angry bear, o'fufed with sweat?
Have I not heard a great ord once in the field,
And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?
Have I not in a pitched battle heard
Loud 'armour, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?
And do you tell me of a woman's tongue;
That gives not half so great a blow to the ear,
As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?
Tush! tush! fear boys with bags.

Gra. For he fears none. (Aside.)

Gra. Hortensio, hark!
This gentleman is happily arriv'd,
My mind presumes, for his own good, and yours.

Her. I promise'd, we would be co. riba-ora,
And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoever.

Gra. And so we will; provided, that he win her.
Gra. I would, I were as sure of a good dinner.

(Aside.)

Enter Tranio, bravely apparelled: and Biondello.

Tr. Gentlemen, God save you! If I may be bold,
Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?

Gra. He that has the two fair daughters:—is't
(aside to Tranio) he you mean?

Tr. Even he. Biondello.

Gra. Hark you, sir: You may not her to—
Tr. Perhaps, him and her, sir: What have you to do!

Pet. Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray.
Tr. I love no chiders, sir:—Biondello, let's away.

Luc. Well begun, Tranio. (Aside.)

Her. Sir, a word ere you go;
Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea, or no?

Gra. No; if I be, sir, as it offends!

Gra. No; if, without more words, you will get you hence.

Tr. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free
For me, as for you?

Gra. But so is not she.

Tr. For what reason, I beseech you?

Gra. For this reason, if you'll know.—
That she's the choice love of Signior Grumio.

Her. That she's the chosen of Signior Hortensio.

Tr. Softly, my masters! if you be gentlemen,
Do me this right,—hear me with patience.

Baptista is a noble gentleman,
To whom my father is not all unknown;
And, were his daughter fairer than she is,
She may more suitors have, and me for one.

Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers;
Then well one more may fair Bianca have:
And so she shall; Lucentio shall make one,
Though Paris came, in hope to speed alone.

Gra. What! this gentleman will out-alk us all.

Luc. Sir, give him head; I know, he'll prove a jude.

Pet. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?

Her. Sir, let me be so bold as to ask you,
Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?

Tr. No, sir; but hear I do, that she hath two;
The one as famous for a scolding tongue.

As is the other for beauteous modesty.

Pet. Sir, sir, the first's for me; let her go by.

Gra. Yea, leave the labour to great Hercules;
And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.

Pet. Sir, understand you me of it, in sooth:—
The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
Her father keeps from all suitors of suitors,
And will not promise her to any man.

Page. "Is lord, 'tis but heaven.

Sly. "Tha a wry earnest piece of work, madam lady; 'Would 'twere done!

SCENE II.—The same. Before Hortensio's House.

Enter Petruccio and Grumio.

Pet. Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but, of all,
My best beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and, I trow, this is his house:—
Here, sirrah Grumio; knock, I say.

Gr. Knock, sir! whom should I knock? Is there any man has rebused your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.

Gr. Knock you here, sir? why, sir, what am I,
sir, that I should knock you here, sir?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate,
And rap me well, or I'll knock your knave's pate.

Gr. My master is grown quarrelsome: I should knock you first.

And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Pet. Will it not be?

"Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock, I'll wring it;
I'll try how you can eat, fa, and sing it.

[He torments Grumio by the ears.]

Gr. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.

Pet. Now, knock when I bid you: sirrah! villain!

Enter Hortensio.

Hor. How now! what's the matter?—My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petruccio!—
How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the Con tutte il core bene trovo, may I say. [Tray.]
Hor. Alta nostra casa ben scuto,
Molto honorato signor mio Petruccio.

Rae, Grumio, rise; we will compound this quarrel.

Gr. Nay, 'tis no matter, what he 'leges in Latin.—If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service.—Look you, sir,—he bid me knock him, and rap him soundly, sir: Well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so; being, perchance (for aught I see) two-and-thirty,—a pip
out!

Whom, 'would to God, I had well knock'd at first,
Then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Pet. A senseless villain!—Good Hortensio,
I bade the rascal knock upon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gr. Knock at the gate!—O Heavens!
Spake you not these words plain,—Sirrah, knock me here.

Rap me here, knock me well, and knock me soundly?
And come you now with—knocking at the gate?

Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

Hor. Petruccio, patience; I am Grumio's pledge:
Why, this a heavy clause 'twixt him and you,
Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio.
And tell me now, sweet friend,—what happy tale
Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world.

To seek their fortunes further than at home,
Where small experience grows. But, in a few,
Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:—
Antonio, my father, is deceased;

And I have thrust myself into this maze,
Haply to wive, and thrive, as best I may;

Craving in my purse I have, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruccio, shall I then come roundly to
thee,

And wish thee to a shrewd ill favour'd wife?

Thoud'at thank me but little for my counsel
And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich;—but thou'rt too much my friend,
And I'll not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we,
Few words suffice: and, therefore, if thou know
One rich enough to be Petruccio's wife
(As wealth is burden of my wailing dance),
Be she as foul as was Florentina's love,
As old as Sybil, and as curst and shrewd
As Socrates' Xantippe, or a worse,
She moves me not, or not removes, at least,
Affection's edge in me: were she as rough
As are the swelling Adriatic seas:
I come to wive it wealthily in Padua,
If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gr. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: Why, give him gold enough and marry him to a puppet, or an aglet-baby; or an old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two-and-fifty horses: why nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal.

Hor. Petruccio, since we have stepped thus far in
I will continue that I brach'd in just.

Can, Petruccio, help thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and young and beautiful;
Bruckt up, as best becomes a gentleman:
Her only fault (and that is faults enough)
Is,—that she is intolerably curst.

And shrewd, and forward: so beyond all measure
That, were my state far worse than it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pet. Hortensio, pause; thou know'st not gold's effect:—

Tell me her father's name, and 'tis enough:
For I will board her, though she come as loud
As thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola:
An affable and courteous gentleman:

Her name is Katharina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Pet. I know her father, though I know not her;
And he knew my deceased father well:—
I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her;

And therefore let me be thus bold with you
To give you over at this first encounter.

Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gr. I pray you, sir, let him sit while the ha-mour lasts. O' my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him: She may, perhaps, cut him half a score knaves or so: why, that's nothing;
and he begins once, he'll rail in his raptures.

I'll tell you what, sir,—an she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat: You know him not, sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruccio, I must go with thee;
For in Baptista's keep my treasure is:

He hath the jewel of my life in hold,
His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca;

And her withholds from me, and other more
Sisters to her, and rivals in my love:

Supposing it a thing impossible
(For these defects I have before rehears'd),
That ever Katharina will be woo'd.

Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'en;
That none shall have access unto Bianca,
Till Katharina the curst have got a husband.

Gr. Katharina the curst!

A title for a maid, of all titles the worst.

Hor. Now shall my friend Petruccio do me grace;
And offer me, disguised in a shrew's robes,

To old Baptista as a schoolmaster

Gre. What's that, I pray?

Hor. Murry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.

Gre. A husband! a devil!

Hor. I say, a husband.

Gre. I say, a devil: Think'st thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell!

Hor. Tush, Gramio, though it pass your patience and mine to endure her loud alarms, why, man, there be good fellows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.

Gre. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition,—to be whipped at the high-cross every morning.

Hor. Faith, as you say, there's small choice in wren apples. But, come; since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so far forth friendly maintained,—till, by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to't afresh.—Sweet Bianca!—Happy man be his dole! He that runs fastest, gets the ring. How say you, Signior Gramio?

Gre. I am agreed: and 'would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing, that would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.

(Exeunt Gramio and Hortensio.)
Tr. [Advancing.] I pray, sir, tell me,—is it possible

That love should of a sudden take such hold?

Lac. O 'Tranio, till I found it to be true,

I never thought it possible, or likely;

But see! while idly I stood looking on,

I found the effect of love in idleness:

And now in plainness do confess to thee,—

That art to me as secret, and as dear,

As Anna to the queen of Carthage was,— Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio.

If I achieve not this young modest girl:

Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst;

Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tr. Master, it is no time to chide you now;

Affection is not rated from the heart:

If love have touch'd you, nought remains but so,—

Redime te captum quem quæras suum.

Lac. Gramercies, lad; go forward: this contents;

The rest will counsel, for thy counsel's sound.

Tr. Master, you look'd so long on the maid,

Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pill of all.

Lac. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,

Sooth as the daughter of Aeneas had.

That made great Jove to humble him to her hand.

When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand.

Tr. Saw you no more? mark'd you not, how her sister

Began to scold; and raise up such a storm,

That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?

Lac. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,

And with her breath she did perfume the air;

Secret, and sweet, was all I saw in her. [Tranio.]

Tr. Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his

I pray, awake, sir; if you love the maid,

Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:—

Her eldest sister is so crust and shrewd,

That, till the father rid his hands of her,

Master, your love must live a maid at home;

And therefore he has closely mew'd her up,

Because she shall not be annoy'd with suitors.

Lac. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's he!

But art thou not advis'd, he took some care

To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?

Tr. Ay, marry am I, sir; and now 'tis plotted.

Lac. I have it, Tranio.

Tr.

Master, for my hand,

Both our inventions meet and jump in use.

Lac. Tell me thine first.

Tr. You will be schoolmaster

And undertake the teaching of the maid:

That's your device.

Lac. It is: May it be done?

Tr. Not possible: For who shall bear your part,

And be in Padua here Vincentio's son?

Keep house, and ply his book; welcome his friends;

Visit his countrymen, and banquet them!

Lac. Basta; content thee; for I have it full

We have not yet been seen in any house:

Nor can we be distinguished by our faces,

For man, or master: then it follows thus:—

Thou shalt be master Tranio, in my stead,

Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should:

I will some other be; some Florentine,

Some Neapolitan, or mean man of Pisa.

'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so:—Tranio, at once

Uncase thee; take my colour'd hat and cloak:

When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;

But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tr. So had you need. [They exchange habits.

In brief then, sir, with thy pleasure is,

And I am tied to be obedient;

[For so your father charg'd me at our parting;

Be serviceable to my son, quoth he,

Although, I think, 'twas in another sense.)

I am content to be Lucenio,

Because so well I love Lucenio.

Lac. Tranio, be so, because Lucenio loves:

And let me be a slave, to achieve that maid

Whose sudden grief hath thrall'd my wounded eye.

Enter Biondello.

Here comes the rogue.—Sirrah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been! Nay, how now,

where are you?

Master, has my fellow 'Tranio stol'n your clothes?

Or you stol'n his? or both? I pray, what's the news?

Lac. Sirrah, come hither; 'tis no time to jest,

And therefore frame your manners to the time.

Your fellow 'Tranio here, 'o save my life,

Puts my apparel and my countenance on,

And I for my escape have put on his;

For in a quarrel, since I came ashore,

I kill'd a man, and fear I was desecr'd.

Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,

While I make way from hence to save my life:

You understand me?

Bion. I, sir! he'er a whit.

Lac. And not a jot of 'Tranio in your mouth;

Tranio is chang'd into Lucenio.

Bion. The better for him: 'Would I were so too!

Tr. So would I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,— [daughter.]

That Lucenio indeed had Baptista's youngest

But, sirrah,—not for my sake, but your master's,—

I advise [companies:]

You use your manners discreetly in all kind of

When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;

But in all places else, your master Lucenio.

Lac. Tranio, let's go:—

One thing more rests, that thyself execute:

To make one among these wooers: If thou ask me why,—

Sufficeth, my reasons are both good and weighty.

[Exeunt.]

I Serv. My lord, you nod; you do not mean the story.

Tr. Yes, by Saint Anne, do I. A good matter,

surely: Comes there any more of it?

And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy,
Therefore they thought it good you hear a play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms and lengthens life.

Sly. Marry, I will; let them play it: is not a commonly a Christmas gambol, or a tumbling-trick?

Page. No, my good lord: it is more pleasing stuff.
Sly. What, household stuff?

Page. It is a kind of history.

Sly. Well, we'll see't: Come, madam wife, sit by my side, and let the world slip; we shall ne'er be younger. [They sit down.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Padua. A public place.

Enter Lucentio and Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, since—for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,—
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy;
And, by my father's love and leave, am arriv'd
With his good will and thy good company,
Most trusty servant well approv'd in all;
Here let us breathe, and happily institute
A course of learning, and ingenious studies.
Pam. renowned for grave citizens,
Gave me my being, and my father first,
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincenzo, come of the Bentivoli,
Vincenzo his son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become, to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue, and that part of philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achiev'd.
Tell me thy mind: for I have Pam left,
And am to Padua come; as he that leaves
A shallow plough to plow him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tr. My pardon, gentle master mine,
I am in all accorded as yourself;
Glad that you thus continue your resolve
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue, and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics, nor no stocks, I pray,
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks,
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd:
Talk long with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk;
Music and poetry use to quicken you;
The mathematics and the metaphysics,
Fall to them, as you find your stomach serves you;
No profit grows, where is no pleasure taken;
—I brief, sir, study what you most affect.

Luc. Graciously, Tranio, well dost thou advise.
If Biancetto, thou wert come ashore,
He should at once put us in readiness;
And take a lodging, fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall bestow.
But stay awhile: What company is this?

Tr. Master, some show, to welcome us to town.

Enter Baptista, Katharina, Bianca, Gremio, and Hortensio. Lucentio and Tranio stand aside.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no further,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know;
That is,—to bestow my youngest daughter,

Before I have a husband for the elder:

If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
Grr. To court her rather: She's too rough for me:—

There, there Hortensio, will you any wife?

Kath. I pray you, sir, [to Bap] is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?

Hor. Mates, maid! how mean you that! no mates for you,

Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.

Kath. I'faith, sir, you shall never need to fear;
I was, it is not half way to her heart:

But, if it were, doubt not her cure should be
To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.

Hor. From all such devils, good Lord, deliver us!
Grr. And me too, good Lord! [toward:]

Tr. Hush, master! here is some good pastime
That wench is stark mad, or wonderful forward.

Luc. But in the other's silence I do see

Maid's mild behaviour and sobriety.

Pence. Tranio,

Tr. Well said, master: mmm! and gaze you
Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good

What I have said,—Bianca, get you in:

And let it not displeasure thee, good Bianca;

For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.

Kath. A pretty pest! 'tis best

Put finger in the eye—an she knew why.

Bian. Sister, content you in my discontent.—

Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books and instruments shall be my company;

On them to look, and practise by myself.

Luc. Mark, Tranio! thou may'st hear Mimosa speak. [Aside.]

Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?
Sorry am I, that our good will effects

Bianca's grief.

Grr. Why, will you mew her up,

Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,

And make her bear the penance of her tongue.

Bap. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd:—
Go in, Bianca. [Exit Bianca.]

And for I know she taketh most delight

In music, instruments, and pretty

Schoolmasters will I keep within my house,

Fit to instruct her youth—if you, Hortensio,

Or Signior Gremio, you,—know any such,

Prefer them hither: for to cunning men

I will be very kind, and liberal

To mine own children in good bringing-up;

And so farewell. Katharina, you may stay:

For I have more to commune with Bianca. [Exit.]

Kath. Why, and I trust, I may so too; May I not?

[Belike,]
What, shall I be appointed hours: as though
I knew not what to take, and what to leave! [Exit.]

Grr. You may go to the devil's dam; your girls are so good, here is none will hold you.

Their love is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out; our cake's dough on both sides. Farewell:—Yet for the love

I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man, to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.

Hor. So will I, Signior Gremio: But a word, I pray. Through the nature of our quarrel yet never break'd; parle, know now, open advice, it toucheth us both,—that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love,—to labour and effect one thing specially

3 Serv. What raiment will your honour wear to-day?

Sly. I am Christopher Sly; call not me—honour, nor lordship: I never drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef: Ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear: for I have no more doubtlets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet; nay, sometimes, more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the over-leather.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your O, that a mighty man of such descent, [honour] of such possessions, and so high esteem, Should be infused with so foul a spirit!

Sly. What, would you make me mad? Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son of Barton heath; by birth a pedlar, by education a card-maker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hackett, the fat sister of Winesap, if she know me not: if she say I am not fourteen-pence on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the lyingst knave in Christendom. What, I am not bestraught: Here's—

1 Serv. O, this it is that makes your lady mourn.

2 Serv. O, this it is that makes your servants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shun your house,

As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.

O, noble lord, bestink these of thy birth:

Call hence thy ancient thoughts from banishment,

And banish hence these abject lowly dreams;

Look how thy servants do attend on thee,

Each in his office ready at thy beck.

Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays.

[Music.]

And twenty caged nightingales do sing:

Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch,

Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed

On purpur trimm'd up for Semiramis.

Say, thou wilt walk: we will bestrew the ground:

Or wilt thou ride? I thy horses shall be trapp'd,

Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.

Do it thou live hawking! thou hast hawks will soar

Above the morning lark: Or wilt thou hunt?

Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,

And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1 Serv. Say, thou wilt coorse; thy greyhounds are as swift

As breathed stage, ay, faster than the rae.

2 Serv. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight

Adonis, painted by a running brook:

And Cytherea all in sedges hid;

Which seem to move and wail on with her breath,

Even as the waving sedges play with wind.

Lord. We'll show thee in, as she was a maid;

And how she was beguiled and surpris'd,

As lively painted as the deed was done. [wood:]

3 Serv. Or Daphne roaming through a thorny

Scratching her legs that one small swear she bleeds:

And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,

So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.

Lord. Thou art a lord, and nothing but a lord:

Thou hast a lady far more beautiful

Than any woman in this waning age. [these]

1 Serv. And, till the tears that she hath shed for

Like envious floods o'er-run her lovely face,

She was the fairest creature in the world;

And yet she is inferior to none.

Sly. Am I a lord? and have I such a lady?

Or do I dream, or have I dream'd till now?

I do not sleep: I see, I hear, I speak;

I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things:—

Upon my life, I am a lord, indeed;

And not a tinker, nor Christopher S y.—

Well, bring our lady hither to our sight:

And once again, a pot o' the sunniest ale.

2 Serv. Will't please your nightiness to wash

your hands!

[Serrants present an ewer, basin, and napkin.]

O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!

O, that once more you knew but what you are!

These fifteen years you have been in a dream:

Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.

But did I never speak of all that time?

1 Serv. O, yes, my lord; but very idle words—

For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,

Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of doors,

And rail upon the hostess of the house:

And say, you would present her at the feet,

Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts:

Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hackett.

Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

3 Serv. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such man!

Nor no such men, as you have reckon'd up,—

As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Groscro,

And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpernell;

And twenty more such names and men as these,

Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends

All! Amen.

Sly. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.

Enter the Page, as a lady, with Attendants.

Page. How fares my noble lord?

Sly. Marry, I fare well; for here is cheer enough.

Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord; What is thy will with her?

Sly. Are you my wife, and will not call me—hus-

My men should call me—lord; I am your good-

man.

Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and

I am your wife in all obedience. [husband.]

Sly. I know it well:—What must I call her?

Lord. Madam.

Sly. Al'ce madam, or Joan madam?

Lord. Madam, and nothing else; so lords call

ladies.

Sly. Madam wife, they say that I have dream'd above some fifteen year and more. [and slept]

Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me;

Being all this time absent'd from your bed.

Sly. 'Tis much;—Serrants, leave me and her alone.

Madam, undress you, and come now to bed.

Page. Thrice noble lord, let me entreat of you.

To pardon me yet for a night or two;

Or, if not so, until the sun be set:

For your physicians have expressly charg'd,

In peril to incur your former malady,

That I should yet about me from your bed:

I hope this reason stands for my excuse.

Sly. Ay, it stands so, that I may hardly tarry so long. But I would be loath to fall into my dream again; I will therefore tarry, in despite of the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Your honour's players, bearing your amendment,

Are come to play a pleasant comedy,

For so your doctors hold it very meet; [blood]

Seeing too much sadness hath clogg'd your

1 Hunt. Why Belman is as good as he, my lord;
He cried upon it at the merest loss.
And twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent:
Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool; if Echo were as fleet,
I would esteem him worth a dozen such.
But sup them well, and look unto them all;
To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

1 Hunt. I will, my lord.

Lord. What's here? one dead or drunk? See, doth he breathe?

2 Hunt. He breathes, my lord: Were he not warm'd with ale,

This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord. O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies! [image]

Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine
Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.—
What think you, if he were convey'd to bed,
Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fin-
A most delicious banquet by his bed, [gers,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,
Would not the beggar then forget himself?

1 Hunt. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2 Hunt. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd. [fancy]

Lord. Even as a flattering dream, or worthless
Then take him up, and manage well the jest:—
Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures:
Balm his foul head with warm distilled waters,
And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet:
Procure me music ready when he wakes,
To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound;
And if he chance to speak, be ready straight,
And, with a low submissive reverence,
Say,—What is it your honour will command?
Let one attend with a silve, basin,
Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers;
Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper,
And say,—Will't please your lordship cool your
Some one be ready with a costly suit, [hands?
And ask him what apparel he will wear;
Another tell him of his hounds and horse,
And that his lady mourns at his disense:
Persuade him that he hath been lunatic;
And, when he says he is—say, that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs;
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modesty.

1 Hunt. My lord, I warrant you, we'll play our
As he shall think, by our true diligence, [part,
He is no less than what we say he is.

Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with him;
And each one to his office, when he wakes—

[Some bear out Sly. A trumpet sounds.
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds:—

[Exit Servant.
Belike, some noble gentleman: that means,
I travelling some journey, to repose him here.—

Re-enter a Servant.

How now? who is it?

Serv. An it please your honour,
Players that offer service to your lordship.
Lord. Bid them come near:

Enter Players.

Now, fellows, you are welcome.

1 Play. We thank your honour.

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?

2 Play. So please your lordship to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart—This fellow I remember,

Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son;
'Twas where you wou'd the gentlewoman so well;
I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.

1 Play. I think, 'twas Soto that your honour
means.

Lord. 'Tis very true;—thou did'st it excellent.—
Well, you are come to me in happy time;

The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.

There is a lord will hear you play to-night;
But I am doubtful of your modesties;

Least, over-eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a play,)

You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him: for I tell you, sirs,

If you should smile, he grows impatient.

1 Play. Fear not, my lord: we can contain our-
Were he the veriest antic in the world. [selves,

Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one:

Let them want nothing that my house affords.—
[Exit Servant and Players

Sirrah, go you to Bartholomew my page,
(To a Servant,

And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's cham-
And call him—madam, do him obeisance. [ber,

Tell him from me (as he will win my love),
He bear himself with honourable action,

Such as he hath observ'd in noble ladies
Unto their lords, by them accomplished:

Such duty to the drunkard let him do,
With soft low tongue, and lowly courtesy:

And say,—What 'st your honour will command,
Wherein your lady, and your humble wife,

May show her duty, and make known her love!

And then—with kind embracements, tempting
kisses,

And with declining head into his bosom,—
Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd

To see her noble lord restor'd to health,
Who, for twice seven years, hath esteemed him

No better than a poor and loathsome beggar:
And if the boy hath not a woman's gift,

To rain a shower of commanded tears,
An onion will do well for such a shift:

Which in a napkin being close conveyed,
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.

See this despatch'd with all the haste thou canst:
Anon I'll give thee more instructions.—

[Exit Servant.

I know, the boy will well usurp the grace,
Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman:

I long to hear him call the drunkard, husband;
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,

When they do homage to this simple peasant.

I'll in to counsel them: haply, my presence
May well abate their over-merry spleen,

Which otherwise would grow into extremes.
[Exit

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber in the Lord's House.

Sly is discovered in a rich night-gown, with Attendants;
some with apparel, others with bosom, ewer, and other attendances. Enter Lord, dressed like a servant.

Sly. For God's sake, a pot of small ale.

1 Serv. Will't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?

2 Serv. Will't please your honour taste of these conserves?

King. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty: He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to't: I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not. Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life; I am either maid, or else thus old man's wife.

King. She does abuse our ears; to prison with her.

Des. Gould mother, fetch my bail—Stay, royal air: [Exit Willow.

The Jeweller, that owes the ring, is sent for, And he shall surety me. But for this lord, Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself, Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him: He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd; And at that time he got his wife with child: Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick; So there's my riddle, One, that's dead, is quick; And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Willow, with Helena.

King. Is there no exorcist Bequeles the truer office of mine eyes? I he's real, that I see!

Hel. No, my good lord; 'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see, The same and not the thing.

Des. Both, both: O, pardon! Hst. O, my good lord, when I was like this maid, I found you would'man kind. There is your ring, And, lo! you, here's your letter: Thus it says, When from my finger you can get this ring,

And are by me with child, &c.—This is done: Will you be mine, now you are doubly won!

Des. If she, my legs, can make me know this, I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,

Deadly divorce step between me and you I—

O, my dear mother, do I see you living?

Des. Mine eyes smell mine, I shall weep soon—Good Tom Drus (to Parolles), lend me a handkerchief: So, I thank thee: wait on me home, I'll make a sport with thee: Let thy our eyes alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know To make the even truth in pleasure flow: If thou be'st yet a fresh uncropped flower,

Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dowry;

For I can guess, that, by thy honest ail,

Thou keep'st a wife herself, thyself a maid.—

Of that and all the progress, more and less,

Resolutely more leisure shall express:

All yet seems well; and, if it end so meet,

The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

[Flourish

The king's a beggar, now the play is done:

All is well ended, if this suit be soon,

That you express content; which we will pay,

With strife to please you, day exceeding day:

Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts;

Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.

[Exeunt.

Entr Huntan and Sly.

Sly. I'll please you, in faith.

Hunt. A pair of socks, you rascal!

Sly. You're a luggage; the Sles are no rogues: Look in the chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror. Therefore, paucas pallabris; let the world slide: Sess!

Hunt. You will not pay for the glasses you have bore!

Sly. No, not a denier: Go by, says Jeremiah—Go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Hunt. I know my remedy. I must go fetch the thirdborough. [Exit.

Sly. Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I'll answer him by law: I'll not budge an inch, but let him come, and kindly.

[Lies down on the ground, and falls asleep

Wind horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with Huntsmen and Servants.

Lord. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds:

Brash Merriman, the poor cur is embow'd. And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach Saw't thou not, my, how Silver made it good At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault? I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

King. Come hither, count; Do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can nor will deny
But that I know them: Do they charge me further?
[wife]

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your
Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.

Dia. If you shall marry,
You give away this hand, and that is mine:
You give away Heaven's vows, and those are mine;
You give away myself, which is known mine;
For I by vow am so embolled yours.
That she, which marries you, must marry me,
Lest her both or none.

Laf. Your reputation [to Bertram] comes too short for my daughter, you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature, Whom sometimes I have laugh'd with: let your Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour,
Than for to think that I would sink it here.

King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gain them: Fairer prove your
Than in my thought it lies!

Dia. Good, my lord,
Ask him upon his oath if he does think
He had not my virginity.

King. What say'st thou to her?

Ber. She's impudent, my lord;
And was a common gamester to the camp.

Dia. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price:
Do not believe him: O, behold this ring,
Whose high respect, and rich validity,
Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that,
He gave it to a commoner of the camp,
If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and 'tis it:
Of six preceding ancestors, that gem
Confer'd by testament to the sequent issue,
Hath it been ow'd and worn. 'Tis his wife;
That ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought, you said,
You saw one here in court could witness it.

Dia. I did, my lord, but loath am to produce
So had an instrument; his name's Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.

King. Find him, and bring him hither.

Ber. What of him?

He's quoted for a most perfidious slave;
With all the spots o'the world tax'd and debosh'd;
Whose nature sickens, but to speak a truth:
Am I or that, or this, for what he'll utter,
That will speak anything?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Ber. I think she has: certain it is, I lik'd her,
And board'd her i'the wanton way of youth:
She knew her distance, and did single for me,
Maddening my senses with her restraint,
As all ingredients in fancy's course
Are motives of more fancy; and, to fine,
Her insult coming with her under grace,
Subdued me to her rate: she got the ring;
And I had that which any inferior might
At market-price have bought.

Dia. I must be patient;
You, that turn'd off at first so noble a wife,
May justly diet me. I pray you yet,
(Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband,)
Send for your ring, I will return it home,
And give me mine again.

Ber. I have it not.

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

Dia. Sir, moeth like
The same upon your finger.

King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of Dia. And this was it I gave him, being a-bod!

King. The story then goes false, you threw it
Out of a casement.

Dia. I have spoke the truth.

Enter Parolles.

Ber. My lord, I do confess, the ring was here.

King. You haggle shrewdly, every feather starts
you.

Is this the man you speak of?

Dia. Ay, my lord.

King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell us true, I charge
Not fearing the displeasure of your master, (true,
(Which, on your just proceeding, I'll keep off.)
By him, and by this woman here, what know you?

Par. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman; tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.

King. Come, come, to the purpose: Did he love this woman?

Par. Faith, sir, he did love her; but how?

King. How, I pray you?

Par. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves woman.

King. How is that?

Par. He loved her, sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave:—
What an equivocal companion is this?

Par. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.

Laf. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.

Dia. Do you know, he promised me marriage?

Par. Faith, I know more than I'll speak.

King. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?

Par. Yes, so please your majesty: I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her,—for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed; and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill will to speak of, therefore I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married: But thou art too fine in thy evidence; therefore stand aside.—
This ring, you say, was yours?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.

King. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

King. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.

King. Where did you find it then?

Dia. I found it not.

King. If it were yours by none of all these ways,
How could you give it him?

Dia. I never gave it him.

King. This woman's an easy glove, my lord; she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. 'Tis his ring was mine, I gave it his first wife.

Dia. It might be yours, or hers, for aught I know.

King. Take her away, I do not like her now;
To prave with her: and away with him.—
Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring
Thou diest within this hour.

Dia. I'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.

Dia. I'll put in bell, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common courtesier.

Laf. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 'twas you.

The insensible and senseless foot of time
Seals are we can effect them: You remember
The daughter of this lord!

Her. Admirably, my love: at first
I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
Dare make too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye infixing,
Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me
Which ward'd the line of every other favour;
Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it stol'n;
Extended or contracted all proportions.
To a most ludicrous object: Thence it came,
That she, whom all men priz'd, and whom myself,
Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King. Well excus'd:
That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away
From the great count: But love, that comes too
Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried, (late
To the great sinner turn a sour offence,
Crying, That's good that's gone: our rash faults
Make trivial price of serious things we have,
Not knowing them, until we know their grave:
Oh our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust:
Our own love waking cries to see what's done,
While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin:
The main contents are laid; and here we'll stay
To see our widower's second marriage-day.

Count. Which better than the first, O dear Heaven bless!

*Or, are they meet in me, O nature, cease.
Let Countess, my son, in whom my house's
Must be digested, give favour from you, (name
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter.
That she may quickly come—By my old beard,
And every hair that's out, Helen, that's dead,
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
The last that e'er I took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.*

Her. Here it was not. [eye,
King. Now, pray you, let me see it; for mine
While I was speaking out was fasten'd to it.—
This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen,
I bade her, if her fortune ever should Necessitate to help, that by this token
I would relieve her: Had you that craft, to reave
Of what should stead her most! [her

Her. My gracious sovereign,
Howe'er it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it
At her life's rate.

Her. I am sure I saw her wear it.
Her. You are deceiv'd, my lord, she never saw it.

In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that throw it: noble she was, and thought
I should engage'd: but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune; and inform'd her fully,
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she caus'd,
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the ring again.

King. Pistas himself.
That knows the tract and multiphase medicine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science,
Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'twas Helen's.
Whoever gave it you: Then, if you know
That you are well acquainted with yourself,
Confess 'twas hers and by what rough enforcement

You got it from her: she call'd the saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed,
(Where you have never come,) or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

Her. She never saw it.
King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine
honour:

And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me.
Which I would fain shut out: If it should prove
That thou art so inhuman,—'twill not prove so—
And yet I know not—thou dost hate her closely
And she is dead: which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring.—Take him away.—
[Guards seize Bertram.

My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly feared too little.—Away with him;
We'll left this matter farther.

Her. If you shall prove
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was.

[Exit Bertram, guarded.]

Enter a Gentleman.

King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thinkings.
Genl. Gracious sovereign,
Whether I have been to blame, or no, I know not;
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath, for four or five removes, come short
To tender it herself: I undertook it,
Vanguish'd thereby by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this I know
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importing visage; and she told me,
In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern
Your highness with herself.

King. [Reads.] Upon his many protestations to marry me, when his wife was dead, I blusk to say it, he soon me. Now is the count Rousillon a widower; his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice: Grant it me, O king; in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flows riches, and a poor maid is undone.

Diana Capulet.

Her. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and tell him: for this, I'll none of him.

King. The heavens have thought well on thee,
Lafu, [ors]
To bring forth this discovery.—Seek these suit-
Go, speedily, and bring again the count.

[Exeunt Gentleman, and some Attendants.]
I am afraid, the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Enter Bertram, guarded.

King. I wonder, sir, since wives are monsters
to you,
And that you fly them as you swear them lordship,
Yet you desire to marry.—What woman's that!

Re-enter Gentleman, with Widow, and Diana.
Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capulet;

My suit, as I do understand, you know.
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease without your remedy.

Gent. The king's not here.
Hel. Not here, sir?
Gent. Not, indeed;
 He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste
 Than in his use.
Wid. Lord, how we lose our pains!
Hel. All's well that ends well; yet;
 Though time seem to subvert, and means unfit—
 I do beseech you, whither is he gone?
Gent. Marry, as I take it, to Roussillon;
 Whither I am going.
Hel. I do beseech you, sir,
 Since you are like to see the king before me,
 Commend the paper to his gracious hand;
 Which I presume shall render you no blame,
 But rather make you thank your pains for it:
 I will come after you, with what good speed
 Our means will make us means.

Gent. This I'll do for you.
Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd.
 What's'er falls more.—We must to horse again;
 Go, go, provide. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Roussillon. The inner Court of the Countess's Palace.

Enter Clown and Parolles.

Par. Good monsieur Lavatch, give my lord Lafeu this letter: I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with freer clothes; but I am now, sir, muddled in fortune's mist, and smell somewhat strung of her strong displeasure.

Clw. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but alutish, if it smell so strong as thou speakest of: I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's buttering.
Pr'ythee, allow the wind.

Par. Nay, you need not stop your nose, sir; I spoke but by a metaphor.

Clw. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor.
Pr'ythee, get thee further.

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.
Clw. Foh, pr'ythee, stand away; A paper from fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter Lafeu.

Here is a pur of fortune's, sir, or of fortune's cat,
 (but not a musk-cat,) that has fallen into the unclean fish-pond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddled withal: Pray you, sir, use the carp as you may; for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my smiles of comfort, and leave him to your lordship.

Par. My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

Lafeu. And what would you have me to do? 'tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her?
 There's a quart d'ecu for you: Let the justices make you and fortune friends; I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honour, to hear me one single word.

Lafeu. You beg a single penny more; come, you shall not; save your word.

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Lafeu. You beg more than one word, then.—Cox!
 my passion! Give me your hand: How does your drum!

Par. O my good lord, you were the first that found me.

Lafeu. Was I, in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out.

Lafeu. Out upon thee, knave! dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? I can bring thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. [Trumpets sound.] The king's coming, I know by his trumpets.—Sirrah, inquire further after me; I had talk of you last night: though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat; go to.
 follow.

Par. I praise God for you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Flourish. Enter King, Countess, Lafeu, Lords,
 Gentlemen, Guards, &c.

King. We lost a jewel of her; and our esteem
 Was made much poorer by it: but your son,
 As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know
 Her estimation home.

Count. 'Tis past, my liege:
 And I beseech your majesty to make it
 Natural rebellion, done i'th' blaze of youth;
 When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force,
 O'erhears it, and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady,
 I have forgiven and forgotten all;
 Though my revenge were high bent upon him,
 And watch'd the time to shoot.

Lafeu. This I must say,—
 But first I beg my pardon,—The young lord
 Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady,
 Offence of mighty note; but to himself
 The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife,
 Whose beauty did astonish the survey
 Of richest eyes; whose words all ears took captive,
 Whose dear perfection, hearts that sould to serve,
 Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost,
 Makes the remembrance dear.—Well, call him
 hither;

We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill
 All repetition:—Let him not ask our pardon;
 The nature of his great offence is dead,
 And deeper than oblivion do we bury
 The incensing relics of it: let him approach,
 A stranger, no offender; and inform him,
 So 'tis our will he should.

Gent. I shall, my liege.

[Exit Gentleman.]
King. What says he to your daughter? I have you spoke?

Lafeu. All that he is hath reference to your highness. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me.

That set him high in fame.

Enter Bertram.

Lafeu. He looks well on't.
King. I am not a day of season,
 For thou may'st see a sunshine and a hail
 In me at once: But to the brightest beams
 Distracted clouds give way; so stand thou forth.
 The time is fair again.

Ber. My high-repented blames
 Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King. All is whole;
 Not one word more of the consumed time.
 Let's take the instant by the forward top:
 For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees

SCENE V. — Ronsillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess, Lafew, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, your son was misled with a snipe-fellow that there; whose villainous snuff you have made all the unbraked and doughty youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour; and your son here at home, more advanced by the king, than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him! it was the death of the most virtuous gentleman that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had partaken of my flesh, and cut me the dearest graces of a mother, I could not have owed her a more trusted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand salads ere we light on such another herb.

Clow. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet marjoram of the salad, or, rather, the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not salad-herbs, you know, they are rose-herbs.

Clow. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir, I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether that thou professest thyself; a knave or a fool?

Clow. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction?

Clow. I would excuse the man of his wife, and do his service.

Laf. So, you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clow. And I would give his wife my bawble, sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee; thou art both knave and fool.

Clow. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clow. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that? a Frenchman?

Clow. Faith, sir, he has an English name; but his phonyony is more huter in France than here.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clow. The black prince, sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there's my purse; I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of; serve him still.

Clow. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the weather I speak of ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world, let his nobility remove in his court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pump to enter: some, that I have seen themselves, say; but so many will be too cold and tender; and they'll live for the dewy way, that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be a-weary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways; let my brow be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clow. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be 'sides' tricks; and are their own right by the law of nature. [Exit.]

Laf. A shrewd knave, and an unhappy.

Count. So he is. My lord, that's gone, made himself much sport out of him: by his authority he removes here, which he thinks is a patent for his marriages; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss: and I was about to tell you. Since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king my master to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the nursery of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose; his highness hath promised me to do it; and, to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fillet matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord, and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty; he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters, that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking, with what manners I might awfully be admitted.

Count. You would but plead your honorable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clow. O madam, your lady's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on 's face: whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows; but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet: his left cheek is a cheek of two pils and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, as a good livery of honour; as, helike, is that.

Clow. But it is your carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you; I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clow. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hair, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. — Marseilles. A street.

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night, Must wear your spirits raw; we cannot help it; But since you have made the day and night as 'To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, [One, Be bold, you do so grow in my request, As nothing can annoy you. In happy time:—

Enter a gentle Astringer.

This man may help me to his majesty's ear. If he would spend his power.—God save you, sir.

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France.

Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen From the report that goes upon your goodness; And therefore, guided with most sharp discernment, Which lay nice manners by, I put you to 'The use of your own virtues, for the which I shall continue thankful.

Gent.

What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you

To give this poor petition to the king;

And aid me with that store of power you have To come into his presence.

tain Dimin: You have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour: What is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister; for rapine and ravishments he parallels Nessus; He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them, he is stronger than Hercules. He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool; drunkenness is his best virtue; for he will be swine-drunk; and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in a straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty: he has everything that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

Lord. I begin to love him for that.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him for me, he is more and more a cat.

1 Sold. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith, sir, he has led the drum before the English tracebans,—to belie him, I will not,—and more of his soldiership I know not: except, in that country, he had the honour to be the officer at a place there call'd Mile-end, to instruct for the drenching of flies: I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

1 Lord. He hath out-villain'd villany so far, that this rarity releases him.

Ber. A pox on him! he's a cat still.

1 Sold. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not ask you if gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a quart d'ecu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it: and cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

1 Sold. What's his brother, the other captain Junian?

2 Lord. Why does he ask him of me?

1 Sold. What's he.

Par. Even a crow of the same nest: not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is: in a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he lags the cramp.

1 Sold. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, count Roussillon.

1 Sold. I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

Par. I'll no more drumming: a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the count, have I run into this danger: Yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken? [Aside.]

1 Sold. There is no remedy, sir, but you must do: the general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly brild, can save the world for no honest use; therefore you must die. Come, headman, off with his head.

Par. O lord, sir; let me live, or let me see my death!

1 Sold. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends. [Trumpets.]

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

2 Lord. God bless you, captain Parolles.

1 Lord. God save you, noble captain.

2 Lord. Captain, what greeting will you to my lord Lafeu? I am for France.

1 Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the earnest you writ to Diana in behalf of the count Roussillon? and I were not a very coward, I'd compel it of you; but fare you well.

[Exeunt Bertram, Lords, &c.]

1 Sold. You are audacious, captain; all but your scarf, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crush'd with a plot?

1 Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare you well, sir: I am for France, too; we shall speak of you there.

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great, 'Twould burst at this: captain I'll be no more;

But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft

As captain shall, simply the thing I am

Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart

Let him fear this; for it will come to pass,

That every braggart shall be found an ass.

Hust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles, live!

Safest in shame! being fondled by folly thrive!

There's place, and means, for every man alive!

I'll after them. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. — Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,

One of the greatest in the Christian world

Shall be my surety: 'fore whose throne, 'tis needful,

Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel:

'Tis time woe, I did him a desired office.

Dear almost as his life; which gratitude

Through sixty Tartar's blood may peep forth,

And answer, thanks: I duly am inform'd

His crime is at Marvilles: to which place

We have convenient convey. You must know

I am supposed dead: the army breaking,

My husband hies him home; where, Heaven aiding,

And by the leave of my good lord the king,

We'll lie, before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle madam,

You never had a servant, to whose trust

Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Not you, mistress,

For a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour

To recompense your love; doubt not, but Heaven

Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,

As it hath fated her to be my native

And helper to a husband. But, O strange men!

That can such sweet use make of what they hate,

When woe's trusting of the crown'd thoughts

Defiles the pitchy night! so lust shall play

With what it knows, for that which is away:

But more of this hereafter:—You, Diana,

Under my poor instructions yet must suffer

Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty

Go with your impositions, I am yours,

Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you,—

But with the word, the time will bring on summer,

When briars shall have leaves as well as thorns,

And be as sweet as sharp. We must away:

Our waggon is prepar'd, and time revives us:

All's well that ends well: still the time's crown;

Whatever the outcome, the end is the reward.

[Exeunt.]

of his setting i'the stocks: And what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has he?

2 Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers, with Parolles.

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled! he can say nothing of me; hush! hush!

1 Lord. Hoodman comes! Porto tertarossa.

1 Sold. He calls for the tortures; What will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint; if you pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.

1 Sold. Bosho chimarcho.

2 Lord. Robbino chimarcho.

1 Sold. You are a merciful general:—Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

1 Sold. First demand of him how many horse the duke is strong. What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand: but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

1 Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do; I'll take the sacrament on't, how and which way you will.

Ber. All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this!

1 Lord. You are deceived, my lord; this is monseur Parolles, the gallant militarist (that was his own phrase), that had the whole theoretic of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.

2 Lord. I will never trust a man again, for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have every thing in him, by wearing his apparel neatly.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said,—I will say true, or therabouts, set down,—for I'll speak truth.

1 Lord. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I owe him no thanks for't, in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir: a truth's a truth, the rogues are marvellous poor.

1 Sold. Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot. What say you to that?

Par. By my trust, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: Spinio a hundred and fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jacques so many; Guillian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratia, two hundred fifty each: mine own company, Christopher, Vaumond, Benti, two hundred and fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll: half of which dare not shake the snow from off the cascoks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

1 Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my condition, and what credit I have with the duke.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down. You shall demand of him, whether our captain Damaun be of the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputation is with the duke, what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing some of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt. What say you to this? what do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the interrogatories: Demand them singly.

1 Sold. Do you know this Captain Damaun?

Par. I know him: he was a butcher's apprentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the sheriff's fool with child: a dumb 'necent, that could not say him nay.

(Damaun lifts up his hand in anger.)

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands: though I know, his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

1 Sold. Well, is this captain in the duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge, he is, and lousy.

1 Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

1 Sold. What is his reputation with the duke?

Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine; and writ to me this other day, to turn him out o' the band: I think, I have his letter in my pocket.

1 Sold. Marry, we'll search.

Par. In good sadness, I do not know; either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

1 Sold. Here 'tis; here's a paper. Shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know, if it be it, or no.

Ber. Our interpreter does it well.

1 Lord. Excellently.

1 Sold. Dian. 'The count's a fool and full of gold.—'

Par. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurement of one count Rosallica, a foolish idle boy, but, for all that, very ruttish: I pray you, sir, put it up again.

1 Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid: for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy; who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable, both sides rogue!

1 Sold. When he sears calks, bid him drop gold, and take it;

After he scores, he never pays the score:

Half won, is match well made; match, and well make it:

He ne'er pays after debts, takes it before:

As for a soldier, Dian, told thee this.

Men are to melt with, boys are not to kiss:

For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it.

Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.

Thine, as he wou'd to thee in thine ear.

Parolles.

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in his forehead.

2 Lord. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist, and the armpit-ent soldier.

Ber. I could endure anything before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

1 Sold. I perceive, sir, by the general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case: not that I am afraid to die; but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature: let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i'the stocks, or any where, so I may live.

1 Sold. We'll see what may be done, as you confess freely; therefore, once more to this day.

Parolles.—Let me live, sir, in a dungeon. I' the stocks, or anywhere, so I may live.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL, ACT IV., SCENE III.

My reasons are most strong; and you shall know them.

When back again this ring shall be deliver'd:

And on your finger, in the night, I'll put

Another ring; that, what in time proceeds,

May token to the future our past deeds.

Adieu, till then; then, farewell: You have won

A wife of me, though there my hope be done.

Ber. A heaven on earth I have won, by wooing

thee.

[Exit.]

Des. For which live long to thank both Heaven and me!

You may so in the end.—

My mother told me just how he would woo,

As if she sat in his heart; she says, all men

Have the like ends; he had sworn to marry me,

When his wife's dead; therefore I'll be with him,

When I am barred. Since Frenchmen are so braud,

Marry that will, I'll live and die a maid:

Only in this disguise, I think no sin

To censure him, that would unjustly win. [Exit.]

SCENE III. — The Florentine Camp.

Enter the two French Lords, and two or three Soldiers.

1 Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?

2 Lord. I have deliver'd it an hour since: there is something in't that stings his nature; for, on the reading it, he changed almost into another man.

1 Lord. He has much worthy blame laid upon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a lady.

2 Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tamed his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you the thing, but you shall let it dwell dailily with you.

1 Lord. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.

2 Lord. He hath perverted a young gentleman here in Florence, of a most chaste reputation; and this night he fleeces his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

1 Lord. Now, God defy our rebellion; as we are ourselves, what things are we!

2 Lord. Merely our own traitors. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to the abhorred ends; so he, that in this action contrives against his own morality, in his proper stream overflows himself.

1 Lord. Is it not meet damnable in us, to be tempters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night!

2 Lord. Not till after midnight: for he is dieted to his hour.

1 Lord. That approaches apace: I would gladly have him see his company anatomized: that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set his counterfeit.

2 Lord. We will not meddle with him till he raves; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

1 Lord. In the mean time, what hear you of these wars?

2 Lord. I hear, there is an overture of peace.

1 Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded. 2 Lord. What will count Roussillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?

1 Lord. I perceive, by this demand, you are not altogether of his council.

2 Lord. Let it be forbid, sir! so should I be a great deal of his act.

1 Lord. Sir, his wife, some two months since, fled from his house: her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jacques le grand; which holy undertaking, with most austere sanctimony, she accomplished; and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in time, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

2 Lord. How is this justified?

1 Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters; which makes herself true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her offence to say, is come, was faithfully confirmed by the rectitude of the place.

2 Lord. Hath she count all this intelligence?

1 Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arising of the verity.

2 Lord. I am heartily sorry, that he'll be glad of this.

1 Lord. How mightily, sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses!

2 Lord. And how mightily, some other times, we draw our gain in tears! The great duty, that his valour hath here acquired for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

1 Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipp'd them not; and our crimes would despair, if they were not cherish'd by our virtues.—

Enter a Servant.

How now! where's your master?

Srv. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave; his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendation to the king.

2 Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can command.

Enter Bertram.

1 Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's largeness. Here's his lordship now. How now, my lord, is not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night despatched sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have convers'd with the duke; done my suit with his nearest; married a wife, married for her; writ to my lady mother, I am returning; entertained my country; and, between these main parcels of despatch, effected many nicer deeds; the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2 Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I meant, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter; But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier?—Come, bring forth this counterfeit module: he has deceived me, like a double-meaning profligator.

2 Lord. Bring him forth: [Enter Soldiers.] he has sat in the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

1 Lord. I have told your lordship already: the stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood; he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk: he hath confem'd himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance, to this very instant dinner

I got them in exploit; Yet slight ones will not carry it: They will say, Came you off with so little! and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore I what's the instance! I should, I must put you into a better woman's mouth, and buy another of Bejanet's muffs, if you prattle me into those perils.

1 Lord. Is it possible, he should know what he is, and be that he is? (Aside.)
Per. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn; or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

1 Lord. We cannot afford you so. (Aside.)
Per. Or the barring of my beard; and to say, it was in straiten.

1 Lord. 'I would not do. (Aside.)
Per. Or to draw my clothes, and say I was stripped.

1 Lord. Hardly serve. (Aside.)
Per. Though I swore I leaped from the window of the citadel—

1 Lord. How deep? (Aside.)

Per. Thirty fathom
1 Lord. Three great oaths would scarce make that believed. (Aside.)

Per. I would I had any dram of the enemy's; I would swear, I recovered it.

1 Lord. You shall hear one anon! (Aside.)
Per. A dram now of the enemy's!

1 Lord. Three muskoes, carpo, carpo, carpo.
All. Carpo, carpo, villanda per carbo, carpo.

Per. O! ransom, ransom!—Do not hide mine eyes. (They seize him and blindfold him.)

1 Sold. Bonae theudo to bostes.

Per. I know you are the Muskoe's regiment. And I shall kiss my life for want of language: If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him speak to me. I will discover that which shall undo The Florentine.

1 Sold. Bonae unvado.—

I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue:—
Erastomus.—Sir,
 Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poniards Are at thy bosom.

Per. Oh!
1 Sold. O, pray, pray, pray.—

Muskeo reuatis dulche.

1 Lord. Ocorbi dulches voluovra.

1 Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet.

And, howwink'd as thou art, will lead thee on To gather from thee: haply, thou may'st inform Something to save thy life.

Per. O, let me live, And all the secrets of our camp I'll show, Their force, their purposes: nay, I'll speak that Which you will wonder at.

1 Sold. But with thou faithfully!

Per. If I do not, damn me.

1 Sold. Acordo lista.—

Come on, thou art granted space.

(Exit, with Poniards guarded.)

1 Lord. Go, tell the count Rousillon, and my brother,

We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled

Till we do hear from them.

2 Sold. Captain, I will.

1 Lord. He will betray us all unto ourselves;— Inform 'em that.

2 Sold. So I will, sir.

1 Lord. Till then, I'll keep him dark, and safely lock'd.

(Exeunt.)

SCENE II.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter Bertram and Diana.

Ber. They told me, that your name was Fonti-
Dia. No, my good lord, Diana. (Exit.)

Ber. Tried goddess; And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul, in your fine frame hath love no quality?

If the quick fire of youth light not your mind, You are no maiden, but a monument:

When you are dead, you should be such a one As you are now, for you are cold and stern; And now you should be as your mother was, When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No:

My mother did but duty; such, my lord,

As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more of that!

I prythee, do not strive against my vows:

I was compell'd to her; but I love thee

By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever

Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us,

Till we serve you; but when you heed our ruise,

You hardly leave our throats to prick ourselves,

And mock us with our barrenness.

Ber. How have I sworn!

Dia. 'Tis not the many oaths that make the truth;

But the plain single vow, that is vow'd true.

What is not holy, that we swear not by.

But take the Highest to witness: Then, pray you, tell me.

If I should swear by Jove's great attributes,

I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,

When I did love you ill? This is no harking

To swear by him whom I protest to love, (oaths

That I will work against him: Therefore, your

Are words, and poor conditions; but usen'd;

At least, in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it;

Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy;

And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts,

That you do charge men with: Stand no more off,

But give thyself unto my sick desires.

Who then recover: say, thou art mine, and ever

My love, as it begins, shall so persevere.

Dia. I see, that men make hopes, in such affairs,

That we'll forsake ourselves: Give me that ring.

Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear, but have no power

To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not, my lord?

Ber. It is an honour long to our house,

Bequeathed down from many ancestors:

Which were the greatest obloquy 'the world,

In me to lose.

Dia. Mine honour's such a ring:

My chastity's the jewel of our house,

Bequeathed down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy 'the world

In me to lose: Thus your own proper walsons

Brings in the champion honour on my part,

Against your vain assault.

Ber. Here, take my ring:

My home, mine honour, yea, my life be thine,

And I'll be led by thee. (Exit window.)

Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber:

I'll order take, my mother shall not hear.

Not will I charge you in the band of truth,

When you have whisper'd my yet hidden bed,

Remain there out an hour, nor speak to me:

Per. I love not many words. [Exit.]

1 Lord. No more than a fish loves water. — Is not this a strange fellow, my lord? that so confidently seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done; damns himself to do, and dares better be damned than do't.

2 Lord. You do not know him, my lord, as we do: certain it is that he will steal himself into a man's favour, and for a week escape a great deal of discoveries; but when you find him out, you have him ever after.

Per. Why, do you think, he will make no deal at all of this, that so seriously he does address himself unto?

1 Lord. None in the world; but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies: but we have almost embossed him, you shall see his fall to-night: for, indeed, he is not for your lordship's respect.

2 Lord. We'll make you some sport with the fox, ere we cease him. He was first smoked by the old lord Lafew: when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sport you shall find him; which you shall see this very night.

Lord. I must go look my twigs; he shall be caught.

Per. Your brother, he shall go along with me.

1 Lord. As't please your lordship: I'll leave you. [Exit.]

Per. Now will I lead you to the house, and show

The last I spoke of. [You]

2 Lord. But, you say, she's honest.

Per. That's all the fault; I spoke with her but once.

And found her wondrous cold; but I sent to her, by this same ox-crook that we have i'the wind, Tokens and letters which she did re-send; And this is all I have done: She's a fair creature; Will you go see her?

2 Lord. With all my heart, my lord. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter Helena and Willow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she, I know not how I shall assure you further. But I shall lose the grounds I work upon. [Born.] Well. Though my estate be fallen, I was well Nothing acquainted with these businesses: And would not put my reputation now in any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you. First, give me trust: the count he is my husband; And, what to your sworn counsel I have spoken, is so, from word to word; and then you cannot, by the good will that I of you shall borrow, Err in bestowing it.

Will. I should believe you; For you have show'd me that, which well approves You are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of gold, And let me buy your friendly help thus far, Which I will over-pay, and pay again, [daughter] When I have found it. The count he woos your Lady down his wanton siege before her beauty, Resolves to carry her; let her, in fine, consent, As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it. Now his important blood will not deny That she'll demand: A ring the county wears, That downward hath succeeded in his house, From son to son, some four or five descents since the first father wore it: this ring he holds in most rich choice; yet, in his idle fire,

To buy his will, it would not seem too dear, How'er repented after.

Will. Now I see

The bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawful then: It is no more. But that your daughter, ere she seems as won, Desires this ring: appoints him an encounter; in fine, delivers me to fill the time, Himself most chaste absent: after this, To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns To what is past already.

Will. I have yielded: Instruct my daughter how she shall persevere That time and place, with this deceit so lawful, May prove coherent. Every night he comes With musicks of all sorts, and songs compos'd To her unworthiness: It nothing stands on, To chide him from our eaves; for he persists, As if his life lay on't.

Hel. Why then, to-night Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed, Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed, And lawful meaning in a lawful act;

Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact: But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Florentine Camp.

Enter first Lord, with five or six Soldiers in ambush.

1 Lord. He can come no other way but by this hedge's corner: When you singly upon him, speak what terrible language you will; though you understand it not yourselves, no matter; for we must not seem to understand him; unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter.

1 Sold. Good captain, let me be the interpreter. 1 Lord. Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

1 Sold. No, sir, I warrant you.

1 Lord. But what lousy-wooley hast thou to speak to us again?

1 Sold. Even such as you speak to me.

1 Lord. He must think us some band of strangers 't'he adversary's entertainment. Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak to one another; so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: though's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very poltroon. But crotch, but here he comes; to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Per. Ten o'clock: within these three hours 'twill be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausible invention that carries it: They begin to smoke me; and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door. I find, my tongue is too fool-hardy; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

1 Lord. This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of. [Loud.]

Per. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum; bring not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say

To have her name repeated: all her deserving is a reserved honesty, and that I have not heard examin'd.

Alas, poor lady!
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting lord.

Wid. A right good creature: whereas'er she is, Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd. [To her]

Hel. How do you mean?
 May be, the amorous count solicits her In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed;
 And brokes with all that can in such a suit Corrupt the tender honour of a maid:
 But see is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard in honest defence.

Enter, with drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army, Bertrann, and Parolles.

Mer. The gods forbid else!
Wid. So, now they come:—
 That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;
 That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?
De. He;

That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow;
 I would, he lov'd his wife: if he were honest,
 He were much gadlier:—Is't not a handsome

Hel. I like him well. [Gentleman!]
De. 'Tis pity he is not honest: You'd that same leave

That leads him to these places: were I his lady,
 I'd poison that vile rascal.

Hel. Which is he?
De. That Jack-an-apes with scarfs: Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i'the battle.
Par. Lose our drum! well.

Mer. He's shrewdly vex'd at something: Look, he has spoil us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!
Mer. And your courtesy, for a ring carrier!
[Exit Bertrann, Parolles, Officers and Soldiers.]

Wid. The troop is past: Come pilgrim, I will bring you
 Where you shall meet: of enjoin'd penitents
 There's four or five, to great Saint Jaque's bound,
 Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you:
 Please it this mistress, and the gentle maid,
 To eat with us to night, the charity and thanking
 Shall be for me; and, to requite you further,
 I will bestow some precepts on this virgin,
 Worthy the note.

Both. We'll take your offer kindly.
[Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Camp before Florence.

Enter Bertrann, and the two French Lords.

1 Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to't; let I see have his way.

2 Lord. If your lordship find him not a hiding, he did me no more in your respect.

1 Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.
Ber. Do you think, I am so far deceived in him?

1 Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and careless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.

2 Lord. It were fit you knew him: lost, reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might, at some great and trusty business, in a main danger, fail you.

Ber. I would, I knew in what particular action to try him.

2 Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

1 Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him; such I will have, whom I am sure he knows not from the enemy: we will bind and hand-wink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the league of the adversaries, when we bring him to our tents: He but your lordship present at his examination: if he do not, for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in anything.

2 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum: he says, he has a stratagem for't: when your lordship sees the bottom of his success in't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter Parolles.

1 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the humour of his design: let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

Ber. How now, monsieur! this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

2 Lord. A pox on't, let it go; 'tis but a drum.
Par. But a drum! Is't but a drum? A drum so lost!—There was an excellent command I to change in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers.

2 Lord. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service: 't was a disaster of war that Caesar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success: some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum; but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.
Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered: but that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or his coat.

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach to't, monsieur, if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring the instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise, an't be on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatness, even to the utmost syllable of your worthiness.

Par. By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.
Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. I'll about it this evening; and I will presently pen down my diadem, encourage myself in my certainty, put myself into my martial preparation, and, by midnight, look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace, you are gone about it?

Par. I know not what the success will be, my lord; but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know, thou art valiant; and to the possibility of thy soldiery, will subscribe for thee Farewell.

SCENE III.—Florence. Before the Duke's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Bertram, Lords, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Duke. The general of our horse thou art; and we,

Great in our hope, lay on't best love and credence Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir, it is
A charge too heavy for my strength: but yet
Will strive to bear it for your worthy sake,
To the extreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then go thou forth;
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm,
As thy auspicious mistress!

Ber. This very day,
Great Mars, I put myself into thy file:
Make me but like my thoughts; and I shall prove
A lover of thy drum, hater of love. (Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.—Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and Steward.

Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her?

Might you not know, she would do as she has done.

By sending me a letter! Read it again.

Stew. I am St. Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone:

Ambitious love hath so in me offended,

That bare-foot plod I the cold ground upon,

With scarred nose my faults to have amended.

Write, write, that, from the bloody counter of war,

My dearest wonder, your dear son may hear;

Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far,

His name with zealous fervour sincerely;

His taken labours bid him me forgive;

I, his despatch'd slave, sent him forth

From courtly friends, with compassing fore to see,

Where death and danger do the herbs of worth:

He is too good and fair for death and me;

Whom I myself embrace, to set him free.

Count. Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words!—

Rinuccio, you did never lack advice so much.

As letting her pass so; had I spoke with her,

I could have well diverted her intents,

Which thus she hath prevented.

Stew. Pardon me, madam:

If I had given you this at over-night,

She might have been o'er-taken; and yet she writes.

Prerogative would be but vain.

Count. What angel shall Bless this unworthy husband? I cannot thrive,

Unless her prayers, whom Heaven delights to hear,

And loves to grant, relieve him from the wrath

Of greatest justice.—Write, write, Rinuccio,

To this unworthy husband of his wife:

Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,

That he does worth too light: my greatest grief,

Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.

Despatch the most convenient messenger:—

When, haply, he shall hear that she is gone,

He will return; and hope I may, that she,

Hearing so much, will speed her foot again.

Led hither by pure love: which of them both

Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sense

To make distinction.—Provide this messenger:—

My heart is heavy, and mine ear is weak;

Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak. (Exeunt.)

SCENE V.—Without the Walls of Florence.

A trumpet after off. Enter an old Widow of Florence, Diana, Violenta, Mariana, and other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the night.

Dia. They say, the French count has done most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander; and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost our labour: they are gone a contrary way; hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mari. Come, let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl: the honour of a maid is her name: and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour, how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mari. I know that knave; hang him! one Parolles: a filthy officer he is in those surgesions for the young earl.—Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under.

Wid. Many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succumb, but that they are limed with the twigs that threaten them. I hope I need not to advise you further; but, I hope, your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Enter Helena, in the dress of a pilgrim.

Wid. I hope so.—Look, here comes a pilgrim: I know she will be at my house: thither they send one another; I'll question her.

Hel. Give me your pilgrim! Whither are you bound?

Hel. To Saint Jacques le grand.

Wid. Where do the pilgrims lodge, I do beseech you?

Hel. At the Saint Francis here, beside the port.

Wid. Is this the way?

Hel. Ay, marry, is it.—Hark you!

[A march after off.]

They come this way:—If you will tarry, holy pilgrim, till the troops come by,

I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;

The rather, for I think, I know your hostess

As ample as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of yours,

That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name, I pray you.

Dia. The Count Roussillon; know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ear, that bears nobly of him:

His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsoever he is,

He's bravely taken here. He stole from France,

As 'tis reported, for the king had married him

Against his liking: Think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth; I know his lady.

Dia. There is a gentleman, that serves the count,

Reports but cowardly of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. I believe with him,

In argument of praise, or to the worth

Of the great count himself, she is too mean

Clo. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Count. By what observance, I pray you?

Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot, and sing; meet the roff, and sing; ask questions, and sing; pick his teeth, and sing; I know a man that had the trick of melancholy, sold a goully manor for a song.

Count. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come.

Clo. I have no mind to label, since I was at court; our old ling and our labels o'the country are nothing like your old ling and your labels o'the court: the brains of my Cupid's knocked out; and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What love we here?

Clo. Even that you have there.

[Exit.

Count. [Reads.] I have sent you a daughter-in-law: she hath recovered the king, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make her not eternal. You shall hear, I am run away; know it, before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate son,

Bertram.

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy, To fly the favours of so good a king; To pluck his indignation on thy head, By the misprizing of a maid too virtuous For the contempt of empire.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam, yonder is heavy news within, between two soldiers and my young lady.

Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort; your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be kill'd?

Clo. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I hear he does: the danger is in standing to't; that's the loss of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come, will tell you more: for my part, I only hear, your son was run away.

[Exit Clown.

Enter Helena and two Gentlemen.

1 Gen. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone.

2 Gen. Do not say so.

Count. Think you patience — Pray you, gentlemen have felt so many quirks of joy, and grief, That the first face of neither, on the start, Can woman me unto? — Where is my son, I pray you?

2 Gen. Madam, he's gone to serve the duke of We met him thitherward; from thence we came, And, after some despatch in hand at court, Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his letter, madam; here's my [Reads.] When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of the body, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a then I write a never.

This is a dreadful sentence.

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen?

1 Gen. Ay, madam; And, for the contents' sake, are sorry for our pains.

Count. I pray thee, lady, have a better cheer;

If thou engross all the griefs are thine, Thou robbst me of a misery: He was my son;

But I do wash his name out of my blood.

And thou art all my child. — Towards Florence is 2 Gen. Ay, madam.

Count. And to be a soldier!

2 Gen. Such is his noble purpose; and, believe't, The duke will lay upon him all the honour That good convenience claims.

Count. Return you thither?

1 Gen. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Hel. [Reads.] Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.

'Tis bitter

Count. Find you that there?

Hel.

Ay, madam.

1 Gen. 'Tis but the boldness of his hand, haply, His heart was not consenting to.

Count. Nothing in France, until he have no wife!

There's nothing here, that is too good for him.

But only she; and she deserves a lord.

That twenty such rude boys might tend upon, And call her hourly, mistress. Who was with him?

1 Gen. A servant only, and a gentleman

Which I have some time known.

Count.

Parolles, wasn't not?

1 Gen. Ay, my good lady, he.

Count. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness, my son corrupts a well-derived nature [Edness. With his inducement.

1 Gen. Indeed, good lady,

The fellow has a deal of that, too much,

Which holds him much to have.

Count. You are welcome, gentlemen,

I will entreat you, when you see my son,

To tell him that his sword can never win

The honour that he loses: more I'll entreat you

Written to bear along.

2 Gen.

We serve you, madam,

In that and all your worthiest affairs.

Count. Not so, but as we change our courtesies.

Will you draw near?

[Exeunt Countess and Gentlemen.

Hel. Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.

Nothing in France, until he has no wife!

Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France,

Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is't!

That chase thee from thy country, and expose

Those tender limbs of thine to the event

Of the non-sparing war! and is it!

That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou

Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark

Of smoky muskets! O you leaden messengers,

That ride upon the violent speed of fire,

Fly with false aim; move the still-piercing air,

That sings with piercing, do not touch my lord!

Whoever shoots at him, I set him there;

Whoever charges on his forward breast,

I am the cut-throat, that do hold him to it;

And, though I kill him not, I am the cause

His death was so effected: better 'twere,

I met the ravin lion when he roar'd

With sharp constraint of hunger: better 'twere

That all the miseries, which nature owes,

Were mine at once: No, come thou home, Rousillon.

Whence honour but of danger wins a scar,

As oft it loses all; I will be gone;

My being here it is, that holds thee hence:

Shall I stay here to do't? no, no, although

The air of paradise did fan the house,

And angels offic'd all: I will be gone;

That pitiful rumour may report my flight,

To console thine ear. Come night; and, day!

For, with the dark, poor thief, I'll steal away.

[Exit.

Ber. And by other warranted testimony.

Laf. Then my dial goes not true; I took this lark for a hunting.

Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then sinned against his experience, and transgressed against his valour; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent. Here he comes: I pray you, make us friends, I will pursue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Par. These things shall be done, sir.

[To Bertram.]

Laf. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?

Par. Sir,

Laf. O, I know him well: Ay, sir; he, sir, is a good workman, a very good tailor.

Ber. Is she gone to the king?

[Aside to Parolles.]

Par. She is.

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you'll have her.

[Sure,

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my trea- Given order for our horses; and to-night,

When I should take possession of the bride,— And, ere I do begin,

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three-thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard, and thrice beaten — God save you, captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into 'my lord's displeasure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into't, boots and spurs and all, like him that leaped into the custard; and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be you have mistaken him, my lord.

Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at his prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes: trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame, and know their natures.—Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better of you, than you have or will deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil.

[Exit.

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think so.

Par. Why, do you not know him?

[Speech

Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clug.

Enter Helena.

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you, Spoke with the king, and have procured his leave For present parting; only, he desires Some private speech with you.

Ber.

I must not marvel, Helen, at my course, Which holds not colour with the time, nor does The commendation and required office

On my particular: prepar'd I was not For such a business; therefore am I found So much unsettled: This drives me to entreat you, That presently you take your way for home; And rather muse, than ask, why I entreat you: For my respects are better than they seem; And my appointments have in them a need, Greater than shows itself, at the first view, To you that know them not. This to my mother: [Giving a letter.

'Twill be two days ere I shall see you; so I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel.

Sir, I can nothing say,

But that I am your most obedient servant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel.

And ever shall With true observance seek to eke out that, Wherein toward me my homely stars have fail'd To equal my great fortune.

Ber.

Let that go: My haste is very great: Farewell; his home.

Hel. Pray, sir, your pardon.

Ber.

Well, what would you say?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe;

Nor dare I say, 'tis mine; and yet it is;

But, like a timorous thief, most fain would steal

What law does vouch mine own.

Ber.

What would you have?

Hel. Something; and scarce so much:—nothing, [yes:—

I would not tell you what I would: my lord—[faith,

Strangers, and foes, do sunder, and not kiss.

Ber. I pray you, stay not, but in haste to horse.

Hel. I shall not break your bidding, good my lord.

Ber. Where are my other men, monsieur?—

[Exit Helena.

Go thou toward home; where I will never come,

Whilst I can shake my sword, or hear the drum:—

Away, and for our fight.

Par. Bravely, coraggio!

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Florence. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, attended; two French Lords, and others.

Duke. So that, from point to point, now have you The fundamental reasons of this war: [heard Whose great decision hath much blood let forth, And more thirsts after.

1 Lord. Holy seems the quarrel Upon your grace's part; black and fearful

On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we murmur much, our cousin France

Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom Against our borrowing prayers.

2 Lord. Good my lord,

The reasons of our state I cannot yield, But like a common and an outward man,

That the great figure of a council frames By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it; since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fail

As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.

2 Lord. But I am sure, the younger of our nature, That surfeit on their ease, will, day by day,

Come here for physac.

Duke. Welcome shall they be; And all the honours, that can fly from us,

Shall on them settle. You know your places well; When better fall, for your avails they fall:

To-morrow to the field. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save, that he comes not along with her.

grace off me; scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy lord!—Well, I must be patient; there is no fletting of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, an he were double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age, than I would have of—I'll beat him, as if I could but meet him again.

Re-enter Lafou.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's married, there's news for you: you have a new mistress.
Par. I must unfignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs: He is my good lord: whom I serve above, is my master.

Laf. Who? I God?

Par. Ay, sir.

Laf. The devil it is, that's thy master. Why dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion? I dost make hose of thy sleeves! I do other servants so! Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two hours younger, I'd beat thee: methinks, thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee. I think, thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; you are a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are more maucy with lords, and honourable personages, than the heraldry of your birth and virtue gives you commission. You are not worth another word, else I'll call you knave. I leave you. [Exit.]

Enter Bertram.

Par. Good, very good; it is so then.—Good, very good; let it be concealed awhile.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever!

Par. What is the matter, sweet heart?

Ber. Although before the solemn priest I have I will not bed her. [sworn.]

Par. What? what, sweet heart?

Ber. O my Parolles, they have married me:—I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits the tread of a man's foot: to the wars!

Ber. There's letters from my mother: what the I know not yet. [import is]

Par. Ay, that would be known: To the wars, my boy, to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box unseen,
That hugs his kicky-wicky here at home;
Spending his manly marrow in her arms,
Which should sustain the bound and high curvet
Of Mars's fiery steel: To other regions!

France is a stable; we, that dwell in't, jades;
Therefore, to the war!

Ber. It shall be so: I'll send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled; write to the king
That which I durst not speak: His present gift
Shall furnish me to those Italian fields,
Where while fellows strike: War is no strife
To the dark house, and the detested wife.

Par. Will this capricio hold in thee, art sure?

Ber. Go with me to my chamber and advise me.
I'll send her straight away: To-morrow
I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why, these tails bound; there's noise in it. I'st hard!

A young man, married, is a man that's marr'd:
Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go:
The king has done you wrong: but hush! 'tis so.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter Helena and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: Is she well?
Cl. She is not well; but yet she has her health: She's very merry; but yet she is not well: But thanks be given, she's very well, and wants nothing i'th' world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail, that she's not very well?

Cl. Truly, she's very well, indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Cl. One, that she's not in Heaven, whither God send her quickly! the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly!

Enter Parolles.

Par. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Hel. I hope, sir, I have your good-will to have mine own good fortunes.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on; and to keep them on, have them still.—O, my knave! How does my old lady?

Cl. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Cl. Marry, you are the wiser man: for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing: To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away, thou'rt a knave.

Cl. You should have said, sir, before a knave thou art a knave; that is, before me thou art a knave: this had been truth, sir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool, I have found thee.

Cl. Did you find me in yourself, sir? or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure, and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave, i'faith, and well fed.—Mistress, my lord will go away to-night: A very serious business calls on him.

The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge:
But puts it off by a compell'd restraint: [sides]
Whose want, and whose delay, is srewed with sweets.

Which they distil now in the curbed time,
To make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else?
Par. That you will take your instant leave o' the king.

And make this haste as your own good proceeding,
Strengthen'd with what apology you think
May make it probable need.

Hel. What more commands he?

Par. That, having thus obtain'd, you presently Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In everything I wait upon his will.

Par. I shall report it so.

Hel. I pray you.—Come, sirrah. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Lafou and Bertram.

Laf. But, I hope, your lordship thinks not him a soldier.

Ber. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant approval.

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.

I am a youth of fourteen; I have known thee already.

Hel. I dare not say I take you; (to Bertram) but I give Me and my service ever whilst I live.

Into your guiding power.—This is the man.

King. Why then, young Bertram, take her, she's thy wife. [Highness.]

Ber. My wife, my liege? I shall beseech your

In such a business give me leave to use

The help of mine own eyes.

King. Know'st thou not, Bertram,

What she has done for me?

Ber. Yes, my good lord;

But never hope to know why I should marry her.

King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down

Must answer for your raising? I know her well;

She had her breeding at my father's charge:

A poor physician's daughter my wife!—Dishonour

Rather corrupt me ever! [which]

King. 'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the

I can build up. Strange is it, that our bloods,

Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,

Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off

In differences so mighty: if she be

All that is virtuous (save what thou dislike'st,

A poor physician's daughter), thou dislike'st

Of virtue for the name: but do not so;

From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,

The place is dignified by the doer's deed:

Where great additions swell, and virtue none,

It is a dropp'd honour: good alone

Is good without a name; vileness is so:

The property by what it is should go,

Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;

In these to nature she's immoderate heir;

And these breed honour: that as honour's scorn,

Which challenges itself as honour's born,

And is not like the sire: Honour best thrive,

When rather from our acts we them derive

Than out fore-goes: the mere world's slave,

Debauch'd on every tumb; on every grave,

A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb,

Where dust, and damn'd oblivion, is the tomb

Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said?

If thou canst like this creature as a man,

I can create the rest: virtue, and she,

Is her own dower; honour, and wealth, from me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.

King. Thou wrong'st thyself, if thou should'st strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I am

Let the rest go. [glad.]

King. My honour's at the stake: which to defend

I must produce my power: Here, take her hand,

Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift,

That dost in vile misprision shackle up

My love, and her desert: that wilt not dream,

We, puzzing us in her defective scale,

Shall weigh thee to the beam; that wilt not know,

It is in us to plant thine honour, where

We please to have it grow: Check thy contempt:

Obeys our will, which travels in thy good:

Believe not thy disdain, but presently

Do thine own fortunes that obedient right,

Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims;

Or I will throw thee from my care for ever,

Into the stugglers, and the careless lapse

Of youth and ignorance both my revenge and hate,

Leaving upon thee in the name of justice,

Without all terms of pity: Speak! thine answer!

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit

My fancy to your eyes: When I consider,

What great creation, and what dole of honour,

Flies where you bid it, I find, that she, which late

Was in my nobler thoughts must base, is now

The praised of the king: who, so ennobled,

Is, as 'twere, born so.

King. Take her by the hand,

And tell her, she is thine: to whom I promise

A counterpoise; if not to thy estate,

A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.

King. Good fortune, and the favour of the king

Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony

Shall seem expedient on the new-born brief,

And be perform'd to night: the solemn feast

Shall more attend upon the coming space,

Expecting absent friends: As thou lov'st her,

Thy love's to me religious: else, does err.

[Exeunt King, Bertram, Helens, Lords,

and Attendants.]

Las. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, sir.

Las. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation?—My lord? my master?

Las. Ay; is it not a language, I speak?

Par. A most harsh one; and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master?

Las. Are you companion to the count Roussillon?

Par. To any count; to all counts; to what is

man.

Las. To what is count's man; count's master is of another style.

Par. You are too old, sir; let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Las. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Las. I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow; thou dost make tolerable

vent of thy travel; it might pass: yet the scarfs,

and the hauberkets, about thee, did manifestly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burden. I have now found thee; when I lose thee again, I care not; yet art thou good for nothing but taking up; and that thou art scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee,—

Las. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial;—which if—Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well; thy censurement I need not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Las. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Las. Yes, good faith, every dram of it; and I will not hate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Las. 'E'en as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull a smack of the contrary. If ever thou be'st bound in thy scarf, and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge: that I may say, in the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My lord, you do me most inappreciable vation.

Las. I would it were hell-pains for thy sake, and my poor doing eternal: for doing I am past;

as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me

leave. [Exit.]

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take this dis-

Cla. O Lord, sir.—There's a simple putting off:—more, more, a hundred of them.

Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Cla. O Lord, sir.—Thick, thick, spare not me.

Count. I think, sir, you can eat none of this humbly meat.

Cla. O Lord, sir.—Nay, put me to't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipped, sir, as I think.

Cla. O Lord, sir.—Spare not me.

Count. Do you cry, O Lord, sir; at your whipping, and spare not me? Indeed, your O Lord, sir, is very sequent to your whipping; you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to't.

Cla. I ne'er had worse luck in my life, in my—
O Lord, sir: I see, things may serve long, but not serve ever.

Count. I play the noble housewife with the time, to entertain it so merrily with a fool.

Cla. O Lord, sir.—Why, there't serves well again.

Count. As end, sir: to your business: Give Helen this.

And signs her to a present answer back:
Commend me to my kinsmen, and my son;
'Tis of me much.

Cla. Not much commendation to them.

Count. Not much employment for you: You understand me?

Cla. Most fruitfully; I am there before my legs.

Count. Haste you again. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE III.—Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter Bertram, Lafew, and Parolles.

Laf. They say, miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar things, supernatural and causeless. Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrors; ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why, 'tis the rarest argument of wonder, that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ber. And so 'tis.

Laf. To be relinquish'd of the artists.—

Par. So I say; both of Galen and Paracelsus.

Laf. Of all the learned and authentic fellows,—

Par. Barbit, so I say.

Laf. That gave him out incurable.—

Par. Why, there 'tis: so say I too.

Laf. Not to be helped.—

Par. Right: as 'twere a man assured of an—

Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death.

Par. Just, you say well: so would I have said.

Laf. I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.

Par. It is, indeed: if you will have it in showing, you shall read it in,—What do you call there?

Laf. A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly action.

Par. That's it I would have said; the very same.

Laf. Why, your dolphin is not lustier: 'fore me I speak in respect—

Par. Nay, 'tis strange, 'tis very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it; and he is of a most serious spirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the—

Laf. Very hand of Heaven.

Par. Ay, so I may.

Laf. In a most weak—

Par. And double minister, great power, great transcendence: which should, indeed, give us a further use to be made, than alone the recovery of the king, as to be—

Laf. Generally thankful.

Enter King, Helen, and Attendants.

Par. I would have said it; you say well. Here comes the king.

Laf. Lastic, as the Dutchman says: I'll like a maid the better, whilst I have a tooth in my head: Why, he's able to lead her a coranto.

Par. Mort du Venaigre! Is not this Helen?

Laf. 'Fore God, I think so.

King. Go, call before me all the lords in court.—
[Exit an Attendant.]

Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side; [seems] And with this beautiful hand, whose banish'd Thou hast repealed, a second time receive 'The confirmation of my promise'd gift, Which but attends thy naming.

Enter several Lords.

Fair maid, send forth thine eye: this youthful parcel

Of noble bachelors stand at my bestowing, [voice] O'er whom both sovereign power and father's I have to use: thy frank election make; Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.

Het. To each of you one fair and virtuous miss—
Fall, when love pleases—marry to each but one!

Laf. I'd give bay Cortal, and his furniture, My mouth no more were broken than these boys', And writ as little beard.

King. Peruse them well: Not one of these, but had a noble father.

Het. Gentlemen, Heaven hath, through me, restor'd the king to health.

All. We understand it, and thank Heaven for you.

Het. I am a simple maid: and therein wealthiest,

That, I protest, I simply am a maid:—

Please it your majesty, I have done already:

The blushes in my cheeks, thus whisper me,

We blush, that thou should'st at choice; but, be refus'd,

Let the whole death sit on thy cheek for ever;

We'll ne'er come there again.

King. Make choice; and, see,

Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.

Het. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly;

And to imperial Love, that god most high,

Do my rights stream.—Sir, will you hear my suit?

1 Lord. And grant it.

Het. Thanks, sir; all the rest is mute.

Laf. I had rather be in this choice, than throw ames-ace for my life.

Het. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair eyes,

Before I speak, too threateningly replies:

Love makes your fortunes twenty times above

Her that so wishes, and her humble love!

2 Lord. No better, if you please.

Het. My wish receives,

Which great love grant! and so I take my leave.

Laf. Do all they deny her! An they were sons of mine, I'd have them whipped; or I would send them to the Turk, to make eunuchs of.

Het. Be not afraid [to a Lord] that I your hand should take;

I'll never do you wrong for your own sake:

Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed

Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her: sure, they are bastards to the English;

the French ne'er got them.

Het. You are too young, too happy, and too good,

To make yourself a son out of my blood.

4 Lord. Fair one, I think not so.

Laf. There's one grape yet.—I am sure thy father drank wine.—But if thou be'st not an ass,

When our most learned doctors leave us; and
The congregated college have concluded
That labouring art can never ransom nature
From her inadable estate,—I say we must not
So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope.
To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empirics; or to discover so
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help, when help past sense we deem.

Hel. My duty then shall pay me for my pains;
I will no more enforce mine office on you;
I humbly entreating from your royal thoughts
A modest one, to bear me back again. [ful:]

King. I cannot give thee less to be call'd grate-Thou thought'st to help me; and such thanks I give,

As one near death to those that wish him live;
But, what at full I know, thou know'st no part;
I knowing all my peril, thou no art.

Hel. What I can do, can do no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy:
He that of greatest works is finisher
Of does them by the weakest minister:
So holy writ in battles hath judgment shown, [shown
When judges have been babes. Great floods have
From simple sources; and great seas have dried,
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Of expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldest, and despair most sits.

King. I must not hear thee; fare thee well, kind nurse!

Thy pains, not us'd, must by thyself be paid:
Professors, not took, reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is barr'd:
It is not so with him that all things knows,
As 'tis with us that square our guess by shows:
But most it is presumption in us, when
The help of Heaven we count the act of men.
Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent:
Of Heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor, that proclaim
Myself against the level of mine aim;
But know I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power, nor you past cure.

King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop'st thou my cure?

Hel. The greatest grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring;
Ere twice in morn and occidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quench'd his sleepy lamp;
Or four-and-twenty times the pilot's glass
Hath told the thrush minutes how they pass;
What as infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
Health shall live free, and sickness freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence
What dar'st thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence,—
A strumpet's holdness, a divorced shame,—
Traduc'd by odious ballads; my maiden's name
Sear'd otherwise; no worse of worst extended,
With vilest tortures let my life be ended. [peak:]

King. Methinks, in thee some blessed spirit doth
His powerful sound, within an organ weak:
And what impossibility would stir
In common sense, some saves another way.
Thy life is dear; for all, that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate;
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, virtue, all
That happiness and prime can happy call:
Thou thus to hazard, no ends must intimate
Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate.
Sweet practitioner, thy physic I will try:
That maisters thus own death, if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I spoke, unpurged let me die;
And well deserv'd: Not helping, death's my fee:
But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand

Hel. But will you make it even?
King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of Heaven.

Hel. Then shalt thou give me, with thy kindly
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royal blood of France;
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state:
But such a one, thy vnaul, whom I know
Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

King. Here is my hand; the premises observ'd,
Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd;
So make the choice of thy own time, for I,
Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.

More should I question thee, and more I must;
Though, more to know, could not be more to trust;

From whence thou cam'st, how tended on,—But Unquestion'd welcome, and undoubted blest.—
Give me some help here, ho!—If thou proceed
As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. Come, on, sir; I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clow. I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught: I know my business is but to the court.

Count. To the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt?
But to the court!

Clow. Truly, madam, if God hath lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court: he that cannot make a leg, put off a cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, top cap; and, indeed, such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court: but for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that's a bountiful answer, that fits all questions.

Clow. It is like a barber's chair; that fits all buttocks; the pin-buttock, the quack-buttock, the brawn-buttock, or any buttock.

Count. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clow. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your taffeta puck, as Tib's rush for Tum's fore-finger, as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, a morris for May-day, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding queen to a wrangling knave, as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth; nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

Clow. From below your duke, to beneath your countess, I will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size, and must fit all demands.

Clow. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it: here it is, and all that belongs to't: Ask me if I am a courtier:
it shall do you no harm to learn.

Count. To be young again, if we could: I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter King, with young Lords, taking leave for the Florentine war; Bertram, Parolles, and Attendants.

King. Farewell, young lord, these warlike principles [well:]—

Do not throw from you:—and you, my lord, farewell. Share the advice betwixt you: if both gain all, The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis received, And is enough for both.

1 Lord. It is our hope, sir, After well enter'd soldiers, to return And find your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart Will not confess he owes the malediction That doth my life beseege. Farewell, young lord; Whether I live or die, he you the sons Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy (Those 'bated, that inherent but the fall Of the last monarchy,) see, that you come Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek, That fame may cry you loud: I say, farewell.

2 Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King. These girls of Italy, take heed of them; They say our French lack language to deny, If they demand; beware of being captives, Before you serve.

Both. Our hearts receive your warnings. King. Farewell.—Come hither to me.

[The King retires to a couch.]
1 Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!

Par. 'Tis not his fault; the spark—

2 Lord. O, 'tis brave wars!

Par. Most admirable, I have seen those wars. Par. I am commended here, and kept a coil with, Too young, and the next year, and 'tis too early.

Par. An thy mind stand to it, boy, steal away bravely.

Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock, Creaking my shies on the plain masonry, Till honour be brought up, and no sword worn, But one to dance with! By Heaven, I'll steal away.

1 Lord. There's honour in the theft.

Par. Commit it, count.

2 Lord. I am your accessory; and so farewell. Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.

1 Lord. Farewell, captain.

2 Lord. Sweet monsieur Parolles!

Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals:—You shall find in the regiment of the Spirit, one captain Spurio, with his circatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek; it was this very sword entrenched it: to any him, I live; and observe his reports for me.

2 Lord. We shall, noble captain.

Par. Mark date on you for his services! [Exit Lords.] What will you do?

Ber. Stay; the king— [Seeing him rise.]

Par. Use a more specious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu; be more expressive to them: for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there, do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star; and through the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more slated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy sword-men.

[Exit Bertram and Parolles.]

Enter Lafew.

Laf. Pardon, my lord [bawling], for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll fess thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here's a man Stands, that has brought his pardon. I would, you Had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy; and That, at my bidding, you could so stand up.

King. I would I had; so I had broke thy pate, And ask'd thee mercy for't.

Laf. Goodfaith anore, But, my good lord, 'tis thus; Will you be out:ed Of your infirmity!

King. No.

Laf. O, will you eat

No grapes, my royal fox? yes, but you will, My noble grapes, an if my royal fox Could reach them: I have seen a medicine, That's able to breathe life into a stone; Quickens a rock, and make you dance canary, With spritely fire and motion; whose simple touch Is powerful to araise king Pepin, nay, To give great Charlemain a pou in his hand, And write to her a love-line.

King. What her is this?

Laf. Why, doctor she; My lord, there's one arriv'd.

If you will see her,—now, by my faith and honour, If seriously I may convey my thoughts In this my light deliverance, I have spoke With one, that, in her sex, her years, profession, Wisdom, and constancy, hath amaz'd me more Than I dare blame my weakness: Will you see her [For that is her demand] and know her business? That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now, good Lafew, Bring in the admiration; that we with thee May spend our wonder too, or take off thine, By wondering how thou took'st it.

Laf. Nay, I'll fit you.

And not be all day neither [Exit Lafew.]

King. Thus he has special nothing ever prodigious.

Re-enter Lafew with Helena.

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

King. 'Tis haste hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your ways;

This is his majesty, say your mind to him:

A traitor you do look like; but such traitors

His majesty seldom fears: I am Cressid's uncle,

That dare leave two together: fare you well.

[Exit.]

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?

Hel. Ay, my good lord. Gerard de Narbon was

My father; in what he did profess, well so and

King. I knew him. [Hum.]

Hel. The rather will I spare my praise towards

Knowing him is enough. On his bed of death

Many receipt's he gave me; chiefly one,

Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,

And of his old experience the only darling,

He had me store up, as a triple eye,

Safer than mine own two, more dear; I have so:

And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd

With that malignant cause wherein the honour

Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,

I come to tender it, and my appliance,

With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you, maiden;

But may not be so credulous of cure,—

Enter Helena.

Count. Even so it was with me, when I was young;

If we are nature's, these are ours; this thorn
Doth to our use of youth rightly belong:

Our blood to us, this to our blood is born;
It is the show and seal of nature's truth.

Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth:
By our remembrance of days foregone;

Such were our faults:—or then we thought them
Her eye is sick on't; I observe her now. [none.]

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam?

Count. You know, Helen,
I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a mother!
Why not a mother! When I said, a mother,

Methought you saw a serpent: What's in nother,
That you start at it? I say, I am your mother;

And put you in the catalogue of those
That were so wounded mine: 'Tis often seen,

Adoption strives with nature; and choice breeds
A native slip to us from foreign seeds:

You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan,
Yet I express to you a mother's care:—

God's mercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood,
To say, I am thy mother? What's the matter,

That this distemper'd messenger of wet,
The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?

Why?—That you are my daughter!
Hel. That I am not.

Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardon, madam;
The count Roussillon cannot be my brother;

I am from humble, he from honour'd name;
No note upon my parents, his all noble:

My master, my dear lord he is: and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die:

He must not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your mother?
Hel. You are my mother, madam: 'Would you were

(So that my lord, your son, were not my brother),
Indeed, my mother!—or were you both our mother, I care no more for than I do for heaven, [there,

So I were not his sister: Can't no other,

But I, your daughter, he must be my brother?

Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law;

God shield, you mean it not! daughter, and nother,
So strive upon your pulse: What, pale again?

My fear hath catch'd your fondness: Now I see
The mystery of your loneliness, and find

Your salt tears' head. Now to all sense 'tis gross.
You love my son; invention is ashamed,

Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say, thou dost not: therefore tell me true;

But tell me then, 'tis so:—for, look, thy cheeks
Confess it, one to the other; and thine eyes

See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours,
That in their kind they speak it: only sin

And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue.
That truth should be suspected: Speak, is't so?

If it be so, you have wound a goodly clue;
If it be not, forswear't: however, I charge thee, as as Heaven shall work in me for thine avail,

Tell me truly.

Hel. Good madam, pardon me!

Count. Do you love my son?

Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress!

Count. Love you my son?

Hel. Do not you love him, madam?

Count. Go not about my love hath in't a bond,
Whereof the world takes note: come, come, disclose

The state of your affection: for your piousness
Have to the full appeach'd.

Hel. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high Heaven and you,

That before you, and next unto high Heaven,
I love your son:—

My friends were poor but honest; so's my love.
Be not offended; for it hurts not him.

That he is lord of me: I saw him not
By any token of prestatious suit;

Nor would I have him 'till I do deserve him:
Yet never know how that desert should be.

I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet in this captious and intemperate sieve,

I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still: thus, Indian-like,

Religious in mine error, I adore
The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,

But knows of him no more. My dearest ma'am,
Let not your hate encounter with my love,

For loving where you do: but, if yourself,
Whose sacred honour cites a virtuous youth,

Did ever, in so true a flame of liking,
Wish chastely, and love dearly, that your Dian

Was both herself and love; O then, give pity
To her, whose state is such, that cannot choose

But lend and give, where she is sure to lose;
That seeks not to find that her search implies,

But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.

Count. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam, I had.

Count. Wherefore? I tell true.

Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself, I swear.

You know, my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and provid' effects, such as his reading,

And manifest experience, had collected
For general sovereignty; and that he would me

In heedfullest reservation to bestow them,
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,

More than they were in use; amongst the rest,
There is a remedy approv'd, set down,

To cure the desperate languishes, whereof
The king is render'd lost.

Count. This was your motive
For Paris, was it? speak.

Hel. My lord your son made me to think of this,
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king,

Had, from the conversation of my thoughts,
Haply, been absent then.

Count. But think you, Helen,
If you should tender your supposed aid,

He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind: he, that they cannot help him.

They, that they cannot help: How shall they credit
A poor unlearn'd virgin when the schools

Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to itself?

Hel. There's something in his
More than my father's skill, which was the greatest

Of his profession, that his good receipt
Shall for my legacy be sanctified [thou'rt

By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would you
But give me leave to try success, I'd venture

The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure,
By such a day, and hour.

Count. Dost thou believe't?

Hel. Ay, madam, knowingly.

Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave,
Menns, and attendants, and my loving greetings

To those of mine in court; I'll stay at home,
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt:

Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss.

[Exeunt.]

King If he were living, I would try him yet;—
Lend me an arm;—the rest have worn me out
With several applications;—nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, Count;
My son's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your majesty.
[Exeunt. Flourish]

SCENE III.—Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours: for then we wound our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Count. What does this knave here! Get you gone, sirrah: The complaints, I have heard of you, I do not all believe; 'tis my slowness, that I do not: for, I know, you lack not fully to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

Count. Well, sir.

Clo. No, madam, 'tis not so well, that I am poor; therein many of the rich are damned: But, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the world, label the woman and I will do as we may.

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good-will in this case.

Count. In what case?

Clo. In label's case and mine own. Service is no heritage: and, I think, I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue of my body; for, they say, heirs are blessings.

Count. Tell me the reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs go, that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry, that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out of friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clo. You are shallow, madam; even great friends; for the knaves come to do that for me, which I am a-weary of. He, that ears my land, spares my team, and gives me leave to use the crop: If I be his cockle, he's my drudge: He, that comforts my wife, is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he, that cherishes my flesh and blood, loves my flesh and blood; he, that loves my flesh and blood, is a friend: ere he that knows my wife, is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage: for young Charbon the puritan, and old Pyram the papist, howsoever their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one, they may joll horns together like any deer in the herd.

Count. Wilt thou ever be a foul mouthed and malicious knave?

Clo. A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way:

*For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find;
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.*

Count. Get you gone, sir: I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you; of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman, I would speak with her; Helen, I mean.

Clo. Was this fair face the cause, quoth she, [Singing.

*Why the Grecians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done foul,
Was this knave Priam's joy,
With that she sighed as she stood,
With that she sighed as she stood,
And gave this entrance then:
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There's yet one good in ten.*

Count. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam; which is a purifying o'the song: 'Would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tythe-woman, if I were the parson: One in ten, quoth a! as we might have a good woman born but every blazing star, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well; a man may draw his heart out, ere he pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you!

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done!—Though honies y'be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart.—I am going, forward; the business is for Helen to come hither.

Count. Well, now. [Exit Clown.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father bequeathed her to me: and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds: there is more owing her, than is paid; and more shall be paid her, than she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her than, I think, she wanted me: none she was, and did communicate to herself, her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vowe for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her mother was, she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt the two estates: Love, no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; than, no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight to be surprised, without rescue, in the first assault, or ransom afterward: This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow, that e'er I heard virgin exclaim in: which I held my duty, speedily to recount you withal: silence in the hour that may happen, it concerns you somewhat to know it.

Count. You have discharged this honestly; keep it to yourself: many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hang so tottering in the balance, that I could neither believe, nor misdoubt: Pray you, leave me: still this in your bosom, and I thank you for your honest care: I will speak with you further anon. [Exit Steward.

That blinking Cupid grasps. Now shall he—
I know not what he shall:—God send him well!—
The court's a learming-place;—and he is one—
Per. What one, I faith!

Hel. That I wish well.—'Tis pity—

Per. What's pity!

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt: that we, the poorer born,
Whose haster stars do shut us up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And show what we alone must think; which Return us thanks. (never

Enter a Page.

Pope. Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for you.

[Exit Page.]

Per. Little Helen, farewell: If I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Per. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Per. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars have so kept you under, that you must needs be born under Mars.

Per. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think, rather.

Per. Why think you so?

Hel. You go so much backward, when you fight.

Per. That's for advantage.

Hel. So is running away, when fear proposes the safety: But the composition, that your valour and fear makes in you, is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Per. I am so full of businesses, I cannot answer thee so acutely: I will return perfect courtier; in the which, my instructions shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee: else thou diest in thy unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell.
When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast power, remember thy friends: get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee; so farewell. (Exit.

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to Heaven: the fated sky
Gives us free scope; only, doth backward pull
Our slow designs, when we ourselves are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my love so high,
That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune nature brings
To join like likes, and kiss like natures things.
Impossible be strange attempts, to those
That weigh their pains in sense: and do suppose,
What hath been cannot be. Who ever strive
To show her merit, that did miss her love!
The king's disease—my project may deceive me.
But my intents are fix'd, and will not leave me. (Exit.

SCENE II.—Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the King of France, with letters; Lords and others attending.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by the ears;

Have fought with equal fortune, and continue
A braving war.

1 Lord. So 'tis reported, sir.

King. Nay, 'tis most credible: we here receive it
A certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria.
With caution, that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend

Prejudicates the business; and would seem
To have us make denial.

1 Lord. His love and wisdom,
Approv'd so to your majesty, may plead
For amplest credence.

King. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is denied before he comes:
Yet, for our gentlemen, that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.

2 Lord. It may well serve
A nursery to our gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit.

King. What's he comes here!

Enter Bertram, Lafew, and Parolles.

1 Lord. It is the Count Rossillon, my good lord,
Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou hear'st thy father's face;
Frank nature, rather curious than in haste,
Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts
May'st thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty's.

King. I would I had that corporal soundness now,
As when thy father, and myself, in friendship
First try'd our soldiership! He did look far Into the service of the time, and was Disciple of the bravest: he lasted long;
But on us both did leucis age steal on.

And wore us out of act. It much repairs me
To talk of your good father: In his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest,
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted,
Ere they can hide their levity in honour.

So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awak'd them; and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and, at the time,
His tongue obey'd his hand: who were below him
He us'd as creatures of another place;
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humbling.

In their poor praise he humbled: Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times;
Which, follow'd well, would demonstrate them
But goes backward. (now,

Ber. His good remembrance, sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts, than on his tomb;
So in approv'd lives not his epitaph,
As in your royal speech.

King. 'Would, I were with him! He would always say,

(Methinks, I hear him now: his plausible words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them.
To grow there, and to bear.)—Let me not live,—
Thus his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,
When it was out.—Let me not live, quoth he,
After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff

Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things discern; whose judgments are
More fathers of their garments; whose consciences
Expose before their fashions:—'Tis he wail'd:
I, after him, do after him wish too.
Since I nor wax, nor honey, can bring home,
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some labourers room.

2 Lord. You are lov'd, sir:
They, that least lend it you, shall lack you first.

King. I fill a place, I know't.—How long is't, Since the physician at your father's died? (round,
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six months since, my lord,

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good, that her education promises; her dispositions she inherits, which make fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity, they are virtues and traitors too; in her they are the better for their plainness; she derives her honesty, and achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

Count. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart, but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena, go to, no more; lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have.

Hel. I do affect a sorrow, indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Bel. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that? [father

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram! and succeed thy in manners, as in shape! thy blood, and virtue, Contend for empire in thee; and thy goodness Share with thy birth right! Love all, trust a few, Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy Rather in power than use; and keep thy friend Under thy own life's key: be check'd for silence, But never tax'd for speech. What Heaven more will

That these may furnish, and my prayers pluck Fall on thy head! Farewell.—My lord, 'Tis an unseason'd courtier; good my lord, Advise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best That shall attend his love.

Count. Heaven bless him!—Farewell, Bertram. [Exit Countess.

Bel. The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts, [to Helena,] be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell, pretty lady: You must hold the credit of your father. [Exit Bertram and Lafew.

Hel. O, were that all!—I think not on my father; [more

And these great tears grace his remembrance Than those I shed for him. What was he like? I have forgot him: my imagination Carries no favour in it but Bertram's. I am undine; there is no living, none, If Bertram be away. It were all one, That I should love a bright particular star, And think to wed it, he is so above me: In his bright radiance and collateral light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere.

The ambition in my love thus places itself: The hand, that would be malod by the lion, Must die for love. 'Twas pity, though a plague, To see him every hour; to sit and draw His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls, In our heart's table; heart, too capable Of every line and trick of his sweet favour: But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here?

Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake; And yet I know him a villainous liar. Think him a very fool, solely a coward; Yet these his evils sit so fit in him,

That they take place, when virtue's steely bones Look break in the cold wind: withal, full of we see Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you, fair queen.

Hel. And you, monarch.

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Ay. You have some stain of soldier in you; let me ask you a question: Man is enemy to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity, though valiant in the defence, yet is weak: unfiled to us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none; man, sitting down before you, will undermine you, and blow you up.

Hel. Bless our poor virginity from underminers, and blowers up!—Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity, being blown down, man will quicklier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature, to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase; and there was never virgin got, till virginity was first lost. That you were made of, is metal to make virgins. Virginity by being once lost, may be ten times found; by being ever kept, it is ever lost: 'tis too cold a companion; away with it.

Hel. I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a virgin.

Par. There's little can be said in't; 'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity, is to accuse your mothers: which is most unfallible disobedience. He that hates himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself; and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate off-endress against nature. Virginity breeds nites, much like cheese; consumes itself to the very pining; and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not; you cannot choose but lose by't: Out with't; within ten years it will make itself ten, which is a goodly increase; and the principal itself not much the worse: Away with't.

Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Par. Let me see: Marry, ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commonality will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with't, while 'tis vendible: answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable; just like the brooch and tooth-pick, which wear out now: Your date is better in your pie and your porridge, than in your cheek: And your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears; it looks ill, it eats dryly: marry, 'tis a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet, 'tis a withered pear: Will you anything with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet.

There shall your master have a thousand loves, A mother, and a mistress, and a friend, A phoenix, captain, and an enemy, A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign, A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear; His humble ambition, proud humility, His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet, His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world Of pretty, foul, adoptious christendoms.

And after, every of this happy number,
That have endur'd shrewd days and nights with us,
Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity,
And fall into our rustic revelry:—
Play, music—and you brides and bridegrooms all,
With measure heap'd in joy, to the measures fall.

Jaq. Sir, by your patience; if I heard you nightly,
The duke hath put on a religious life,
And thrown into neglect the pompous court!

Jaq. de B. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I: out of these convertites
There is much matter to be heard and learn'd.—
You to your former honour I bequeath;

[To Duke S.]
Your patience, and your virtue, well deserves it:—
You [to Orlando] to a love, that your true faith doth merit:—
You [to Oliver] to your hand, and love, and great allies:—

You [to Silvius] to a long and well deserved bed:
And you [to Touchstone] to wrangling; for thy loving voyage
is but for two months victual'd:—So to your pleasures:

I am for other than for dancing measures.
Duke N. Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaq. To see no pastime, I: what you would have I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave. [Exit.]

Duke S. Proceed, proceed: we will begin these rites,
And we do trust they'll end, in true delights. [A dance.]

EPILOGUE.

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue: but it is no more unhandson than to see the lord the epilogue. If it be true, that good wines needs no bush, 'tis true, that a good play needs no epilogue: Yet to good wine they do use good bushes; and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in then, that am neither a good epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play? I am not furnished like a beggar, therefore to beg will not become me: my way is, to conjure you;
and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as please them: and so I charge
